THE COVER

'UNIQUE— AND ARCHETYPICAL— VENTURE IN SERVICE'

'Project Lodestar . . . Mansfield State College (Pa.) . . . Will Offer Guidance and Incentive to Men Now Serving in the U. S. Armed Forces'

"The program is designed to get in touch with servicemen and help them discover talents and interests which will determine their future careers. It will also attempt to stimulate their interest and open opportunities in higher education upon separation from the service. The project's county chairmen will select community leaders to organize local committees of alumni and friends of the college which will establish and maintain contacts with the servicemen. Two other institutions, Lycoming College and the Williamsport Area Community College, have joined Mansfield State to carry out the program."

MEMO FROM: The American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

While alumni, student and professional task forces still will be rallied to provide the follow-up services to which it is committed, Project Lodestar has of now established itself as a unique—and an archetypal—venture in service to the men who have served their country.

From its inception, the essence of Lodestar has been a message, a message of gratitude and assurance—from the home front to the fighting front. The implicit purpose of the project has been to get that message through. In this sense, the basic mission of Lodestar has been accomplished.

The reservation that the project still has a long way to go is diminished by the long way it has come:

It was a May morning, nearly a year ago, that the idea first saw the light of day. Born of a deep concern, it was kindled in no less an auspicious setting than the office of the college president.

Shortly thereafter an idea was christened "Project Lodestar."

The name—Lodestar—a gem of spontaneity, was confirmed by Webster as "the star that leads, guides . . . and serves as a focus of hope and attention."

Lodestar now had its name.

But what Lodestar did not have were the answers to "who?" and "how?"

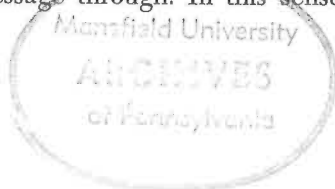

The real problem was names, home addresses, and military addresses, especially of those persons serving in Viet Nam and other military installations throughout the world.

To get the complete information on each serviceman—so essential to the project—there was only one recourse: recruit and organize Mansfield's Northern Tier alumni for the purpose.

The first step then was to find a project director for alumni organization. After a long search and many representations, State Rep. Kenneth B. Lee, Eagles Mere, an alumnus, was named to the post. Veterans affairs expert, Fred Jupenlaz, chairman of the college's board of trustees, became director of the project's veterans affairs information service.

Lodestar was formally launched with a news release on October 16, 1969, and was heralded, by conservative estimate, in more than 300 of Pennsylvania's news and broadcast media.

Shortly thereafter the project picked up real impetus when Mansfield was joined in the work by Lycoming College and the Williamsport Area Community College.

Mansfield College Launches Cooperation Urges Project to Assist Veterans For Guidance Plan

Mansfield, Oct. 18 — Mansfield State College, enlisting the support of more than 3,000 alumni in 13 Northern Tier counties of Pennsylvania, has launched Project Lodestar, a new and unusual incentive program designed to meet the higher educational guidance needs of men currently serving in the U. S. armed forces.

Heading the project's organizational task force: be State Representative Kenneth B. Lee, house policy chairman and speaker who was received by the M. S. C. Association for "outstanding contributions" to the wealth.

It was announced Fred A. Jupenz, of the college's board of trustees, will direct the college's alumni community service, a key function of the overall Lodestar operation. Mr. Jupenz is to meet the higher educational guidance needs of men serving in the armed forces.

The announcement was made jointly by the president, Lawrence Park, and the

Dr. Park said that the most important step in the project will be to obtain the names and military addresses of men and women now in service. He asked parents and friends of servicemen and women to send this information to the Office of Public Relations at Mansfield State College, Mansfield, Pa., Zip 16933.

It is estimated that there are some 15,000 men and women in the armed forces in the northern county area.

The success of Operation Lodestar, a program being developed by Mansfield State College to provide career guidance to returning veterans will depend on public cooperation. This was the conclusion reached by presidents of three area colleges at a meeting held here.

Dr. Lawrence Park, Mansfield president, discussed the program with Dr. Harold H. Hutson, of Lycoming College, and Dr. Kenneth

Dr. Park said that an important step in the project is to obtain the names and addresses of men and women in service. He asked friends of service men to send this information to the Office of Public Relations at Mansfield State College.

It is estimated that some 15,000 men and women are serving in the 13-county area which includes Bradford, Cameron, Lackawanna, McKean, Potter, Tioga and

Higher Education Both Possible and Feasible Mansfield College Launches Guidance Project for Servicemen

Association president, announced that Fred A. Jupenz, chairman of the college's board of directors, will direct a veterans-alumni communication service, a key function of the over-all Lodestar operation.

The project's title, "Lodestar," is derived from the "star that leads, guides and serves as a focus for hope and attention."

The special informational and guidance services will be oriented to direct the prospective veteran student to any institution, not only Mansfield, in which it is felt that his particular aptitudes can best be developed.

Dr. Park also said he is hopeful and confident that cooperative arrangements can be made with other institutions in the north central area.

Park stressed that "if we are able to get these men with the message that higher education is both possible and feasible, it is now that we must know who these men are."

He said. An appeal is being made to alumni and friends to help obtain the names.

Dr. Park said that "it is an obligation to these men who served in the armed forces."

It sounds like a workable plan, said Dr. Park. Mansfield College is to be commended for sensing this need and for initiating in

Mansfield State College Launches Program To Assist Veterans

WILLIAMSPORT — Cooperation will be the success of Operation Lodestar, a program being developed by Mansfield State College to provide career guidance to returning veterans in the Armed Forces.

Mansfield State College president, Lawrence Park, is expected to announce "Lodestar" with Dr. Kenneth B. Lee, House Representative, and Dr. E. Carl, president of the Williamsport Area Community College.

He said he expects an increase in this area will see an increasing number of veterans on their campus as a result of the project.

Lodestar Program Advances

Two area men serve as county leaders for Project Lodestar

MANSFIELD—The first appointments of county leaders for Project Lodestar—higher education guidance and incentive program designed to aid men now serving in the U.S. armed forces—have been announced by Rep. Kenneth B. Lee, Eagles Mere, the project director.

Project Lodestar, which was launched this fall at Mansfield State College and now joined by Lycoming College and the Williamsport Area Community College, has become, in the Mansfield President's Park, "a cooperative effort to enhance the opportunities for education for Northern Pennsylvania men and women now serving in the armed forces."

Two area men are among the first appointments of nine county leaders for Project Lodestar—higher education guidance and incentive program designed to aid men now serving in the U.S. armed forces—have been announced by Rep. Kenneth B. Lee, Eagles Mere, the project director.

Williamsport Area Community College, Project Lodestar has become "a cooperative effort to enhance the opportunities for higher education for Northern Pennsylvania men and women now serving in the armed forces," said Mansfield President.

The newly-named county chairmen and their principal aides will get their formal briefing on the Lodestar operation at 6:30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 9, when they will be guests of the college.

Earlier that p.m., the president participating Harold H. Hutcheson, Dr. Kenneth B. Lee, Eagles Mere, the project director, and Dr. H. H. Hutcheson, will determine the Lodestar's guidance and incentive service groups will join meeting that evening.

OPERATION LODESTAR:

College Offers Special Program For Vets

The first appointments of county leaders for Project Lodestar—higher education guidance and incentive program designed to aid men now serving in the U.S. Armed Forces—have been announced by Rep. Kenneth B. Lee, Eagles Mere, the project's director.

According to Mansfield President Lawrence, the first appointments of county leaders for Project Lodestar—higher education guidance and incentive program designed to aid men now serving in the U.S. Armed Forces—have been announced by Rep. Kenneth B. Lee, Eagles Mere, the project's director.

Those purposes, it has been indicated, will share some of the focuses of the January meetings which, while dealing with organizational and procedural matters, are intended to complement and improve Lodestar's operation.

Earlier that same day—January 9—at 4 p.m., the presidents of the three participating institutions—Dr. H. H. Hutcheson, Dr. Kenneth B. Lee, Eagles Mere, the project director, and Dr. H. H. Hutcheson, will determine the Lodestar's guidance and incentive service groups will join meeting that evening.

The Richard Marvin. Dick is district superintendent, Athens Area Schools, and the Bradford County Lodestar chairman.

Rod Kelchner, MSC assistant dean of men, and Edgar Cushard, chairman of the MSC Alumni Relations Committee, become more interested in an after-dinner huddle than in their pie.

Mrs. Cee Myers, director of publications, Williamsport Area Community College, registers. Waiting their turn are Ed Harrington (right), elementary supervisor, Otto-Eldred Schools, and McKean County Lodestar chairman, and Forrest W. Watkins, a member of the McKean County Committee.

District 4 Manager Joseph Fay (Seated at left), Pennsylvania State Employment Service and Donald G. Bennet (standing), Manager, Williamsport Office of the Pennsylvania State Employment Service, explain referral procedures for Lodestar to Dr. Kenneth Carl, president, Williamsport Area Community College, and Dr. Andrew Lady (right), assistant to the president, Lycoming College.

But the basic problem—the procurement of names and home and military addresses—remained. Resolving that problem, it was agreed, would still be the sole responsibility of Mansfield State College's alumni, whose organization in the various Northern Tier counties was now incipient.

Lodestar's momentum was sustained when, on December 29, 1969, the appointments of alumni project chairmen in nine Northern Tier counties were announced. For the record, excerpts from that release—which also received the full and generous treatment of the press—are here repeated:

"Mansfield—The first appointments of county leaders for Project Lodestar have been announced by Rep. Kenneth B. Lee, Eagles Mere, the project's director . . .

"According to Mr. Lee, the appointments announced today mark the first step in the process of structuring a Lodestar organization which will include local area leaders and community committees from among the 4,000 Mansfield State College alumni residing in the 13 Northeastern Pennsylvania counties embraced by the project.

"These first appointments, according to the project director, 'So far represent a 100 percent acceptance rate.' By county, they are as follows: Bradford County—Richard Marvin of 707 Second St., Athens, District Superintendent, Athens Area Schools; Clinton County—Ray Kodish of Lock Haven, R. D. 1, Teacher, Lock Haven High School; Lycoming County—Arnold Sundberg of 120 N. Lincoln Ave., Jersey Shore, Principal, Jersey Shore Junior High School; McKean County—Edward E. Harrington, Box 303, Eldred, Elementary Supervisor, Otto-Eldred School District; Potter County

—Basil E. Harris* of 189 W. Main St., Galeton, Supervising Principal, Galeton Area Schools; Sullivan County—Miss Pauline Holcombe of 106 Railroad St., Du-shore, Teacher, Penn State Continuing Education Program; Susquehanna County—Mrs. Ralph S. Maynard of 41 Cherry St., Montrose, Teacher, Montrose Area High School; Tioga County—Percy A. Coles (co-chairman) of 62 E. Wellsboro St., Mansfield, President, First Citizens National Bank; Bruce B. Dimmick (co-chairman) of Mulberry Lane, Mansfield, Director, Educational Development Center at Mansfield State College; Gary M. Skelding of W. Elmira St., Mansfield, Special Education Teacher, Mansfield High School, (vice-chairman), and Wyoming County—Loren D. Butts of 54 Slocum St., Tunkhannock, Teacher, Tunkhannock Area High School.

"The newly-named county chairmen and their principal aides will get their first formal briefing on the Lodestar operation on Friday, Jan. 9, at 6:30 p. m. when they will be guests of the college at a dinner meeting in Manser Hall on the Mansfield State College campus.

"Earlier that same day—January 9—at 4 p. m., the presidents of the three participating institutions—Dr. Harold H. Hutson, Lycoming; Dr. Kenneth Carl, Williamsport Area Community College, and Dr. Park, Mansfield along with their guidance and admissions directors, will meet to determine the repertory of Lodestar's guidance and incentive services. The two groups will join for the dinner meeting that evening."

That dinner meeting stretched the limits of credibility. It was mid-winter in the Northern Tier. Hardly time or place conducive to traveling any distance for a week-night meeting. And yet, except for one county leader hospitalized the day of the meeting, there was a 100 percent attendance of county and institutional representations.

And the occasion was considered "profitable." Lodestar's goals were spelled out and the proposed draft of the first direct and personal communication to be signed by the presidents of the three participating institutions—addressed to the individual serviceman and included with the literature of the three colleges in Lodestar's first comprehensive mailing—was read and subsequently approved. It became the covering letter of the first Lodestar mailing and the heart of the Lodestar message. It is here reproduced:

Project Lodestar is our way of meeting our obligation to you for the service you have performed for your Country.

It is a sincere effort to enhance the opportunities for your continuing education after separation from the service and especially to help you discover, or confirm, those talents and abilities which could determine, in turn, the college and the career best-suited to fulfill your personal life needs.

To complement those efforts we are prepared to give special consideration to your needs in such areas as campus and off-campus employment, housing (for married couples), financial aid, guidance and testing, and preliminary preparation when merited.

We feel that this effort is, at one and the same time, the best and the least we can do.

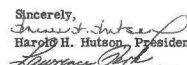

We have enclosed brochures on each of our colleges.

The next step is yours. It simply involves your dropping us a note, saying you are interested in continuing your education, and giving us whatever information you can on your educational background.

Regardless of the level of your education or the amount of information you can supply, the important thing is that you write, at least indicating your interest.

Any one of us would be personally pleased to hear from you. But you may address your note to: Project Lodestar, Office of Public Relations, Mansfield State College, Mansfield, Pennsylvania, 16833.

This is our turn to serve you.

Sincerely,

Harold H. Hutson, President

But now it can be told: the January 9 occasion was far more than just "profitable" for Lodestar. That dinner meeting was the most fortuitous development in the life of the project.

At that point in time—January 9, 1969—the fortunes of Lodestar were considerably less auspicious than the setting of its inception. Given a Northern Tier weather tantrum the night of January 9, the little momentum left in the project might have been lost forever. That meeting, thanks to the abiding loyalties of the newly-appointed alumni leaders, saved Lodestar and kept the project viable.

Since that time the work of Lodestar has progressed steadily. The work of county alumni leaders has been exhilarating for its own sake; but for Lodestar's it has produced home and military addresses, and even other valuable information, on servicemen and veterans whose numbers will run into the thousands.

More recently, to complement the work of the county leaders, the local offices of Williamsport District 4 and adjoining districts of the Pennsylvania State Employment Service, embracing 13 Northeastern Pennsylvania counties, have indicated their readiness to collaborate exclusively with Lodestar by preparing and forwarding lists of names and addresses of currently discharged servicemen who are prospective candidates for continuing education—an inestimable aid to the project.

The PSES procedure has now been instituted and the service is already being utilized as an important new implement in the Lodestar operation.

That information—first from the county leaders and then the data from PSES offices on discharged servicemen—remains, and will remain, the best basis of the Lodestar effort, despite new sources opened up by other projects more recently developed.

Principal among those newer projects are GI Project Memo, a Federal Government version; the State's own version, PAVE, and Project Transition, an effort engaging the cooperation of industry.

For Lodestar this proliferation of projects could be a bonanza. As a Lodestar leader recently observed: "So far as Lodestar is concerned, we don't see these other projects as competitive. They're complementary. It's so obvious: every new project only insures the avowed, primary purpose of Lodestar—to get the message through."

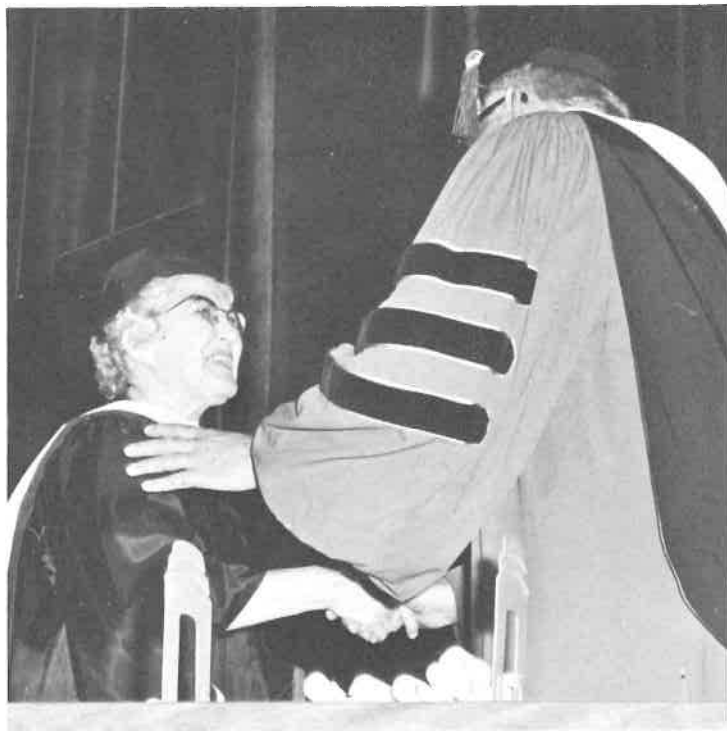

At any rate, that is precisely what Lodestar is now doing—but with an edge:

Last month, the Mansfield State College Campus Veterans unanimously resolved, as one of the organization's several projects to aid Lodestar, to allocate the names on the Lodestar general mailing list among its membership now approaching 50 and write personal notes to accompany or follow in the wake of each piece of the first general Lodestar mailing.

One student aide, straightening up after processing the last of last week's 1,002 Lodestar mailing pieces, quipped: "Well, we're getting the message through. Damned if I don't feel good about that."

MID-YEAR COMMENCEMENT 1970

“Baccalaureate degrees were conferred on 111 graduates—all of whom are, at the moment, in arrears on their alumni dues . . .”

Mansfield State College's mid-year graduating class represented 34 Pennsylvania counties and four states other than Pennsylvania.

Commencement exercises were held in Straughn Auditorium on January 24 when 111 baccalaureate degrees and 21 graduate degrees were conferred by Dr. Lawrence Park, MSC president.

Commencement speaker was Pennsylvania's Lt. Gov. Raymond J. Broderick.

Outside states represented by the graduates included New York, New Jersey, Florida and California. The seven top Pennsylvania counties in size of representation were Tioga (22), Lycoming (10), Bradford (9), McKean (6), Northumberland (5), Luzerne (4) and Lackawanna (4).

Women graduates outnumbered men, 76-35, a somewhat higher ratio than that of the student body as a whole (60-40).

Top academic major—40—was elementary education, which included 15 graduates who concentrated in special education. Next highest major representation was home economics (20 graduates); then came the humanities (11), social sciences (11), music (9), mathematics (5), liberal arts (5), science (4), library science (3), public school nursing (2) and art (1). The bachelor of science degree was conferred on all graduates except those in the liberal arts curriculum who received the bachelor of arts.

Following is a county-by-county listing of Mansfield's newest alumni—all of whom, at this moment, are in arrears on their alumni dues:

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR BRODERICK

Pennsylvania's Lieutenant Governor Raymond J. Broderick, speaking at January's commencement, refreshingly switched the usual focus of a commencement address and eulogized the progenitors rather than the graduates.

Said the Lieutenant Governor:

"Now, I'm not going to follow the usual pattern and tell you how much brighter you are than the older generation. Neither am I going to say that the older generation has made a mess of things and you, the younger generation, are the hope of mankind. In fact, I would like to reverse that process.

"If the members of the graduating class will look around this auditorium, I'd like to re-introduce you to some of the most remarkable people ever to inhabit the earth. Furthermore, they are people whom you might want to thank on this graduation day. You already know them. They are your parents and grandparents. And, if you will bear with me for a few moments, I'd like to tell you how remarkable they really are.

THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR SWITCHES FOCUS

"Last September, Dr. Eric Walker, retiring President of the Pennsylvania State University, presented some information about the generation of your parents and grandparents. The facts are interesting; I'd like to share some of them with you.

"Your parents and grandparents are the people who have increased your life expectancy 50% in 50 years. And, during the same period, they have cut the work day 1/3, while more than doubling the per capita output.

"These same people have given you a healthier world. You no longer have to fear epidemics of flu, typhus, diphtheria, small pox, scarlet fever, measles or mumps, diseases which constantly plagued them. Polio, the scourge of an earlier age, is no longer a medical factor, while TB is becoming rare. They have even transplanted the human heart.

"These remarkable people lived through history's greatest depression. Many of them know first-hand what it means to be poor . . . hungry . . . and cold. These experiences made them determined that it would not happen to you, that your life would be better . . . with food to eat, milk to drink, vitamins to nourish you, a warm home, better schools and greater opportunities to succeed than they had.

"Because they gave you the best . . . you work fewer hours, learn more, have more leisure time, travel more, and have more of a chance to follow your life's ambition.

"They went from the first flight at Kitty Hawk to men on the moon.

"They are also the people who fought the biggest war in history. They defeated the tyranny of Hitler, and when it was all over, had the compassion to spend billions of dollars to rebuild the enemy's homeland. These are also the people who had the good sense to begin the United Nations—a noble experiment—not yet a success—but there is hope.

"Your parents' generations began a new era in civil rights. They made the greatest nation on earth aware of the fact that our American dream is not yet a reality.

"They built hundreds of high schools, trained and hired thousands of teachers, and they have made higher education available for young people like you where at one time it was the dream of only a wealthy few.

"They made a start . . . although a late one . . . in healing the scars man made on our land, in fighting pollution and the destruction of our natural environment. They have set into motion new laws giving conservation meaning. And they are setting aside land for you and your children to enjoy for generations to come.

"They hold the dubious record of paying the most taxes; but I hope you will never be required to break this record.

"They have done all these things, and they have also had some failures. But if your generation makes as much progress in as many areas as the generations of your parents and grandparents, you should in the future solve many of the world's remaining ills.

"What is needed in the 70's is people with values, with vision and a willingness to venture . . . we need people . . . who still believe that the American Dream is best . . ."

A native of Philadelphia, Lt. Gov. Broderick is a graduate of West Catholic High School (valedictorian, 1931); the University of Notre Dame (magna cum laude, 1935), and the University of Pennsylvania Law* School (L.L.B., 1938), where he was editor of the Law Review. He is presently a senior partner in the Philadelphia law firm of Broderick, Schubert & Fitz-Patrick and is a member of the bar of all courts in the District of Columbia and Pennsylvania.

Besides presiding over the State Senate, the lieutenant governor has served as chairman of the Preparatory Committee for the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention and as president of the Constitutional Convention.

He was recently elected chairman of the National conference of Lieutenant Governors and state chairman of the United Services Organizations.

He is chairman of the Board of Pardons, chairman of Project Returnee, and chairman of the Pennsylvania Bicentennial Commission.

A veteran of World War II, Mr. Broderick served on combat duty with the Navy in the Asiatic, Pacific and European Theaters. He is married to the former Marjorie Beacom of Minneapolis. They have three sons and two daughters ranging in ages from 6 to 23.

The art education major is a relatively new fact of academic life at Mansfield. Approval of the Art Education Curriculum by the Pennsylvania Department of Education last year brought about the formal establishment of Mansfield State College's Department of Art Education.

The art major, one of the fastest growing academic pursuits on the campus, is already an integral offering of the Teacher Education Curriculum and is presently under consideration for the Liberal Arts Curriculum as well.

Currently, there are 80 art education majors on campus. Already, four students have been graduated and all are teaching.

THE DEPARTMENT OF ART EDUCATION

But since one of the best ways to introduce a new department, or any department for that matter, could be to introduce its faculty; and since the nine faculty members of the Art Department are all exhibiting artists who, conveniently for this issue of Mansfieldian, recently staged their own art exhibit, it then follows that the best way to introduce art education at Mansfield is to introduce the Department's faculty-artists in their own habitat, and with their own works.

The changing face of the campus, a phenomenon of growth remarkably quiet for its magnitude during the past decade, will assume proportions approaching grandeur by comparison in this one, if all the signs are right.

To Mansfieldians returning to the campus on Alumni Day 1970, the evidences will be visible. Homing alumni will be able to see—in advanced stages of progress—construction on the new Student Center, the addition to the Library and Administration Building, and the $2.3-million Decker Gymnasium.

These structures, now nearing completion, are but three of the 49 major projects included in the college's 15-year building program which is intended to peak in the late '70s at an overall worth of $68 million.

Already landmarks of the Sixties are six new classroom buildings, including the more recent Retan Center and the recently dedicated, $1.6 million, multi-purpose Butler Music Center; eight dormitories, including Pine Crest, Hemlock, the Laurels (2) and the Maples (2); a new field house; the newly-dedicated Manser Dining Hall and Doane Health Center and $4.6 million worth of supportive utilities, roads, and parking and recreation areas. The activity of the decade gave the changing face of the campus an added worth of $25 million.

The physical expansion of the '60s only reflected the burgeoning educational process itself. At the beginning of the past decade the enrollment at Mansfield stood at 1,175; the operational complement, 169; wages and salaries, $887,659; total budget, $1.38 million. In 1966, the enrollment had risen to 2,098; the operational complement, 283; salaries and wages, $2.2 million, and total budget, $3.3 million. The comparable figures for 1970-71 are: enrollment 3,000; complement, 541; salaries and wages, $5.5 million, and total budget, $9 million.

The process of growth into the '70s is expected not only to continue but to accelerate—and with it the face-lifting.

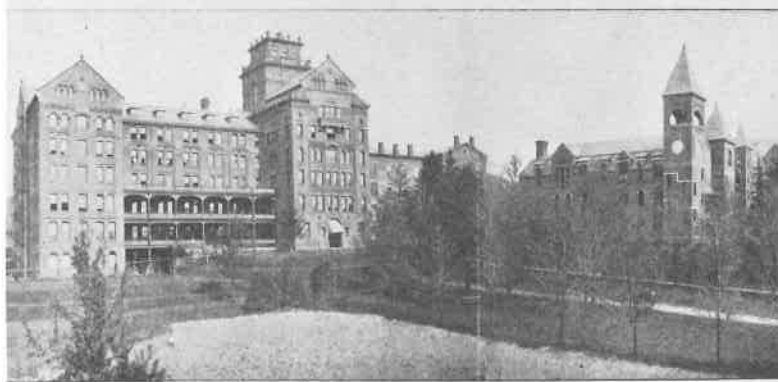

The changing face of the campus will get an indicative hue with the completion—this year—of the three projects now in advanced stages of construction mentioned above.

The new Student Center will be fireproof masonry construction with brick facing and three floors. On the ground, or first floor, will be a large recreational area, snack room and TV room. The second floor will boast large lounge areas, an information center, lobby, and project room. The third floor has been designed for offices and conference rooms for various college student service organizations as well as offices for college administrative personnel. There will also be a multi-purpose room. Public facilities will be available on all floors. Also there will be elevator facilities and other facilities that will allow full use of the building by handicapped students. The building will be air-conditioned.

The addition to Alumni Hall—Administration and Library Building—will be four floors, two of which will be used for library purposes. This additional library design includes both book stacks and reading room space and will nearly double the existing facility. Air-conditioning is included in the design.

The Decker Gymnasium will boast an Olympic-size swimming pool (new for MSC), classrooms, locker rooms, laundry, team rooms, wrestling and apparatus room, space on the gym floor for six half basketball courts and full court for game use; a seating capacity of 2,800, conference and lounge rooms and related gymnasium facilities.

Added worth of the three structures to be completed this year is $3.82 million.

Being readied for construction—and already named—are a new women's dormitory, a $1.3-million maintenance building and boiler plant, and the $1.1-million Grant Science Building addition. The new dormitory is being built to house 600 women students by September 1972 at a cost of $4.7 million. It will be known as CedarCrest Manor. The new maintenance structure will be known as the Brooks Maintenance Center, honoring the late Fred Brooks, long-time member of the college's maintenance staff. It will house the college garage, electric shop, plumbing shop, storage areas, offices and related facilities.

The Grant Science addition, although joined to the existing building, will be a self-contained structure housing chemistry and physics laboratories, a planetarium, a science library, faculty offices and storage rooms.

But the changing face of the campus will assume its boldest relief during the years 1973-1977 when, according to projections and chronology of their completions, these impressive features—worth $34 million—will rise on the campus hillside:

By September, 1973: research and learning center, $2,376,000; art classroom building, $1,680,000; 500-capacity men's dormitory, $3 million; total $7,056,000.

By September, 1974: science building addition, $1.5 million; social science building, $1.5 million; 500-capacity women's dormitory, $3 million; total $6 million.

By September, 1975: Allen Hall addition, $900,000; gymnasium addition, $1.5 million; English classroom building, $1.5 million; utilities construction, $1 million; new library, $4.5 million; new kitchen and dining room, $2.5 million. Total $11.9 million.

By September, 1976: 500-capacity women's dormitory, $3 million; 500-capacity men's dormitory, $3 million; total $6 million.

By September, 1977: new student union, $1.5 million; addition to maintenance building, $500,000; new roads and recreation area, $800,000. Total $3.3 million.

For the period 1962 to 1977, estimated construction costs are: classroom construction, $19,812,831; dormitories, $28,034,741; all other construction, $20,423,882; total construction $68,271,454.

The program is funded through federal and state government agencies.

THAT ALL-IMPORTANT MARGIN OF EXCELLENCE: A PROPOSAL

Among the State-owned colleges today, the margin of excellence of any one of them could now be in direct proportion to the support of that college's alumni.

Hardly anyone else could be expected to contribute to that vital edge of quality if the college's own alumni walked away from the responsibility and failed to meet the challenges of their Alma Mater's needs in the years directly ahead.

And those needs will be critical.

There are unmistakable indications that the contemporary era of priorities for public higher education and their relative largesse is drawing to a close. Retrenchment is the best word to describe the shift in public attitude, and that attitude usually determines the nature and size of government appropriation.

Even some of the essentials will feel the retrenchment as government reduces services and support in determined efforts to make budgets more acceptable. Certainly the wherewithal by which a college may offer certain premiums of culture will be—if it is not already—the first to go.

The State College System will suffer as a whole, but some colleges will suffer more than others.

To support those efforts and services that spell the difference between average and excellent in the whole process of developing human personality and talent, Shippensburg, Lock Haven, Cheyney—to mention a few—have developed the resources of strong and functional alumni organizations—and annual alumni giving by which they finance those efforts in a propitious chain reaction.

Mansfield State College does not have a functional alumni body in the sense of a network of class and geographical organizations: established and functional clubs, chapters, county and local groups and special class committees.

Such a functional organization has now become a critical need.

We have an Office of Alumni Affairs. But the office has neither an annual income nor an operating budget.

It hasn't one thin dime.

The need is for annual giving over and above the now-and-then alumni dues fee of three dollars which is, and has been for some years, directed to the Student Loan Fund and which, in any event, would be inadequate as a source of annual operating income.

Therefore, the challenge before the Mansfield alumni body is annual giving—"living endowment," as it is known—and the establishment of The Annual Alumni Loyalty Fund.

This proposed undertaking demands the best thinking and leadership among the college's 8,000 alumni. The enlistment of that thinking and that leadership is one of the first steps.

In the meantime, the planning and working out of administrative details will proceed toward that day when Mansfield alumni will formally launch the most significant undertaking in the Association's history.

CLASS ROUND-UP

The Late Edwin Coles

A tribute launches the class columns this month; it's a tip of the hat in the passing of Edwin Coles, a former president of the General Alumni Association; a eulogy recognizing his and his family's devotion and service to their Alma Mater. Mr. Coles was for many years editor and publisher of the Mansfield Advertiser and a former mayor of Mansfield. He started his newspaper career in the West and was editor of the Laramie County Times in Wyoming prior to his return to Mansfield in 1906 to take over the Mansfield Advertiser from his father. He was married to the former Viva Rose, who preceded him in death. He is survived by a son, Dr. James Stacy Coles, New York City; a daughter, Mrs. Kees Bol, Princeton, N. J.; a sister, Mrs. B. W. Leonard and a brother, Percy A. Coles, both of Mansfield, and seven grandchildren.

Mary D. Stewart, a resident of the Baptist Retirement Home, 316 Randolph St., Maywood, Ill., provides the gem for the news of '02. Writes Mrs. Stewart:

"You may be interested in hearing about a friend of mine who is an alumna back in 1902, and now in her 88th year.

"Esther Davies taught in elementary schools of Scranton, Pa. Having taken graduate studies, she returned to Mansfield State Normal School in 1914-15 assisting in the Home Economics Department. After that year, at the recommendation of Dr. Straughn, she taught in the Avalon, Pittsburgh High School until her marriage to Thomas A. Hughes in 1918.

"She is now a widow and the mother of two daughters (one deceased), and the

The April, 1969 Mansfieldian's listing of Walter Scott was in error. It was intended to be Walter Scott Haight, Editors' apologies to daughter, Mrs. Gertrude H. Hallett, 8 Old Shawnee Rd., Milford, Del. 19963.

The name of Ruby Cook Conner appears in this issue's Memorial Column. Somewhat warmer were the reminiscences of husband Paul in a few free moments with editors before last month's board of trustees meeting. Actually, Paul Conner belongs in a later class: Already a graduate of Clarion State, but holding only a normal certificate, Paul decided to go after his baccalaureate degree, and he proceeded to do just that—but this time at Mansfield. That was as late as 1929. The years in the interim were far more interesting, however. After Clarion, Paul began his teaching career at Roulette, in Potter County. So had Mansfield graduate, Ruby Cook who, after five years in the classroom, became assistant principal at Roulette and soon thereafter, principal—the only woman in the history of Potter County to hold the position; but not surprising for the Gold Medalist of the Essay Contest back in 1906. It was about this time that Paul decided he had better marry the principal, and again he proceeded to do just that. After that, the fortunes of Paul's career, it could be said, improved somewhat. He was named Potter County assistant superintendent of schools, a position he held for 38 years until 1956 when he was made county superintendent. He retired in 1962 after establishing the all-time record for tenure in the county office—44 years.

This could be confusing, but it seems that Mrs. Thomas (Esther) Hughes, nee Davies, has the distinction of being able to claim two classes (See 1902): She pursued extra studies in 1914-15 while assisting in the Home Economics Department. At any rate, she holds allegiance to both and is, she writes, "as fond as ever of my Alma Mater" . . . Mrs. Gertrude (Allen) Doane's visit to Mansfield and the campus last fall was of mixed quality. On the whole it was rewarding (dedication of Doane Health Center) and pleasant (old friends abounded). But at the start of the trip home, Gertrude suffered a nasty accident. Thanks to a more than sufficient number of practitioners still in the family, she recovered nicely.

A little more than six years ago, Archie and Hazel (Seelye) Baker sold their home at 602 W. Main St. in Elkland to Waldo and Harriet Seamans (also MSC alumni) and somewhat belatedly took Horace Greeley's advice. They landed in Turlock, California, where for the last six years they have been "fully enjoying" an active retirement. They should be: the whole family is there. There's son, Dr. Lyle, and daughter, Betty (now Brugger), each boasting a brood of four for the dotting grandparents. Hazel waxes enthusiastic with an open invitation to anyone "back East" to visit them. "Ask anyone who has," she challenges. More good news: They would like to make it East this year for Alumni Day . . . Grace Steafather Young, foster sister of the late Anna B. Biles, '16, is living in Wyalusing. It's Rt. 2, Box 36, Zip 18853.

The Class of '19, eminently represented Alumni Day 1969 for its Fiftieth, will be pleased to know that the powers have reached into their number for a new distinctive college post. Joe Bedenk has been named alumni advisory representative to the MSC board of trustees. The appointment was one of three made under a new policy designed to extend representation on the board to alumni, faculty and students. Congratulations may be sent to 1989 Park Forest Ave., State College, Pa. 16801 . . . Confirmed or updated addresses: Alfred and Vera (Bell) Sayre, 243 Johnson Ave., Hackensack, N. This is the Fiftieth Reunion Class, come Alumni Day, May 16, and Bernice Ainey Jansen and her husband will that day add the Northern Tier to an itinerary that's taken them from Alaska to Florida and throughout the entire Southwest — all since retirement, that is. After 42 years of teaching in New York State, not to mention four in Pennsylvania, Bernice decided the time for leisure and travel had arrived. The Jansens now winter in Sarasota, Fla., and maintain the homestead in High Falls, N. Y., for summers. The Florida address is 1825 University Place, Sarasota, Fla. 33580. The New York address is simply High Falls, N. Y. 12440 . . . And a new address for Harold Seaman. It's 600 Rural Ave., Williamsport, Pa. 17701.

There's a queen among MSC's alumnae. She's Mrs. Roy L. Bomgardner, nee Doris M. Evans. Doris, or Mrs. Bomgardner, was elected Senior Queen of Lehigh Acres (that's Florida) last November at the meeting of the American Association of Retired Persons. When the Bomgardners moved to Florida's Lehigh Acres in 1965, Doris decided to "become involved and lead an active life." She's done just that: has served as president of the hospital auxiliary, secretary of the Grandmothers' Club, and is presently president of the WSCS of the Christ United Methodist Church—and secretary of the Republican Club. A teacher of English, she completed 30 years in the profession in Pennsylvania in 1965. The rest of the time she and her husband have lived in Ohio, Michigan and West Virginia. She now has one pre-emptive goal; to return to the campus in 1971 for her Fiftieth Reunion. Anyone wishing to write her about this matter might address a note to the Bomgardners at 2101 West Penn Road, Lehigh Acres, Fla. 33936 . . . Another who has a predominant thought fixed on 1971 and her Fiftieth is Mary (McInroy) Sheffer to whom, then a student, President Straughn once remarked: "I can't conceive opening a school year without a McInroy." Mary is one of three sisters and 18 McInroy first cousins to have been graduated from Mansfield. But she left her own peculiar mark on the local and college history of the '30's. A native of Middlebury Center, Tioga County, she taught school in Middlebury Township two years, then four years in Wellsboro, and then became the Democratic candidate for the General Assembly from Tioga in 1932. (She has since become "a dedicated Republican.") Still in the '30's she was appointed to the Mansfield State Teachers College board of trustees by Governor George H. Earle and served as chairman of the board during the Earle Administration. It was during her tenure that "Dr. Noonan was brought in and the first major building program was inaugurated." Today Mary McInroy (Sheffer) is still somewhat "involved." She is in her third term as president of the Art Association of Harrisburg; she is vice chairman of the Harrisburg Public Housing Authority; she was (until last month when she resigned with a change of administration) chairman of the Mayor's Committee on Human Relations, and is a past president of the Harrisburg Branch of the American Association of University Women. A little more than a year ago, University of Syracuse Chancellor William P. Tolley presented her with the University of Syracuse Alumni Award, for service to the university. But with all those involvements and honors, the recurring theme of her Alumni Office correspondence has been "coming back." "I am so hoping to return to Mansfield for my Fiftieth Reunion in 1971," she avers, lapsing into reminiscence: "I went to Mansfield in the days when we boarded a New York Central passenger train at Middlebury Center, rode on it to Tioga, walked across 'town' to the Erie Station, waited for the passenger to come through there and then took it to Mansfield. I believe the distance is now 12 miles. All this took from 4:20 to 7:30 p. m. I lived in North Hall and loved every minute of it." Her present address is 2103 N. Third St., Harrisburg, Pa. 17110 . . . And there's a new address on Mrs. Julia (Carpenter) Seaman. It's Lanesboro, Pa. 18827.

Nellie M. Bell has a new address. It's 1315 Crampian Blvd., Williamsport, Pa. 17701. Came in among hundreds of such responses to last Fall's Mansfieldian.

'23

Due to the closing of her local post-office (Salladasburg), Margaret E. Harer's new address is R. D. 3, Jersey Shore, Pennsylvania 17740 . . . Faustina Bernauer Hughes updates the Mansfieldian on her MSC family and, with husband Donald J. (Class of '22), lives at 184 St. James St., Mansfield 16933.

Mrs. Philip Mosch, nee Inez Hielslander, and her husband are "now enjoying retirement." The Mosch's have a son: an accountant with General Motors in Saginaw, Mich., and a daughter who is an assistant supervisor with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. in Elmira, N. Y., where the Moschs live at 729 Robinson St., zip 14904. Editors trust the errors in Inez' alumni records have been corrected, and that everything is now shipshape . . . Naomi Young is living at 113 Parkwood St., Williamsport, Pa. 17701 . . . Mrs. G. J. (Iva Winans) Conley is retired and is living at 66 Van Drive, North Fort Myers, Fla. 33903. Her two sons (Indiana University) are in insurance: Garth with Connecticut General Life and Gale with Indianapolis Life. Both married teachers who presented Iva with four grandchildren. But the import of the Conley missive was for news (and an address) on Iva's Mansfield roommate, Margaret O'Donnell, also of '26. Anyone help?

Another anonymous note indicates a new address. It's that of Stephen J. Budash: 1717 Monroe St., Dunmore, Pa. 18702 . . . Ruth D. (Glorius) Tiffany, whose application for active membership in the General Alumni Association, lists her as "homemaker," is living at 1708 Maple St., Haddon Heights, Camden, N. J. 08035.

J. Lloyd Straughn, Department of Chemistry, Western Maryland College, lives at 18 Ridge Road, Westminster, Md. 21157 . . . And Esther Davies Hughes' distinction of being able to claim two classes is not unique. Mary M. Jackett can, and does, do the same. She received her normal certificate with the Class of '29 and her degree with the Class of '34. She's living at 623 Camp St., Harrisburg, Pa. 17110 . . . For a note on Rachael Jannicelli, see 1931 . . . And for one on Paul Conner, see 1906.

Dorotha Escott Witmore, who is living at 7 Mulberry Lane, R. D. 1, Mansfield, Pa., and whose mailing address includes Box 354, has done graduate work (and has her master's degree) at The Pennsylvania State University and also at Tufts University and is now teaching history in the Wellsboro Area Schools. She is also a cooperating teacher at her Alma Mater . . . Francis and Eloise (Powers) Howard, both of '30, are living at 70 Cornen St., Bradford, Pa. 16701. Francis is teaching 7th grade English in the School Street Junior High and Eloise is the Bradford Elementary School nurse . . . After living in Pittsburgh for 15 years, Mary D. (Judge) Wilson writes that they are moving to Havertown. Mary has been teaching in the Mt. Lebanon schools for the past 10 years; after getting settled in their new home, she expects to be back at teaching again. Her new address is: 322 Ivy Rock Lane, Westgate Hills, Havertown, Pa. 19041 . . . Editor admits to embarrassment of exercise in futility: Sometime ago Edmund McGuire inquired about the company which might be able to provide a replacement for his lost class ring. So far, there seems to be no record on the campus that would indicate the company of contract for the class rings of that year. Several alumni approached about the matter could offer little information of value. Perhaps some classmate with an unusually retentive memory could help. Some such alumnus might write Ed at 9 Needham St., Perry, N. Y. 14530.

Thanks to Mrs. Frank (Cora Parry) Miller, the '31 news includes this reportorial gem: "Mrs. Mary (Peter G.) Jannicelli of 704 N. Belated congratulations are in order . . . Fred Bennett, U. S. Army (Ret.) lists his address as 1259 Revere St., Aurora, Colorado 80010.

Mrs. Elmer Mead, nee Mildred E. Snyder, has done well as a mother. The Meads have seven children: four are married, one a graduate nurse; one (handicapped) is associated with Allied Services, Scranton, and two are attending Albright College in Reading. Mildred is associated with Montrose General Hospital. Her address is: R. D. 4, Montrose, Pa. 18801.

Charles Darrin, '34, and David Dye, '35, have owned and operated the Hammond Organ and Piano Studios at 309 E. Water St., Elmira, N. Y. since 1958—and apparently very well. They've just been cited by the parent Hammond Organ Company in Chicago for "outstanding sales and service performance." Editor could not resist gem of 36 years ago: student Charlie Darrin at organ in Straughn Auditorium . . . Harold Grinnell is now coordinator of elementary schools of Waverly Central Schools, Waverly, N. J. Richard Gilbert, who died suddenly at his home in Canton, N. Mr. Gilbert was best known for his outstanding direction of the University's Laurentian Singers, as evidenced by the eulogy of St. Lawrence President Frank P. Piskor: "All of St. Lawrence grieves at the loss of Professor J. Richard Gilbert. His contagious enthusiasm and his inspiring leadership enhanced the appreciation of singers and listeners alike. He was a very gifted and special kind of teacher, and Laurentians who had the privilege of working with him over the past 22 years treasured their association with him. Many thousands of people have thrilled to the choral sounds of the Laurentian Singers . . . They were a prime instrument for embodying and dramatizing the St. Lawrence spirit. And a late bulletin—this one from the class' most versatile, ubiquitous member, one Clarence Kemp who happens to be the director of the Lancaster (N. Y.) High School Band when he isn't moonlighting in his remarkable avocation as a missionary liaison. Now also he's an author and the jacket of his new book, ". . . From Shinglehouse to Angmagsalik," asks: "Who in the world would lug 30 pounds of fresh cherries to Rev. Herman Turner way down in Guatemala? Who would ever tote a pressure cooker, in a gym bag, clear to the Rev. Roy Nelson in Cabanas, Cuba? Who would portage the Atlantic with a 17-pound ham for the Rev. Don Shackelford? Who went through Havana customs with over 30 new white shirts for the Bible School boys and talked them into duty-free entry?" The answer, of course, is Dr. Clarence Kemp. Clarence's work has him shuttling between Cuba, Haiti, Gonave Island, Iceland, Greenland, Venezuela, El Salvador, Guatemala, Jamaica, Puerto Rico and Vestman Island. He appears regularly on TV and radio—and the lecture platform. All honorariums are airmailed to missions and missionaries.

Lead paragraph of a recent university press release reads: "Dr. Warren R. Seymour has been appointed acting dean of extra-divisional administration at the University of Missouri-Columbia, Chancellor John W. Schwada announced today." Apparently, Warren has his work cut out for him, for the third paragraph spells out his new job—in no uncertain terms and at length, thus: "Dean Seymour, member of the UMC faculty for three years, will be the dean supervising the Testing and Counseling Service, Student Health Service, Student Financial Aids, Admissions and Registrar, Dean of Students, Housing, and Student Union and Commons, as well as the three ROTC departments and Marching Mizzou." The Seymours reside at 202 Manor Drive, Columbia, Mo. 65201 . . . And two new addresses, again in response to editors' plea for registering changes: Dr. Robert J.

Day, 16811 Baruna Lane, Huntington Beach, Calif. 92647, and Mrs. Clarence R. (Evelyn M. Antes) Mutchler, Inverness Road, R. D. 2, Montoursville, Pa. 17754. Evelyn is another alumna claiming two classes. The other, 1930.

Paul Bowles and family were much in evidence at last year's Alumni Day festivities. Come May 16, they may make a return appearance, it is hoped. The Bowles are living at 144 White Oak Terrace, Belleville, N. J. 07109 . . . A new address registered for Elizabeth (Caffo) Howe. It's Box 274, Knoxville, Pa. 16928.

activities since graduation. She first taught 4th Grade in the Tunkhannock Schools. Marrying a Wilkes graduate in 1956, she moved to New Jersey where she was teaching in the Irvington Public Schools when her career was interrupted first with the arrival of David, now 11, and then with the arrival of Alan a little more than two years later. She has been an advisor to a Tri-Hi-Y Group, a Cub Scout den mother, a Sunday School teacher and, for the past two years, a substitute teacher in the Irvington Schools. The James live at 25 Coolidge Rd., Maplewood, N. J. 07040 . . . Mrs. Richard (Beverley Smith) Petticrew is teaching in the Primary Department of the Perrysburg (Ohio) Public Schools and is living at 1780 Valley Way Dr., Toledo, Ohio 43614.

Eugene Sangiuliano is now associate superintendent of the Crestwood School District. After graduation from Mansfield, Gene did advanced work at the State University of New York College at Cortland, Alfred University, Geneseo State University, St. Bonaventure and is now a candidate for the doctoral degree in educational administration at the University of Pittsburgh. The source of this information adds: "He is a fine person and administrator and a real credit to the college."

Again in response to editors' plea for notification of changes, there are two new addresses: Mrs. James P. (Elizabeth June Miller) Steckler, Box 386, R. D. 1, Palmyra, Pa. 17078, and Barry Vannauker, 157 Bedford Rd., Fairless Hills, Pa. 19030.

Mrs. Roger Reed, nee Jessie Ruvo, recently received her master of arts degree in education from the New Mexico State University in Las Cruces, N. Mex. Jessie is head of the English Department of Alameda Junior High School in the Las Cruces school system. Husband Roger is an electrical engineer at the White Sands Missile Range. They have two children, Ben and Ardath, and reside at 225 W. Fleming, Las Cruces, N. Mex. . . . Two alumni of this class, somewhat removed, indicate they would be interested in joining an alumni club in their respective areas if such were formed. They are Clarence Oakley, 38 Redfield St., Tunkhannock, Pa. 18657, an instructor in social studies, and Joanette Albee Edgar, 47 W. Grenadier Rd., Scottsville, N. Y., 6th Grade teacher in the T. J. Connor School and mother of Jon, 10, and Janie, 8 . . . And a new address for Stephen and Pauline Neal. It's 727 Arlington Road, Camp Hill, Pa. 17011.

The Bertram Francis' could use an alumni file of their own. That idea surfaced recently when Father Francis registered changes of address on all three daughters. (See also 1960 below.) The changes in this class are those of Mrs. James (Jean Francis) Besanceney, Glenwood Drive, Guilford, Conn. 06437, and Mrs. John (Lois Francis) Bush, Knoxville, Pa. 16928.

U. S. Post Office. The Pellams' address: R. D. 1, Emporium, Pa. 15834 . . . Richard and Elizabeth Mitchell '60 and '61, are living at 244 Huxley Drive, Snyder, N. Y. 14226 . . . Stanley Snyder is director of choirs, Ithaca High School. His address is 600 Warren Rd., Apt. 10-1C, Ithaca, N. Y. 14850.

Winfield Bassage is one alumnus who might be of inestimable help to a reactivated alumni body by way of guidance and counseling in matters of bequests, living trusts, endowments et al. (See Alumni-in-the-News pages) . . . For note on Elizabeth Kovic Mitchell, see 1960 above . . . Ed Marvin, Covington, Pa., now a U. S. Air Force Captain assigned to PACAF Headquarters for air operations in Southeast Asia, the Far East and Pacific areas, has been decorated with the Bronze Star Medal for "meritorious service while engaged in military operations against Viet Cong forces." The citation pointed to his "outstanding ability in the formulation and adoption of plans and studies in support of combat tasks assigned to his unit at Cam Ranh Bay AB, Vietnam." The medal was pinned by Col. John W. Livingston, PACAF deputy chief of staff. Ed was commissioned in 1962 and is married to the former Ruby Young, Connellys Springs, N. C. His latest military address (now several months old, however) was Capt. Edward L. Marvin, CMR No. 1, Box 103, Hdqs. PACAF, APO San Francisco, Calif. 96553 . . . And there are three more new addresses, again in response to the Mansfieldian's call for changes. They are those of: the Rev. Lamont R. Satterly, 82 Greencrest Terrace, Akron, Ohio 44313; Mrs. Robert J. Niedzielski, nee Mildred Matylewicz, 284 Clifton Ave., Kingston, N. Y. 12401, and Kay Karen Kreider Kreider (to indicate identical maiden and married names), Timber Road, Mt. Gretna, Pa.

Austin I. and Jean Laughner Snyder, both '62, recently struck a bonanza for their scrapbook, if they keep one, that is. Austin was made the new principal of Ambler Junior High School and the occasion called for a 3-column spread with 36-point head in the Ambler Gazette. (See Alumni-in-the-News pages) . . . Congratulations are in order also to Leroy Spoor, elementary principal of the Damascus Township Schools, near Honesdale, who recently received his master's degree from the University of Scranton in elementary administration and, almost simultaneously, his elementary principal's certificate, for which he took the required hours also at the University of Scranton. His address is R. D. 4, Honesdale, Pa. 18431 . . . Because kind words seem to be the exception rather than the rule, editors sincerest thanks to Mary Emma (Grube) Douglas for her complimentary review of the new Mansfieldian. They're glad the feature on Veterans on the Campus was considered in good taste and order. The Douglas' live at 3509 Indiana Ave., Fort Wayne, Ind. 46807 . . . Mrs. Albert Goellner, nee R. Ann Wilkinson, is currently associated with the Americans Abroad programs of the American Field Service International Scholarships. Husband Al is a designer with the New Studio, an advertising art service. They live at 311 E. 73rd St., New York, N. Y. 10021 . . . Linda Albee Edgar is substitute teaching between looking after her two young daughters, aged one and three years. Her address is 27 Heatherwood Rd., Fairport, N. Y. 14450 . . . Again in response to the last Mansfieldian, a raft of changes of addresses: Judy Klingensmith, 6701 Salon Blvd., Salon, Ohio 44139; Mrs. Richard P. (Les- ley Scott) Mack, 10 Greenview Dr., Dover, Del. 19901; Paul A. Marold Sr., R. D. 1, Gilboa, N. Y. 12076; Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. (Sardia Mohr) Hogancamp, 402 Maple Dr., Elmira, N. Y. 14904, and Mrs. Patricia Beagle Glenn, 1827 Ebony Dr., York, Pa.

Mary Jane Colegrove, of Mansfield, is now assistant professor of elementary education and a supervising teacher in the Rowland Laboratory School at Shippensburg State College. Prior to joining the Shippensburg faculty, she taught in the Williamsport Area Schools and served as a consultant in the Title IV Eastern Regional Institute for Education at Syracuse. She received her master's degree from Bucknell . . . Robert Cummings was recently appointed middle school principal of the Tunkhannock Area School District and thus made the Alumni-in-the-News pages of this issue . . . Dave Balch, who has been teaching in Dundee, N. Y. for the past six years, is on sabbatical and is pursuing studies in guidance at the State University of New York at Plattsburgh. He holds a master's from Elmira College. That news comes from Mrs. Clifford P. Balch who writes also that her husband, Class of 1918, passed away last year . . . Richard Vail, assistant director of admissions, Cornell University, has received his master of science degree in education from Elmira College. Dick is married to the former Betty Harris, of Dallas, Pa. With one-year-old Amy Lynn, they live at 90 Garrett Rd., R. D. 3, Ithaca, N. Y. 14850. Editors' thanks for the note on the new Mansfieldian . . . Jean Merrill Dutchess, after getting a master's of arts degree in education from the California State College at Los Angeles and doing a teaching stint of five years in home economics and kindergarten has now settled down to being a mother and homemaker. The Dutchesses have a two-year-old daughter, Angela Denise and expect another one (daughter?) in February—but that's past. At any rate, there's a husband involved and, of course, he's Thomas A. Dutchess, Class of 1965 and holder of the same master's as Jean's. He's now teaching history, geography and physical education—and coaching—at Pioneer Junior High in Upland. Family confidence: Tom's secret ambition is to return to MSC as an elementary instructor or assistant dean of men. The Dutchesses would come a long way. They're now living at 1151 Camden Ct., Upland, Calif. 91786 . . . Irene Pierce Jurnack lists her present position as "housewife" at 46 Nelson St., Smethport, Pa. 16749. She'd join an alumni club if one were formed in her area . . . Husband Paul Jurnack concurs in that idea. He's an IBM systems engineer. The Jurnacks have one son, Christopher . . . The Julie Marvel Twohig family is now five. That's certain (see cut). What isn't certain is Julie's street address. In September it was 102 South Maple Lane and in mid-February it was 202 Maple Lane. In either case it's West Chester, Pa. 19380 . . . And now, after the last Mansfieldian, another blizzard of changes. Here they are: Mrs. Bernard (Gayle Calhoun) Zawrotny, Lake View Drive, Mahopac, N. Y. 10541; Mrs. William (Joanne Lanphere) Alois, 110 Haverhill Dr., DeWitt, Syracuse, N. Y. 13214; Gary B. and Constance Craig (Class of '64) Tiffany, Apartment A 117, King and Frazer Roads, Malvern, Pa. 19355; Robert P. Ginter, R. D. 1, Box 217-B, Spencer, N. Y. 14883; Mrs. Charles (Sharon Broutman) Lessig, Apt. S206, Wyomissing Park Apartments, Reading, Pa.

Driver and Safety Educators Association of New York State and is also in his second term as president of the Southern Tier Chapter of that organization. He's teaching driver education in the Savona and Bradford Central Schools in New York, and just to show he has versatility he's accepted the job of head wrestling coach at Savona this year. His address is P. O. Box 157, Bradford, N. Y. 14815 . . . Thanks to the Music Department's Dr. John Baynes: Elspeth Foley has been chosen for inclusion in the current edition of "Outstanding Young Women of America," and was recently promoted to assistant professor at Mayville State College in North Dakota where she is head counselor of all freshman music students. See Alumni-in-the-News . . . Larry Van Druff is writing his doctoral dissertation in wildlife science and vertebrate zoology at Cornell University. He got his M.S. in vertebrate zoology from Cornell in 1966, has been a research assistant and expects to get his doctorate in June coming up. He's married to the former Mary Ann Douglass, of Westfield, Pa., who's expecting a big event of her own—any time now. Scribbled on the back of the note editors are struggling with are four names of '64. They are Diane (or Dane) Hess, Aleda Myers, Jim Newton, Bill Belcher and Bruce Furman. Larry's address is Fernow Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y. 14850 . . . Sherman West, now a U. S. Air Force captain, has received two awards of the Air Medal at Robins AFB, Ga., for air action in Southeast Asia. He was cited for "his outstanding airmanship and courage as a navigator-bombardier on successful and important missions completed under hazardous conditions." Sherman's now at Robins with the 19th Bomb Wing, a unit of the Strategic Air Command, America's nuclear deterrent force of long range bombers and intercontinental ballistic missiles. A native of Tioga and a graduate of Williamson Junior-Senior High School, Sherman was commissioned in 1965, shortly after his graduation from MSC . . . And, again following in the wake of the last Mansfieldian, address changes galore. Here are some of them: Mrs. Landon (Carolyn De Angelis) Dearborn, R. D. 3, Windsor, N. Y. 13865; Mrs. Katharina (Sneshkoff) Milliken, 25 Cooper Drive, Apalachin, N. Y. 13732; Norman C. Pierce, 67 Lycoming, Canton, Pa. 17724; Mrs. Paul (Jean Louise Lundy) Beard, R. D. 2, Montoursville, Pa. 17754 (apparently a recent change of name too); Richard J. Mulaski, P. O. Box 254, Port Allegany, Pa. 16743; Mrs. Conrad G. (Barbara L. Trautman) Brandt, 3641 North Front St., Harrisburg, Pa. 17110 . . . A change for Constance Craig Tiffany is noted above under 1963.

Lynn Sherman has been named manager of the Muncy office of the Commonwealth Bank and Trust Company. (See Alumni-in-the-News pages) . . . Latest on Frank Worthington is that he's married (Sandra Hadley, Class of '68), is living at R. D. 3, Troy, Pa., is working for the Columbia Insurance Co., Bloomsburg, Pa., and is very close to being promoted to general agent . . . For a pungent little morsel on Tom Dutchess and his brood, see above under 1963 . . . 1965 was big for Nancy Lebo. Not only was it the year of her graduation from MSC, it was also the year of her marriage to Gary Cummings and the launching of her teaching career in home economics in Elmira, N. Y. Since then she's come back to Mansfield where she's teaching in the high school. Her address is R. D. 3, Mansfield, Pa. 16933 . . . More address changes in the wake of the last Mansfieldian: J. Craig MacPherson, 46 Fairview Ave., Pennsville, N. J. 08070; Mrs. Nyhl M. (Linda Schall) Austin, 288 Proctor Road, Wellsville, N. Y. 14895; Mrs. James S. (Margaret Vite) Mumaw, 26 Penn Valley

Dr., Yardley, Pa. 19067; Mrs. J. E. (Janice Mae Fisher) Mulder, 1701 Bern Rd., Apt. N2, Wyomissing, Pa. 19610 . . . See Charles Todd below under 1966.

Listed among the candidates for advanced degrees in the program of the 142nd Commencement of the University of Colorado was John Mitchell Williams. John received the master of arts in education . . . To date, an unresolved discrepancy between alumni files and press clipping on Charles Todd's class. What is certain—and more important—is that he has been awarded the Bronze Star and Army Commendation Medal for "meritorious achievement" while serving in Viet Nam. See Alumni-in-the-News pages . . . See Alumni-in-the-News pages also for the latest on Lois Elizabeth Keir, R. D. 2, Athens, Pa. By this time she's begun a special two-year term of Methodist home mission service in the United States and the Virgin Islands . . . By this time, George Bluhm Jr., has probably completed his training in weather services with the U. S. Air Force at Chanute AFB, Ill. He's a resident of Mansfield. He and Mansfield's president will have a common tack for conversation . . . First note on Lt. Burton R. and Joanne Wiggins Adams indicates that they have two daughters and "are to be stationed in Germany for 21 months." Second note indicates they are—with this address: Lt. Burton R. Adams, 201-32-1494, C Battery, 5th Bn., 81st Arty, APO N. Y. 09666 . . . Again, in response to the Mansfieldian's call for changes: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fleming, 5121 Cost Drive, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15236; Julia J. Knowlton, R. D. 1, Box 131, Roulette, Pa. 16746; Dennis M. Vinson, 4205 Rosemont Ave., Drexel Hill, Pa. 19026; Joanne Hartle, 124 First Ave., Garland, Glen Burnie, Maryland 21661; Ralph A. Class gem of the month is a sizzler from Sisle, Norman L., that is. He's "still teaching math at Tunkhannock High, still coaching cross country, track and basketball, still is the No. 1 dancer in Pennsylvania, and is still dating Michele Rydiak." "What else can I say," he asks. For some reason he lists his address as 2140 Greenleaf St., Allentown, Pa. . . . Barbara Manbeck Whitehill recently received her master of arts degree from George Washington University, Washington, D. C. For a full account on Barbara, see the Alumni-in-the-News pages . . . Thalia Balch Townley, Suburban Acres, Elmira, N. Y., has been school nurse at the Big Flats, N. Y. grade school for the past two years and is this year school nurse at the Booth School in Elmira . . . Edward Baltruchitis is the new assistant dean of students at Moravian College. As did classmate Barbara Manbeck, Ed received his master of arts from George Washington University. He has done advanced work at the University of Pittsburgh and Harvard University . . . Tom and Tanya (Pyle) Hotalen, both of '67, are living on Farm Road, R. D. 1, Copake, N. Y. 12516. Tom, finishing his work for a master's at Bucknell, is teaching math at Hillsdale, N. Y. Tanya "is not teaching full time" . . . And Michele Rydiak—the name appears somewhere else in this column—is teaching 1st Grade at Sayville, L. I., N. Y. Her address is 937 S. Country Rd., Ballport, L. I., N. Y. 11713 . . . And more address changes in the wake of the latest Mansfieldian: Mr. and

Charlotte Roberts is now librarian for the junior and senior high schools of the Souderton (Pa.) Area School District. Charlotte previously had been the librarian of the North Penn School District . . . Thanks to Mrs. Yolanda Horen, Philadelphia, a note on an important wedding: Ian Ronald Horen to Karen Eagleson (Class of '69) last August in St. Peter's Church, Point Pleasant Beach, N. J. Karen is in her first year of teaching (home economics) at Franklin County High School and Ron his first year at North Brunswick High School. They've made their home in Somerset, N. J. (Address needed). The wedding, incidentally, brought together two classmates: Jimmy Doody, who's teaching at Newark, Del. and was best man, and Norman Sisle—the name has cropped up before (See 1967)—who was an usher . . . Karen Helsel is teaching in the junior high school of the Newark (Del.) Special School District. Her address is 118 Chapel Hill Dr., Chapel Hill, Newark, Del. . . . Peter Metarko received his master of science degree in mathematics from Indiana University of Pennsylvania at commencement exercises this past January. Presently associated with the university, Pete is living at 749 South 5th St., Indiana, Pa. 15701 . . . For an item on Sandra (Hadley) Worthington, see 1965 . . . At the time of this writing, Ron Somogy—if Air Force plans are materializing on schedule—is piloting a C-130E Hercules with the 516th Tactical Airlift Wing at Dyess AFB, Texas. For his silver wings, he makes Alumni-in-the-News . . . Linda J. (Folk) Casper is a science teacher in the Reading (Pa.) Schools. Her address is 933 Fern Ave., Reading, Pa. 19607 . . . And again in response to the latest Mansfieldian, another raft of changes of address—names, too. Here are some: Mrs. Eric (Linda J. Bair) Garrett, 71 Executive Lane, Willingboro, N. J. 08046; Mrs. Alex Henry (Janice Brinkley) Caruso, 1285 East Main St., Bradford, Pa. 16701; Mrs. Susan (Redington) Wykoff, 104 Smith Ave., Port Allegany, Pa. 16743; Mrs. Jean Bluhm, 10 Myrtlewood Ave., Willingboro, N. J. (see above) 08046; Mrs. H. Robert (Kathleen Rhodes) Ritchey, 213 Dana Dr., Trooper Trailer Court, Norristown, Pa. 19401; Lamar Fetterman, 212 S. Beech St., Burnham, Pa. 17009; Russell W. Guthrie, 630 Prince St., Northumberland, Pa. 17857; Mrs. Judith (Trutt) Lebda, Box 61, Port Trevorton, Pa. 17864.

As could be expected, the main theme of the '69 news is nuptial. The class abounds with weddings, to mention a few: Catherine J. Schenck and Michael Lenwood Myers (See Alumni-in-the-News)—A snafu in communication precluded a picture); Karen Eagleson and Ian Ronald Horen (See 1968); Margaret Ann Lewis ('70) and Robert Gregg Harris (See Alumni-in-the-News); Adele Marie Rieppel (dean of men's office) and Russell Paul Saurbaugh; Rosemary Lee Rieppel and Samuel Joseph Schappelle—all of which lead to an important:

(Editors' Note—Seen accompanying this column are reproductions of black and white glossy prints of the Rieppel-Saurbaugh and Rieppel-Schappelle weddings. Such prints, even though in color, but preferably black and white, could be the basis of a regular pictorial feature in the new Mansfieldian—given the cooperation of the principals, alumna or alumnus or both. Editors would welcome such contributions of wedding prints. They can be returned.)

Otherwise in the news: Robert Burr was recently graduated with honors from the U. S. Air Force's Medical Services Specialist School at Sheppard AFB, Texas. Assigned to Clark AB, Philippines, for duty with the Pacific Air Forces, he will assist in the care and treatment of patients. Bob is a native of Elkland, Pa. . . . John Vaitkunas is at Georgia Tech, Atlanta, Ga. 30300 . . . Richard Holihan is living in Corning, N. Y. 14830, where his full address is Apt. 5A, Bonadip Garden Apts., West Pultney St. . . . Robert Reeser is now director of vocal music in the Nazareth (Pa.) Area Senior High School (See Alumni-in-the-News) . . . Suzanne Trapani is now on the faculty of the Lehigh (Pa.) Elementary Schools. (An address is needed) . . . Bob Soprano is head backfield coach at Wildwood, N. J., High School and is teaching 6th Grade in the Wildwood system (See Alumni-in-the-News) . . . The clipping concerned Charlotte Roberts ('68) but who should be found inadvertently on the back of it but Linda Lee Benner who's been assigned to special education in the Middle School, apparently at Pennsburg, Pa. (See Alumni-in-the-News) . . . John Franklin Clark is teaching in the Williamsport Area Schools. His address is 217 S. 2nd St., Sunbury, Pa. 17801 . . . Tom Donaghue has been doing graduate work. He's living at 517 Virginia Ave., Phoenixville, Pa. 19460 . . . Dave Gleinn is teaching at Natrona, Pa. where his address is 1337 Lengel Ave., zip 15065 . . . John Emmett is a special education teacher in the junior high school at Clinton, N. Y. where his street address is 15 University Drive.

TWO VETERAN FACULTY MEMBERS TO RETIRE

Dr. Schappelle

Professor Foreman

Dr. Newell A. Schappelle, chairman, Department of Biology, and Associate Professor Jay B. Foreman, Department of History, will retire at the end of the current academic year.

Dr. Schappelle's retirement will cap a career of 42 years in science research and teaching. Prior to his coming to Mansfield in 1946, Dr. Schappelle was plant physiologist doing research at the South Carolina Experiment Station and also at the University of Puerto Rico Experiment Station.

Since joining the Mansfield faculty, Dr. Schappelle has been a sponsor of Lambda Chapter of Sigma Zeta, honorary science and mathematics fraternity. Last year, he was national president of the fraternity. He has served as president of the MSC Faculty Association (1962), as an elder in the Presbyterian Church for many years, as president of the Wellsboro Camera Club, and as a member of the Tidaghton Audubon Society. He is a member also of Sigma Xi, honorary research fraternity. He is listed in Who's Who Among American Men of Science. A graduate of the University of Massachusetts, Dr. Schappelle received his Ph.D. degree from Cornell University.

He is married to the former Margaret Hunter, of Florence, S. C. They have two sons and a daughter: Robert, now with the Convair Division of General Dynamics; Samuel, a teacher in Mansfield High School, and Elizabeth, a student at East Stroudsburg

State College. The Schappelles reside at 207 S. Main Street, Mansfield.

Prof. Foreman's retirement will draw to a close a teaching career that has spanned 40 years, the last 23 of which have been spent on the Mansfield campus.

He is a graduate of the Pennsylvania State University from which he received both his bachelor of arts and his master of arts degrees.

Before coming to Mansfield, Mr. Foreman taught at Philipsburg and Towanda. He is a member and former treasurer of the local chapter of the Pennsylvania State Education Association and a life member of the National Education Association. He served on the Mansfield Boro Council for seven years (1956-63), is presently a trustee of the Mansfield United Methodist Church, a member and director of the Tidaghton Audubon Society and the National Audubon Society, F. and A. M. Lodge 247 of Mansfield and the Coudersport Consistory, the Association of State College and University Faculties, and the National Parks Association.

Prof. Foreman is married to the former Joyce Harpster of Philipsburg, a graduate of Mansfield State. The Foremans have two daughters—Mrs. R. C. Bell, Horseheads, New York, and Mrs. L. C. Korpi, East Syracuse, New York—and three grandchildren. They reside at 80 South Academy Street.

BASKETBALL

Slow-Starting Uncertain Basketball Varsity Whirls Into Comeback Right Up to the Finals

By ROD KELCHNER

Assistant Dean of Men

The Mansfield State College Basketball team entered the District 19 N.A.I.A. play-offs again this year.

In the semi-final round, Mansfield downed the Bloomsburg State Huskies 99-83, but Maryland State College downed all Mountie hopes of national competition by defeating Mansfield 74-66.

Only once in the past dozen years have the Mounties been out of contention for District laurels. At one point, however, it would have required unusual foresight (or tremendous loyalty) to predict the kind of success earned by this year's Red and Black quintet. On New Year's Day, 1970, the team record was a so-so 5-4. It seemed to be going "nowhere" in the Eastern Division of the Pennsylvania State College Conference, having lost to Cheyney, West Chester and Kutztown. The Holiday Tournament at the Naval Base in Norfolk, Virginia did little to help the cause as the Mounties dropped 2 of 3 games to non-league foes.

Then came the New Year and subsequently a "new ball club." Because of an extended Christmas vacation and a lengthy final exam schedule, only three games were played in January. The Mounties took all three. Having established the momentum, Mansfield State College continued on, winning ten of their next thirteen contests. With Cheyney having wrapped up the Eastern Division crown, Mountie interests shifted to the race for N.A.I.A. recognition.

In analyzing the season, and the factors that have contributed to the "success in '70," some interesting observations are noticed. One, is the improvement of the teams' offensive efforts. In the first ten games, the squad averaged a modest 76 points per game. In the final thirteen games, the average jumped 10 points to 86 per game.

The team seemed to thrive on work. The more they played the better they became. During one period in February, ten games were scheduled in 21 days. The Mounties won 7 of the 10.

The growth of the 69-70 squad is indicative of the fine coaching job turned in by Ed Wilson and his capable assistant, Bob Maxson (Mansfield '52). Wilson is completing his third season as head man after serving for a season under Bill Clark. During these three years, he has compiled a 51-25 record, one of the best among active coaches in the Conference. Maxson, who also handles the Freshmen team, is an ideal complement to the volatile Wilson. This year's group of Freshmen is one of the most promising, having built a 14-5 record.

Coach Ed Wilson

BASKETBALL ALUMNI REUNION

There's always a first time for everything. And this year was a first for—of all things—a varsity basketball alumni reunion. With Art DeGenaro, the new Health and Physical Education chairman at the college, Coach Robert "Tut" Moore, Coach Ed Wilson and other Athletic Department staffers sparking the occasion, it turned out to be quite a social success.

Among returning basketball alumni were these well-preserved specimens of past Mansfield court battles and triumphs:

John Rusinsko '61, Sayre High School; Gib Moore '60, Horseheads Junior High School and Dave Russell '63, Athens High School.

Charles Griscavage '60, Wellsboro Junior High School, John Rusinsko, and Coach Ed Wilson.

Dave Russell, Robert Stackhouse '62, Troy High School, Bob Felt and Coach Wilson.

SPRING SPORTS OUTLOOK

By WILLIAM D. MAITLAND

WNTE Sports Department

This spring, Mansfield State College expects to turn out three of the strongest teams it has ever had. The coaches of varsity baseball, golf, and tennis have all predicted winning seasons. The only exception will be the track team, which is seriously hurting in personnel.

Dr. John Heaps, head coach of the Mountie baseball team, says that this year's varsity is probably the best-balanced team that Mansfield has ever produced. Last year, the Mountie sluggers posted a 12 and 9 season, setting a new school record with 12 wins. Dr. Heaps is confident that this year's team will better that record.

The Mansfield squad will appear in Mansfield six times, four of which will be doubleheaders. (A doubleheader will be played with Clarion on Alumni Day, May 16.) There have been seven away games and also a pre-season Southern trip scheduled. On this trip the Mounties were slated to play the Apprentice School in Newport News, Virginia; Hampton Institute, Norfolk State, and Eastern Mennonite.

Some big guns for the Mounties are Tom Cassel at short-stop, pitchers Stu Casterline, Dave Hagerdorne, and Don Bowman, and, at third base, probably the team's best hitter, Tom Pernel.

The tennis team, according to Coach Robert Heverly, can also expect a winning season. Returning to the team will be Fred Gardner, a senior who posted an 8 and 0 record last year as second man; Dave Smith, a junior, who last year as first man posted a 5 and 3 record, and sophomores Phil Levkamich and Norm Moser. Bob Fagan is a good freshman prospect. The team has 12 matches this season plus a Southern trip in the early spring in which they face Loyola; an Army team at Fort Eustis, Virginia; Randolph Macon; Hampton Institute, and Towson. Coach Heverly predicts that with more matches, the team will be able to better last year's 6 and 1 record.

Coach Richard Finley says that the 1970 Mountie golf team is the finest team Mansfield has had in the last decade. Last fall, the team posted a 6 and 1 record, which included defeating the State champions, Bloomsburg. Doug Simmonds, a junior from Douglassville, Pa., will captain this year's team. Good freshman prospects are Bob Overburger from Johnstown and Dennis Pascarella from Salamanca, New York. In addition

Coach John Heaps

Coach Robert Heverly

Coach Richard Finley

Coach "Molly" Dry

tion to regular season play, the squad is scheduled for a five day Southern trip, playing William and Mary, Old Dominion, and two Navy teams from the Norfolk Naval Base.

The outlook for the track team is dim. The only returning star from last year will be Kevin Hanley, a long distance man. However, Coach Molly Dry does have some good freshmen. Dave Moody is a great sprinter, Larry Raymond is running the hurdles, and Steve Remocik is heaving the shot put. But despite the efforts of these fine athletes, it will most likely be a long season for the club.

All in all, however, it seems that Spring will be a fairly happy time for the MSC Athletic Department.

MEMORANDUM

To: Members of Reunion Classes
From: Charles Weed, Reunion Chairman
Subject: Class Reunions — Alumni Day

Alumni Day—1970 will be held on the campus of Mansfield State College, May 16, 1970.

An integral part of the day is the reunion of friends and former classmates. Each year special arrangements are made for the members of anniversary classes to meet together and renew friendships. Anniversary classes are designated as every 5th year beginning with 1900.

In an effort to promote the reunion of your classmates on Alumni Day, we are including this memorandum in this issue of the Mansfieldian.

It is our hope that you contact your former classmates, at least those that you can, and make arrangements to meet together on Alumni Day.

The Alumni Relations Committee, a committee of the College Faculty, stands ready to assist however possible. Please contact us soon to make any special arrangements for your reunion that you desire.

Tables will be reserved for you during the noon luncheon as well as other designated areas for your reunion activities.

Your alma mater has undergone many changes. Why not plan now to return on Alumni Day, May 16, and catch up on the progress.

Please contact—by telephone:

Front cover is from a color transparency of the Grand Canyon of Pennsylvania, near Wellsboro, at the height of the flaming foliage season. The photography is that of Ralph Menne, Williamsport. Most of the other camera work appearing throughout this issue is that of the Mansfieldian's own photographer—Jim Loveland—who maintains a studio in Mansfield. The back cover is from a transparency of a previous Homecoming game, borrowed from the Carontawan.

NOW EMERITUS . . .

Associate Professor Christine Lewis, Music Faculty, is now an emeritus professor. Mrs. Lewis retired this year after 24 years on the MSC faculty.

She came to Mansfield from Kansas City, Mo. in 1946. She is a graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music and the University of Missouri, and received the master of music degree from Northwestern University.

To pursue advanced studies in music, Prof. Lewis traveled extensively, and many of her voice students have gone on to distinguished careers in music world.

She resides at 170 South Main St., Mansfield, Pa. 16933.

PRESIDENT'S PREFACE IS DIRECTED ESPECIALLY TO ALUMNI

By
LAWRENCE PARK

We are pleased to have this opportunity to introduce to alumni—first—the main elements of the new Mansfield State College long-range Master Plan.

It seems appropriate to use the Mansfieldian as the vehicle for a major story on college developments, because alumni have a familial relationship to the college and—I must confess—because I feel the time has arrived for alumni to take a more major role in their alma mater's affairs.

The mental images alumni hold of their college are based mainly on their experiences as students.

These images are important, to be sure, but what is far more important now is the vision of what the college should become.

It's a matter of public relations. When an alumnus mentions to someone that he graduated from Mansfield, that person's mental reaction will be based on what he knows, or what he thinks he knows, about the college. Obviously it would be to our advantage to have him informed—right at that point—as to the promise of the college as well as its past.

Our collective responsibility, then, is to keep the public informed about the college; and it is a particular duty of those of us who administer the institution to see that it grows in the best sense of the term, which means a constancy of public respect.

It is our hope that the 1970-80 Master Plan has aspects of change which will lead the college to a place of eminence among Pennsylvania colleges, and that participating alumni will be able to share in the pride of accomplishment.

More than ever before, long-range planning for colleges is now imperative. Institutions have always had to plan for the future; but now such planning takes its place at the top of administrative agenda.

The challenge of planning at Mansfield lies in the complexity of the problem due to pressures to grow larger and the infinite number of directions we can take because we are no longer a single-purpose college, only preparing teachers.

Unfortunately, space restricts us to highlights of the plan.

The task of telling the master plan story is divided into four parts: this preface from the President, and

Dr. Park assumed the presidency of Mansfield State College on July 1, 1968, with the backdrop of a career in education that already had ranged from grade school teacher to the top ranks of university faculties. His degrees (New York University) are in human relations and administration. (The Mansfieldian, September, 1969). The Master Plan for Mansfield State College has been a special personal concern.

one response from the Vice Presidents for Academic, Student and Administrative Affairs. That is also a devious way to introduce these gentlemen, their new responsibilities, and administrative reorganization which recognizes the complexities of a college developing in ten years to 5,000 students.

In the articles which follow, each vice president describes the Master Plan objectives from the vantage point of his office.

But before that, here are elements of an all-college nature which they may not cover:

Mission of the College

We see Mansfield as a multi-purpose state college. Multi-purpose means that our programs will extend beyond our fast growing programs in liberal arts to include other four-year professional and performing arts fields as the needs of the State dictate.

In other words, we will be an expanded comprehensive college, offering undergraduate and graduate study to the level of the master's degree.

It is not our intention to seek university status; rather, we want the primary emphasis of our work to be directed toward quality teaching and those aspects of research, scholarship and creativity which enhance teaching. We believe that the State of Pennsylvania is richly endowed with private and public-related universities; and that the unusual resources peculiar to the kinds of pure research these universities are obligated to do should be reserved for them.

Admissions

At the present time our enrollment is about 3,000 students. Because dormitory construction has not kept pace with the needs, enrollments will be relatively stable until September, 1973.

From that point on, to 1980, we expect to admit an additional 2,000 new students. These students will come from a broad spectrum of society, urban as well as rural, and will hopefully contain a cultural and ethnic mix that reflects our responsibility as a public college.

For some time now there has been a growing awareness among admissions officers that the usual standards for predicting success in college may not be as sacrosanct as we have led ourselves to believe. To examine that idea we intend to review our admissions procedures and test other hypotheses. We believe that because we are a public college our responsibility is to all the people. However intriguing it might be to be increasingly selective in admissions because there are many applicants from which to choose, we will keep our admissions procedures broad enough to admit selectively some students who have potential which may not be fully apparent by the usual predictive measures.

In the area of admissions, we plan to give more recognition to the graduates of the State's developing community colleges. We will move to the point where 60% of our enrollment will be juniors and seniors and the rest in the first two years. In other words, we will have smaller classes of freshmen and admit larger numbers of qualified community college transfers at the junior year.

Alumni

Finally, no planning for this college's future would be complete without provision for a strong alumni association.

We have within the more than 8,000-member alumni body a potential support that could spell the difference between a college that is good and a college that is excellent. Unfortunately, that strength has been tapped only in minor ways. It is dormant and should be awakened.

Lately, the situation has improved. We are beginning to move through the efforts of the office of alumni affairs and we have the beginnings of regional chapters and a means to communicate through a revitalized Mansfieldian.

But that is not enough. We must have the active cooperation of large numbers of alumni to make the association a viable group in the interest of an improved college.

In the beginning of this article, I pointed out the importance of a good public image of an alma mater.

Alumni have to help us build that image. How? . . . by becoming knowledgeable about Mansfield and the state college system . . . by using the latent force in the organization to make their wishes known to the college administration and to those who supply the wherewithal for our very existence.

Alumni are influential people, well-educated and responsible citizens strategically located throughout the Commonwealth and even the country. This knowledge and influence should be put to constructive use for the betterment of our system of public higher education.

Let me suggest that learning about the Mansfield long-range Master Plan can be a beginning for area chapter activities. From there, who knows where we can progress?

VICE PRESIDENT FOR ACADEMIC AFFAIRS CITES PLAN'S 'CLEAR SENSE OF MISSION AND DIRECTION'

By
S. M. SCHMITZ

For the academic division of Mansfield State College, the Master Plan gives a clear sense of mission and direction.

In the first place, "for the purpose of organizing undergraduate and graduate academic affairs, three new units designated as 'faculties' are identified." They are:

The Faculty of Arts and Sciences
The Faculty of Professional Studies
The Faculty of Graduate Studies

"The administrative officer of each faculty is a dean. His responsibility and authority are an extension of those of the Vice President for Academic Affairs to whom he is accountable . . .

"The basic unit of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences is the department . . . There will be eleven departments in the Faculty of Arts and Sciences: Biology, Chemistry, English, Foreign Languages, Geography, History, Mathematics, Physics, Political Science, Psychology, and Speech and Theatre Arts.

"Four other departments will be formed as rapidly as possible with new staff priorities assigned to accomplish this end: Philosophy, Sociology-Anthropology, Geology, Economics . . .

"The Faculty of Professional Studies will consist of three divisions: Health and Physical Education, Teacher Education, and Professional and Performing Arts. The administrative officer of Health and Physical Education will be a Director responsible to the Dean. The other divisions will be administered by associate deans who will be considered staff officers of the Dean with such responsibilities and authority as are delegated by him. In addition there will be a Director of Student Teaching and Professional Experiences, responsible to the Dean, but coordinating the activities of his office through the associate deans.

"The Division of Teacher Education will house the Departments of Elementary and Early Childhood Education, Secondary Education, Special Education,

Since 1959, Dr. Schmitz has served Mansfield State College successively as chairman of the Department of Music, director of Graduate Studies, and dean of academic affairs. A graduate of Lawrence College, he holds a master's in music and a doctorate of philosophy, both from Northwestern University.

Library Education and, in 1971, Educational Psychology . . .

"The Division of Professional and Performing Arts will consist of the Departments of Home Economics, Music, Art, and, in 1972, Computer Sciences and Medical Arts . . .

"The Faculty of Graduate Studies is made up of those faculty who are invited, by reason of experience and qualifications, to teach courses for graduate credit and to sponsor graduate student research. Invitation will be according to standards determined by the Graduate Council . . .

"The Dean of the Faculty of Graduate Studies will also be responsible for the development and coordination of college international programs at all levels. We expect these opportunities to expand to the point when by 1975, a full-time administrator will be needed . . .

"Within the respective Faculties there will be formed on the basis of cross-representation the Fine Arts Council, the Teacher Education Council and the Graduate Council.

"In 1970, we will reorganize the present Educational Development Center and provide a Division of Continuing Education headed by a Director.

"Continuing education is a term which is used to describe a need of modern society. It implies a philosophy of living and identifies a problem. In the first instance the assumption is made that education should never stop for a responsible citizenry. In the second place, technology is moving at such a fast pace that formal education completed at one point is progressively less useful . . .

"Continuing education at Mansfield will be concerned with efforts to fulfill a need of modern society and also with helping the citizens of our region live a full, knowledgeable life.

"The opportunity for Mansfield to move immediately into continuing education is the essence of fulfilling our role as a multipurpose public college. We can provide services to the citizens of this area in a manner that no other college or agency can . . .

"It doesn't take much imagination to see the broad outlines of service Mansfield should provide as a regional college. By directing planning energy and resources for continuing education, we will implement a public service concept as part of our College mission . . .

"In 1970, the Office of Testing and Counseling, which has been within student personnel services, will become part of Academic Affairs and be known as the Office of Institutional Research . . . The responsibilities of the office will be broadened to include data gathering and analysis for a variety of institutional information. The office will also be the repository for information about government and foundation research grants . . .

"In the technology for instruction, there exists a variety of resources to enhance teaching . . . Because this is a controversial area, and also because financial support for instructional media has had to be weighed against other priorities, Mansfield's introduction to these tools has been conservative.

"To have a more comprehensive development of Instructional Resources, a Director will be appointed to the staff in September, 1971. The Director of Instructional Resources will have responsibility for analyzing needs and for making recommendations concerning resources and staff. In these activities, he will work with coordinating agencies within the State Education Department . . ."

In summary, by stressing quality teaching, scholarship, and creativity for faculty as well as students, the Master Plan is expected to strengthen all programs. Research will become increasingly involved in all course work and academic calendars will be adjusted to enhance the efficiency of instructional programs.

Faculty and students will become colleagues in the search of knowledge. Such interaction will be reflected in committee membership, self-evaluation efforts, and self-governance procedures.

The Academic Deans Council will provide coordination to the graduate, undergraduate, special and continuing education programs. Through the Vice President for Academic Affairs the academic community will have representation on the Presidential Cabinet.

Special Councils will assist the various academic subdivisions in the areas of Fine Arts, Teacher Education, Graduate Studies, and Continuing Education. Along with committees, the work of such advisory bodies will provide for a greater utilization of the experience of all faculty for the projected tasks of the institution.

In general, the Arts and Science programs will expand to have a greater proportion of the students, while teacher education will continue to be a primary function of our service to the State of Pennsylvania.

Specifically, the fields of Philosophy, Sociology, Economics, and Anthropology will have developing concentrations of course work in 1970 and 1971.

Professional programs in cooperation with other institutions will begin to emerge in 1970. Medical Technology will be the first of such cooperative ventures. Programs in Fine Arts are being planned through the efforts of the Music, Art, and Speech and Theatre Arts Departments. Facilities to house such programs are already being planned. The bachelor of music degree will be added to those degrees already well developed for Music Education. On professional education, the college is developing plans in the area of Early Childhood Education and Graduate work in guidance and counseling.

In the development of the faculty the college will seek credentials of the most diversified representation possible. That is to say that we seek individuals from a varied background of institutions, experience, and geography. In this way we hope to develop a climate beyond our regional commitment to service.

Added programs will be identified by the special commitment of the college to be of greater service to its sphere of influence. The college will expect to react to the current issues that confront our society and to keep itself in a climate of academic freedom. The strength of the academic climate at Mansfield State College will continue to depend on its ability to explore all ideas.

TO THE VICE PRESIDENT FOR STUDENT AFFAIRS, PLAN MEANS PERSONALIZATION AND PARTNERSHIP IN ACADEMIC COMMUNITY

By

Before coming to Mansfield, Dr. Seidel was assistant professor and director of institutional research at Lycoming College, his alma mater. In 1967, he was named professor and chairman of the Department of Psychology at Mansfield. In 1969, he became MSC's dean of student affairs and professor of psychology. He has done graduate work at Temple University, the University of London and the University of Liverpool which conferred the Ph.D. (psychology).

Mansfield's Master Plan for the seventies is designed to involve students in the partnership of academic community, including the development of educational experiences which have meaning for now as well as tomorrow.

We see as a basic goal that of helping each student develop to his fullest potential as a unique, educated individual. We want him to make of himself a curious person, a questioning person, motivated to assume an ever larger responsibility for his education. We feel that increasingly the events around us seem to cry out for bright, educated young people who are committed to orderly, responsible change in a world where such change is necessary for continued growth.

The policies and procedures which guide us and the regulations which help order our environment will be examined in terms of the contribution they make to the goal of enhancing each student's growth as a better educated person.

We want education in the 1970's at Mansfield to be highly personal, and the Student Personnel Staff plus all other parts of the college community will be dedicated to that end.

The goal we have set for ourselves in the personalization of the college environment is not an easy one. Values for the individual in a larger, more complex institution will be promoted in the form of broader offerings, improved physical facilities and more qualified faculty.

To provide the means to attain our goal of personalization the college will:

1. Strengthen advisor to student relationships so that each student has a faculty advisor familiar with his educational goals and who can help him open institutional doors to reach them.
2. Encourage campus social, fraternal, religious, athletic and educational organizations so that individuals can have one or more groups with whom they can identify in special, personal ways.

3. Broaden and improve the concept of student personnel counseling service so that expert help is available to those who may need it. Under the reorganization of Student Affairs, staff will be added to include psychiatric and psychological counseling. Similarly, health services will be expanded in the near future.

A second basic goal is to strengthen student participation in the partnership of academic community. Mansfield students have had a strong system of student government for a long time. They have been responsible for their own organizations and activities, extending to fiscal independence. The voice of student government needs to be broadened further to bring its concerns into total college governance. This should achieve more effective communications among the several parts of the college and it will allow students to make important contributions to the management policies of the college.

Students will now be voting members of major standing faculty committees, will be included in many departmental committees and serve on all ad hoc groups which seek solutions to problems affecting students and the college as a whole. The President of Student Council is, by appointment of the Governor, a full participating member (exclusive of voting privilege) of the Board of Trustees.

A strong system of student government is of course a basic vehicle for students to administer those activities in which they have a direct, primary interest. It is also an important form of representation of student opinion within the broader college government. For the 1970's we will seek methods to join student, faculty and general college governance for policy decisions which affect the various segments of the college.

We plan to take the following courses of action to promote the social and academic resources of the college:

1. Adequate recreational facilities are essential, and the Decker Health and Physical Education Building will be completed in 1970-71, as an excellent beginning. The present physical education facility will be rehabilitated and used for intramurals and other recreation. Land acquisitions to the South of campus will provide additional space in the form of playing fields, including a baseball diamond.
2. Memorial Hall will be open for the beginning of the Fall term. It provides spaces for recreation, meeting and conference rooms plus offices for student groups.
3. The present library and planned-for additions will offer more space for study and research.
4. Within the limitations of the present structures and the opportunities we will have in the four new dormitories scheduled through 1976, we will create facilities which are comprehensive living-learning centers. In this sense, we view learning as a process which is continuous and to which the whole campus should contribute. Our living centers will reflect this philosophy.
5. Our students will also be building an understanding and appreciation of the world off-campus. We want education to continue beyond formal instruction in the classroom and into the living centers; it must also move off the campus to include experiences designed to broaden horizons. As we strive to promote a stable self-awareness, we want better understanding and appreciation of others, and less prejudice in mind and behavior.

NEW VICE PRESIDENT FOR ADMINISTRATIVE AFFAIRS SEES TOTAL SYSTEM OF PLANNING AND OBJECTIVES TO SERVE EDUCATIONAL PROCESS

By
GEORGE E. MILLER

Under the Master Plan, this office is a completely new one in the college system; its responsibilities, new to the campus complex. On this point, the Master Plan is explicit:

"The Vice President for Administrative Affairs is a new college position rather than a realignment of present responsibilities and a change in title."

In his case for this new office under the Plan, the president of the college states:

"In no other aspect of college administration is the effect of change felt so deeply as in so-called 'business' matters.

"The College is a multi-million-dollar operation in terms of capital investment and in annual operating costs. We deal constantly with changing technology which affects our operation and calls for highly skilled personnel. This College has all the complexities of a municipality . . ."

I hasten not only to concur in the last thought but to add that I believe the college operation can be far more complex than that of a municipality or, in a sense, of government generally or even of big business because of the enormity of the immediate human factor involved and the complexity of the college's end product itself—the cultivation of the human mind.

The Plan confirms this by implication when it points out, in effect, that a responsibility of the Office of Administrative Affairs is to "modernize and make more efficient the various 'business' aspects of the college," while recognizing that its "primary purpose is to serve the educational objectives of the college."

The "business aspects of the college," for which the Office of the Vice President for Administrative Affairs will be responsible, are identified in the Plan as:

—The Business Office, within whose purview are the personnel and procedures dealing with purchasing, accounting, inventory, printing, and the develop-

Of the three new vice presidents of the college around this roundtable on the Master Plan, only one needs an introduction to alumni.

He is Dr. George E. Miller, who is as new to the campus as his office is to the college.

The surrounding clips of our press clipping service serve adequately to introduce Dr. Miller.

ment and management of the college operating budget;

—Buildings and Grounds, which is responsible for the personnel and services concerned with general maintenance, custodial functions, utilities, and transportation;

—Facilities Development, whose responsibilities include the preparation (in collaboration with the Vice Presidents) of the capital budgets, and all aspects of physical facilities development, including land, buildings, utilities and communications systems;

—Computer Center, whose capacity and staff now available to the college will be excellent for our current instructional and non-instructional needs and will serve well through the early period of this plan;

—Office of Personnel, which is responsible for procedures and personnel concerned with payroll, insurance programs and all Civil Service appointments;

—Campus Security, which is responsible for administering the rules and regulations which control traffic and safety on the campus, for making periodic recommendations to promote the most effective use of parking and traffic flow and a safety-conscious campus, and conducting lawful investigations of alleged violations of campus security.

With these agencies at hand, geared and modernized to master the complexities of the '70's, the college will carry on its "business."

And it might be re-stated here that the explicit business of the college is to satisfy the demands placed on it for carrying out specific functions in higher education.

While it is the role of the faculty and administrative officials to assess these demands and to establish corresponding institutional objectives, it is the responsibility of the Office of Administrative Affairs to provide the necessary analytical, informational, planning and logistic support for their attainment. The degree of attainment, however, lies in the ability of the institution to plan and coordinate operations on an all-college basis.

In this sense, the college is viewed as a total system, an integrated whole which transcends its component parts. The apex term in the development of a total system approach is "objectives."

All available resources, irrespective of existing departmental affiliation, are directed toward the achievement of recognized objectives. This obviously necessitates a considerable amount of coordination and cooperation on the part of all individuals in the college.

The new Office for Administrative Affairs is oriented to the proposition that an integrated system of management planning and objectives be developed that is highly responsive to the needs of the faculty and students and the changing role of the College.

More specifically, college-wide management information systems are being developed and will be maintained for administrative decision making and planning purposes.

New procedures incorporating modern management techniques are also being formulated in the areas of operating budgets, facilities development, plant operations and personnel services.

Various projects and continuing programs are being designed to promote a greater understanding of computer technology as it pertains to current and projected research, instructional, and administrative applications.

All of these efforts are being made in the sincere interest of furthering the educational process.

Dr. George E. Miller Gets Mansfield Post

The newly appointed vice president for administrative affairs at Mansfield State College is married to a former Uniontown girl.

Dr. George E. Miller, 36, who will begin his new duties July 1, is married to the former Betty Jean Kolonsky.

They and their three children — Eric, 13; Craig, 11, and Lisa, 6 — reside at 9 Purple St. in Wellsboro.

Dr. Miller goes to Mansfield from the University of Maryland where, since 1963, he has been chief of user services at the university's Computer Science Center.

Mansfield President Lawrence Park had this to say about Dr. Miller:

"At Mansfield, Dr. Miller will assume a vital new administrative post as we see the future.

"His educational background and experience are well suited to our planned modernization moves and economy moves.

"His intimate knowledge of the needs of the academy of the college operation will guarantee that our economic modernization plans will be kind to enhance the quality of instruction."

The new MSC vice president is a 1961 graduate of the University of Maryland where he received not only his baccalaureate degree but also a master of education degree and a doctorate in education.

All of his degrees were in business education with concentrations in higher education and also curriculum instruction.

From 1956 to 1960, he served with the U. S. Air Force on a part-time duty as a manpower management specialist. He was a graduate assistant at the Com-

George E. Miller, 36, newly-appointed vice president for administrative affairs at Mansfield State College, assumed the duties of the MSC post on Wednesday, July 1. It was announced by President Lawrence Park.

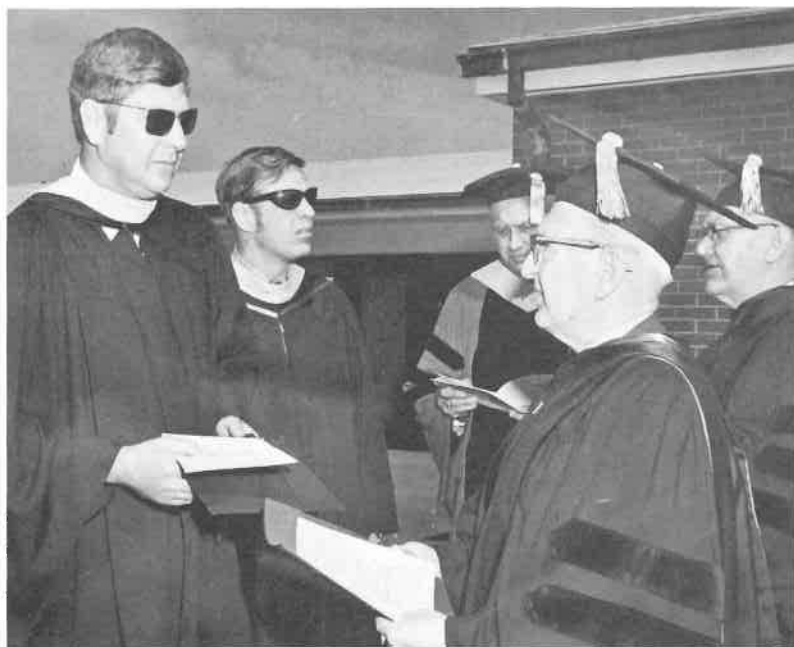

Miller comes to Mansfield from the University of Maryland since 1963, he has been chief of user services at the university's Computer Science Center.

"Mansfield," Dr. Park said, "will assume a vital administrative post as we look to our future. His educational background and experience are well suited to our planned modernization moves. His knowledge of the needs of the college will help guarantee that our modernization efforts will be of a kind to enhance instruction."

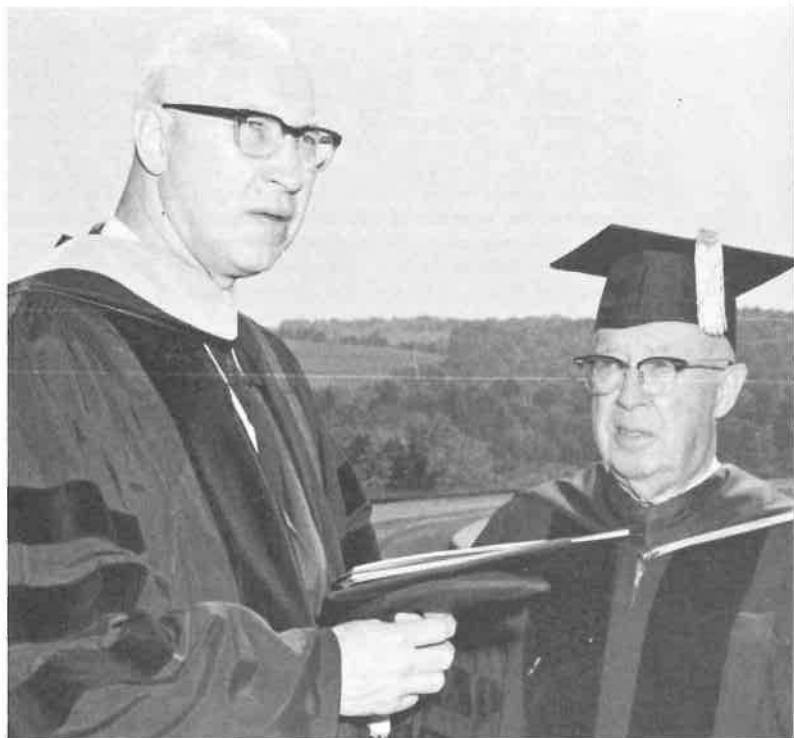

By voting its approval last month, the Mansfield State College Board of Trustees gave the MSC Master Plan its first green light. For this—and for other significant achievements, in the making as well as in the past—it would seem high time that alumni . . .

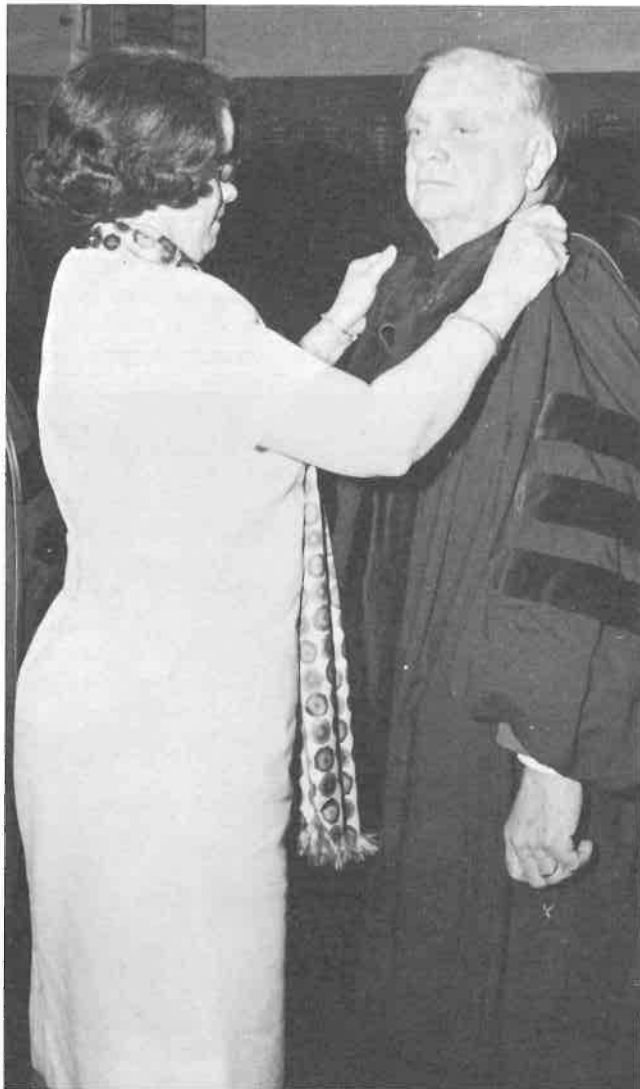

MEET THE TRUSTEES

Fred A. Jupenlaz (front and center), Mansfield, is chairman of MSC's board of trustees. A graduate of Mansfield (1931), he is the one member of the board who has, in past years, served both the faculty and administration of his alma mater. A community leader as well, with a long and unusual record of service in church, fraternal and civic affairs, he is at home in his role as liaison between campus and community. Despite a career in public education spanning more than 33 years, he has still found time to hold most official posts in such affiliations as American Red Cross, American Legion, Masonic Lodge, United Methodist Church (lay delegate), Chamber of Commerce, Lions Club and Borough Council. He is presently active in the Association of Governing Boards of Universities and Colleges. Mr. and Mrs. Jupenlaz (the former Margaret Howe) have a son, two daughters, and four granddaughters, two of whom received their degrees at last January's Mid-Year Commencement—from Grandfather.

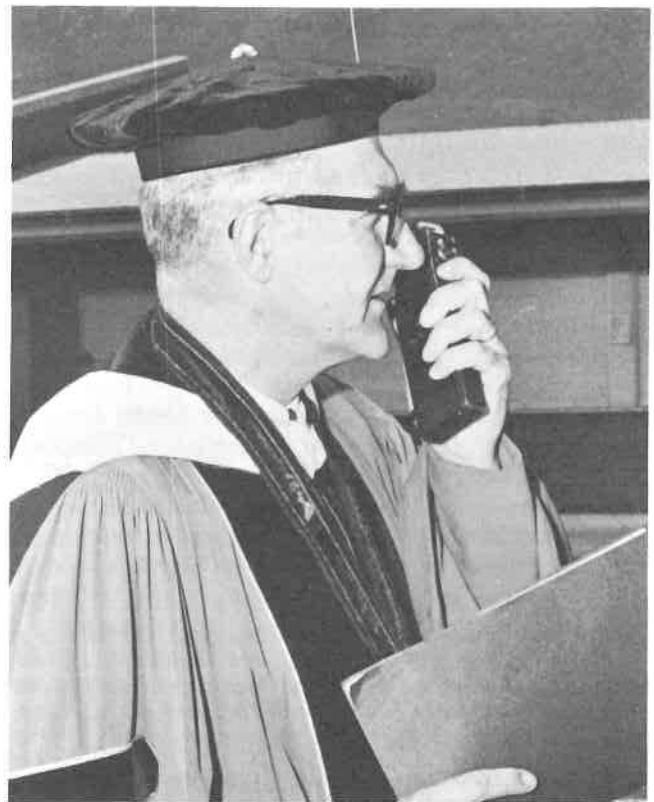

Paul Connor (right) rarely looks this disturbed. It was Commencement Day's bright sun that did it. The board's senior member—shown here with MSC's Dr. Richard M. Wilson—was born at Roulette in 1893; has lived in Coudersport since 1918. A graduate of Clarion State Normal and Mansfield, he began his career in education as assistant principal of the Roulette Schools in 1914. In 1918, he was named assistant superintendent of schools for Potter County, a post he held until 1956 when he was made Potter County superintendent of schools. He retired in 1962 after a record 44 years in the county office. During this time he had a few extracurricular pursuits: he served his town as mayor (two terms), as a member and officer of the Fire Department, as president of the board of the Coudersport Hospital and an officer of the Public Library. He is an elder and clerk of the Session, First Presbyterian Church. Especially prominent in Masonic affairs, he is a holder of the 33rd Degree, a past district deputy grand master, a past officer of all York Masonic bodies and a member of the York Cross of Honor. He was married to the late Ruby M. Cook, a 1906 graduate of Mansfield. There is one daughter, Mrs. Janet C. Norton.

Jo Hays, of State College, known to his friends as "Senator," in the Pennsylvania tradition, attended a one-room country school and then ran the gamut of a full-fledged career in public education. After studies at Shippensburg Normal, Penn State and Harvard (Ed.M.) he was successively an elementary teacher and principal, athletic coach, high school teacher and principal and then for 29 years supervising principal in four counties (Clarion, Elk, Huntingdon and Centre). He topped that well-rounded career with service to the Republic of Panama as advisor to the minister of education and two terms in the Senate of Pennsylvania where he became chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and the sponsor of a "great deal" of legislation that accelerated the development of the State colleges. For all that, he still had to have help adjusting his hood. Here Mrs. Ann Good, secretary to the president, gets him in academic shape.

Kathryn E. Ford is a member of the board from Westfield, and one of the board's two women members. The other—not present at the time these pictures were taken—is Mrs. Margaret McMillen, Mansfield, who is board secretary. Mrs. Ford's husband, Gordon, has the Ford Lumber Company in Westfield. Their eldest daughter, Pamela, 23, is a '69 graduate of Mansfield, is a teacher and, more recently, a bride. Daughter Patricia, 21, is attending Elmira College, and son Paul, 19, Lycoming College. Well-known as a musician, Mrs. Ford was for many years the organist of the United Methodist Church in Westfield. She is a Mansfield graduate, Class of 1931, and is seen here with Pamela on the first of two big days.

No roundup of trustees would be complete without the president of the college—especially in this situation. Cameraman Jim Loveland caught this shot of Dr. Park as he frantically grabbed one of Campus Security's new walkie-talkies to check some last minute arrangements that apparently had gone slightly askew. All pictures were taken at last May's outdoor commencement exercises, except that below which was a year earlier.

ALSO MISSING . . .

At the time these pictures were taken, Board Member and Attorney Robert E. Farr was in Blossburg General Hospital suffering an illness from which he failed to recover. His loss, felt keenly by his colleagues, was marked by this resolution of the board on July 11, 1970:

"Whereas, ROBERT E. FARR, Esq. endeared himself to the Board both as a friend and active member;

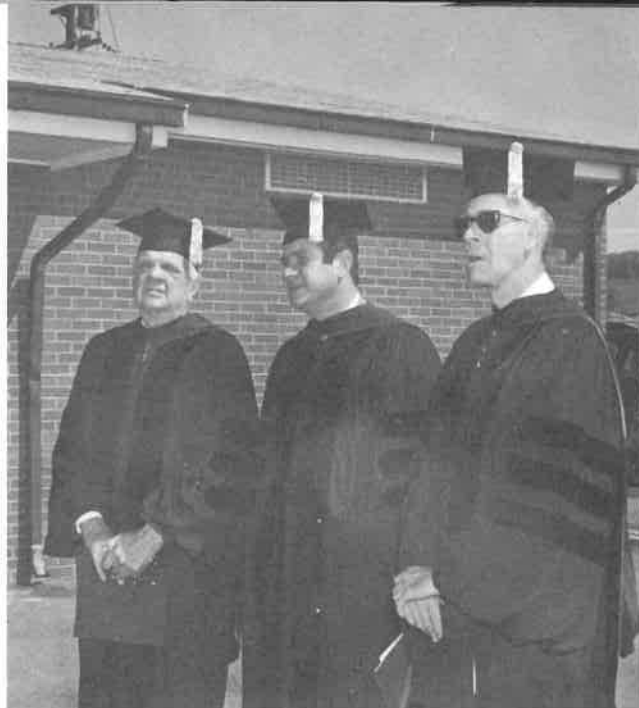

"Whereas, the said ROBERT E. FARR, Esq. brought honor and prestige to the College through his wide and varied contributions to civic and educational activities; and

"Now, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that the Board of Trustees of Mansfield State College go on record to express its individual and collective sense of loss at the death of Trustee ROBERT E. FARR, Esq., and that this resolution be made a permanent record of the minutes of the Trustees and further, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the family of ROBERT E. FARR, Esq."

The board has now two other advisory representatives. For the coming year they are Professor Robert J. Bridgman, MSC Department of Mathematics and chairman of the Faculty Council, and Brian Ziegler, Allentown, president of the MSC Student Council. Neither had been appointed at the time these pictures were taken.

Dushore's A. F. Snyder (left) and Alumni Representative to the Board F. Joseph BeDenk. Now "retired," Abe Snyder, as he is known to friends and colleagues, has been a teacher, forester, dairy industry executive and, it could be safely added, banker and Boy Scout executive. He was a public school teacher in Northumberland County. He was Wyoming District forester for the Department of Forests and Waters. He became a dairy industry executive and stretched that out for 36 years, during which time he was made president of the Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers for Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware and served as a director of the Association of Pennsylvania Milk Dealers for 25 years. He is on the board of directors of one bank, a telephone company, two hospitals, the Red Cross and the Salvation Army. He is a member of the executive committee of Region Three Boy Scouts of America and is the recipient of the Silver Beaver and Silver Antelope Awards. A graduate of Penn State, he did advanced work at Cornell. He served on the local school board for 16 years, the Sullivan County Board for 12 years and has been on the MSC board for the past 10 years. The Snyder's have two children and four grandchildren.

Joe BeDenk's post, as alumni advisory representative to the board, is new and he is the first alumnus to be named to it. President Laurence Park's letter of appointment describes the new post: "The Board of Trustees voted at the Feb. 28, 1970, meeting to invite you to be a full participating member of the Board of Trustees, exclusive of the right to vote . . . Participating advisory membership includes the opportunity to raise matters for the Board's attention, to be a member of Board Committees, to meet in executive session and to receive all general communications about Board business . . . This action continues and broadens the principle enunciated by Governor Shafer . . . I personally look forward to this new opportunity for alumni participation in governance of the college and expect it to enhance our mutual responsibilities." (For more on the BeDenk background, see "In the News" pages in this issue.)

Left to right: Jo Hays, C. Richard Marshall, Donald P. Gill. Marquis' World Who's Who in Finance and Industry cites Richard Marshall, of Dalton, as a "railroad equipment executive" and then further identifies him as president and director of Marshall Railway Equipment, Inc.; president and director, Marshall Airbrake Company; partner, John H. Nealy Co., N. Y. C.; director, Metz Hat Corp., N. Y. C.; director, C. Robert Casey, Inc., and Midwest Corp., Scranton, and trustee, Mansfield State College . . . A Republican . . . Roman Catholic . . . Kiwanian . . . Director, Country Club of Scranton, and author: "Economics of the Freight Car Construction Industry." He is married to the former Angela Casey. They have one daughter.

Don Gill has been supervising principal of the Wellsboro Area School District since 1951. A native of Erie and a graduate of Grove City College, he received his master's degree from Syracuse University after teaching stints in the Forest County Schools and the Lawrence Park (sic) High School, near Erie. He has done advanced work at Penn State and Pitt. He holds one of the rare distinctions of having served, during World War II, in both the Army and the Navy. He is a Rotarian, a Presbyterian, a member of Pennsylvania School Administrators, the Wellsboro Civil Service Commission and the board of trustees of Soldiers and Sailors Hospital. Mrs. Gill, a graduate of Clarion, teaches English in Wellsboro High School. Son Scott, 25, a Grove City graduate and former Army officer, is now a law student at Dickinson. Son Max, 23, also Grove City, is an Army paratroop officer now readying his gear for Viet Nam.

PAUSE FOR PERSPECTIVE

Notes From the Beginnings to the Present

By Fred A. Jupenlaz*

Mr. Jupenlaz

Recently, a friend of mine and I paused atop one of the beautiful hills surrounding Mansfield.

It was my friend's first visit to Mansfield, but as he surveyed the panorama before him, he made two uncanny observations:

"This town," he said, "rests in a spot which must have been a placid lake in some far-off pre-historic time."

"And that mushrooming college campus way up here in the Northern Tier of Pennsylvania," he further observed, "that must be the principal pride and industry of your community."

His only blindspot was the adversity that fell between.

The idea of bringing higher learning to the Northern Tier was conceived by one Colonel Joseph S. Hoard back in ante-bellum days. His idea was shared by civic-minded friends who included in their number Dr. Joseph P. Morris, the owner of vast tracts of land.

These men of vision brought the matter before the Quarterly Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church on July 9, 1854, at a camp-meeting in Sullivan County. The friends of the embryonic enterprise were hosted by Colonel R. C. Shaw in a tent on the camp-meeting grounds. Initial plans were laid for taking the necessary legal and financial steps.

Two weeks later—July 26—another meeting was held and a stock company was formed with shares selling at $50 each. It was determined that the school was to be under the patronage of the East Genesee Conference of the Methodist Church and that, while essentially it was not to be a church or sectarian school, the principal was to come from the membership of the church. At the same meeting, a committee was formed to solicit subscriptions.

The committee hardly lacked zeal, for in less than two weeks subscriptions totaled $5,000 and on August 8, 1854, the final proposal was submitted to the church conference and accepted.

In the meantime, however, the citizens of Wellsboro suddenly realized that such an institution would be an asset to their community and a heated contest developed between the two towns.

The commissioners finally decided, however, in favor of Mansfield and a charter was secured for the "Mansfield Classical Seminary." At the first organization meeting under the charter, trustees were chosen and Col. Hoard was named the board's president; Dr. C. V. Elliott and R. P. Buttles were named vice presidents; Dr. Joseph P. Morris, recording secretary; B. M. Bailey and S. B. Elliott, corresponding secretaries; Lyman Beach, Jr., treasurer, and William M. Johnson, librarian.

Now it was time for brick and mortar. But first a site had to be selected and obtained. The chore was not a difficult one: Dr. Morris donated all the land for the original campus. (Morris Drive on campus recognizes this gift.)

NORTH HALL & TENNIS COURT, M.S.N.S. MANSFIELD, PA.

On January 15, 1855, at the first meeting of the trustees after their organization, a plan for a brick building, four stories high, 100 feet front, with two wings, each seventy-eight feet high, was approved. Ground was broken shortly after.

This first building was finally erected and officially opened on April 16, 1857. There were 105 students enrolled and the Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Jacques were appointed principal and preceptress at a combined salary of $900 a year.

There were only six days of classes in Mansfield's first Classical Seminary. On April 22, 1857, the building was razed by fire.

We are told by early historians that, while the fallen rafters of this first building were still smouldering, the town fathers had already raised a sum of money "to build right on the embers."

But the financial panic of that year plus the refusal of one insurance company to pay and the collapse of another had the trustees in a financial bind. They were unable to meet their payments and had to suspend all further building plans and activity.

Finally, however, an enthusiasm, "seemingly born of despair", took possession of the people of the town—young and old, men, women and even children—and at a town picnic on August 20, 1858, more than $4,000 was subscribed for the new school and added to funds already raised for that purpose. The subscriptions, however, were payable in labor, grain, provisions, sewing, lumber, cattle and other merchantable items of values ranging from 25 cents to $100.

At long last the second building rose from the ashes of the first and the school was reopened on November 23, 1859, with 30 students, a principal and a preceptress. A succession of principals followed, as did an ever-present, inexorable threat of bankruptcy.

But the early leaders kept the wolves from the door through the seminary years to 1862 when stockholders, apparently tired of the struggle from one exigency to another, applied to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania for recognition as a normal school. Up to that time, only two normal schools had been so accredited by the State. Mansfield became the third.

From 1862 to 1920, the Normal School had eighteen trustees, 12 representing the stockholders and six, the State. The trustees exercised virtually complete autonomy until 1920. In other words, for more than half of its 116-year history, Mansfield was either a private school or State-related, in a very loose sense of the term.

At one period during these years, when the school was more privately run than State-related, two men came to its rescue and got it over its final financial hump. It was in 1864, when Professor Fordyce A. Allen, who had just been elected principal, and President S. B. Elliott teamed up and "devoted themselves to the school's upbuilding and to the work of placing it on a firm financial basis." They succeeded in their commitment.

In 1920, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania purchased the school outright and it became the Mansfield State Normal School.

In 1926, the State Council of Education authorized Mansfield to confer the bachelor of science degree in education and a year later designated the institution, the "Mansfield State Teachers College", by formal resolution.

Recognizing Mansfield's expanding curricula and broadened concepts of professional preparation, the Pennsylvania Legislature, on January 8, 1960, authorized the general title, Mansfield State College.

Since that time, Mansfield has bolstered its academic stance with its Graduate Division, offering graduate degrees in education in the fields of music, elementary education, history and English; with its Liberal Arts or Arts and Science Curriculum, offering major pursuits in significant fields unthought of in earlier times, and with its traditionally special fields of study such as music education, home economics education, library education, and art education.

Also, since 1960, the Mansfield campus has undergone tremendous physical changes. As was reported in a recent issue of the new Mansfieldian, the alumni publication: "The changing face of the campus, a phenomenon of growth remarkably quiet for its magnitude during the past decade, will assume proportions approaching grandeur by comparison in this one, if all the signs are right.

"To Mansfieldians returning to the campus on Alumni Day 1970 (or for Homecoming in a week or two), the evidences will be visible. Homing alumni will be able to see—in advanced stages of progress—construction on the new Student Center, the addition to the Library and Administration Building, and the $2.3 million Decker Gymnasium.

"These structures, now nearing completion, are but three of the 49 major projects included in the college's 15-year building program which is intended to peak in the late '70's at an overall worth of $68 million.

"Already landmarks of the Sixties are six new classroom buildings, eight dormitories, and $4.6 million worth of supportive utilities, roads, and parking and recreation areas. The activity of the decade gave the changing face of the campus an added worth of $25 million.

"The physical expansion of the '60's only reflected the burgeoning educational process itself.

"And the acceleration and dimensions of the higher education process in the '70's, with their implicit complexities, both physical and academic, demand comprehensive planning. In fact, one of the principal emphases in higher education today is the need for long-range planning."

President Lawrence Park has stayed abreast of this need, has met this responsibility, eminently, and is providing us with a master plan for the '70's by which we can guide the growth of the college through what bodes to be an exceedingly demanding decade.

That leads me to this observation, in conclusion:

Mansfield has enjoyed the singular talents of eight college administrations—those of Straughn, Noonan, Ode, Pratt, Morgan, Rathgeber, Bryan and Park.

Each has made its own unique contribution to the growth of the college. It may well be that the present administration will find its greatest mark on the years ahead in the vision and implementation of its long-range planning.

(News Release May 16, 1970)

MANSFIELD—Alumni of Mansfield State College today hailed fellow alumnus F. Joseph Bedenk, State College, long a familiar figure in inter-collegiate athletics, as the “alumnus of the year” and awarded him the annual Alumni Citation for his “outstanding contributions to society.”

The award ceremony was part of the college’s annual Alumni Day festivities which saw also the chartering of nine new alumni clubs representing, in the words of Mansfield President Lawrence Park and Alumni Association President Warren L. Miller, “the beginnings of the first truly functional geographical alumni organization in the history of the college.”

President Park addressed the more than 500 alumni assembled for the annual meeting and luncheon on “The State of the College.” Reunion classes were unusually well-represented this year and were cited by Charles Weed, a faculty alumnus, and chairman of the 1970 reunion class committee.

The new clubs, representing Pennsylvania’s Northern Tier counties of Bradford, Clinton, Lycoming, McKean, Potter, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Tioga and Wyoming, were cited for charters by J. Horace Strunk, director of the college’s Office of Public Relations and Alumni Affairs. Charters were presented by Association President Miller. Accepting the charters on behalf of the new clubs, for the counties indicated, were Bradford—Richard W. Marvin, district superintendent, Athens Area School; Clinton—Ray Kodish, teacher and coach, Lock Haven High School; Lycoming—Arnold B. Sundberg, principal, Jersey Shore Junior High School; McKean—Edward E. Harrington, elementary supervisor, Otto—Eldred School District; Potter—Lowell S. Carpenter, for William Stavisky, assistant county superintendent of schools; Sullivan—Mrs. Kenneth B. Lee, Eagles Mere; Susquehanna County—Mrs. Ralph S. M.S.C. Charters New Alumni Clubs

Mansfield, May 16—Highlights of the annual alumni day activities at Mansfield State College today included the chartering of nine new alumni clubs and the presentation of the college alumni citation. Recipient of the citation was F. Joseph Bedenk, of State College, a member of the class of 1919, and a retiring member of the alumni association board of directors. The award is made to an alumni member who has made "an outstanding contribution to society."

The chartering ceremonies for the nine alumni clubs were noted by both Dr. Lawrence Park, president of M. S. C., and Warren L. Miller, president of the college alumni association, as marking "the beginnings of the first truly functional alumni organization in the history of the college."

Each club chartered represents a county-wide unit including the Northern Tier counties of Bradford, Clinton, Lycoming, McKean, Potter, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Tioga, and Wyoming.

ESSC OUT TO AVENGE HOMECOMING DEFEAT

By

EAST STROUDSBURG—Last season, Mansfield defeated East Stroudsburg in football for the first time in 31 years. In the process, the Mountaineers ruined the ESSC Homecoming celebration.

You can be sure that Coach Charlie Reese will be reminding his East Stroudsburg gridders about both these points prior to their important October 17 game at Mansfield.

"I am sure our players will be seeking revenge for last year's defeat to Mansfield," said Coach Reese. "We had a very unhappy Homecoming because of the Mountaineers last season and we hope to turn the tables on them this year."

Whether the Warriors have the material to reverse their 36-9 defeat to Mansfield, however, is questionable. Only a handful of starters return from the 1969 East Stroudsburg team, which finished with a 5-3 record for the school's tenth winning season in the last 11 years.

Starters returning are halfback Bob Lester and guard Harry Irvin on offense and tackle Jerry Clymer and linebackers Ed Long and Greg Cardone on defense. Also on hand are two 1968 starters, guard Joe Kelly and halfback Ralph Gish, both of whom were sidelined almost the entire 1969 season with injuries.

East Stroudsburg should be set at running backs with Lester, last season's leading ground gainer who led the conference with a 6.5 per carry average, Gish and highly-touted sophomore Mark Hoffner, a genuine triple-threat performer who will play somewhere in the backfield.

Up front, the Warriors appear to be solid at guards, ends and center. Tackle is the problem spot. Irvin, Kelly and sophomore Erich Klein are all reliable guards. Doug Todd and Steve Jackson both have experience at center as do Glenn Gottshalk and Jim Howland at ends.

Lack of size and experience are the team's chief worries on defense. Key defensive performers will be linemen Clymer, Chuck Keinath, Joe Vancho and Bob Barron, linebackers Long, Cardone and Frank Goulburn and halfbacks Ray Johnson and Joe McNulty.

The schedule is the toughest in East Stroudsburg history with Lafayette, Montclair State and Wilkes added to the usual tough diet of Pennsylvania Conference opponents.

BUT MSC LOOKS TO WINNING SEASON, ESSC NOTWITHSTANDING

MANSFIELD—Despite the fact that his team's prospects are riddled with "ifs," Mansfield's Head Coach Bernie Sabol still views his 1970 squad as one of "great promise" and the coming season with "great expectations."

A lot of Bernie's optimism is based on the return of 16 lettermen. But the big "if" is replacements. "If replacements can be found at the quarterback position and also some secondary positions, Mansfield should come up with another winning football season," the coach says. He has some specific ideas about these problems:

"The quarterback position will go to either senior Jim Klinger, who looked extremely well in spring practice, or to Kirk McCabe, a sophomore, who did an outstanding job as a freshman.

"Some of the lettermen who have looked good in spring practice are Brad Finn at fullback; Paul Gates, an outstanding tight end, who led the Conference scoring last year; Ed Gillis at tackle; Archie Jenkins at defensive secondary; John Osuch and Scott Stanton, offensive guards, and Gary Border, as corner line-backer.

"Some of the freshmen who have looked good in spring practice and have a good chance of making the team are Steve Yoschg at fullback, Winfred Wells at tackle, and Cas Karnish at defensive secondary."

Coach Sabol feels the East Stroudsburg confrontation could turn out to be "a tight one." And while ESSC will be out to avenge the Mountaineers' spoiling of their Homecoming in the Poconos last year, the coach did not appear too worried that the Warriors would hurt either his season or MSC's Homecoming this year.

EDITOR'S NOTE: One seemingly insurmountable difficulty with a periodical such as the Mansfieldian is advance sports reporting, and the time lapse between press time and the day the publication reaches the reader. Prognoses made at press time are often something else by the time they reach the reader. However, the background information provided here might just make the game more interesting for those who intend to return for the big day. At least that is the editors' hope.

It's something to contemplate: a 75th anniversary year, that is. According to the files, which for the whole past year have been in the process of renovation and updating, the 75th belongs exclusively to Ruby A. Taylor who marked the occasion with her support of the Mansfieldian, all the way from California where her address is: 6821 Rolando Knolls, La Mesa, Calif. 92041.

Minnie Stearns Titus
Faith in the unseen.

'96

Writes Mrs. Frank B. Titus (without reservation): "I am very happy to help out with the expenses of the new Mansfieldian and hope to receive the publication which I never have had — so far. But I wish you every success. Sincerely, Minnie Stearns Titus." Editors are sure they are at long last squared away on Mrs. Titus' address. It is 80 Price Avenue, Lansdowne, Pa. 19050.

Florence M. Jones contributed to the support of the Mansfieldian in the name of her sister, Bertha J. Newhall, who was 97 years old on July 29 and who lives at Stockbridge, Mass. 01262.

News items and a contribution from Raymond Patterson, now retired, but who for 31 years served on the faculty of the Pioneer State Normal School, "first publicly-supported teacher-training school for both men and women in America." Ray has become a champion in the fight against alcoholism which, in a widely-heralded letter to the Massachusetts Teacher, he described as a disease which ranks as the Nation's fourth and is scientifically reported as getting worse instead of better, ranking only below "mental illness, heart disease and cancer." Says Ray: "Apparently more education is necessary in order to attain the democratic objective . . . Can we teachers accept the challenge and responsibility?" Ray's address is: 11 Bay View Ave., Plymouth, Mass. 02360.

Editors' thanks to Grace McCauley for her contribution and the kind note that accompanied. Grace suspects she might be Mansfield's oldest alumna. There may be some question about that, especially since she's young enough to remember that her days at the school "were such happy ones indeed." . . . Percy Coles has been crowned the current and undisputed golf champion of his class.

Pearl Culver went the second mile in her support of the Mansfieldian. The real gem, however, was the note that accompanied her contribution. She's living at Laceyville, R. D. 2, zip 18623 . . . More on '05 in '06.

construction on the new addition allows. Editors, whose hope is that her "new great grandchildren" will not keep her too occupied to return in May for her 65th anniversary reunion, express thanks for both note and support.

Word from Bertha (Palmer) Rockwell, widow of B. Allen Rockwell, also '08. Mrs. Rockwell, who is still living at 124 E. Areba Ave., Hershey, Pa., recalls fondly their days at Mansfield when they attended the Model School, also the last years of her service at MSC in both the college and children's libraries. Editors' thanks for her good wishes and support.

'10

Recalling that this is her 60th anniversary year, Mary Evelyn (Barney) Coates reflects that she is "getting to be a very old alumna," and that "the college grounds would look so strange now, with all the new buildings." Mary has taught school "many, many years" — all of them in her home town which is

Kind words from Texas, reminiscences too. All from Kathryn Kingsley Porcher who says she "can still find names (in the Mansfieldian) of people I grew up with, and of their grandchildren as well." Then this gem of recollection: "Even before my time, Professor Allen had liquor sales restricted to within 12 miles of the school. And now? Blossburg and Tioga are part of us, almost." Kathryn probably hasn't heard the latest. In case any one would want to pass that tidbit along to her, her new address is: 826 Chelsea — No. 3, El Paso, Texas 79903.

'12

Prominently around (See Alumni Day pages) on Alumni Day last May—and apparently enjoying every minute of it—was Frank W. Sheffield, retired, of Roaring Branch, Pa., whose address is just that, plus zip 17765 . . . Picture for cut of 1912 varsity seen on these pages was sent by one Frank Darby, 102 Bellot St., LaFayette, La. 70501. Apparently, not an alumnus, how and why did Darby have this print?

'15

Elsie Burk, secretary-treasurer of the Philadelphia Alumni Club, writes: "Am planning a trip to Tioga County in the fall and will drop in for any info I can get." Homecoming, perhaps? Editors trust she received extra Mansfieldians needed in her unending championing of MSC alumni affairs . . . Thanks to Eva Sunley Frerichs (Mrs. Ernest) for her prompt responses to several requests of this office over the past couple months, including her support of the Mansfieldian. She's living at 11 Carteret St., Staten Island, N. Y. 10307 . . . Thanks too for the kind note that accompanied the support of Esther Davies Hughes, who's living at the Baptist Retirement Home, 316 Randolph St., Maywood, Ill. 60154.

As secretary of '16, Ruth Jean Hall (Mrs. Paul D. Converse) is already laying the groundwork for the 55th anniversary reunion of her class. Armed with a computer printout provided by this office, she is preparing early reminders of the big occasion, come Alumni Day 1971. With mutual diligence, the printout may serve to update '16's rolls in the new and continuing process of maintaining accurate alumni files. Ruth's address is 17 Montclair Rd., Urbana, Ill. 61801 . . . Lillian Bostwick Stack, who is living at 141 Rocalla Ave., Ajo, Ariz. 85321, "nearly fainted" when this office asked "for only $1.00." But she recovered her composure sufficiently to enclose her contribution with the hope that "each one of over 10,000 alumni do the same."

Two Summer Study Programs Offered at MSC This Season

Mansfield State College's Summer Study Program for either undergraduate or graduate students was announced by the program's new director, Dr. David P. Peltier.

The completed plans released by Dr. Peltier reveal that the summer study sessions will be the most extensive in the college's history. Another superlative is found in the record number of variety of the courses to be offered in both the undergraduate and graduate areas.

Courses to be offered in the undergraduate area alone, 1963-64, will include art, anthropology, biology, chemistry, science, economic education, English, geography, German, physical education, economics, library mathematics, music, physics, political science, public school nursing, Spanish, secondary education, social education, speech and drama.

In the graduate area, summer programs include a master of education in English, education, mathematics, and music, a master of arts degree in general, more than 40 graduate courses will be offered in art, education, English, mathematics, music, physics, and special education.

In addition to these formal courses, there will be special workshops and travel studies. An opportunity is provided for a Music Camp for high school students (June 22 to July 1).

Dr. John H. Bay is the contact person; the workshop for Home Economics (June 15-19 and 23), for which Mrs. Bay is the contact person. This is the 50th anniversary reunion class. And Alumni Affairs, right at this point, would be in a sorry state indeed if it were not for Janie Moore. This is the story (So help me—Editor): On Alumni Day, the office's professional photographer, seeing the campus student photographer taking the pictures of the Class of '20, did not want to intrude on his younger colleague and so withdrew from the action. But the campus student photog, who has done highly imaginative and excellent photography for college publications, was trying a new camera as well as a new technique. Result: a complete blank, literally. Thanks to Janie Moore, however, the 50th reunion was not a total blank. Among several assists Janie threw the Editors this month were the pictures of some of the Class of '20 which she sends with this apology: "I am the possessor of a good camera which takes mediocre pictures because I seem to wind up taking them. Nevertheless, I am sending these three snapshots I took of a few of the 1920 alumni on Alumni Day there. They may still help you out." Indeed. Janie lives at 70 Summit Ave., Albany, N. Y. 12209 . . . Oral Thompson, who once taught in the rural schools of McKean County, then Port Allegany and Hershey and then for 37 years in the elementary and junior high schools of Olean, N. Y., has long since retired and is living at E. Mill St., Port Allegany, Pa. 16743. She was among those present Alumni Day . . . Thanks to Grace S. Evans (Mrs. John R.) for a fast response and a corrected address which is now 31 Forbus (?) St., Poughkeepsie, N. Y. . . . For the same two reasons, thanks to Harriett J. Neeley (Mrs. Arthur W.) whose address in the office files was really fouled. The corrected one: 915 Diestel Road, Salt Lake City, Utah 84105 . . . Bernard and Marion Davies ('26) Whitney can be reached right now at Brown Manor, Carverton Rd., Wyoming R. D. 3, Pa 18644. They live there from June to December. Editors' thanks for note and support . . . Among those of this 45-year class back for Alumni Day was Frances Gates Eld who is fully occupied as a "housewife" these days at 108 Carter St., Coudersport, Pa. 16915 . . . Still another '25 "housewife" back for Alumni Day was Geneva Stone McCloskey who, with retired Army officer husband, travels and camps out during the months between May and September. Quips Geneva: "He fishes and hunts. I sketch and make oil paintings."

For a bit on Marion Davies (At risk of being dated, editors recollect that was once a famous name) Whitney, see '05 above . . . Editors many thanks to Audrielle Lynch for her note and support of the Mansfieldian. Audrielle is living at 306 N. Main St., Athens, Pa. 18810 . . . who says the once exalted "full life" has been lost in the frenetic and changing patterns of modern living? There's Marie Thoren Shelley, for instance. She got her Normal School diploma in 1926; came back for her degree in 1960 and returned to teaching. But in the meantime she raised four children, now a farmer, an engineer, a housewife and a naval officer (submarine service). They provided 12 grandchildren. She retired from teaching last year and since then has traveled extensively throughout California, Hawaii, Oklahoma and Florida. This year she will have done Portugal, Spain and Morocco. To fill in her spare moments, she's an avid gardener. Adds this postscript: "I have many perennials and houseplants to share. Let me know." Takers could write to Marie at Chicago Ave., Port Allegany, Pa.

16743. Incidentally, Marie got back for the big day in May . . . Also back for Alumni Day was Helen M. (Sherman) Simpier, whose life has certainly not been dull either. Curious parallels occur between hers and Marie Shelley's. Helen didn't teach too long after graduation before she was married. In 1960, following the death of her husband in 1959, she too went back to school and then taught music in the Conewango Township elementary schools. From 1963' she taught in the Cowanesque Elementary School and then retired in June, 1968. She is enjoying her retirement because she can "always find things to do." She has two daughters and five grandchildren. Her oldest grandchild is librarian in the senior high school at New Castle, Del. Helen's address is simply Coudersport, Pa. 16915 . . . To Inez Mosch, at Elmira, N. Y., editors' thanks for the note and support . . . Another name booboo. It's the computer's fault. At least, that's a new dodge. The name is Hopper and it belongs to Susan W. (Harper) Hopper for whose kind words and generous support editors will change anything. They trust with the spelling H-o-p-p-e-r everything is squared away. Following her graduation, Susan taught in the Scott Township schools in Lackawanna County and more recently in a private nursery school. She's no longer teaching. Hardly could. With her husband, she's operating a 100-acre farm near Dalton, Pa., and she finds "that job very time-consuming." Susan's address is R. D. 1, Dalton, Pa. 18414 . . . Mansfield—as does probably any former normal school—has an uncommon number of "double-class alumni," that is, alumni who can actually identify with more than one class. That's not to seem disparaging. They in fact deserve extra kudos. At any rate, Mary (Milota) Jackett is a double-class alumna. Graduated from Mansfield in 1929 as a two-year Normal School student, she taught several years and then returned in 1933 for courses that led to her bachelor's degree in elementary education in 1934. The files identify her class as '34. After that, she taught for a number of years in both Pennsylvania and New York; but for the past 28 years has been employed at the U. S. Naval Supply Depot, Mechanicsburg (near Harrisburg), as an assistant supply clerk and presently as an accounting clerk in the Fiscal Division. Mary's husband, Jo-

College President Explains MSC Student Tuition Boost

MANSFIELD — In a letter to all returning students, Dr. Lawrence Park, President of Mansfield State College, explained the reasons for the recent increase in tuition.

"T EAST STROUDSBURG — By becoming an overwhelming margin, Mansfield has won the Pennsylvania Conference baseball Championship.

The Mountaineers scored 219.2 points in the 11-2 conference. Saylor rating system determined the champion. They topped East Stroudsburg by 50 points.

Mansfield enjoyed what John Heaps described as a "timely combination of his additional and pitching. Everything seemed to fall into place when needed this season."

Dilberto posted a 5-0 conference record, allowing only two earned runs in 41 innings which included a no-hitter over Millersville. Hagadorn was 3-1.

Mansfield batted over .300 as a team in conference competition. The leaders were third baseman Tom Purnell .444 and leftfielder Lebro Manichetti .432.

Versatile Stew Casterline, who pitched, caught and played the outfield, hit .381.

The Mountaineers also were successful in non-league encounters and last weekend won the NAIA District 19 championship to raise their season record to 24-4.

State Colleges Raise Tuition

The latest bulletin from Mansfield State College had an article that will be of special interest to local students who will be attending a state-owned institution of higher education for the fall term.

According to the bulletin under authority granted by Act 13, Secretary of Education David H. Kurtzman has increased tuition at the 14 state-owned colleges by $100 per semester.

This action will bring tuition at all 14 institutions to $325 a semester, or $650 for the school year. Tuition at most of the institutions for the 1969-70 school year was $225, or $450 a year.

Dr. Kurtzman says, "I take this action with extreme reluctance, but it is necessary if colleges are to continue to operate at the 1969-70 level of program and service."

In addition to the full-time undergraduate student tuition increase, Dr. Kurtzman announced a raise in part-time student tuition costs from $18 to $26 per credit hour. Graduate student tuition per credit hour goes up to $36 and $25 for out-of-state student tuition per credit hour rises from $30 to $43.

Dr. Kurtzman points out that these additional tuition costs will be considered by the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency when it determines new scholarship amounts and eligibility standards.

Francis and Eloise (Powers) Howard, both '30, were among those who represented the 40-year class at Alumni Day in May. Francis teaches 7th Grade English in Bradford and Eloise is the school nurse for the Bradford Area Schools. They live at 70 Corner St., Bradford, Pa. 16701 . . . Phyllis Owen Swinsick, also back in May, is the school librarian in Troy. Her address is: 129 Center St., Troy, Pa. 16947 . . . Also around on the big day was Inez (Howard) Weise who went back to teaching as a substitute about 1959 but has been teaching 1st Grade at Killbuck (or is it Salamanca?) since 1966. Her address is Buffalo Road, Ellicottville, N. Y. 14731.

Mary Alice Davis Worthington (Mrs. Harley R.) writes that "since the Lycoming County Mansfield Club has been dissolved, we have no opportunity to pay our dues locally." News for Mrs. Worthington: a new club is emerging in its place. It's known as the Mansfield State College Alumni Club of Lycoming County, and the organization work is being spearheaded by Arnold Sundberg, principal of the Jersey Shore Junior High School, who lives at 120 N. Lincoln Ave., Jersey Shore, Pa. Arnold would certainly welcome assists from Williamsport. Mary Alice lives at 714 Elmira St., Williamsport, Pa. . . . And for the special attention of the MSC Music Department: "I have a daughter entering Mansfield this fall as a music (organ) major and I am so happy and proud of her choice. But where else could she get so much in music education?" The note came with Julia Sterling Rickard's contribution toward support of the new Mansfieldian. The editors—with the Music Department—say thanks. Julia lives at 307 Troy St., Canton, Pa. 17724 . . . Erma Kelley attended Alumni Day activities. She's a free lance editor. Her father, Kent Kelley, graduated from Mansfield in 1900. He is now 90 years old. Erma's address is RFD 1, Mansfield, Pa. 16933 . . . "Wish it could be more but I've had a lot of expense with car, hot water tank and deep freeze," writes Flossie Shields. Editors say many thanks. Flossie's address is Honedye Street, Shinglehouse, Pa. 16748 . . . "I was impressed with the Mansfieldian," writes Dr. Clifford D. Jenkins who is hospitalized. He retired in 1962 after many years in administrative work. Dr. Jenkins would like to hear from his classmates, especially Peggy Doughton with whom he took part in a play at MSC.

Berea Cleveland Reppard says she enjoys the Mansfieldian. She's proved it. Berea's living at Covington, Pa. 16917 . . . To "An Old Alumnus—'32" as Delancy Hotalen puts it, editors say many thanks. His address is 46 Walnut Street, Wellsboro, Pa. . . . R. Gould Smith, retired July 16th from the Prudential Insurance Co. after 19 years of service. He was a senior manpower development consultant in the company's ordinary agencies department. Gould holds an M.Ed. from Bucknell, is a Navy veteran of WW II, a Mason and a Shriner. He and Marge have two sons, both high school coaches. The Smiths now have a new address. It's Maple St., Brooklyn, Pa. . . . Gladys Verbeck Fragin (Mrs. Sam) is the 3rd Grade teacher and building principal at the Fourth Ward School in Sayre. She's also an MSC cooperating teacher and is active in the Sayre-Athens Branch of the AAUW. Both son and daughter are MSC graduates and teachers. Gladys has a new address. It's 114 Rosh Road, Sayre, Pa. 18840 . . . To Evangeline P. Scholz, editors extend thanks for the kind words and support. Evangeline lives at 72 West St., N. Attleboro, Mass. 02760.

Kathryn Warner accompanied her aunt, Urania Dayton Birchard, Class of 1900, back for Alumni Day last May. Kathryn's mother, Mrs. Sophronia Dayton Warner, Class of 1894, was a bit disappointed, however. She didn't make it. And she had looked forward to seeing Mrs. Mabel Shaw, Class of 1893, whom she knew as a student. And from Kathryn a note of special interest to the culinary department: "I think it was the best dinner I ever ate on Alumni Day, and I have attended many of them since 1933."

Mary Milota Jackett is one of those not too uncommon graduates known as "double-class alumni." She's both 1929 and 1934, so editors thought it only proper to divide the focus on Mary in this issue between the two classes. Class of '29 column got the details of her current activity. But they saved for '34 the most pungent missive of the issue and they offer it here without editing or commentary: "Enclosed is my check towards the new Mansfieldian, the alumni publication. As an Alumni member of Mansfield State College, I am very much surprised that the Executive Board of the Alumni Association has not allocated any further funds for this purpose. How are the Alumni Members supposed to know what is going on at Mansfield if we are not privileged to receive the paper that keeps us informed about the various activities at the college, and especially, the news about our former graduates? For my part, I am more interested in the paper than the Alumni Student Loan Fund, to which all our fees and contributions have been directed. Why not do something for the Alumni itself, such as maintaining the paper? Student loans are all right to some extent, but with all the grants, bank loans, government, state and local loans, etc. the students can find another way to finance their schooling besides taking all the Alumni money. I had to work my way through college; I was not given the privilege of any loan or assistance. With all this affluence, most parents can finance their children's education or they can get a bank loan. Why not leave some money for the publication which is so important to us Alumni Members? Sincerely yours, (Mrs.) Mary M. Jackett." . . . And here's the switch of them all, and one of the real gems of the issue: "Enclosed find check for Mabel Corley Clayton's support of your publication. May all your alumni or their husbands be so proud of their spouse's association with the College. Most sincerely, Paul R. Clayton," D.D.S., 265 S. York Rd., Hatboro, Pa.

"Happy to help your cause," proclaims Michael Sunday. Ditto for editors. Michael has just retired after 35 years of teaching, the first 20 of which were in Pennsylvania and the last 15 in the Manolapan Englishtown Regional Schools at Englishtown, N. J., where the rest of his address is W. Broad St. Michael adds the postscript: "Must get up to see the 'old-new' college." . . . To Pauline Steigeralt Whitney, editors' thanks for the kind words and support. Pauline's living at 1221 Rosemont Lane, Abington, Pa. 19001 . . . Among the few who registered Alumni Day from the 35-year class was Howard Cleveland who's a special ed teacher and is living on Academy Hill Road in Addison, N. Y. 14801 . . . Editors had a choice news item on Esther B. McMenamin. Day after this goes to press, they'll find it. Meanwhile, here's one that could hardly be less significant — at least to Esther. Her only child, Jean, who incidentally, has a nine-year-old daughter, received her master of education degree from the University

June Hughes Lowther
After MSC, a Nixon handshake.

Among a number of alumni who visited the campus in June was June—no pun—(Hughes) Lowther (Mrs. Walter) who took the trouble to seek out editors' hole-in-the-wall in North Hall. June was a home ec major at Mansfield but is now teaching elementary in Coal Creek Central School near Newtown, Indiana, where she resides. Her address is just that, plus zip 47969. At the time she was on the campus she was "sweating out" a postmastership at Newtown. Daughter Melissa, 21, will graduate from Ball State University in 1971. Late note; June more recently visited North Dakota where she found it "quite a thrill" to shake hands with President Nixon.

Kathryn Keith Becker (Mrs. Richard F.) has a new address. It's 423 Martha Drive, Meadville, Pa. 16335. . . . Betty Harris Smith has a problem which, when there is more than one alumnus in the family, is also editors' perennial problem. She has another problem and asks: "Why does Alumni Day always come in May?" Adds: "It takes us more than a weekend to make the trip." Editors tried to deal with these problems (the first involves getting too many copies of the magazine) in correspondence with Betty. Doubt that they settled anything. Contributions will be gladly received from those who think they have solutions to the problems implicit here. Betty and Bob (both '40) live at 905 S. E. 11th St., Deerfield Beach, Fla. 39441.

Mary Demyan has a new and permanent address. It's Box 139, Old Mill Road, Millersville, Md. 21108. Editors glad she liked the Mansfieldian. Mary, a home ec major at Mansfield, completed a dietetic internship in 1952 at St. Mary's Hospital, Rochester, Minn. and then in 1955 received her M.S. from Penn State with a major in institutional administration. . . . See '42 for note on Genevieve Cawley.

'42

Conversation with Ruth Marsh, Mansfield, turned to an old MSC family from Potter County—the Cawleys. A little digging revealed that Genevieve Cawley, now Soplop, is living at 53 Harriet St., Allegheny, N. Y. and that Robert Cawley, '42, is living at 120 Plum St., Bolivar, N. Y. . . . Dorothy and Romayn Heyler have the same problems as Betty Smith (see '40). They're getting a double mailing. Editors trust they bear with them until solution (not a simple one) can be found. The Heylers have a new address: R. D. 1, Roxbury, N. Y. 12474 . . . Walter Simchick also has a new address. It's 6 Cottage Pl., Garfield, N. J. 07026.

Lewis Van Gorder is now dean of students of Southern Technical Institute, a division of Georgia Tech at Marietta, Ga. He was formerly director of special studies, Georgia State University. The Van Gorders (Mrs. Lew is the former Helen Mack, '44) are still living in Atlanta where their address is: 2050 Fairway Cir. N. E. with the zip, 30319, and where "the door is always open to alumni." Writes Helen: "We had as house guests in June, Mrs. Walter Shusky and her father, Mr. Leberman, Sheboygan, Wis. Mrs. Shusky, the former Janette Leberman, was a home ec instructor in the early '40's at MSC." Editors thanks for note and support . . .

This was the 25-year class on Alumni Day and Betty Herrold Witmer, Harrisburg, did a yeoman's job for the reunion class. Deserves many thanks . . . Among 45ers back that day was Lois Henning Ague (Mrs. Charles), "housewife" living in College Park, Lewisburg, Pa. 17837 . . . Also around on the big day was Louise Richardson Skramstad, 3218 Crest Road, Harrisburg, Pa. 17109. Louise is head of the Home Ec Department, East Pennsboro High School, Enola, Pa.

See cut. Dr. Newell A. That's worded as though best wishes for happiness were in order . . . Jim Wenslow has been promoted to associate professor of mathematics at State University of New York Agricultural and Technical College at Alfred. Jim joined the Alfred faculty in 1959 as mathematics instructor. He is nearing completion of requirements for a master's degree in mathematics education at the State University of New York at Geneseo. Jim, his wife and three children reside at 109 N. Main St., Alfred, N. Y. 14802 . . . Joyce Pohl Stevens (Mrs. Richard) has a new address. It's 626 Hallam Ave., Erlanger, Ky. 41018.

James R. Wenslow
Now associate.

Bill Palmer is now living at 120 Oakwood Dr., Cinnaminson, N. J. 08077 . . . For news on Paul Reed, see '56 above . . . To George Yearick, congratulations are in order. He's been made principal of the Senior High School, Troy, Pa. Formerly director of bands at Troy, George's bands performed at the New York World's Fair, Expo 67, and for many state-wide organization occasions in Harrisburg. His stage band appeared on the Ted Mack Amateur Hour. George holds a master's from Penn State and has done advanced work at Cornell and Bucknell. With his wife, Patricia, and nine-year-old son, Vincent, he lives at 5 Morgan Circle, Troy, Pa. 16947 . . . Dr. Robert Swinsick has been made chairman of the Department of Secondary Education at his alma mater . . . Thanks to Shirley Sandrock Barnhardt for her note and her support of the new Mansfieldian. Shirley's living at 337 Carrsbrook Dr., Charlottesville, Va. . . . A golfer is having a bad day. Then comes an out-of-the-world drive, a perfect pitch, or a 30-foot putt—and he's back in the game. Such is the life of the alumni affairs director, or editor or whathaveyou. Starting from scratch, the going can be rough. Then comes a letter the like of which have been coming in for the past six weeks and he's back in the game. One such missive came from George and Dolores (Huggins) Leber, the quality of whose loyalty could hardly be questioned from these lines: "My wife and I wish to express our complete moral and financial help for the continuation of the new Mansfieldian. Although I firmly believe that all alumni have a responsibility to share in the development of a strong association, I would appreciate being notified if further contributions are needed." —Obliged, Editors. They would add that there is no alumni body George has to "rejoin," nor any rapport he has to "reestablish." The Lebers have a new address. It's P. O. Box 259, Cincinnati, N. Y. 13040.

Pauline R. Neal (Mrs. Stephen) has a new address: 727 Arlington Rd., Camp Hill, Pa. 17011 . . . Genuinely appreciated was the support and offer of further support of the new Mansfieldian from Robert Keenan, M.D. who is presently director of the Division of Clinical Pharmacology of the Norwich Pharmacal Co. He lives at 10 Summit St., Norwich, N. Y. 13815.

'59

As was pointed out several times already on these pages, the problem of a double mailing, due to the presence of more than one alumnus in a family, is not exactly a simple one. Editors ask Jack Thomas to bear with them while they try to straighten this one out. Jack, by the way, has a new address. It's 820 Lehigh Ave., Binghamton, N. Y. The double take was brought about by his marriage to Ruth Woodburn, also '58, of Rome, Pa.

Sam McInroy has been promoted to full professor at Corning Community College. He's mathematics. Sam, who holds a master's in mathematics from Louisiana State, joined the Corning faculty in 1964 and has since served on most major committees and in 1968 as chairman of the Faculty Association. He has been instrumental in the development and installation of the Student Response System, first in use in any New York State community college. His address is listed as R. D. 2, Lennox Hill, Corning, N. Y. . . . When a whole family supports a project of their alma mater, how can it lose? Thanks to Janet Caffo, who rallied such support, the new Mansfieldian is ahead by five gracious gestures in the names of Janet, and Sally Caffo Schamel, '62; John B. Schamel, Jr., '62; Benjamin L. Caffo, '66, and Kathleen W. Caffo, '69. Janet lives at 108 Proctor Ave., Elkland, Pa. 16930 . . . Elizabethtown College has announced the appointment of Francis Marciniak, Evanston, Ill., to the faculty of the Music Department, effective September 1. Frank, who will have the rank of assistant professor, is a doctoral candidate at Northwestern University where he has been a teaching assistant in the Department of Music Education and a member of the Northwestern University band staff. In the summer of 1969 he was assistant conductor of the band. At Elizabethtown, one of his responsibilities will be the college's Concert Band . . . Of course, this is the 10th anniversary reunion class. And one of Alumni Day's finest representations was that of this class. Among those who registered (of whose attendance there is a record) were: Nancy Miller Werkheiser, homemaking teacher, 350 Main St., Tatamy, Pa. 18085; Eleanor Pearl Pellam, extension home economist, Emporium, Pa. RD 1—15834; Richard Mitchell, English Department chairman, 244 Huxley Drive, Snyder, N. Y. 14226; Mary Rose Shields

Hill, housewife, 10 Hollow Rd., Levittown, Pa. 19056; Mary Lee Patterson Herr, housewife who now has a master's and a daughter, Box 17, Walnut Hill Rd., Millersville, Pa. 17551, and Evelyn McCloskey Gibson, housewife who now has four sons ranging in age from eight to two, and who lives at 1604 King St., Hinckley, Ohio 44233 . . . Robert Garofalo, who holds the master of music in applied music, and the Ph.D. in musicology, theory, both from The Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C., is now assistant professor of music, School of Music, at Catholic University. He lives at 9004, Riggs Road No. 109, Adelphi, Md. 20783 . . . Stanley Snyder is director of vocal music at Ithaca High School which means that he is also the director of the Concert Choir. The choir performed Randall Thompson's "Peaceable Kingdom" at the Washington National Cathedral this spring as the highlight of a four-day tour of Pennsylvania, Maryland and Washington, D. C. His current project is a production of "The King and I" for the Moravia Community

Francis Marciniak
He's the leader of the band.

Theatre at Moravia, N. Y. He holds a master's in music from Ithaca College, and has been at Ithaca High since 1968.

Smith is a common name, but when it comes in fours to support the Mansfieldian, that's something else. There's Maynard, '38, Mary B., '61; Donald P., '68, and Christine K. That's wonderful. The listing came on a memo from Smith, Cleveland & Smith, Ford and Mercury, Lanesboro, Pa. and one or more of the Smiths live at RD 4, Susquehanna, Pa. 18847 . . . Elizabeth Wilson Chupka (Mrs. Andrew), 14 Spruce St., Binghamton, N. Y. was awarded the master's in elementary education at Indiana University of Pennsylvania . . . Jean Anne Knepp Bartmess is living at 2 Lincoln Drive—where? Jean failed to say. But editors believe it's Fayetteville, Pa. 17222 . . . The State University College at Cortland has awarded Gary Moore the master of education in elementary education. Gary lives on Pierce Creek Road in Binghamton, N. Y. . . . Capt. Edward Marvin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Marvin, Covington, Pa., has received a regular commission in the U. S. Air Force at Hickam AFB, Hawaii. Ed previously held a USAF reserve commission. He recently completed 12 months duty in Vietnam. He holds the M.B.A. degree from George Washington University, Washington, D. C.

Austin Ivan Snyder received the master of education with a major in elementary education from Lehigh University . . . Editors' congratulations to Ruth R. Chilson on her brand new son who "is growing like a weed." And their thanks too for her and her husband's support of the new Mansfieldian. They trust they have the new address squared away. It's

Capt. Ed Marvin (right)
No longer on reserve.

RD 1, Cattaraugus, N. Y. 14719 . . . Lois Ann (Marchinetti) Brown (Mrs. John H.) taught school in Coudersport, Roulette and Port Allegany, is presently substitute teaching because she is busy the rest of the time "happily with three young daughters," from five years to 17 months. Husband John is associated with Brown Contracting and Excavating of Roulette. Lois Ann, who staunchly supported the new Mansfieldian, wishes the magazine "continued success. After all," she says, "you're working with very important people—MSC alumni." The Browns' address is succinctly Box 1, Roulette, Pa. 16746 . . . If his orders have been cut as he expected, Capt. Robert Pierce, U. S. Air Force, is now in Viet Nam. He has editors' best wishes. Wife Jean (not Jane) '63, has their sincere thanks for both letter and support of the new Mansfieldian. Jean's address is Box 124, South Montrose, Pa. She was Jean Tanner.

There are at least two alumni who have a semblance of an idea of the frustrations and difficulties of updating and maintaining the MSC alumni files. They are Ron, '64, and Beverly (Webber) '66, Boyanowski. But the big Boyanowski item is that Ron's just been made assistant principal of the Abington Heights Junior High School in Clarks Summit, Pa. Depending which side you're on, distaff or otherwise, this second item could take precedence: it's an addition to the family in the person of five-months old Ronald, Jr. who ended the exclusive five-year reign of Stefanie. It was Beverly who reported the death of Jerry Mattis, '64 (See "In the News" pages). She adds that Jerry's widow is "Rebecca Davis, also a graduate of Mansfield. They had two children." The Boyanowskis have a new address. It's now Box 156, Waverly, Pa. 18471 . . . Nina Beth Landis, who married psychologist Edwin B. Eppley, Jr. and then proceeded to get her master of education from Western Maryland College right after the first of her two daughters (Heather and Laurel) was born in 1967, is a housewife—and mother, of course—at Rolling Glenn Dr., Boothwyn, Pa. 16901 and also an occasional substitute teacher in suburban Philadelphia . . . Larry VanDruff has been appointed an assistant professor in the Department of Forest Zoology at the State University College of Forestry at Syracuse. He expects to complete requirements for the Ph.D. from Cornell late this year. He is married to the former Mary Ann Douglass. They have one child and live in Brooktondale, N. Y. . . . Dave Ahola has been named to the faculty of the Mohawk Valley Community College at Utica, N. Y. Dave, who has a master's in political science from Brown University, did a crash course in the Finnish language in 1969 and for the past year has been serving as an instructor at a seminar in Contemporary U. S. Foreign Policy at the University of Helsinki, Finland . . . Two members of '64 received their master of science in education from Cortland this year. They are: Wayne L. Stabley, 649 Fourth St., Williamsport, Pa., and Martin A. Waldron, Box 193, Dushore, Pa.

Ron Boyanowski
The distaff side came through.

Also receiving his master's from Cortland this year (See '64 above) was Kenneth C. Griffith (secondary education), Box 231, Newark Valley, N. Y. . . . And a new and wondrous address for Danita Shaw Cope (Mrs. Lynn E.). It's none other than 314 Broadway, Bangor, Pennsylvania 18013, a town that was "settled by only the bravest of men who brought with them only the fairest women. Unquote . . . Ed Jones (Edward H.) is teaching 5th Grade at the Blair Township School of the Holidaysburg School District. He is living at 307 Ash St., Altoona, Pa. 16602 . . . Al Neumeyer directed this summer's MSC Opera Workshop which had a successful run of the Broadway musical comedy hit, "Sweet Charity." Wife, Ellen (Harris) had the lead role with Jack Novak, principal of the Warren L. Miller Elementary School in Mansfield. (See "In the News" pages.)

Edward H. Jones
He has a fifth.

. . . And an updating on Ruth Lynne Loch. Editors are not sure which is the newer—name or address—or whether the changes are simultaneous. At any rate, it's now Mrs. John E. Polger, 77 Longview Avenue, Fairfield, Conn. 06430. Ruth Lynne adds: "And thank you for keeping me up-to-date on your marvelously gossipy 'Class Round-up.'" Must be editors' split personality, but they wish they could find some really juicy items just once in while . . . Mansfield has its own King family. Not of TV renown, but they have their own claims to fame, some of which are not too far removed. The Rev. Horace Brown King III is pastor of the Embury United Methodist Church in Scranton. A music major at MSC, he was a member of the Renaissance Singers, was active in both the MSC Band and Opera Workshop and carried a leading role in "The Fantasticks." Also at MSC, he was president of the Student Christian Association and was one of the "creators" of the Meditation Chapel in North Hall. After graduation he taught music theory at Miami University of Ohio while pursuing graduate studies there. At Scranton, in addition to his pastorate, Horace directs the Youth Ministries of Northeastern Pennsylvania which involves conducting the District Youth Choir in several Concerts a year. He is married to the former Helen Marie Neal of the MSC Class of '67. They have one son, Horace Stevens King, 10 months old. The pastor's father is Horace McKeehan King who is now at MSC in the capacity of budget analyst. The elder King transferred from the Department of Education in Harrisburg where he worked closely with the Bureau of Colleges and Universities. Father is also included in the Federal Inventory of Key Administrators and is active in the American Society for Public Administration and the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Rev. Horace King
Not too far removed.

For an item on Beverly Webber Boyanowski, see '64 above . . . Dan Weber (Daniel G.) has a new address. It's 6310 Darlington Rd., Pittsburgh, Pa. 15217 . . . And here's some sprightly updating on Gene Kurzejewski (Eugene F.). He's married to the former Marilyn D'Amato. He's a teacher in the Woodward Township School of the Williamsport Area School District. And he's the holder of a bright new master of education in educational administration from Penn State. His address is: Box 463, Salladasburg, Pa. 17740 . . . Thanks to Ellie Spangler for her note and contribution. Ellie, a home ec major at MSC, is now teaching at the new West Side High School in Cleveland. Her address is: 2962 S. Moreland, Cleveland, Ohio 44120 . . . Among those who represented '66 on Alumni Day was Jane Thomas Spitzer, an elementary teacher who lives at Flemington Arms Apt., Bldg. 250, Apt. C-2, Flemington, N. J. She'd be interested in the formation of an alumni club in her area . . . Carl Eastman and fiancée have made the "In the News" pages in this issue . . . Susan E. Harris is now Susan Lupini, and she lives at 116 Valley Oak, Schertz, Tex. 78154 . . . Donna Marinikov Malone (Mrs. James) has a new address. It's R. D. 5, Spring Street, Lebanon, Pa. 17042 . . . Sometimes the college ties of parents are as strong as those of the alumnus himself. There is a suspicion that such is the case with the Hartmans. Ron is away on business, will be traveling late into the fall. His mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. V. W. Hartman, felt that he should not "and would not want to be" late with his donation for the support of the new Mansfieldian. So they sent a check. Editors' thanks. The Hartman address is: 321 Ross St., Houston, Pa. 15342 . . . Item on Linda Lacock Hottenstein in '68 below.

See "In the News" pages for item on Jim Kier . . . Now for two "definitely underpaid" (their own words) school teachers, that's going all the way. Not only did Tanya and Tom Hotalen enclose a generous check for the support of the new Mansfieldian, they did it in their own stamped envelope—to save the office postage. "Six cents is six cents," they quip. And then add this plug for the "definitely underpaid" profession: "If all of us teachers are as overpaid as the public keeps telling us, you'll be able to print your next issue on gold pages. Good luck!" The Hotalens live on Farm Road, RD No. 1, Copake, N. Y. 12516 . . . For item on Helen Marie Neal King, see '65 above. . . Note on Stanley Lehman under '68 below.

Editors sincerely regret missing Jim Lane when he stopped in the office last month. They extend thanks for the gesture in support of the new Mansfieldian. Jim's living near Coudersport where his address is RD 1, Coudersport, Pa. 16915 . . . One of the more poignant gestures in support of the new Mansfieldian came from Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Granick who learned of the problems of the new Mansfieldian from brother-in-law, Ben T. Miller (See '24 above). The Granicks' son, Joseph P. Granick, would have been a member of the '68 Class. He was killed in an automobile accident in his freshman year at MSC. The Granicks live at 38 Chester St., Wilkes-Barre, Pa. 18705 . . . Two alumni who received advanced degrees at Drexel University this past June were: Deah Franchetta Shaw, master of science in library education, and Stanley John Lehman, '67, M.S. in environmental science . . . A change of name and address and best wishes, congratulations, and all else that goes with it: Last June 28, Judith Pierce married Larry Rowe and they are now living at Erdwell, N. Y. Larry teaches in the high school and is assistant varsity football coach and head track coach at Johnson City. Editors' many thanks for the contribution to the new Mansfieldian . . . Sharon Lee Ballard was awarded the master of science in library science by Case Western Reserve University this past spring . . . Phyllis Viti Walsh comes through with a welcome letter and contribution for the new Mansfieldian. Soon after her graduation as a home ec major, Phyllis married David J. Walsh, of Easton. They are now living in Bethlehem, Pa., where Phyllis is teaching home ec in the Freedom High School. Reports that in her department is another MSC graduate, Linda Lacock Hottenstein '66. The Walshs live at 1550 Irene St., Bethlehem, Pa. 18017 . . . Bill Moore (William J.) writes: "I am more than happy to contribute to the support of the new Mansfieldian, but I would like to inform you that since my graduation, I have received only one issue." To which editors have two replies. "Thanks a million for the ebullient note and support," and "If that one issue was the last one, sing praises! You're at long last squared away in the files." The address editors now have is: 203 Jefferson St., Evans City, Pa. 16033 . . . Not much of a note, but pungent. And their support is truly appreciated: Sandy, '68 and Ken, '69 Anstadt. They pen: "Good luck on your endeavor! From two grads! Proud to be from MSC!" The note comes all the way from 1722 W. 37th St., Orlando, Fla. 32804 . . . Blossburg's inimitable Margaret (Metherell) Beechey (Mrs. John

William J. Moore
Squared away in the files.

Margaret Beechey
Poet laureate, so to speak.

K.) provides the topping, as usual. In response to the letter for help, she writes: "Enclosed you will find my contribution of a dollar . . . Glad you weren't too proud to holler . . . The donation won't make me poor or rich . . . Just shows that friends help you out of a ditch . . . Hope the alumni body doesn't pass the buck and hesitate . . . Or, 'The New Mansfieldian' may be known as the late . . . It makes me shudder to think of the loss of rapport . . . Should MSC be forced to close this door . . . I have a hunch the situation will get better . . . However, lots of luck with your letter!" Editors can only ask: "Wanna work for PR and Alumni Affairs?" Margaret lives at 225 N. Williamson Rd., Blossburg, Pa. 16912. She is a graduate in Public School Nursing.

Note on Ken Anstadt under '68 above . . . Art Plieskatt, Jr. was recently assigned as a radio-teletype operator in Headquarters Battery, 8th Battalion, 11th Artillery, Americal Division near Chu Lai, Vietnam. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Pleiskatt, reside at 90 S. Academy St., Mansfield, Pa. 16933 . . . Faith it is. Just raw faith. Writes Ray Miamidian: "I think it is rather unusual to receive a request for financial support from an alumni publication which I have never received or even known existed. Furthermore, it would be helpful to know what will become of the donations if enough money is not received to publish The New Mansfieldian? At any rate, I am enclosing (this) check to help sustain your project." Something, eh? In answer to Raymond's most critical question: There will be enough money—just enough—to publish the Mansfieldian. Raymond's address is: 1607 Mt. Ephraim Ave., Camden, N. J. 08104 . . . By about this time Don Beatty, who recently completed a helicopter pilot course, and since has been receiving advanced flight training at the Army Aviation School, Fort Rucker, Alabama, should be Warrant Officer Donald E. Beatty. His home is at 118 Parson St., Easton, Pa. . . . Airman Thomas Kench is a graduate of the Air Force's pharmacy specialist's course, and has been assigned to Homestead Air Force Base, Fla., for duty with the Tactical Air Command. Wife, Jayne, is the former Jayne Stewart of Feasterville, Pa. Tom's parents live at RD 2, Newton, Pa. . . . Karen Haney, who married MSC basketball Pete Speer, '70, is, as of now, teaching primary special education in the Hellertown schools of Northampton County. They're living at Sanbrooke Apt., Hellertown, Pa. . . . Back for Alumni Day was Jacqueline C. Zeller, now an elementary teacher, living at 214 W. 9th St., Elmira Heights, N. Y. 14903.

Among the first-year class who made their presence felt on Alumni Day—delightfully—were Kay Roseborough, airline hostess, Main St., Alexandria, Pa. 16611; Joan D. Lucas, graduate student, 312 Price St., West Chester, Pa. 19380, and Linda J. Aspinall, budding home economist, 1209 Lindsay Rd., Carnegie, Pa. 15106 . . . Dr. Newell A. Schappelle has already recorded pictorially on these pages his first botany class (see '47 above). Now he puts on the record his last one (see cut). The identifications are as follows: Left to right: Brooks, Kocher, Bravo, Bachman, Egolf, Robbins, Goble, Lasco, Lanuti, Worthington, Sparmbblack, Berfield, Austin, Banks, Stravinski and Dr. Schappelle. If any spellings are incorrect, students can blame them on Dr. Schappelle—he's retired and immune . . . John Kanon is living at 1836 Marquette St., Apt. 7, Appleton, Wis. 54911 . . . From the editor of the Carontawan comes this urgent note: "Due to the 'slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,' human frailty, stumbling blocks beyond the range of human imagination, and the 'thousand natural shocks that flesh is heir to,' the 1970 Carontawan will probably not be ready for distribution until December or January. The books, as soon as they are completed, will be mailed to members of the 1970 Class, who are urged to send notification of any change of address or name." . . . Janice Baker, 21, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Baker, 215 Kelso St., Harrisburg, Pa., died suddenly June 20, after one day's illness. A voice major, Janice will be remembered for her performance in the lead role of Opera Workshop's "Mame," for her voice in the Concert Choir, Chamber Singers, and as a soloist in the Choral Festival.

The late Janice Baker

There's late news—all good but all too late—on Janet Boekenkamp, '64; Bernadine Rettger, '68; Edith (Hardy) Tucker, '43; Naomi Young Miller, '69; Mike Hrycenko, '31; Barbara Franklin, '68; Joan E. Devine, '55. Watch the next issue for these items.

Dr. Schappelle and Last Class ('70)
He's now retired and immune.

PETITION FOR CHARTER

We, the undersigned, do hereby petition the General Alumni Association of Mansfield State College to grant us a charter as the Mansfield State College Alumni Club of and to recognize the undersigned as the charter members and, as designated, the interim officers of said club.

We stipulate that with the granting of said charter we shall strive to meet regularly no less than two times a year; that we shall work to further the best interests of the college, and will cooperate with the administration and faculty in those areas, where, it is indicated, there are goals to which this organization could contribute.

We understand also that it will be incumbent upon this club to levy an annual dues fee of $5.00 (five dollars), $2.00 of which will be retained by the club for organizational and operational expenses and $3.00 of which will be forwarded to the General Alumni Association as the annual dues fee of that organization.

It is also understood that a permanent annual organization of the club will be effected within a year of the granting of this charter.

Curriculum Study 3-Cover

THE COVER

The montages of the cover and subsequent pages are made up, of course, of representations from the reunion classes and were used in this way to herald Alumni Day '71. It took a feverish search of the archives, but editors feel the effort was worth it. There are no idents but, editors felt, the ensuing guessing games could possibly provide more fun and nostalgia anyway.

You are cordially invited to attend

THE CHANGING FACE OF THE CAMPUS

Campus Tours on Alumni Day Will This Year Include Four New and Exciting Stops

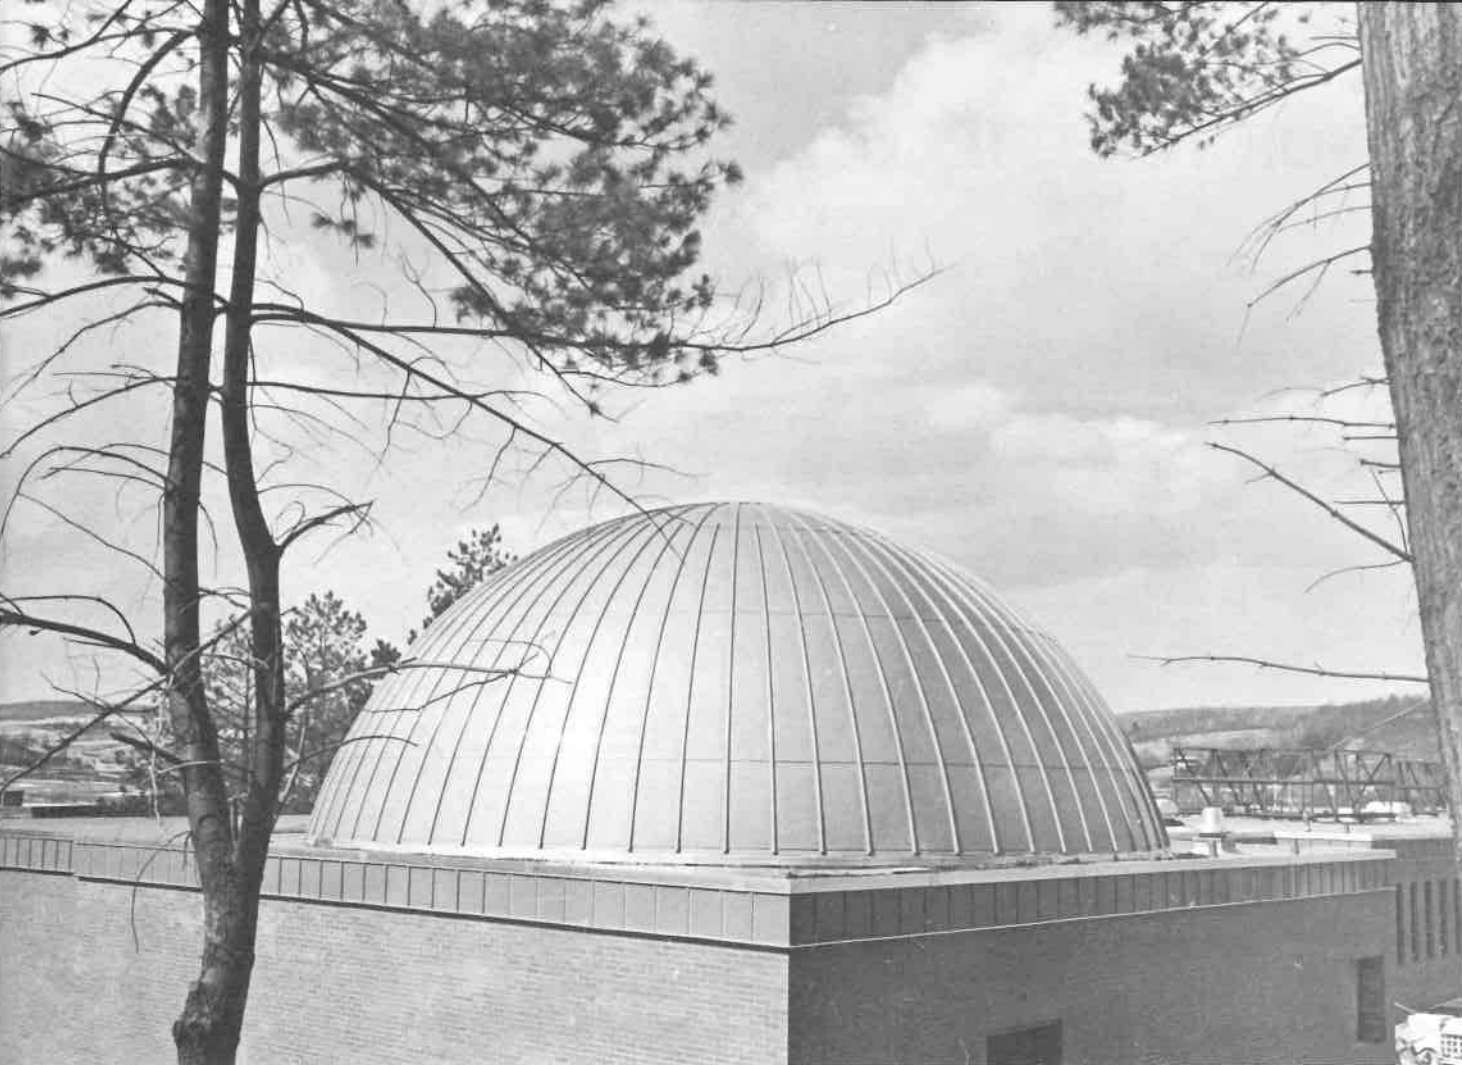

As though especially to accommodate returning Mansfieldians on Alumni Day, three of four new major structures will stand ready for inspection—and just in time for the occasion. For campus touring alumni, the newly-completed projects will indeed accent the quiet but phenomenal growth of the college over the past decade.

Come Alumni Day, Memorial Hall will be first stop for returning Mansfieldians. This is the new $638,000, three-story student center, housing spacious recreation rooms and lobbies, snack bar, TV room, information center, conference rooms, and offices for student service organizations as well as for college administrative personnel. Alumni Day registration and coffee hour are scheduled for Memorial Hall which, incidentally, now fronts North Hall immediately to the west. It is here also that accommodations are arranged for the campus tours.

Another stop on the campus tours will be the $839,000 addition to Alumni Hall (the Library and Administration Building). The new addition boasts four floors, the upper two of which will be used by the Library and will house book stacks with a 150,000-edition capacity, a periodical section, a micro-film room, conference rooms, reading area, and offices. The addition will double the college's library facilities. The lower two floors will centralize the college's administrative offices under one roof.

The $1.4-million Grant Science Center addition is scheduled for completion in September of 1971 and is running on schedule, so much so that there will be plenty to see, come Alumni Day. The new addition, although joined to the existing Center, will be a self-contained structure, featuring a domed planetarium, and housing specialized physics and chemistry laboratories with instrument panels, a science library, faculty offices and storage areas.

At the new $2.3-million Decker Gymnasium, returning alumni will see the Olympic-size swimming pool (a first for MSC), a gym floor that will accommodate six half basketball courts and a full court for game use with a seating capacity of 2,800, locker rooms, laundry, team rooms, classrooms, wrestling and apparatus room, lounge rooms, adaptive physical education area, room for dance classes, and related gymnasium facilities.

Honor Roll II*—as did Honor Roll I—cites those who responded to the request for support of the Mansfieldian. It is thus a continuation of Honor Roll I and, as did Honor Roll I, it expresses the deep gratitude of all who feel strongly about a renaissance of alumni interests and loyalties. It is now complete up to and including February 28, 1971. Any contributions received after that date will be recorded in the next issue of the Mansfieldian. Any instance of a name that should be, but is not recorded here should be reported immediately to the Mansfieldian. Any corrections, as well, will be appreciated.

THE NEW
BAND

Proposed New Mountie Band Uniform

Designed and manufactured especially for Mansfield State College by Uniforms by Ostwald, Inc., New York City.

By D. L. SMITH, '72

MANSFIELD — "It's an ill wind that blows no good."

The 1970 football season at Mansfield State College was a case in point. The MSC gridders were in the throes of a disappointing 2-7 season, but with the ill wind, there blew onto this Pennsylvania campus the new "Mountie Band," immediately capturing the hearts of fans on both sides of the field.

It's not that Mansfield State hadn't had good bands before. The college had just never had anything quite like the new "Mountie Band."

One-hundred forty-two members strong — more than twice as large as its forerunners — this new marching organization thrilled the football crowds wherever it performed with outstanding displays of musicianship, marching drill, and "gutsy" showmanship.

In its first home appearance, the band performed in a driving rain and, as it left the playing field, was greeted by a rousing ovation from the assembled fans. Only a week earlier, the bandsmen had been treated to a standing ovation following their first away showing of the season. This was the beginning of a pattern that was to continue whenever the "Mountie Band" made a public appearance.

The responsibility for the development of this fine marching organization rested with the band's new directors, Richard Talbot and Thomas Main. In their first year at the helm, the two bandmasters initiated change after change and gave unselfishly of their time and talent during both the planning and rehearsal stages.

Also sharing the responsibility for the various chores was a student staff comprising both graduate and undergraduate students from various departments on campus.

The ideas that eventually combined to produce the "Mountie Band" were conceived during the summer of 1970. It was decided that one of the basic considerations was to be the development of a "bolder" musical sound.

In their search for just the right sound, the directors turned to Paul Semicek, director and music arranger of the famed Mount Carmel "Mounties." Semicek proved to be the right man for the job. Football fans were stirred throughout the season by his arrangements of such numbers as "Espagne Cani," "Blowin' in the Wind," "Battle Hymn of the Republic/Dixie," and "Two O'clock Jump."

Thomas Main, Paul Semicek, Richard Talbot

Relying heavily on the musicianship and teaching abilities of the three full-time percussionists in the band, the directors expanded the drum line to eighteen pieces, using Ludwig chromium snare drums, tenor drums, and bass drums; marching timpani, timpani, cymbals, timbales, and bongoes. Eighteen recruits worked many hours in perfecting what was to be the best drum line in the Pennsylvania Conference.

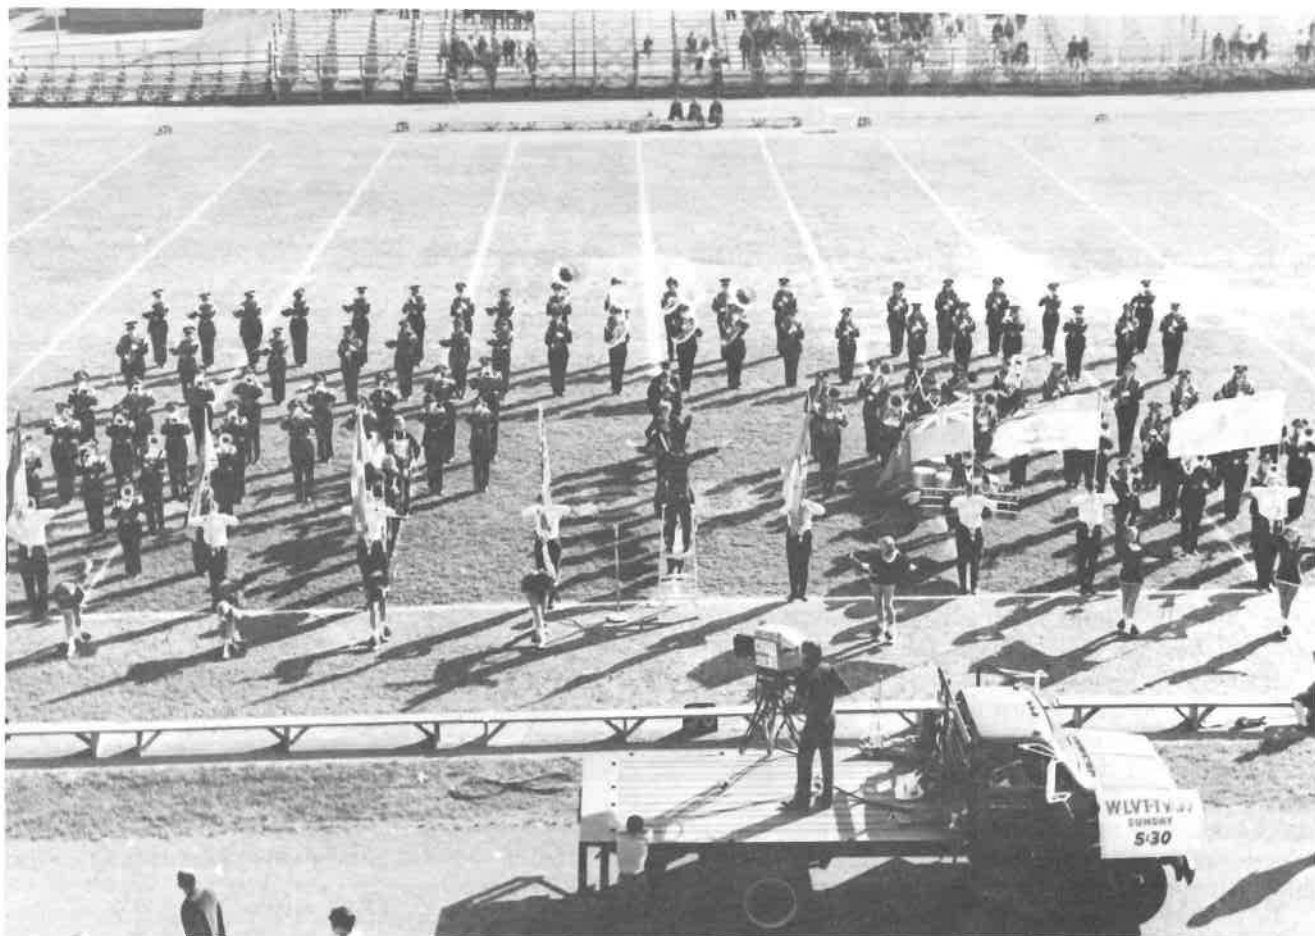

Under the tutelage of Al Shulski, a former member of Semicek's Mt. Carmel band, an eighteen member band front, comprising an honor guard, rifle team, and flag drill squad, was added to the band. The twirler corps was increased in size to eight members and choreography was added to the usual baton drills.

In the end, though, it was the students who made the band a special musical ambassador. With over half the band members only freshmen, the bandsmen worked literally around the clock memorizing music and field formations, cleaning uniforms, polishing instruments, and generally generating such enthusiasm that even late in the football season the stands were crowded with onlookers.

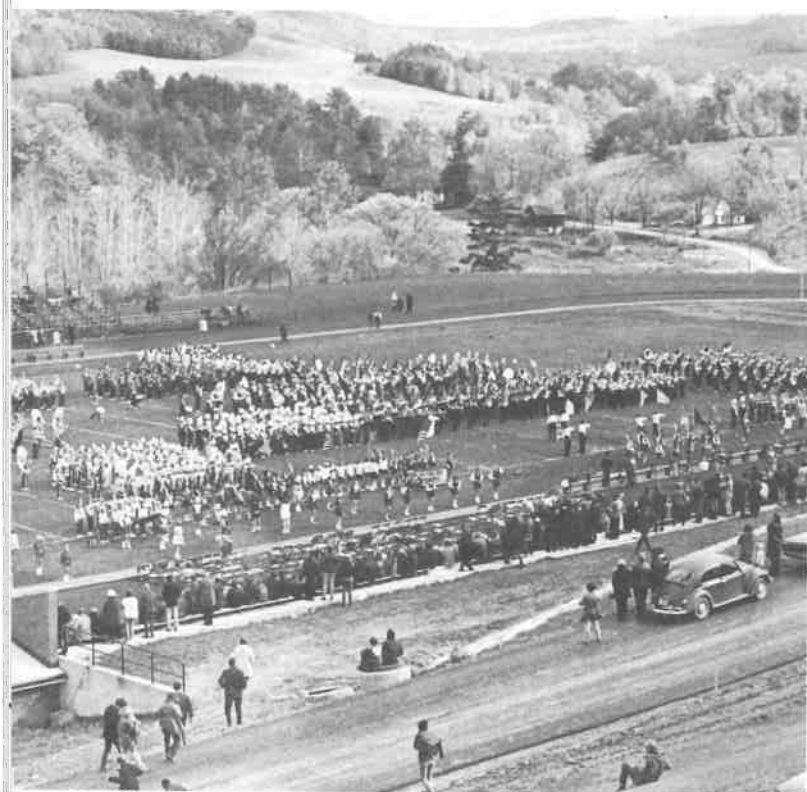

Two incidents speak well of the students in the band. The first was their decision to purchase, from their own funds, over one-hundred bright jackets enscribed with the band insignia. From September through November, one couldn't walk around the MSC campus without seeing the familiar windbreakers bearing the words "Mountie Band."

Just before their first appearance of the 1970 season, the bandsmen voted unanimously to hold a special night rehearsal to perfect even further their show. Curious students and faculty members were, that night, greeted by the sight of an entire band practicing in the glare of automobile headlights.

With the marching season now complete, work has already begun and preparations are being made for the band's 1971 appearances.

Being televised at Kutztown.

"You gotta know you're doing something right."

In addition to the football schedule, the bandsmen hope to be able to travel throughout the east coast in response to invitations for appearances that are even now arriving.

On the "checklist" for next year are new uniforms, the addition of several special instruments, and a further increase in the size of the band.

Expressions of support have begun to be heard from all areas of the college community and, by all indications, 1971 should prove to be another banner year.

As one bandsman said; "When you take over one-hundred kids—half of them non-music majors—and come up with a band to top all bands, you gotta know you're doing something right!"

EDITOR'S NOTE—Inquiries about the availability of the MOUNTIE BAND for guest appearances at football games or in parades should be addressed to:

CLASS ROUND-UP

Belle Barton Murdock
Started early at MSNS.

Editors' thanks to Belle Barton Murdock for her contribution in support of the new Mansfieldian. Belle is a native Mansfieldian who started school at the old Model School. "Little did I think then," she writes, "that I'd be living in California." But she likes California "very much. The climate is ideal, especially for older people." Still drives her car but limits herself to daytime driving. Belle's son is rector of Trinity Episcopal Church in San Jose. Is in his 14th year at San Jose. He has three children, two in college. Belle's daughter is senior technologist at San Jose Hospital. She has two children. Belle closes: "It is unbelievable the way Mansfield State College has grown." Belle's address is: 16230 Deodar Lane, Monte Sereno, California 95030.

James E. Bennett is now residing at 182 Whitehall St., Buffalo, N. Y. 14220. A widower, James is residing with one of his sons. Another son and two daughters also reside in Buffalo. Like many another Mansfield grad, away back when, James is a two-time graduate of Mansfield. He came back in 1902 and graduated from the "business course." Taught school for a spell and then joined the Railway Express, from which he retired in 1957 after 50 years' service.

Helen Watts Roberts (Mrs. John Baker Roberts) sends us a print (see cut) of the John B. Roberts Box Garden in Princess Anne, Md. Beautiful. Ideal for a contemplative stroll. Helen informs us her mother attended (Mansfield) "and, I suppose, graduated from the Young Ladies Seminary before 1865." Helen's full address is Washington Ave., Princess Anne, Md. 21853.

The John B. Roberts Box Garden
For contemplation, ideal.

Although she is unable to continue her activities "in the music world," there can hardly be many dull moments in the life of Ethel Gray Thrush. Somewhere in between a great deal of entertaining, bridge playing, activities in the Presbyterian Church, the Civic Club, Historical Society, Cumberland Valley Chapter of N. S. Y. S. Daughters of 1812, and a few other social clubs, Ethel, with her daughter, found time for a cruise on the ship Franconia to Bermuda recently. Yes, and she devotes "much time" to "china painting." Her address is: 222 S. Prince St., Shippensburg, Pa. 17257.

James E. Bennett
Another two-timer.

Francis C. Roupp reminds editors that this is the 65th reunion class. He'd like to renew relationships with the members of his class, but he's not too optimistic about a get-together, "since it might not be too practical to urge a reunion because of the age barrier. Nearly all members are 85 years old or older. I am 87 years young." But he still asked editors for information "on living members" and editors promptly sent him a computer printout (list) of names still in the active file of '06. There were 25 names on the list. There just could be a reunion. Francis lives at Liberty, Pa., where his address is simply that—plus zip 16930.

Francis C. Roupp
There could be a reunion.

Cora Ford Bly, "now eighty years old and quite confined by arthritis," reports that she still loves her Mansfieldian but that she gets two of them, one of which she passes along to "one of our fellow alumni." Editors have corrected the file errors, but if they knew the other alumnus or alumna, they'd see that he or she would also be placed in the active file for future Mansfieldians et al. Cora lives at Grantville Summit, Pa., where her address is R. D. 1, plus zip 16926.

Ethel Gray Thrush
Also, a china painter.

Grace Hanlan is still interested in Mansfield. "Had such a happy time out there," she writes. "Believe there was a boy named Strunk out there at that time (1912). I think he was quite a good football player." Twasn't editor. He had just come upon the earthly scene "about that time," but has heard about that before. In fact, other alumna have recalled there were two Strunks—brothers—and both were pretty good in sports. Editor would be proud to trace a relationship. Grace lives at 1014 Church St., Honesdale, Pa. 18431 . . . Burr Hall is still living in Osceola (Pa.) where he spent 35 of his 40 years in the teaching profession and where his address is just that, plus zip 16942. Burr "supplemented" his teaching with "the art of interior decorating" and enjoyed both vocations "very much." He retired in 1956 and now has a hobby shop. Celebrated his 54th wedding anniversary this past February. Editors' heartiest congratulations.

Burr Hall

Congratulations in order.

Likely a number of '12 and '13 grads have heard or will be hearing from Flora Borst Webster. At any rate, she asked editors for names and addresses and promptly got the computer printouts. Not infallible, however, computer had wrong spelling of Flora's name. Flora's address is Genesee (Pa.) R. D. 2, zip 16923 . . . Kathryn Daughy Bower is living at 103 W. Henry St., Elmira, N. Y. 14904 . . . Not all the news can be good.

Misfortune—not to mention some inconvenience—zeroed in on Marie Dobbins this past winter when the house she had lived in for 40 years was badly damaged by fire. Not all, "everything concerning school days at Mansfield that I cherished was burned," she writes. "I haven't even one Mansfieldian." Not much solace, but editors did compensate for that loss. Marie is temporarily living at 420 Roosevelt Ave., Endicott, N. Y. 13760 . . .

Mildred Crowl Huntington

Like 2,000, has editors' thanx.

Mildred Crowl (Mrs. Harry C.) Huntington has editors thanks for her contribution in support of the new Mansfieldian and also for the name and address of classmate Josephine Brown Eldon, who's living at 392 Coldbrook Dr., Elmira, N. Y. 14904. Mildred's address is 72 Gates Hollow Rd., Bradford, Pa. 16701 . . . Preston O. Van Ness, who attended kindergarten and model school at the old Normal School, then sandwiched in one year in Normal School between grade school and the newly-established high school in Mansfield, then returning to the Normal School, was "especially interested" in Fred Jupenlaz "Pause for Perspective" in the last Mansfieldian. It must have stirred some fond memories, for Preston goes on to reminisce about old friends Fred (Joe) Bedenk and Fred's sister Viola and brother Frank, Warren Miller and many others. Preston stayed on in Harrisburg after retirement from the State Department of Education.

And speaking of reminiscing, it is Eva Stone (Mrs. Robert C.) Dix who does it with a certain eloquence. Writes Eva: "After graduation my teaching experience was of short duration due to a physical handicap. However, the years at Mansfield were not without wonderful memories and suitable rewards. The academic knowledge gained from a well-balanced curriculum, administered by a dedicated faculty, resulted in diversified training not only for teaching, but for everyday living. The social graces were not neglected but were enhanced by the close relationship in the classroom between faculty members and students. We were cordially invited to many of the homes in Mansfield, giving us homes away from home. A few that come to mind: the Doanes, the Straits, the Coles, and many others." To her classmates, Eva quotes the following: "Age is a quality of mind:/If you've left your/

Clarence Ollendike

Deserves a Pulitzer.

Dreams behind,/If Hope is cold,/If you no longer look ahead,/If your ambitious fires/Are dead./Then you are old." . . . If the Mansfieldian had some award for distinguished reporting, it would have to go to Clarence Ollendike. Most of the '14 class notes that follow are his. But first, editors have to report on the reporter: Since his retirement in 1960 as vice principal of West Scranton High, Clarence has been a part-time staffer of Keystone Junior College as an admissions counselor, a work he particularly enjoys. He's served as chairman of the Lackawanna County Retired Teachers Association and is presently membership chairman of the Pennsylvania Retired Teachers Association. He has various Masonic and church interests and has served as moderator of the Lackawanna Presbytery. He and Mrs. Ollendike travel extensively. They've been north to Canada, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, (editors wonder if paths crossed on P. E. I.); south to Mexico and Yucatan; east to Europe, and west to California and the islands of the Pacific. Seems a highlight of all the globe trotting, however, was a simple little visit back to Mansfield last April where old acquaintances were renewed with Harold Strait, Benny Fleitz, Kim Marvin and others . . . Helén Custer Cooper last summer had a get-together of nine Mansfieldians including many from '14 who live near her in Montgomeryville, Pa., where her address is Box 37, zip 18936 . . . Gertrude Allen Doan, who was one of the nine Mansfieldians mentioned above, is living at 229 Tenth St., West Palm Beach, Fla. 33401. Clarence (see above) reports that his letter was returned. It was addressed to 629 Tenth St. Says to get in touch With Percy Coles, "who visited her." would be difficult—he's visiting her right now . . . Paul Dutko, whose career with the U. S. Consular Service spanned many years and continents, is reportedly in poor health. He's living at the Tuxedo Park Apartments, 1900 Liberty Ave., Miami Beach, Fla. . . . Homer Dudley, who has also traveled extensively in his work as a consultant—and is still traveling through various countries—does have a home address. It's 150 Ashland Road, Summit, N. J. 07901 . . . Virgil Dudley has lived at Deerfield Beach, Fla. since his retirement from Montgomery Ward in Chicago. His address in Deerfield Beach is 2051 First Avenue N. W., zip 33441 . . . Jean Hall, who's still working part-time after a very busy life as a hospital supervisor, was among those at Helen Cooper's party (see above). Jean lives in the Presidential Apartments D427, City Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa. 19131 . . . Frances Bailey Heinrich, Cross Forks, Pa. 17729, did have a seige of arthritis, but Reporter Ollendike hasn't heard from her in a year . . . Reporter Clarence reports also he hasn't heard from Mildred Crowell Huntington either. Editors did. But because of conflicting information in the files, placed the news item on Mildred under the Class of '13 notes above . . . Our reporter reports also that Gladys Axford Lindsay (editors were not about to take the rap for this one) is handicapped: she loves to eat and the doctor has put her on a diet. Gladys and Clarence are among a group of friends who meet for dinner and bridge once a month. Gladys' address is: 1724 Sanderson Ave., Scranton, Pa. 18509 . . . Among those at the Cooper party (above) was Florence Renshaw Munnell, 241 Brestwood Drive, Langhorne, Pa. 19047. Florence, says Reporter Clarence, "has the right spirit." Her pet slogan these days is "Let's get ready for 1974." . . . Clarence says he sees Leonard Riebe occasionally and calls him whenever he's in Williamsport. "Leonard still has the same spirit even though his activity is somewhat curtailed because of his eyesight." Leonard lives at 1215 Faxon Parkway, Williamsport, Pa. 17701 . . . Marion (Nibs) Vail, Main St., Collegeville, Pa., was also at Helen Cooper's party (above) where she sang the Alma Mater of '14's day, "Far Above Tioga's Waters." . . . More on Eva Stone Dix (see above): Clarence reports that Eva has been confined for the past year with arthritis. "Her husband, Bob, Class of '13, looks after her every need." . . . Edna Bidwell Davis' husband is in a convalescent home. Edna, with help, runs their plumbing and hardware business in Lake Ariel, Pa.

Elsie Bach (Mrs. Charles) Burk has had a few lively months with the ever-lively Philadelphia area alumni. First, she sent a fine contribution in support of the new Mansfieldian in behalf of the Philadelphia Club, which certainly heartened editors. Then she planned an affair—"kaffee klatch, tea or what-have-you"—for alumna who don't get out to the club's annual dinner, then, presumably, was totally involved in the latter. At least had editors do a printout of Philadelphia area alumni. Incidentally, among other errors probably spotted on the printout, editors noticed also that the computer had added an "e" to Burk. Elsie lives at 107 E. Greenwood Ave., Lansdowne, Pa. 19050 . . . He was president of the class, president of the Delphic Fraternity, varsity baseball pitcher, YMCA, and salutatorian of his class. Guess who? None other than Dewey Miller. Dewey married the late Lulu Bush, '11, who passed away in 1967. She had taught 30 years in Rochester, N. Y. Dewey has since remarried and, in a camper, the Millers travel quite a bit.

Still pitches—horseshoes.

In the past year have seen MSC alumni Edith Miller, Hannah Jenkins Martin and William B. Cass, his "old roommate and Delphic brother." Dewey still pitches—horseshoes. He sends greetings and an open invitation to all MSC alumni. His address is 848 14th Ave. N., St. Petersburg, Fla. 33701 . . . Editors' thanks to Esther Bowman for the kind words about the last Mansfieldian and for her contribution in support of it. Esther's living at 963 Brunswick Rd., Cleveland Heights, Ohio 44112. Editors trust Mrs. Fike received the Mansfieldian Esther requested for her . . . To Marian Stearns (Mrs. Howard T.) Benning, editors thanks for the contribution and the welcome note that accompanied it. Marian is living on Star Route, Kingsley, Pa. 18826.

Clotes on '16 could not go by without a piece on Mr. Mansfield himself, Kim Marvin, to whom so many alumni allude in reminiscences. The honors have been piling up over the years, but the most recent is an award for his 50 years of service on the board of directors of AAA. Guess Kim's honors started "away back when" Kim captained Mansfield Normal's 1916 championship basketball team. After Mansfield, Kim went on to graduate from Lafayette College also and then on to a master's in education from New York University. He returned to Mansfield where he was a member of the college faculty for 35 years, serving as athletic director, basketball coach and supervisor of health and science in the Laboratory School until his retirement in 1959. He served with the 28th Division in World War I and is past commander of the American Legion. A Mason, he has held a number of high offices in the Order which, also, honored him recently. Kim still plays golf (Corry Creek Golf Club) and does some hunting and fishing (Black Wolf Rod and Gun Club). The Marvins (Adeline) entertain casually with an exhilarating touch . . . Members of '16 should have by this time had some communication from Ruth Jean Hall (Mrs. Paul D. Converse). That is, they should have if Ruth Jean ever received the class printout she requested and editors sent to her home at 17 Montclair Road, Urbana, Ill. 61801.

A. Reese Matteson is living down at Sun City Center, Fla., (not to be mistaken for Sun City, another town) where just about everything seems to be enjoyable. Reese enjoys riding his golf cart daily from his carport to the golf course for 18 holes and back again. Madge (Robertson) enjoys the church choir, the circles and the choral of the Women's Club. They both enjoy their "home, flowers, citrus fruit, square dancing, ballroom dancing, programs in Town Hall, clubs, duplicate bridge and friends." All that's not to mention their bicycles, swimming, sun bathing and, in '69, their 50th Wedding Anniversary. Nor does it take into account nine grandchildren provided by Dr. A. Reese Matteson, a surgeon at Danville, Ill.; Mrs. Edward J. Cadger, a teacher in Victorville, Calif., and Mrs. A. William Bibbings, a nurse in Hawthorne, N. J. Reese retired in '59 after 40 years as a school principal. Their address in Sun City Center is 1725 Council Drive, plus zip 33570 . . . The heroic and seemingly unending struggle of Kathleen Hayes (Mrs. Francis) Miller to have her address changed has at long last culminated in success. Editors have nailed it down at 323 S. Main St., Taylor, Pa. 18517. They thank Kathleen and sister, Marie Hayes Petrie, for support of the Mansfieldian.

Esther McCarthy asks: "What happened to perpetual membership in the Alumni Association?" Editors must say, "dunno." Whatever happened must have happened before they happened on the scene. Esther does get kudos for her support of the new Mansfieldian. She's living at 542 Bennett St., Luzerne, Pa. 18709 . . . And kudos too to Adele Reed Cumming. Writes Adele: "As a worker for 'x' years in various fields of journalism, including news, advertising, public relations, editing, teaching high school journalism in Elizabeth, N. J., where I had charge of publications in general, I am glad to be able to contribute to what I consider a worthy cause (the Mansfieldian) at Mansfield State College." It was here that Adele got her journalistic start. She's now living at 418 Putnam Road, Union, N. J. 07083 . . . Most fitting gesture was Ruth M. Peck's support of the new Mansfieldian in memory of her sister, Grace Faye Peck, who passed away in 1965 after 43 years of teaching in the elementary grades. Ruth lives at Jermyn R. D., Pa 18433, and is now in the files as an "associate alumna." . . . The Walter Lipperts enjoyed their trip to Alaska—"a vast state of rugged terrain and frozen wastes wherein lies much of beautiful scenery and natural resources"—but decided the climate there "was not for us or vice versa." So—they're wintering in California and Arizona. Will be home in mid-May, home meaning Dalton, Pa. 18414 . . . Good news and a fine gesture in support of the new Mansfieldian from Ruth D. Hughes, who's enjoying "a very delightful retirement." Ruth had "35 very happy years" teaching music—the last 21 of which were in Pelham, N. Y. She's traveled extensively and is now living at 590 East Third St., Mount Vernon, N. Y. 10553.

Ruth D. Hughes
Delightfully retired.

The Paul R. Sawyers (Helene Evans), both '19, are now retired, Helene from teaching sophomore and junior English at Towanda High School and Paul from North Penn Power Company, and are living in Florida where their address is: 6474 S. W. 28th St., Hollywood, Fla. 33023 . . . Also retired is Helen MacMillan, after 36 years with the History Department faculty at North Scranton Junior High School, but, as she understates it, she's "still busy:" several trips to Europe ("especially the Scotland I love") and all over the U. S. A. and at home—church, AAUW, Retired Teachers Association and bridge. Home is 1022 Grandview St., Scranton, Pa. 18509 . . . Notice of the death of Ernestine Barnes (Mrs. Williard) Haviland last January in New Port Richey, Fla., was sent by Leora Dimon (Mrs. Hurley) Patterson. Leora is living in Tucson, Arizona, where her address is 4601 E. Duncan, zip 85712 . . . Another notice of the passing of a class member comes from Florence Morgan (Mrs. John H.) Dyer, who reports the passing of Ruth Mary Evans Davis, in Lakewood, N. J. Florence has a change of address. Her new address is: 719 N. Main Ave., Scranton, Pa. 18500.

Helene Evans Sawyer
With Paul, doubly retired.

Irene Strobe Hall, widow of Nathan T. Hall, was back for Alumni Day last May and has since written about how pleased she was to see the growth of Mansfield. "Both Nathan and I always had fond memories of our years at Mansfield. We both appreciated the opportunity of receiving our first diplomas from such a good school." Nathan taught 22 years in Pennsylvania and then served as supervising or district principal in the Newark Valley, N. Y. schools where, as Irene writes, "he had been very successful. I am so proud of his accomplishments."

FIFTY YEAR CLASS

Pearl Tuthill (Mrs. Stanley) Weston spent much of last summer in Europe and made sure to get to "the beautiful village of Oberammergau," where she attended The Passion Play, "a never-to-be-forgotten experience." Came back only to break her wrist. But that's well enough on the mend for her to write: "1971 should be a memorable year for the Class of '21. My roommate, Ruth Tyler Homet and I returned for our 40th and we were planning to come back for the 50th, but Ruth passed away in September 1969." Pearl lives at 88 Fairmont Avenue, Chatham, N. J. 07928 . . . Marion Gleckler graciously contributed to the support of the Mansfieldian and at the time hoped that "every one of our alumni" did the same. An exhilarating number did.

In tribute to her many years of devoted service to children and the teaching profession, we now proudly dedicate this new school . . ."

Another globe-trotting alumna is Florence Neefe Langdon, who has done too much traveling to keep up with her correspondence and apologizes for tardiness in support of the new Mansfieldian. In this case, better late than never. Within the past year, Florence and husband toured the Deep West "from Carlsbad, N. M., through Yellowstone Park, Black Hills, Pike's Peak, etc." and then took on 15 countries of Europe. Plans to

An unfortunate communication slip-up caused it to fall upon Mrs. Doris F. Peck to apprise editors of the death of her husband, Class President Edward G. Peck in May of 1969. Unless she notifies editors that it is contrary to her wishes, Doris will continue to receive the Mansfieldian. She is living at 1851 Oliver Ave., San Diego, Calif. 92109.

Evalyn Ogden Burdick, two of whose three married daughters are also alumna (Charmaine B. McLaud, '51, and Sandra B. Van Wormer, '60), keeps busy as church school teacher and church organist and also as a substitute teacher in the Forest City Regional School. She lives at Union Dale, Pa. where her

Edyth Davis Clarke, who lives at 64 W. South St. in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., thought the new Mansfieldian was "great," but was sorry there was no news of the Class of '22. Now there are at least a couple of items, perhaps enough to start the ball rolling . . . Helena Goldsmith Rose writes that her husband died in 1965, that all five of her children are married and have families of their own, that she lives alone and that there are, of course, times of loneliness. Would like to hear from some of her former classmates. Editors are therefore having prepared for her a printout of the members of '22 in the hope that she can spark the correspondence that might dispel a few of the lonely moments. Helena's address is: 27 Meadow Lane, Apalachin, N. Y. 13732 . . . Mary Koehler Vollmer, outstanding voice student of Miss Cora Atwater, teacher of singing at Mansfield from 1918-51, had an elementary school make her 50th in 1974. Florence is living at 1525 Bonair St., Clearwater, Fla. 33515 . . . And a P. S.: a junket to Alaska in 1969, Florence ran into Alta Newell, of Troy, Pa., her classmate at MSNS. Incidentally, loss of voice at one time interrupted her teaching and caused an early retirement. But that condition has long since cleared up. Florence married Robert Langdon, and with the marriage came four stepsons. "Now there are grandchildren and great grandchildren."

address is just that, plus zip 18470. Oh yes, besides the three daughters, there's a son . . . Alta Smith Fleming is living on Route 22, R. D. 1, Asbury, N. J. 08802 . . . Marjorie Spencer Miller has editors' thanks and deepest sympathy. Her husband, George A. Miller, '28, passed away last October 12. Marjorie lives at Millerton, Pa. where her address is just that, plus zip 16936.

Ethel Bishop Stethers has two step grandsons, Larry and Lanny, at MSC and thinks as much of those boys (and their brother Lonnie, a foreign exchange student in Mexico City) as she would her "own flesh and blood." Formerly of Wyalusing, Pa., Ethel is now living in California where her address is: 6761 Estrella Ave., San Diego, zip 92120 . . .

Winifred Case Hennigan
Almost retired.

Winifred Case Hennigan has editors' thanks. Winifred's living at Kirkwood, N. Y., where her address is: R. D. 1 Trim Street, zip 13795. She's retiring from teaching this June after 34 years in the profession. Presently she teaches at the Susquehanna Valley Central School (Cedarhurst) . . . Margaret Mull Teed, like many other Mansfield graduates, is a double alumna. She earned her two-year Normal certificate in 1928 and then her bachelor of science in 1960. In 1963 she added library science. Married in 1930, Margaret returned to teaching in 1941 "when teachers were being drafted." She retired last year "after 30.899 years of teaching," all of which were "rewarding." Has two sons: one attended MSC but transferred to Penn State. Contracted polio. The other is an MSC grad who "did his stint in the Army for his country and ours." Margaret's living at Morris, Pa., where her address is just that, plus zip 16938 . . . Editors' thanks to Amy W. Repsher, Laceyville, Pa. 18623, for the inspirational brochure, "a little gift for 'pulling the load.'"

M. Allene Allis (Mrs. B. H.) Gambell also has editors' thanks for kind words about the new Mansfieldian. Allene was in the last of the three-year classes at Mansfield and in the first of the four-year classes, as were, of course, her classmates. Allene's living at 122 Leland St., Port Charlotte, Fla. . . . Ken Austin is another one of those double alumni. He claims two classes. Graduated in 1928, Ken came back to get his B.S. degree in 1933. Since that time he's been an assistant principal and teacher, had stints in private industry and the postal service. But in 1950, Ken was appointed postmaster of the Wellsboro Post Office and, until his retirement in 1969, served as president of the Pennsylvania Chapter of the National Association of Postmasters. Now, he's a candidate for commissioner of Tioga County. Ken married Wanda Price, of Wellsboro, and they have four sons and 15 (!?!?) grandchildren. The only question occurring to editors: Are they old enough to vote?

Grace Chilcott (Mrs. R. W.) Linkenheimer has a prescription for success for "senior" teachers. Grace is back teaching again after two "retirements" from the profession. She writes: "Guess you can never quit teaching once you've started. Now I feel like I have another family of 23 urchins. So maybe I am a grandmother after all." She admits to being "a little grayer" and: "I'm sure—down deep in my heart—that those 23 second-graders would much rather have had a long-flowing hair, mini-skirted, young, pretty teacher but I said that I'd have to keep them so busy that they wouldn't have time to look at me. I'm surely trying to do just that."—And she's "enjoying it immensely." Grace lives at 22 Gilliland Place, Bellevue, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15202.

Early retirement agrees with both Howard and Berneta Leffer Baker. It gives them time to travel and to keep up with their "two brand new granddaughters' progress." The Bakers live at 2115 Katherine St., Port Allegany, Pa. 16743 . . . Editors' apologies to Mary Guiles (Mrs. Albert S.) Krieger for misspelling name on last Mansfieldian's Honor Roll. File corrections and deletions have been made—the deluge should cease. Mary lives at nearby Lawrenceville, Pa. 16929, where her address is simply Box 235 . . . Comes a short, snappy missive and a contribution in support of the new Mansfieldian from Mike Hrycenko, who would be remembered to "Kim" Marvin, Fred Jupenlaz, "Cy" Manford Lloyd and any others of his college days' friends who may still be around. "The Good Lord be willing," Mike's looking forward to his class reunion this year. This is the 40-year class. Mike's living at 126 Sunny Side Lane, Bellmar, N. J. 08030 . . . Anthony (Tony) Hock is presently psychologist for the Wyoming Valley West School District—but not for long. He's planning "to retire at end of next school year." Retirement for Tony will mark the close of a full and colorful career. When he was on the staff of the Kingston Borough School District sometime ago, a "rave review" in Wilkes-Barre's Sunday Independent described him as "a jack of eight trades and a master of them all: wrestling coach, wrestling and football official, band leader, speech therapist (also a teacher of lip reading), founder of the safety patrol, magician and finally—psychologist and educator." . . . And another missive from Mike Hrycenko, this one of greater length as Mike reminisces on "the influence men like 'Cy' Lloyd, Coach Marvin, Dr. Straughn, Dr. Doane, Dr. Retan, 'Billy' Walters, James Hiscox and Coach Russell" had on his career. Since 1941, after 10 years of teaching, Mike's career has been identi-

He served as an officer in chemical warfare and military intelligence in the China-Burma-India Theatre during World War II, then with the Veterans Administration, then with the Inspector General's Office and he is now (as a civilian) serving with the U. S. Army Electronics Command, Fort Monmouth, N. J. Evidently has had a happy marriage. Otherwise could hardly write: "In 1942, was married to the most wonderful girl in the world—a steady influence, a morale booster, but one who always pulls me down from 'Cloud Nine' when the need arises. Mother to our son, Mike, also happily married." Mike plans to retire in December 1971—"and play golf." Where? The cut on these pages shows him standing in front of the famed Doral Country Club in Florida . . . Mabel Squier (Mrs. Stratton B.) Stevens has two daughters and a son. Oldest daughter, is a nurse, is living in California, is married and has three times given Mabel the status of grandmother. Younger daughter is a junior at Lycoming College. Son is a pilot in the U. S. Air Force. Mabel has now been teaching 4th Grade in the West Chester Area School District for 14 years. Stratton is a distributive education teacher in the high school. Mabel is planning to attend her 40th, come Alumni Day, Saturday, May 15. Mabel's address is: 1620 Highland Ave., West Chester, Pa. 19380 . . . Another whose run of grandchildren is well under way is Cortez Fisk who these days is counting eight of 'em. After serving principalships in Burlington Township and Wyalusing Valley (both Bradford County) Cortez joined the then (1935) Department of Public Instruction as an adviser in secondary education. He became a specialist in the Bureau of School Buildings in 1956 and after a couple more steps up became director of the Department of Education's Bureau of School Construction which is his present position. He winds up a short note: "See you in the Spring." His address is Mechanicsburg, Pa., R. D. 2 . . . Ellen

the Walter Browns comes a nice note and support of the new Mansfieldian. Mrs. Brown is the former Melva Burleson, MSC '29. The Browns live at 312 Harrison St., Port Allegany, Pa. 16743 . . . There just can't be a dull moment in the life of Stanley Bogaczyk. Besides being an active participant in such prestigious associations as Aerospace Industries, National Industrial Security, American Ordnance, Air Force, among a raft of others, Stan is a member of the Chambers of Commerce of the U. S., Ohio State, Cleveland, Bergen County and New Jersey State, not to mention his membership in the Presidents Club of the American Management Association, the Million Miler Club (he has 2 million miles of air travel under his belt), the American Okuru Club of Tokyo, Japan, the Schloss Garten Club of Stuttgart, West Germany, and the Rod and Gun Club of Blossburg. After a stint as math teacher at Hamilton High School in Morris Run, Stan entered business world and is now special group executive of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation. A graduate of the former Covington High School, Stan married the former Mary M. Beaderman of Morris Run. They have three sons and live at 301 Rochelle Ave., Rochelle Park, N. J. 07662.

... Paul Zeller is director of the Dartmouth College Glee Club and, in addition, teaches theory and harmony at the college. Travels considerably with the Glee Club to alumni club meetings, occasionally by plane but most times by bus. Writes: "I am indeed familiar with the highways south of Hanover as far as Miami, Fla. and west to St. Louis, Mo." The plane is used for West Coast tours. Paul's married to the former Frances Hughes of Blossburg who accompanies the Glee Club on its tours of the West but who "finds one-nighters a bit rugged." Son and heir is a Dartmouth graduate who expects to get his doctorate in economics from Boston College in June and simultaneously present Pop with a daughter-in-law. Paul expects to see Bob Grant of Mansfield at the wedding. Paul has editors' thanks. Paul's college address is: Department of Music, Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H. 03755 . . . From Marion Diltz (Mrs. A. C.) Young comes both bright and sad news. The bright news is the marriage of her daughter, the former Naomi G. Young (see '69 below). The sad news is the death of Marion's sister, Lillian B. Diltz (see '39 below). Marion is also a double alumna, receiving her degree in 1940. Mansfield, she writes, is like a second home. She attended several summer sessions at the college, staying at the home of D. C. Brasteds whose daughter, Gwendolyn, was a classmate. Marion lives at 157 Carpenter St., Dushore, Pa. 18614. She's teaching social studies in the Turnpike Area Elementary School . . . After 17 years of teaching band music and directing high school bands, Eva Marie Yurkewicz has switched to vocal music. She is elementary vocal supervisor of the Mahanoy Area Joint School District and she's living at 401 W. Coal St., Shenandoah, Pa. 17976 . . . Ruth DeMott (Mrs. George S.) Mumma, can make it stick when she declares, "I am a home maker." She was a home ec major at the then MSNS. Ruth's husband is the teacher: vocational agriculture and conservation in Barboursville High School. Son Roger and daughter Joyce are both graduates of West Virginia University. Roger is a federal-state inspector. Joyce teaches home economics, of course. Another daughter, Jean Ellen, will enter Marshall University, fall of '71. Ruth Chamberlin (Mrs. Jack) Crawford is finishing her 34th year as a home economics teacher. Thirty-one of those 34 years have been in Delaware County (Pa.) where she is on the faculty of Ridley School District. But this year is the last. She writes: "We have travelled extensively and hope to do even more next year when I join my husband in retirement. Hubby retired this year." There's a pattern to the Crawfords' world travels. This is, of course, the 35th reunion class, and members should be hearing from Ford Reynolds who requested—and got—a printout (mailing list) on the class as a starter in "attempting to stimulate some special interest" this year. Ford came through with some excellent suggestions for the new Mansfieldian. They will be followed as and when possible in future issues. Ford lives at 307 Bennell St., Luzerne, Pa. 18709. He directed health and physical education in the Chester School District. Could it have been anything else? Ruth and Jack live at 24 Pine Tree Dr., Media, Pa. 19063 when they're not attending the Olympics . . . And a real swinging missive from Tonia Z. Botti who just has to be as vivacious as her letter is scintillating. Tonia has become an astrologist, but her brightest stars seem to be in her nieces and nephews. One nephew plays first violin in the New York Youth Symphony Orchestra and will probably go to Juilliard. One of her nieces sought Tonia's advice about college. Tonia influenced her to attend a State college. So where did she go? East Stroudsburg ?!?! Tonia closes the sparkler with these lines: "Might you be born under Aquarius? I learned astrology as a challenge. Today it is big business. You are very humanitarian—all things to all people. Blessings, Tonia." ?!?! They're at East Stroudsburg where John has completed 24 years as advisor to the Area Joint School's newspaper, The Eastburger, an outstanding school publication, by the way. John's an English instructor at the school, has an M.S. from Bucknell and 30 hours above a master's at Penn State. Still has to find time for duties as Lt. Colonel in U. S. There's a special note from Marion Diltz Young (noted above under '35) informing editors of the death of her sister, Lillian B. Diltz, another of MSC's double alumni, who was a two-year graduate in '39 and a baccalaureate graduate in '50. Lillian taught in Sullivan County schools for 31 years and at the time of her death had been science teacher in the Turnpike Area Elementary School at Mildred, Pa. She lived with her father in Dushore, Pa. . . . Another globe-trotting alumna is Marjorie C. Baker. Marjorie taught school until 1944 when life took a somewhat different turn. She became a member of the Women's Army Corps and before her retirement in 1964 had seen 44 countries of the world in two tours throughout Europe and the Far East. Roberta Naylor (Mrs. Frederick) Grambow resides at 21 Imperial Dr., New Hartford, N. Y. 13413 "with banker husband and a daughter." A second daughter at Russell Sage and a son at Cornell complete the family picture. "With mother duties subsiding," Roberta has been doing more home ec substituting in area schools. Finds it "both stimulating and invigorating." . . . Besides being a home economics teacher in Heritage Junior High School at Cherry Hill, N. J., Mary Beck (Mrs. Gilbert) Lackman is a Sunday School teacher, Rainbow Girls' adviser and "chauffeur" to a very active 16-year-old daughter, a National Honor Society junior in Haddon Twp. High School. In addition to daughter, the Lackmans have a boxer dog "who thinks she is a person and a lap dog." Gilbert works for DuPont's in Philadelphia. Is an active Mason and Shriner. The Lackman address is: 403 Windsor Ave., Westmont, N. J. 08108.

Only now did editors note an error on the Van Gorders in last Mansfieldian's Honor Roll. Had Lewis George listed under 1944. Come June 8, Margaret Muth and Robert E. Shilling will celebrate a silver wedding anniversary. Likely to be around to help them will be Esther, an adopted daughter now married, who's made them grandparents; Stanton, a graduate of Industrial Management Institute now working in Reading, Pa.; Joewita, a junior at Anderson College (Ind.) majoring in physical education, and Elvin, a high school senior who's planning to study engineering at Pitt. Margaret's husband, Robert, is a local carpenter contractor. Margaret's in her 15th year of teaching home economics (Hamburg Area H. S.). They live on a farm in the small Pennsylvania community of Meckville, but the Mansfield area is likely to see more of them in the future. They have 100 acres of mountain land near Crooked Creek, love camping and are planning to spend more time in Tioga County. Their address: Fredericksburg, Pa. R. D. 1, zip 17026 . . . Perhaps unusual for a woman, so an editorial salute to Glenna Miller (Mrs. Gerald) Correll who happens to be chief of the Labor-Management Relations Branch of the Civilian Personnel Office at Indiantown Gap Military Reservation at Annville, Pa. Her work takes her to Army Reserve centers in Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and the District of Columbia where she assists both labor unions and management in formal negotiations and informal contracts. Husband Gerald is with Pennsylvania Power and Light. Son Philip (Ursinus '70) is with the Pottsville, Pa. School District. Address is R. D. 2, Box 249, Pine Grove, Pa. 17963 . . . Fine gesture on the part of Marjorie Cole (Mrs. Kenneth B.) Lee in the names of all three Lee graduates: Kenneth B. '48, and Scott E. '69. Editors' thanks. Ken, incidentally, is now minority leader in the State House of Representatives. Scott's in the Army at Fort Knox, Ky. but is planning to return to Mansfield in the fall to get his teaching credits. Margie has what seems to be an excellent idea. She would have Sullivan County alumni meet with groups in Lycoming and/or Bradford. It just could be one way to get things off the ground in part of the Northern Tier. Marjorie's address is simply Eagles Mere, Pa. 17731.

M.S.C. Launches Education Plan In Three Areas

Mansfield, Jan. 16—Effective Feb. 1-2 Mansfield State College will launch its continuing education program at three locations in the Northern Tier. Registration will be at the Mansfield campus Feb. 1, and at the Coudersport Senior High School and Athens Senior High School, Feb. 2. Hours are from 7-9 p. m.

Class sessions will begin at 7 p. m. Feb. 4. Future class sessions will be determined at this first meeting.

All three centers will offer undergraduate and graduate courses—the number depending on the demand. All courses will carry three semester hours of college credit. Tuition for Pennsylvania residents is $26 a credit hour. For out-of-state students, $43 a credit hour.

Registration for Pennsylvania residents will be at the Mansfield State College campus. He will be in the MSC President's office.

Grads Are No Different Says Mansfield Speaker

Mansfield State College's January graduates were told recently they are no different than any other generation, but that the world they will enter with its new set of problems is different.

"You have no new and special inborn abilities," Dr. W. Deming Lewis, president of Lehigh University and chairman of the Pennsylvania State Board of Education told the 93 graduating seniors and the 19 candidates for master's degrees. "You are the same species as your parents and grandparents and, for that matter, as the ancient Greeks."

"But the worlds of one or five or twenty-five centuries ago were much easier to chart and to describe. The maps were much easier to draw. The hidden treasures were easier to locate and the enemies to be fought and vanquished were easier to recognize. The differences between right and wrong were much clearer..."

The mid-year exercises were held this morning in Straughn Auditorium. Degrees were conferred by Dr. W. Deming Lewis, president of Lehigh University.

Area Bands to Play at Mansfield Homecoming

Mansfield, Oct. 10—A festive parade, an alumni luncheon, football game, a contemporary concert, a dance, and the fusion of flaming foliage in the making for the Mansfield State College's homecoming.

The football game (kickoff, 1:30 p. m.) will find MSC pitted against an East Stroudsburg State College eleven out to avenge a Mansfield victory that spoiled the ESSC Homecoming at Stroudsburg last year.

Following the game, a luncheon at the Alumni Lunch room will be the principal event of the day's festivities.

Students from New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut, and 30 Pennsylvania counties will participate in the exercises.

Masters degrees will be awarded to 19 graduates, and 94 undergraduates will receive B.A. degrees.

Music for the Homecoming Dance will be furnished by MSC's own dance band, The Squires.

Band which, having won top prize last year, will be this year's lead honor band in the national award of merit for participating bands.

The national award of merit for participating bands will be presented to Mansfield State College by Mrs. A. Carl Baynes and the college was made secretary of the federation.

Participation in Nation Music Week 1970. The federation number of participating bands will be more than 20,000.

M.S.C. Readies For Homecoming Teachers Earn Masters Degrees

Mansfield, Oct. 10—A festive parade, an alumni luncheon, football game, a contemporary concert, a dance, and the fusion of flaming foliage in the making for the Mansfield State College's homecoming.

The mid-year graduating class at Mansfield State College will represent 30 Pennsylvania counties and three states other than Pennsylvania, it was disclosed today. Commencement exercises will be held in the Straughn Auditorium on January 29. Laureate degrees will be conferred by Dr. Lawrence H. Strawn, president.

Two teachers who will receive a Master of Arts degree are Mrs. Barbara H. Strawn, of Elkland, and Mrs. H. Strawn, of Elkland, who will receive a Master of Arts degree.

More than 100 students will receive a Bachelor of Arts degree at the mid-year graduation exercises in Straughn Auditorium.

Students from New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut, and 30 Pennsylvania counties will participate in the exercises.

Masters degrees will be awarded to 19 graduates, and 94 undergraduates will receive B.A. degrees.

Music for the Homecoming Dance will be furnished by MSC's own dance band, The Squires.

Mackinley Kantor To Speak at Mansfield S.C.

MANSFIELD—Mackinley Kantor, American author, journalist, will be the speaker at the first College Assembly of the second semester at Mansfield State College on February 16.

A Milady's Choice from Mansfield is Miss Ginger Ogden, 18, of Covington, a secretary to J. Horace Strunk, public relations director at Mansfield State College. . . . And a sparkler from Louise Pier Bement who's teaching at Lansing Elementary (N. Y.) and whose husband, Bill, is with the Physics Department at Cornell. The Bements have three daughters, 9, 11, and 13. Louise reports they "visited Curt Maxon, '54, superintendent of schools (or supervising principal) at South Seneca, Lodi, N. Y. Vocational and Technical Teachers Association. Paul's been teaching at the Essex County Vocational and Technical High School in Newark for the past 15 years. For the past 12 years, he's been assistant basketball coach (winning 70 percent of all games during that period.) He is also school Prom chairman and manager of the Student Store. Over the years he has served as Student Council sponsor, class adviser, assembly chairman and as senior representative of the school to the Teachers Association. Had better not let his wife (a native of Rome, Italy) hear him say: "The four happiest years of my life were spent on the Mansfield campus." The new Office of Alumni Affairs is making progress. It's just that it's a little slow sometimes. Editors did get around to correcting Mary K. Bonawitz (Mrs. Richard) Hanson's address but, though Mary's been married for 13 years, never did get around to switching from her maiden name. It seems that, at long last, that too is squared away. She has editors' thanks. She "devoured" the new Mansfieldian. "Old picture of North Hall was great. I pointed out my fifth floor windows to my girls—"You lived way up there, Mommy?" The Midwest is home now; more specifically, it's 218 Manor Drive, Riverdale, Bettendorf, Iowa 52722 . . . Patricia Davis is way out in California where she's chairman of the English Department at Vina F. Danks Junior High School in Ontario and where she's "trying to raise (rear?) a 12-year-old niece, since April 1970. Rewarding, but—WOW!!" Patricia's address seems to be only Ontario, Calif. 91761.

George R. Beyer reports to editors he was home over a weekend and left his contribution in support of the new Mansfieldian with his father, retired MSC faculty member, Leonard K. Beyer, to deliver personally. Dad had not far to go. Neighbors, up Wakefield Terrace way. George is in Harrisburg, Pa. Lives at 317 N. Front St., zip 17101 . . . From apparently his mother comes word that Robert Leslie has made his home in California—as a dentist. After Mansfield Bob taught school for a while but then returned to professional school for his studies in dentistry. He recently completed his four years. His address is: 12310 Montana Ave., Los Angeles, Calif. 90049 . . . From Robert R. and Barbara Bush Petroski, both '58, a fine gesture—especially since the pay check was three weeks away. Bob and Barbara live at 206 East High St., Somerville, N. J. . . . Ellen Judson Foust owns and operates —along with her husband, that is— a 400-acre dairy farm in Granville Summit, Bradford County (Pa.). Has still found time to have four daughters and a son, to do substitute teaching in the Troy and Canton Area schools. Address is above, plus zip 16926 . . . Memo from editor's secretary: "We had no cards in our files, but as of yesterday we do." The memo referred to cards on Thomas J. and Catherine E. Parke Hannon, '59, who have been properly restored to the active rolls. Like a renascence, eh? Editors are at a loss to know what happened to their cards in the first place. The reborn Hannonns live at 129-A West Water St., Slippery Rock, Pa. 16057 . . . Clarence Oakley, a National Science Foundation Fellow, has been named chairman of the Social Studies Department of Tunkhannock (Pa.) Area Schools. Also, he's president of the Tunkhannock Area Education Association and teaches social psychology in the Continuing Education Department of The Pennsylvania State University. His address is 38 Redfield St., Tunkhannock, Pa. 18657.

Now there's a home economist who got into the chocolate. JoAnn Hoffman Cooper is home economist for the Hershey Foods Corporation, Hershey, Pa. . . . Wayne Teed has his work cut out for him: has over 400 acres of timber and farm land to attend, a herd of beef cattle to look after, flying time to make up; by now should have commercial ratings. His address: Morris, Pa. 16938 . . . Editors assure Ella DiIenno (Mrs. Richard) Sunderlin that John and Beverly Gisford Root, 1506 Hickory Lane, Pine City, N. Y. will be on the mailing list. Ella reports that Dick is teaching social studies at Curtin Junior High School, Williamsport, and is serving his second term as president of the Williamsport Education Association. She is busy being a mother to four "very energetic" boys ranging in age from 8 to 3½. Ella must be of the Class of '61. Wants to know what plans are being made for a 10th reunion. Her address is: 333 E. Mountain Ave., South Williamsport, Pa. 17701 . . . Philadelphia alert! This just has to be in quotes: "I have very fond memories of my years at Mansfield and the people I knew there. I was fortunate to have some of the finest teachers I've known anywhere. S. Manfred Lloyd was one of them. I really enjoyed his classes. Should he be anywhere near-by, please say 'hello' for me. I am proud to be an alumna of Mansfield State College." The quotes are those of Beverly Eber who, for the past two years, has been teaching for the Department of Defense Overseas Schools in Japan (a very interesting experience). Beverly had previously won her master of arts in mathematics education at Ohio State. She lives at 1108 Pierce St., Scranton, Pa. 18508, and she certainly has editors' thanks . . . Well, Bill Bowman is married, has two daughters, teaches science in the Vestal (N. Y.) school system and, what's more, has a new address: 102 Bernetta St., Endicott, N. Y. 13760 . . . Sad. Marylyn F. Ludi reports she has had no news from "my college—perhaps because I'm no longer in the United States." Editors caught her up and assured her that France will be seeing the Mansfieldian. She's living at (shades of World War II) 63-65 Avenue Parmentier, Paris XIe, France . . . And a later missive from Marylyn in Paris: has two girls, Claudine, 8, and Nadine, 6; husband is industrial engineer; travel a lot; hope to spend summer in U. S.; would love to see anyone who visits Paris; live in the city and it's exciting; atmosphere, markets, old men cleaning the streets with brooms, good foods, long loaves of fresh baked bread etc." 'Tis all the nostalgia editors can take.

Looks down on 400 acres.

Sam DeSalvo
Chairman, coach, father.

(Mrs. George) Graban (III) is living out a full life in Rochester, N. Y. where she's "a full-time homemaker" but is still pursuing innumerable projects including decorating, sewing, knitting, ceramics and hunting for "old" picture frames. Also plays the piano a lot more since her first child is in school. Audrey lives at 143 Havenshire Road in Rochester. Zip 14625 . . . There are new names and addresses for Marion and Lois ('63) Epler. Marion's card in the alumni file now reads Mrs. C. Thomas Little, 2700 Lincoln Drive, R. D. 2, Montoursville, Pa. 17754 and Lois is now Mrs. William Tilford, R. D. 1 Northumberland, Pa. 17857. Both have editors' heartiest wishes . . . Also coming through with an address change is Bernard Hahnke who's now at 18 Lucy Court, Blue Point, N. Y. 11715.

Samuel R. DeSalvo is now chairman of the Department of Mathematics at Canandaigua (N. Y.) High School. Sam's been teaching at Canandaigua since 1965. He taught math and social studies prior to that at Bradford, N. Y. Also at Canandaigua he's coaching the varsity baseball team. Sam's done graduate work at the University of Maryland, Northern Michigan University (N. S. F.), and at the SUC, Geneseo, N. Y. He and wife Judy are the proud parents of a daughter who just recently celebrated her second birthday. The DeSalvos live at 29 Scotland Road, Canandaigua, N. Y. 14424 . . . A USAF news release has it that Bob Pierce was recently graduated from the Air University's Squadron Officer School at Maxwell AFB, Ala. The release goes on: "Captain Pierce was specially selected for the professional officer course in recognition of his potential as a leader in the aerospace force. The captain is being reassigned to Keesler AFB, Miss. as an instructor of communication-electronics." Wife is the former Jean Tanner of South Montrose, Pa. Bob is the son of

Mrs. Gladys M. Miller of Woodbury, N. J. . . . Although Janet Willson Frisk "retired" from teaching with the advent of Tim, 3½, and Colleen, 1½, she manages to keep busy giving piano lessons, being the church organist, and directing three choirs. Janet's of a family staunchly Mansfieldian. She married Allan Frisk, MSC '64; her sister is Jean Willson Bosworth, MSC '45, and her mother is Eleanor Burke Willson who, after her children were grown in 1950, began commuting summers from Sayre to Mansfield and eight years later received her degree in elementary education. Allan's now an American History regents teacher in the Waverly schools and is working for his master's in guidance counseling. Jean now lives and teaches in Harrisburg, Pa. Mother Eleanor now teaches 4th grade and is an MSC cooperating teacher in the Waverly schools. Janet lives at 114 Vista Drive, Sayre, Pa. 18840 . . . Harlan Press completed his master's in education at Elmira College this past summer. Since 1963, Harlan's been 6th grade teacher and building coordinator at the Mosherville Elementary School. He's married to the former Jacqueline Cunningham, of Troy (Pa.), who six years ago presented him Laura and five years ago, Michael. The Press' live at R. D. 2, Millerton, Pa. 16936 . . . Mary E. Grube Douglas is a guest lecturer at the regional campus of Purdue University. She teaches Essentials of Nutrition in a "rudimentary department of food and nutrition and is in an advisory capacity in developing an autonomous program." Says she would be "remiss if (she) did not acknowledge complete satisfaction with the academic, cultural, and social programs" her Alma Mater provided her while in undergraduate school. Mary's husband is technical librarian at the Fort Wayne Bible College. They live at 3509 Indiana Ave., Fort Wayne, Indiana 46805 . . . Editors trust that Fred Seltzer, 561 West Penn St., Carlisle, Pa. 17013, has been able to keep Alumni Day (May 15) "clear of all obstructions."

Harlan Press
3 reasons for pressing on.

Gayle Calhoun Zawrotny
Took the lead, in good spirit.

For an item on Lois Epler (Mrs. William) Tilford, see '61 above . . . Gayle Calhoun Zawrotny, who lives on Lake View Drive, Mahopac, N. Y. 10541, was disappointed not to have seen more news of '63 graduates in the last Mansfieldian, so she decided to contribute a few items, "since everyone must be waiting for the other person." Indeed, the right spirit. Although she is "temporarily retired" from teaching to raise a 10-month-old son and a daughter who starts kindergarten in the fall, she will be getting "back to school" soon and will be attending Western Connecticut State College. Editors' thanks to Gayle for her gestures in support of the new Mansfieldian and also for the following new addresses on '63ers ("Perhaps they'll contribute to the Mansfieldian when they hear the need"): Carol Bath Yuhasz, 706 Wells Ave., Athens, Pa. 18810; Mary Herrick Hutchins, R. D. 3, Binghamton, N. Y.; Rosanne Wood Calhoun, South Mt. Apts., Apt. 102, 2840 Fernor St., Allentown, Pa.

Mary Grube Douglas and Douglas
Mary was not remiss.

18103, and Kathleen Martin Starr, 20200 Sheffield Rd., Detroit, Mich. 48221 . . . Elaine Plieskatt Shapiro has been awarded the master of education in English by Indiana University of Pennsylvania. Her research project was on the subject, "The Reader and Shirley Jackson's We Have Always Lived in the Castle." Elaine is presently employed by the Kenosha Technical Institute, Kenosha, Wis. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Plieskatt, reside at 90 Academy St., Mansfield, Pa. 16933.

Tom Walker's schedule may be full these days, but it can't be too uninteresting. In addition to serving as vice president of Lauver and Co. Inc., "specialists in mutual funds," he has established his own firm which carries the corporate name, Personal Achievement Unlimited. "This business," Tom explains, "is primarily concerned with helping people to develop more of their potential. We are able to do this through the effective use of the programs of Success Motivation Institute, Inc." Tom's Lauver business address is 2040 East Market St., York, Pa. 17402 . . . A new address on John G. Fetchkan. It's 5801 Annette Ave., Library, Pa. 15129. John's guidance counselor at the Peters Township Middle School in McMurray, Pa., where he is also the head football coach who sports 34 graduate credits in guidance . . . And a new address too for Beverly Cloud (Mrs. Roger) Kern. It's Mud Road, R. D. 2, Newtown, Pa. 18940. Beverly's presently completing work on master's at Trenton State College in elementary education and is doing some substitute teaching. Hubby Roger, MSC '63, who has his master's in mathematics from Trenton State College, teaches math in Neshaminy Junior High School at Langhorne, Pa. The Kerns have one son, David, 2 . . . Sherman West, Tioga, Pa., was selected to participate in the Strategic Air Command's elite combat competition at McCoy AFB recently. Fifty-five SAC aircraft and crews, along with three Royal Air Force (Great Britain) teams, participated. Capt. West is a navigator on the B-52 Stratofortress bomber crew from the 19th Bomb Wing at Robins AFB, Georgia. Sherm has served in Viet Nam and holds two awards of the Air Medal . . . Bill Belcher is a quality control engineer for General Electric at Binghamton, N. Y. Carole Drake Belcher, MSC '65, has "retired" from teaching to be at home with Jon, 3, and Katryna, nearly a year. The Belchers live at 4604 Radcliffe Blvd., Binghamton, N. Y. 13903 . . . No news on Janet Boekenkamp, except that she's living at 321 E. South Ave., Glenolden, Pa. 19036. Janet does have editors' thanks . . . M. Reese (as it was in the files) is now Margaret Reese (Mrs. Donald) Eichenhofer and added too may be an M.S. (in music education) from Ithaca College. Husband Donald, after service in Viet Nam, is now a graduate student in library science at Syracuse University and a librarian in the Syracuse Public Library. Editors ask Margaret: What about Elspeth Foley? The Eichenhofer address seems to be simply: 180 Polk 8, Syracuse, N. Y. 13224 . . . After stints as extension home economist and home economics teacher that took her a circuitous route from Williamsport to Danbury, Ct. to New Milford, Ct. and then back to Williamsport, Diane Hess (Mrs. Richard) Ault is happy to be able to raise her near-2-year-old daughter in Pennsylvania. Last year she and Richard bought a home in Williamsport "where we really wanted to be." The new home is at 318 Winter St., zip 17701 . . . For news on Allan Frisk, see '62 above.

For news on Carole Drake Belcher, see '64 above . . . Editors' thanks to Verna Reese (Mrs. Paul S. '66) Griffiths who are living in the Vestal, N. Y. area where Paul's a programmer with IBM. Verna was teaching but "retired" when daughter Robyn Lynn came along about 15 months ago. They live at 864 Ideal Terrace, Vestal, N. Y. 13850 . . . Editors' thanks to Margaret Vite (Mrs. James) Mumaw whose correct address is 26 Penn Valley Dr., Yardley, Pa. 19067. Editors have made the proper changes on file cards . . . One letter comes from Leona S. Thompson. The next one, several months later, from Leona S. T. Provenski. She has editors' best wishes for happiness. With the name change comes an address change. It's now 20B West Woodbound Drive, Wilmington, Del. 19803. Leona is—or was—assistant manager of food service, University of Delaware . . . Editors must report there are times when getting news and pictures for the Roundup gets a little involved and takes time and effort all around. Such was the case away back last fall when editors learned that Margie Russell Newton—'66—and friends of '65, along with their husbands got together for a weekend bash, or better maybe, just a weekend. The correspondence flowed back and forth, but at long last came through the news and the picture, thanks a million to Margie. Says Margie: "This picture was taken Aug. 23, 1970 at the home of Ginny and Giles Stanton in Federalsburg, Md. when the four of us joined for a weekend 'get-together.'" Participants in the bash—"get-together"—were Linda Harbaugh (now Shriver), Box 72, Fairfield, Pa. 17320, who teaches first grade in Westminster, Md., and was married to Ernest Shriver of Emmitsburg, Md., April 17 of this year; Margie herself, whose address is R. D. 2, New Albany, Pa. 18833, and who teaches first grade in the Wyalusing (Pa.) Elementary School; Nancy Kime Wenschhoff, R. D. 2, Fairfield, Pa. 17320, and Virginia Keller Stanton (not to forget 10-month-old Tana), R. D. 1, Federalsburg, Md. 21632, who did teach junior high school English at Seaford, Del., but is now home being a housewife and mother . . . Thanks to Dr. Jonathan Z. Friedman, former administrative assistant to President Park, for the fine Husted clipping. Editors are trying to work it into the newsclipping montages . . . Ruth Hennip was married last fall to Robert Chapman of Boston. It was reported that the couple would reside at 27 Hillcrest Circle, Watertown, Mass. 01083.

The University of Colorado conferred the master of education degree on Shea Darlene Sparber Williams at its 140th Commencement last August . . . Judith Finkbiner (Mrs. Donald F.) Pentz who was a home economist in Gettysburg, Pa. while her husband was assistant agriculture extension agent in Cumberland County, has moved to Wisconsin. Thanks to her mother, Mrs. Elva G. Finkbiner, for the information and the gesture, but editors do not have Judith's Wisconsin address . . . Cassandra Allen (Mrs. Philip) Blow's husband, at this writing, is serving with the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers at Long Binh, South Viet Nam. So, Cassandra has settled in Coudersport for the year and teaches at Port Allegany. They have a two-year-old son, Trevor Allen, who, being born on the banks of the Mississippi, "perhaps inherited a feel for jazz and can come to MSC to study music." Philip, when he returns to the States, will probably take up his job with the Department of Transportation "where interstates have led us to Utah, Delaware and all parts in between." Cassandra's address right now is 703 South Main St., Coudersport, Pa. 16915 . . . This is a reunion class. And Jane Carol Thomas Spitzer is going all out for reunion. If any '66ers want a bash, hmm, a ball, and haven't had any correspondence from or with Jane, this might be the time to communicate. Her address: Flemington Arms, Bldg. 250, Apt. C-2, Flemington, N. J. 08822 . . . For more news on Margie Russell Newton, see '65 above . . . Larry Kennedy is teaching remedial reading in Horseheads, N. Y. and finishing his master's at Elmira College. Wife Carol received her master's from MSC in 1968 and taught music in Elmira until daughter Heather Kathleen was born last August. The Kennedys live at 215 Main St., Wellsburg, N. Y. 14894 . . . Aboard the hospital ship, S. S. Hope, are nine Pennsylvania medical volunteers among whom is Eleanor S. Peck, dietitian-nutritionist from Houtzdale. Eleanor also is in the midst of her work on an M.S. at Ohio State University.

Heartening and indicative responses have come from so many alumni in the past several months. Typical is that of Deanne Deleporte Lewis who writes: "If

Larry Kennedy
Heather halved the income.

I can be of any assistance in any alumni affairs, please do not fail to notify me." Editors' thanks, and heartiest wishes: Deanne has a new name and address. They are: Mrs. Ronald Lewis, 5764 Carriage Hill Drive, Erie, Pa. 16509 . . . Gloria Cooley (Mrs. Richard) Broughton taught school in the Susquenita District after graduation in the summer of 1967, but learned first-hand about children after advent of son, now a two-year-old. The Broughtons recently moved—and enjoy—their new home at Morris, Pa., where their address is R. D. 1, plus zip 16938 . . . Diana Davey (Mrs. Donald J.) Garrison will just about now (May) receive her master's in education from MSC when Don and Jif and Jenny (and even the Irish setter, Bandit) will be on hand for well wishes. After three years of teaching music (elementary vocal) in Elmira (N. Y.) schools, Diana is now teaching first grade in Hopkins Street School in Elmira. Their address is: 1134 Broadway, Elmira, N. Y. 14904 . . . Omitting the quips on certain faculty members, Jim Albertson reports he's been Writes Judy Gesey (Mrs. Howard Lord) Guild: "Since February, 1969, have lived outside of Chicago because I am a stewardess for United Air Lines, flying out of O'Hare International Airport. I never informed you of my new address, and would like to do so now, so that I may receive future issues (hopefully all of them) of the new Mansfieldian." As indicated above, Judy has both a change of name and address, as well as editors' heartiest wishes for happiness. Howard is a December graduate of the University of Illinois in business administration. They live in Apt. 348, 2230 South Goebbert Road, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60005 . . . Barbara Franklin was graduated from the Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health with a master's degree in public health last June. Editors' thanks for her support of the new Mansfieldian and for new address: 405 Reed Hall, 1620 McEldery St., Baltimore, Md. 21205 . . . Special message to Lt. Bernadine Rettger: there are only two issues of the new Mansfieldian prior to the one she received. Copies of those editors will forward—with their special thanks. Bernadine's full address is: Lt. Bernadine R. Rettger, BOQ Box 1011, L. G. Hanscom Fld., Bedford, Mass. 01730 . . . Carol Boyer (Mrs. Leslie) Doeblner says that something happened to them since they were graduated in '68. They were married. But more than that Les served in the Army and "will further his education

John T. Sheridan is living in Apt. 409, Norriton East Apts., Norristown, Pa. 19401. Advised he is indeed on the mailing list for the new Mansfieldian . . . Airman Tom Kench has been graduated from the U. S. Air Force pharmacy specialist course at Sheppard AFB. Now trained to compound and dispense drugs and chemicals, he's been assigned to duty with the Tactical Air Command. He and wife Jayne (Stewart) have son Tommy, born December '69. Editors' thanks to mother, Mrs. T. Walter Kench, R. D. 2, Newtown, Pa. . . . Editors' thanks too to Lynette LaRose Wilk for her most generous gesture in support of the new Mansfieldian. second grade in the Princeton Elementary School at Camp Springs, Md. Her husband, after four years in the Air Force, is a full-time student at the University of Maryland. Their address is 6001 Cherrywood Court, Greenbelt, Md. 20770 . . . And all in one package from Deirdre "Cookie" Spelman, a fine gesture, a dandy letter and an offer to throw alumni affairs an assist in any way she can. Editors certainly wish she could get something off the ground by way of alumni activity down Scranton way. Lackawanna County is wide open for someone genuinely interested in working up a club or chapter. After working as a caseworker for the Pennsylvania Department of Health in Tioga County, Deirdre is now a graduate student at the Maryland College of Social Work, where she hopes to get her master's in '72. Her address is 8 Prescott Place, Scranton, Pa. 18510 . . . Sue Dawson and Don Stettler are married and are living at Wellington Arms Apts., No. 24K, Newark, Del. 19711. Both are teaching in the Newark schools. They have editors' thanks for everything . . . And editors' heartiest to Laurel Raissmein and Donald B. Perlman who also were married recently. Laurel is teaching in special education in Brooklyn, N. Y. Don, a Cornell graduate ('69), is a second-year medical student at Mt. Sinai School of Medicine. Their address is 330 Third Ave., New York, N. Y. 10010 . . . And a new address for Naomi Young (Mrs. Richard A.) Miller. It's Apt. B, 1209 Holland St., Crum Lynne, Pa. 19022. For more on Naomi, see '35 above . . . Jon Phillips returned stateside after a year in Viet Nam. For the past several months he's been stationed at Aberdeen Proving Grounds in Maryland. Jon made one good decision in his life. He has a fine and lovely wife. In a wedding that has the makings of a good Mansfield family, Charles Denkenberger married Cheryl Sandt, MSC '72, last fall at Montrose. Charles is teaching math at Elk, while Cheryl is majoring in chemistry. The address is 54 High Street, Montrose, Pa. 18801 . . . Marjorie Huyett was graduated from Officer Training School (OTS) at Lackland AFB, Tex. and commissioned a second lieutenant in the U. S. Air Force. Lt. Huyett, selected for OTS through competitive examination, has been assigned to Minot AFB, N. D., for training as a personnel officer . . . Don Beatty, '69, married Margaret Hixson last fall in Bel Air, Md. where they took up residence at 800 Candelight Dr., Apt. 3-D, zip 21014. That may still be the proper address for them, but Army Warrant Officer Don expected an assignment in South Viet Nam. He's with the whirlybirds.

Fared Well For A Mid-Year Class

JANUARY '71 COMMENCEMENT ADDS 94 ALUMNI TO MSC ROLLS

MSC President Lawrence Park, Lehigh President W. Deming Lewis. Speaker is also chairman of the State Board of Education.

Mansfield State College's 1971 Mid-Year Commencement exercises added 94 brand new members to the alumni rolls of the college.

Baccalaureate degrees were conferred by President Lawrence Park on that many graduating seniors during the exercises last January in Straughn Auditorium. Master's degrees were awarded 19 graduate candidates, many of whom were already alumni.

The mid-year class represented 30 Pennsylvania counties and three states other than Pennsylvania.

Commencement speaker was Dr. W. Deming Lewis, president of Lehigh University and chairman of the State Board of Education.

Outside states represented by graduates included New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut. The three top Pennsylvania counties in size of representation were Tioga (23), Lycoming (10), and Luzerne (6).

Women graduates outnumbered men 60-34.

Top academic major among the graduates was elementary education (43), which included 15 graduates who concentrated in social science. Next highest major representation was secondary education (23); then followed home economics (11), liberal arts (8), music (4), art (4) and library science (1). The bachelor of science degree was conferred on all graduates except those in the liberal arts curriculum who received the bachelor of arts degree.

Most of the graduate students who received their master's degrees at the January exercises are presently holding teaching positions in Pennsylvania (12), in New York (5) and New Jersey (1).

Following is a listing of the graduate students with residence, employer, and degree indicated:

According to a tentative report of the Placement Office, 76% of the Mansfield State College January graduating class are known to be employed, married or attending graduate school.

Sixty-three graduating seniors embarked upon new teaching careers. Most of this group (8%) accepted teaching positions in Pennsylvania while the out-of-state group remained well below past acceptances. The 1970 annual report showed that approximately 21% of the teacher education graduates accepted positions out-of-state. Again the new Pennsylvania teacher mandated salary schedule may be responsible for this halting of the out-of-state employment trend.

The majority of the January graduating class were elementary majors and 36 of a class of 43 are gainfully employed or in graduate school.

The secondary social science graduates are experiencing difficulty gaining first entry positions, as are the liberal arts graduates in the social science area.

This mid-term employment period pointed up shortages of elementary vocal teachers, secondary math teachers, and specialists in elementary education. This trend is consistent with recent state and national surveys. According to recent Labor Department projections, the supply of college-educated personnel, including teachers, is expected to equal demand, a forecast that should make the wise college graduate sharpen his job search skills.

MANSFIELD —Mansfield State College's basketball team was awarded a forfeit night but found no opponent when the team from Baltimore moved into the finals of the NAIA Dist. 19 semifinal game. In the second game of the scheduled doubleheader, St. Mary's edged Lincoln University, 68-67, and St. Mary's will meet tonight at 8 o'clock at the Bloomsburg State College gym for the Dist. 19 title and a berth in the NAIA National Tournament which gets under way next Tuesday at Kansas City.

Mansfield waited, and remained ready to play until the last moment. The Mounties were slated to play Coppin State of Maryland but Coppin copped out. Meanwhile, the St. Mary's-Lincoln game, originally slated at Mansfield, was shifted to Philadelphia and St. Mary's took that game, 68-67.

So, Mansfield gains a 2-0 forfeit and meets St. Mary's for the title.

The game opener for both teams was a tough Pennsylvania Eastern Division all.

Mansfield St., which comes an 18-7 record this season, drew tough Grambling for its first round opponent in the 34th National Association Intercollegiate basketball tournament. Mansfield State, which comes an 18-7 record this season, drew tough Grambling for its first round opponent in the 34th National Association Intercollegiate basketball tournament. SPRING SPORTS:

At This Writing The Prospects Are Bright

By KLAS ANDERSON '70

The action-packed spring sports program at Mansfield this year will keep everyone on edge as the Mounties turn out three of its toughest teams ever and one that shows more promise than ever before.

The baseball, golf and tennis teams will pack the power and experience of many of last year's lettermen. The track team, although weak compared to its competition, will sport several returning lettermen that placed in State's last year.

While the 1970 Mountie baseball team had the finest record (26-6) ever at Mansfield, including the P. S. C. A. C. championship, N. A. I. A. District 19 crown and runner-up spot in the Area 8 (Eastern Regional) Tournament, the 1971 Mounties will be in for somewhat of a rebuilding job, says Head Coach John Heaps. The rebuilding is prompted by the loss of first baseman Dave Kline, fireball pitcher Dave Hagadorn, centerfielder Brent Watson and versatile Stew Casterline who was a .350 batter, great defensive outfielder, pitcher and pro-quality back-up catcher.

Despite these costly losses, the '71 team will have a fine nucleus of returning lettermen from last year's championship team. Some strong pitching is expected from Bob Diliberto, who winged his way to a fantastic 9-0 season in '70. He will be backed up by workhorse catchers Tom Shaughessy and Gary Waksmundski. Smooth fielding will be the key to Mountie success with returning third baseman Tom Purnell (.398), fine fielding shortstop Tom Cassell (.303), second baseman Joe DeSanto (.378) and with Jeff Baum and Phil Sweet in the outfield. Jerry Wahl will return to maintain tough front line pitching with a 4-0 record and will be backed up by relief pitcher Larry Twyford. Lebro Manichetti, a consistent hitter (.360 in '69 and .365 in '70) and the most prolific R. B. I. man on the club, will reinforce the team at bat.

The golf team will encounter stiff competition from other colleges and universities this spring but Coaches Richard Finley and Les Evans feel that the team can come through in winning fashion.

Last year's golfers attained an unbeaten 5-0 record in the fall and 8-4 record in the spring. The strength of this spring's team will be its returning lettermen, especially in the case of last year's State Champion Doug Simmonds and Dennis Pascarella who were in the E. C. A. C. "Top Ten Golfers" last year. Power driver Bob Overberger will handle the long drives for the team while Jack Carrig will be the best short-game golfer with his skillful chipping and putting. Gary Sutton returns as the most improved golfer on the team and Dennis Krenitsky will keep the team alive with his keen competitive spirit.

Head Tennis Coach Robert Heverly predicts a winning season again this year for five good reasons —five of last year's six championship lettermen are returning. The 1970 team sported an unbeaten 10-0 season record and placed second in State Competition. Having won the No. 5 Championship in State's last year, Bob Fegen will return to his No. 5 spot this spring. Also returning will be Phil Levkanich, Dave Smith, Norm Moser, and Gary Boyer.

Being short on new talent, weak in field events and facing tough competition, the spring track season looks a little dim, says Head Coach Bob Maxon. Last year's track team had a season record of 3-6, but in state competition half-miler Steve Jeroleman placed second and dashman Dave Moody won seventh place. These two lettermen will be returning as well as quarter-miler Steve Ciafarno, 440-relay runner and hurdler Larry Raymond, miler Bob Walls, 440-dashman Jim Healy, distanceman Tom Abell, miler Rick Weakland, broad, high and triple jumper Bill Boyce and polevaulter Jim Bevans.

MANSFIELD STATE SELECTED FOR MUSIC CURRICULUM STUDY

Mansfield State College has been selected as one of eight prominent music schools in the United States to conduct a summer workshop this year in connection with the Manhattanville Music Curriculum Program.

For the past five years this program, operating as a U. S. Office of Education project, has carried on extensive curriculum experimentation and development for students from two years of age through high school years. Through operations in field centers located throughout the country, the findings of the project have already had an extensive impact on music education.

MMCP Summer Workshops are designed to involve musician-educators in the learning processes and structures developed during the project.

The faculty team for the workshop consists of two experienced MMCP educators: Dr. Harald C. Normann, professor of music and chairman, Department of Music, Wagner College, Staten Island, N. Y., and Robert Revicki, related arts adviser, Bureau of General and Academic Education, Harrisburg, Pa.

The workshop will last for two weeks, starting on June 28 and ending July 9.

Dr. John H. Baynes, chairman of the Mansfield State College Music Department, is in charge of local arrangements. The workshop will carry four graduate credits and is open to all music educators.

"Wearers of the Ring" have given "over-and-above" support to the new Mansfieldian and thereby have contributed to a renewal of college-alumni rapport. A resurgence of alumni interest means in the ultimate greater opportunities for the college to afford cultural and fraternal enrichment as well as for rewarding alumni experience and activity. Toward these ends the Mansfieldian is committed. "Wearers of the Ring" have commendably contributed toward the attainment of these goals.

Honor Roll III—as did Honor Rolls I & II—cites those who responded to the request for support of the Mansfieldian. It is thus a continuation of Honor Rolls I & II and, as did Honor Rolls I & II, it expresses the deep gratitude of all who feel strongly about a renaissance of alumni interests and loyalties. It is now complete up to and including August 24, 1971. Any contributions received after that date will be recorded in the next issue of the Mansfieldian. Any instance of a name that should be, but is not recorded here should be reported immediately to the Mansfieldian. Any corrections, as well, will be appreciated.

THREE ALUMNI CLUBS - TWO OF THEM NEWLY CHARTERED -MAKE THE NEWS

It's The 23rd Annual Meeting For Philadelphia's; Tioga County Is Activated; Susquehanna County's Organizational Meeting Is Termed 'Outstanding'

Prominent at the Philadelphia Club meeting were these officers and guests (from l. to r.): H. Austin Snyder, '63, new president of the club; Larry Biddle, '59, retiring president; Mrs. Lawrence Park; MSC President Park; Elsie Bach Burk, '15, secretary-treasurer, holding plaque presented her by the club for her many years of service, and Ruth Chamberlain Crawford, '37, a club vice president.

Three Mansfield State College alumni clubs—two of them newly-chartered—made the news so far this year.

At King of Prussia, the Mansfield State College Alumni Club of the Greater Philadelphia Area held its 23rd annual Spring Meeting, retaining claim to the title "oldest continuously active alumni club of the college."

Elsie Burk '15, the club's secretary-treasurer, describes the 1971 dinner meeting as "not large (35 present) but I think very cozy," and adds: "We were very happy to have Mansfield's President and Mrs. Lawrence Park as our special guests."

Mrs. Burk emphasizes also: "We have persevered for 23 years now and hope to continue for many years to come. We have two very eager young men in Austin Snyder '63, our new president, and Larry Biddle '59, our retiring president."

Attending the meeting were Mr. and Mrs. J. Brit Davis, Dr. and Mrs. Parker T. Allis, Dr. and Mrs. T. Cooley, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Woodworth, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Snyder, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Millard, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Biddle, Mr. and Mrs. John Edgerton, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Scanella, Elizabeth Bates Smith and husband, Ruth Pierce and husband, Ruth Chamberlain Crawford and husband, Mary Wier and husband, Elsie Burk, and Kenneth Whitney and guest.

In Mansfield the newly-chartered Alumni Club of Tioga County got off the ground "just under the wire," only hours away from Alumni Day, 1971.

(Granted on Alumni Day, 1970, the charter stipulated an organizational meeting before Alumni Day, 1971).

Thanks to the initiative of County Chairman Bob Kemp '49, Wellsboro, 29 charter members activated and organized the new club as described in the accompanying news accounts:

Tioga County MSC Alumni Club Formed

Kenneth M. Brace, Mansfield, and MSC Class of '57, was elected the first president of the new Mansfield State College Alumni Club of Tioga County during the Alumni Day festivities at the college this past weekend.

Organization of the new club was effected with the adoption of a constitution and by-laws and the election of these other officers:

The nominating committee goes to work. Shown here are Fred Jupenlaz, '31, chairman (left); Grace Kleasse White, '34, and Gordon Powers.

The newly-formed MSC Alumni Club of Susquehanna County also came through with distinction to stage one of the outstanding organizational meetings in recent years.

Comprehensive coverage of the dinner meeting at the Montrose Inn was provided by both the Susquehanna Press and the Montrose Independent. The accounts follow:

Mansfield College Alumni Branch Formed in County

Mansfield Coll. Alumni Branch Formed in Co.

A Susquehanna County branch of the Mansfield Alumni Association was formed on Tuesday evening April 27th, at 7:00. Many former graduates of Mansfield State Teachers College met at the Montrose Inn to form a local unit of Mansfield State Alumni Association.

The meeting was opened by invocation given by Ralph Felton. Following a fine banquet, Miss Mildred Seal, chairman of the steering committee, with appropriate remarks after which all former graduates present, introduced themselves giving name, status of graduation, and other statements from the past.

The total attendance at the meeting was 65 which included and wives (or other relatives) of the graduates. A red rose was presented to all members who had graduated from Mansfield or more ago.

The oldest member present was Birchard who graduated 71 years ago. Other members present were 50 years or over were:

Mrs. Laura Benson, 1918; Esther Robinson, 1918; Albert, 1918; Mrs. Lily Stewart, 1920; Mrs. Betty Wood, 1921.

As a part of the program, piano solos were played by Miss Joan Valentine, New Milford; Mrs. Betty Hutchinson, Montrose; Mrs. Margaret Scott, Susquehanna.

Mrs. Maybelle Scott, Chairman of the Membership & Attendance Committee; Trudy Ann Robertson, Secretary; Mildred Seal, Treasurer.

The steering committee, in preparing for the meeting, had the following members: Mildred Seal, New Milford; Betty Hutchinson, Prudence Clark, Harford; Mary Smith, Susquehanna; Mary Oliver, New Milford; Carol Richardson, New Milford.

President, Dorothy Grinnell; V. President, Ralph Felton; Secretary, Barbara Shingler; Treasurer, Jane Shroeder.

After officers were elected by the group, Miss Grinnell made a few brief remarks in accepting the election.

A special vote of appreciation was given to Miss Seal, Madeline Maynard, and Betty Hutchinson for their labors in building interest in the meeting.

The chairman then introduced Horace Strunk, administrator of Student and Alumni affairs at Mansfield. He, in turn, did an excellent job in explaining the goals and aims of the alumni association.

At this point Mr. Strunk presented the official charter given by the Mansfield State Teacher's College Alumni Association which formally recognized the Susquehanna County Unit as a part of the central Unit at Mansfield.

After brief discussions the annual dues were established and it was agreed to have a minimum of two annual meetings per year.

The following special committees were appointed:

The meeting then adjourned. The Program Committee: Chaired by Vice-President Ralph Felton, Montrose; Mrs. Betty Hutchinson, New Milford; Mrs. Margaret Westcott, Susquehanna.

The Membership & Attendance Committee: Chaired by the Assistant Secy. Trudy Ann Robertson, 278-1332, Florence Dora, Montrose; Mildred Seal, New Milford.

Public Information Committee: Chaired by the Secretary Barbara Spindler, Elk Lake; Helen Albert, Susquehanna; Florence Tanner, Harford, Penna.

Student Recruitment Committee: Chaired by Rose Dobrosielski, New Milford; Mary Smith, Susquehanna; Genevieve Corwin, Montrose.

Constitution and By-Laws: Special Committee: Helen Tyler, New Milford; Carol Richardson, New Milford; Maybelle Golis, Montrose. Executive Committee: Carol Richardson, Florence Dora and Betty Garis.

Dorothy Ranson Grinnell, '23, (center) accepts charter of new club as its first president while Mildred Seal, '29, dinner meeting chairman, duly records the event and J. Horace Strunk, director of the MSC Office of Public Information and Alumni Affairs, and speaker for the occasion, offers congratulations.

Heroic job of organization was done by the steering committee of the Susquehanna Club. Members of the committee shown here (from l. to r.) are, seated: Madeline Grego Maynard, '45, who originally sparked the Susquehanna effort; Mildred Seal,

'29, committee chairman; Elizabeth Seal Hutchinson, '29, co-chairman, and standing: Carol Brotsman Richardson, '43; Mary Booth Smith, '61; Prudence Clark, '34; Mary Oliver, '35, and Rose Marie Dobrosielski, '59.

'00

Sometime ago, Ray Patterson devised intriguing and stimulating tests on the United States Constitution. Recently Ray was good enough to send copies of these tests to editors who can now recommend correspondence with Ray to all Constitution buffs wishing to further their avocation. Ray recently observed his 90th at a family gathering at the home of daughter, Jean Newgent, in Lexington, Mass. Ray's home address is 11 Bay View Ave., Plymouth, Mass. 02360.

Ray Patterson
Constitution buffs, note.

'01

Prominently around Alumni Day was Jim Bennett, apparently enjoying good health and life generally. Jim's address is 182 Whitehall Ave., Buffalo, N. Y. 14220.

'02

Percy A. Coles was his charming and ubiquitous self on the campus, Alumni Day, as can be seen in the montages of the occasion. More recently, Perc had another big day. It was the occasion for a double celebration: September 4 was his 88th birthday, but equally significant, it was the day of the opening of First Citizens National Bank's spanking new building on South Main Street in Mansfield. He's president of First Citizens.

Bob Jones, Percy Coles, Dick Howe
For Percy, it was a double-barreled occasion.

Cora Atwater who counts among her former students at MSC Jack Wilcox, Audrey Baynes, John Baynes, Mary Kohler Vollmer among scores of others, asks editors if Kathleen Strunk was or is any kin. Could be. Cora was in Mansfield for two occasions in recent months: Alumni Day and the 100th anniversary of the Methodist Church where she once directed the choir. Against somewhat disparaging press reports on North Hall, Cora defends the old landmark as "my home for over 30 years, and naturally it still looks pretty good to me." . . . Representing her class, Alumni Day, was Merle Cogswell Grant, 557 Forest Lawn Rd., Webster, N. Y. 14580.

Ray Hepner, Cora Atwater
In defense of a landmark.

'09

'11

From Vero Beach and Bessie Calkins Dustman comes the query: "Why was there not a story about Edith Miller? She lives in Mansfield and has kept track of all her classmates, and the ones from the class before and after. She knows where we all live and sends us notes about the others, where they are and what they are doing." . . . Edith Miller, 64 E. Elmira St., Mansfield, Pa. 16933; Erza B. Selleck, R. D. 3, Coudersport, Pa. 16915; Marion Pratt Lundberg, Nicholson, Pa. 18446, and Jennie Dewey Webster, 120 St. James St., Mansfield registered for their class, Alumni Day.

'12

Alumni Day would hardly be the same for many old grads if Frank Sheffel were not around to greet them. The Sheffels have spent the last 12 years wintering in Zephyrhills, Fla., but always manage to get back in time for the big day. Address is: Roaring Branch, Pa. 17765.

'13

Leo Bailey, retired from fulltime teaching (1964), is "tapering off" as a substitute teacher—"80 days in 1968, 60 days in 1969 and 25 days in 1970. Let the old cat die" he adds. During the summer of 1970 the Baileys visited the battlefields of World War I in France and last spring spent three weeks in Ireland. Leo's address is: 1906 Preble Road, Preble, N. Y. 13141 . . . Rayburn Smith, 18 Monterey Rd., Tonawanda, N. Y. represented his class, Alumni Day.

'14

Dandy letter from Robert C. Dix, husband of Eva Stone Dix to both of whom editors are indeed grateful for the gesture in support of the new Mansfieldian. Writes Robert: "I have to correct my good friend Clarence Ollendike in his excellent report on the Class of '13. I finished my junior year at Mansfield and then transferred to the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy to qualify as a pill roller. However, my love for Mansfield is summed up in my wife's letter" (last May's Mansfieldian). The Dix address is 122 State St., Nicholson, Pa. 18446.

'15

Although "presumably retired," as his wife, Mary Thomas Powell, puts it, William J. (Bill) Powell is still probably Mansfield's outstanding teachers' teacher. (Editors had the privilege of meeting Bill in Harrisburg when he threw them a valuable assist in putting together a story on the Retired Teachers Act.) To say Bill is active in retirement is to understate it, literally. He's president of the Retired Teachers Association of Pennsylvania; a member of the legislative committees of both the American Association of Retired Persons and the National Association of Retired Teachers; chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Pennsylvania State Oral School at Scranton; president (for the past 35 years) of the Columbia Building and Loan Association of Taylor, Pa., and president of the Upper Luzerne-Lower Lackawanna Sewer Authority. Also, he's been commander of the Taylor Post, American Legion; recording secretary of the National Board of Approved Basketball Officials; a member of the Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic Association's Board of Control and chairman of that board's Insurance Fund, and president of the Abington Baptist Association. During his "active" 46 years in education, he's been a teacher, principal and superintendent. He was superintendent of the Taylor Schools for 28 years. Bill's extraordinary career was capped on a recent business trip to Washington. The cut and clipping here tell the story . . . Heading the register of class members who returned to the campus on Alumni Day was Kim Marvin. He was followed by G. Sheldon (Jack) Frost, Isobel Kiefer McCain, Eba Harer Gray, Ruth Potter Stearns, Ruth Stone Thomas, Ruth Hall Converse and Mildred Grigsby.

Marguerite Lewis and Marion Diltz Young ('35) share a distinction. They were the first of MSC's alumni (same day) to become "Wearers of the Ring." Their ready and over-and-above contributions were indeed gratifying. Marguerite's address is 241 Church St., New Milford, Pa. 18834 . . . Editors' gratitude too to Eva Everett Smith, now also a proud "Wearer of the Ring." Eva's address is P. O. Box 227, Painted Post, N. Y. 14870 . . . Registering under the banner of '17, Alumni Day, was Mrs. Donald (Helen Gordon) Arnold, who's living at 915 Electric St., Scranton, Pa. 18500 . . . New address for Grace Steafather Young. It's R. D. 2, Wyalusing, Pa. 18853.

Marguerite Lewis

'18

One pre-eminent predilection of Mansfield grads is travel. Since her retirement, Ruth Williams (Mrs. George) Bichler has been to Hawaii and Europe. Last August, attended the Passion Play at Oberaumergau and then on to Switzerland where they spent three weeks. Ruth's gesture in memory of Classmate

President Nixon, Bill Powell
Literally active in retirement.

Ruth Williams Bichler

Esther Gere Robinson
Letterhead awards her new title.

Harold Seaman
Teaches former pupils' grandchildren.

Helen Weibel, who died in 1968, was a fine one indeed. The Bichlers live at 211 Cumberland St., Harrisburg, Pa. 17102 . . . Prominently present at the Montrose Inn for the great organizational meeting of the Susquehanna County Alumni Club—and apparently enjoying every moment of it—was Esther Gere Robinson whose letterhead of the Grange National Bank in New Milford indicates a change in title: from executive vice president to president. Esther lives at 221 Church St., New Milford, Pa. 18834 . . . Editors were informed on Alumni Day that Gordon Granger was not receiving his Mansfieldian. Files checked out Gordon as living at 1507 Yagle Ave., Prospect Park, Pa. 19076. If that's incorrect, editors would appreciate being informed.

'20

After three years of teaching in Roulette and Connellsville, two years to get his A.B. at F. and M., and two more years teaching at Williamsport, Harold Seaman spent the next 35 years in the lumber business, most of them in the Pittsburgh area. He returned to teaching for eight years, retiring in 1968. Now doing substitute teaching in the Williamsport secondary schools, he occasionally finds in his classes grandchildren of former pupils. He has editors' thanks for support. His address is 600 Rural Ave., Williamsport, Pa. 17701 . . . Helena Goldsmith Rose also has editors' thanks. She is living at 27 Meadow Lane, Apalachin, N. Y. 13732, and is quite concerned about getting her Mansfieldian and any news on classmates.

The 50-year class this year did itself proud Alumni Day. (See below for names and addresses of returnees.) . . . Among those back for the big day was Lura Haight (Mrs. George) Madigan who was good enough to make a few observations of her day on campus: "Talked with Merle Grant who looked so young and pretty. The Class of '20 dedicated their Carontawan to her and her husband Herbert Grant. Bumped into Myron Webster who kept me from falling—down the little step—down into the aisle you know! He looked young and fit, no gray hair or excess weight. Saw a few women who were as 'stout' as yours truly. Very little known about diet 'when you and I were young, Maggie!' Also observed the great number of women, the scarcity of men. Teaching shouldn't be exclusively for women! It's a too-much-mother, no-father situation for school children. They need both!" Lura sent editors a few old pictures, one of which is being used on these pages. It includes Nathan Hall about whom Mrs. Hall reminisced in the last Mansfieldian under '20. Lura's address is Rt. 3, Towanda, Pa. 18848 . . . Another member of the class who enjoyed her return to campus was Pearl Tuthill Weston. She describes her Alumni weekend as "perfect." Editors especially enjoyed greeting Pearl, and extend thanks for her support of the Mansfieldian. She lives at 88 Fairmount Ave., Chatham, N. J. 07928 . . . Ruth Hornsby is squared away at Kinder, La., where the zip is 70648 and where she will indeed continue to receive the Mansfieldian . . . Lola Bailey Long sends a contribution in support of the new Mansfieldian and also a few addresses, the first of which is that of her son which will be posted under '53 below. The others are those of Thelma Roof Bull—533 Beech St., East Lansing, Mich. 48823, and Marion Van Voree Ives—68 Grand Blvd., Binghamton, N. Y. Editors' thanks for everything . . . Julia Carpenter Seaman, whose name appears below, informs editors that Lela Craft Birdsall passed away in the fall of 1970 . . . Heartening turnout of 50th members made observance and reunion, from all indications, quite worthwhile. Returning to the campus for the May 15 weekend were Marie Morris, 2138 N. Washington Ave., Scranton, Pa. 18500; Stella Morris, same address as Marie's; Mary McNulty, 1156 Main St., Pittston, Pa. 18640; Julia Carpenter Seaman, Jefferson St., Lanesboro, Pa. 18827; Lily Park Stuart, Grow Ave., Montrose, Pa. 18801; Mildred Aldrich Maltby, R. D. 2, Kingsley, Pa. 18826; Lillie Pratt MacBain, Hop Bottom, Pa. 18824; Gertrude French Nichols, East Smithfield, Pa. 18817; Robertta Hausknecht, 302 Third St., Towanda, Pa. 18848; Minnie Burns von Wolfradt, R. D. 2, Athens, Pa. 18810; Lola Bailey Long, R. D. 1, Monroeton, Pa. 18832;

'22

Editors are not sure of title or official class capacity of Julia Toth Churi but she seems to be a sort of class correspondent—and her correspondence is well above the ordinary. Editors would like also to know if the excellent verse incorporated in her communications is Julia's own, and also if she received the class printout (names and addresses) as a starter for planning a rousing 50th reunion in 1973. Julia is enthusiastic about the 50th. Her address is 509 George St., Throop, Pa. 18512 . . . Also indicating a willingness to throw the 50th reunion idea what would apparently be an invaluable assist is Mary Maneval who reports she is "now free" to help if anyone is "interested in working to make the 50th in '73 a smashing one." Mary also should have received a class printout. Mary's career in education—and in community affairs—has been long and distinguished. After graduation from M. S. N. S., she went on to get an A.B. degree from Penn State and then an M.A. and a Ph.D., both from the University of Michigan. She began her teaching career in Blossburg and Covington, then went to Bath, N. Y., as vice principal of the junior high school, then returned to Wellsboro as a teacher of English for three years. The next 18 years were spent at Norristown High School where she taught Problems of Democracy and was chairman of the Social Studies Department. After a three-year stint as curriculum supervisor in Somerset High School, she joined the faculty of West Chester State College where, for 11 years, she was a professor in the Department of Sociology. After 41 years in education, Mary says she "took her pension" and retired to teach in a private school—Ellis School for Girls in Newtown Square, Pa. She has pursued many extracurricular activities in both public school and college work, but she describes her duties as adviser to the Boys' Football Club as "the greatest challenge." In her community work, Mary organized the first American Association of University Women in West Chester and became its first president. She served also as president of the West Chester Civic Association and for many years has been prominently identified with support of the Salvation Army. Not surprising, at M. S. N. S., Mary was president of the Women's Student Government. Her address is 427 West Nields St., West Chester, Pa. 19380 . . . Margaret Harer, R. D. 3, Jersey Shore, Pa. 17740, and Susan Muto Siratnak, 312 Dunmore St., Throop, Pa. 17264, showed for their class, Alumni Day.

Hester Bourdette Woodworth should be seeing a good deal more of her fellow alumnus husband, Guy, these days. The reason can be found under '26 and especially on the "In the News—Alumni" pages. The Woodworths are at home at 200 S. Bishop Ave., Secane, Pa. 19018 . . . Among '24ers back for Alumni Day was Mildred Levine Erickson, who's teaching at the Cohen School in Elmira Heights, N. Y. Her address is 213 Robinwood Ave., Elmira Heights, N. Y. 14903 . . . Also on campus for the big day was Alta Young Bacon who retired six years ago after teaching more than 32 years. Well, just about retired. Alta did the baking for the Tomahawk Restaurant then for two years "with time off for traveling some." And here's the old Mansfield predilection again "My husband and I have toured Europe, Japan, Hawaii, Hong Kong, Thailand, India, Greece, Egypt, Alaska, and seven countries of South America. Have plans now for Australia and South Sea islands." When the Bacons are at home, they're at home at R. D. 3, Towanda, Pa. 18848.

. . . Also for a smashing 50th.

Among the more significant items on '25 this round is the citation of Don W. McClelland, well-known Waverly, N. Y. schoolman, church and civic leader, as MSC's "Alumnus of the Year." The "In the News—Alumni" pages so reflect the wide press given the event that editors recommend turning to them for more on Don. His address incidentally, is 323 Chemung St., Waverly, N. Y. 14892 . . . Joining Don on the campus, Alumni Day, were Classmates Marion Bisbee (Mrs. Harold) Clark, Roseville Rd., R. D. 3, Mansfield, Pa. 16933, and Mary Taylor (Mrs. Henry) Darrow, 112 Plummer St., Sayre, Pa. 18840 . . . Another double alumna of Mansfield is Hazel W. Brown. She received her Normal certificate, or "teacher's diploma," in 1925 from M. S. N. S. and her bachelor of science degree from M. S. T. C. 17 years later, in 1942. After more than 35 years of teaching, she retired in 1961, but has since worked as a casework supervisor in the Montrose Office of Public Assistance, and has been active in Delta Kappa Gamma and in church and Sunday School Work. She planned to "retire permanently in May of this year." Her address is Box 24, Dimock, Pa. 18816.

After 45 years with the Upper Darby School District (the last 23 years of them as principal of Drexel Hill Elementary School), Guy A. Woodworth this year retired. The occasion received quite a press as reflected in the montages of the "In the News—Alumni" pages in this issue. The Woodworths (She is Hester Bourdette Woodworth, see '24) will continue to reside at 200 S. Bishop Ave., Secane, Pa. 19018. Incidentally, both were natives of Troy, Pa. . . . Hubert Dowson, who taught the unlikely combination of Latin and driver training in Canton, Mass. High School before his retirement in 1967, gives editors his new address as 49 Buckingham Club, Florida

Another double alumna, retired.

33581. Seems as though something's missing. Mailing of this Mansfieldian will tell . . . This was a reunion class in May, and well-represented it was. Signing the register, Alumni Day, were: Leone Pellor (Mrs. Fayette) Congdon, Gillett, Pa. 16925; Vera McLaud (Mrs. Kenneth) Dunbar, 607 First St., Athens, Pa. 18810; Marguerite Dunbar (Mrs. Burton) Hager, R. D. 1, Troy, Pa. 16947; Gertrude Pease Burton, R. D. 2, Susquehanna, Pa. 18847; Anna Mason, 407 N. Wilbur Ave., Sayre, Pa. 18840; Helen Sweetland (Mrs. Fred) Stevens, 105 Grace Blvd., Painted Post, N. Y. 14870; Thelma Overpeck (Mrs. John C.) Roberts, who's still teaching in Arlington, Va., and living at 4814 First St. South, Arlington, Va. 22204; Guy Ludington, whose retirement sparked a glowing press on his career as reflected on the "In the News—Alumni" pages in this issue and whose address is Box 103, Boalsburg, Pa. 16827; Laura Rogers Tanner, Westfield, Pa. 16950; Henry Darrow, 112 Plummer St., Sayre, Pa. 18840; Paul R. and Mabel Cochran Jones, 1 West Prospect Ave., Moorestown, N. J. 08057 . . . Editors failed to mention above that Helen Sweetland Stevens recently retired and that the Stevens' recently returned from visiting their son and three grandchildren in California and Hawaii.

Marian Mercer Hess graduated in the "music supervisor's course" at Mansfield, became a supervisor of public school music, married Paul Hess in 1943, became a mother, earned two other degrees (B.A. in Elementary Ed. and M.A. in Music Ed.) and still managed to complete 18 years of teaching. Husband Paul is a retired engineer. Daughter Mary, a writer and student. Writes Marian: "Those years at Mansfield made a deep and lasting impression. Especially appreciated are the friends in classes from '26 through '29. News of them is so much appreciated." Appreciated too is the fine gesture Marian made in support of the new Mansfieldian. Editors' sincere thanks. Marian and Paul live 12 miles from Ocean City, N. J. at S. R. 33-188 Greenfield, Marmora, N. J. 08223 . . . Also, for benefit of classmates, there's some catching up to do on Jean Skrynski (Mrs. Fred C.) Kreuscher. After Mansfield, Jean taught for two or three years in Lycoming County, and then made a real switch: Went to New York City to pursue a career in business. And did just that. She became corporation secretary and director of the Hussey-Williams Corporation and then of the Kreuscher Holding Corporation. Sometime in between there, in 1942, she married Fred C. Kreuscher. Who's Who Among American Women lists her as chairman of Planned Parenthood for Westchester County (1959-65) and presently a member of the Horticulture Society of New York, the Audubon Society of Bedford Hills (N. Y.), the Women's Club of Bedford Hills and the Council of the Katonah Art Gallery. Her main hobby is painting in oils and water color—still as an amateur. The Kreuschers have one son (actually Jean's stepson) and five grandchildren, three of whom are in college. And here again the No. 1 prevalent predilection of Mansfield alumni: Since her husband's life passion has been to travel, the Kreuschers have covered the globe "rather thoroughly in the past odd 20 years." Editors' genuine thanks to Jean for everything. The Kreuschers live on Crow Hill Road, Mount Kisco, N. Y. 10549 . . . Rudolph Hotalen is retired but is still giving plenty of time to the Retired Officers Club, the Audubon Society, NRTA, Senior Citizens Club, the Skywatchers Club and the Presbyterian Church and Sunday School. Right now Rudy and Esther are at home at Towanda, Pa. 18848, where the full address is R. D. 2, Box 189. They winter in Florida at 4851 Ninth St., N. Naples, Fla. 33940.

Marian Mercer Hess
The impression, deep and lasting.

Fred and Jean Skrynski Kreuscher

His passion, travel; hers, business; so betwixt them both . . .

Margaret Mull Teed and Wayne Teed ('59) have the distinction of being Mansfield's first mother-son combination to be "Wearers of the Ring." Editors' thanks and congratulations. The address in each case is R. D. 1, Morris, Pa. 16938. For some more choice items on both the Teeds, see the last Mansfieldian, May 1971, under their respective classes . . . Registering under the banner of '28, Alumni Day, were Mildred Mitchell Griffin, who's also still teaching at Cohen Middle School in Elmira Heights and who's living at 230 Birchwood Ave., Elmira Heights, N. Y. 14903, and S. Manford Lloyd, who was made MSC emeritus professor last month and who is still living at 18 College Ave., Mansfield, Pa. 16933 . . . Item on Harold Schanbacher under '32.

To Mildred Seal editors must toss a medal or an orchid or something or other for her uncanny ability to tell a speaker in no uncertain terms that he's got to be brief. Mildred was co-chairman of the steering committee that brought forth the extraordinary organizational dinner meeting of the MSC Alumni Club of Susquehanna County. Preparing for that meeting, Mildred wrote: "We would like to have you favor us with a few remarks to spark interest. The opinion of the steering committee is that long speeches deaden the affair, so we are curtailing any lengthy discourses."—!?!?! Mildred's address is simply New Milford, Pa. 18834 . . . Comes a real gem from a brand new "Wearer of the Ring," J. Brit Davis. First, Brit writes about the ring: "Recently, I received the ring which was ordered some weeks ago and I am well pleased with it. My old class ring has long since worn away so that only the gold is visible. The new ring is beautiful and is a real classic. The same jewelers supplied our 1929 rings but in those days nothing was standard; every class selected its own design and sold them through a class agent, the agent in 1929 just happened to be me." Then to his reason for retiring: "I retired from teaching in 1968. As a matter of fact after trying it for 38 years I decided I didn't like it and quit." On the matter of academic majors: "Please excuse my typing but it's much better than my handwriting and I never could really spell very well. However, who needs to be able to spell just as long as you have your major in English. I have a major in math too, but the only figures I know well are on the beach. My history major helped me on dates, but the science major got me in trouble for 38 years. I could go on like this for a long time, but I dare not miss your deadline." Anyone desiring some more of the Brit banter should communicate with the '29 class president at 307 Broad St., Mt. Holly, N. J. 08060 . . . Lone registrant for '29, Alumni Day, was Alford Dibble, 517 N. Hanover St., Pottstown, Pa. 19464 . . . The '71 Commencement held not a few surprises, but the big one was reserved for Trustee Paul Conner '29, Coudersport, when MSC President Lawrence Park, without prior notice, turned to Paul and asked him to present the baccalaureate degree to granddaughter Candace Norton. Paul did handsomely.

H. Louise Palmer (Mrs. George) Harris teaches Grade 5 in the Pine City, N. Y. Elementary School (Elmira Area Schools) and is also a proud "Wearer of the Ring" for which editors are indeed grateful. Louise, incidentally, did graduate work at New York University, The Pennsylvania State University and Elmira College which conferred the M.S. degree in 1965. Her address is R. D. 2, Mansfield, Pa. 16933 . . . The R. W. (Grace Chilcott) Linkenheimers should by now be pretty well settled at their new address: Canteberry Apartments, No. 203, 18 N. Fremont Ave., Bellevue, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15202. Plans called for moving Sept. 4.

Thirty-one from '31!—That's the record that made it a banner reunion year for this class on Alumni Day. Everyone mentioned in the '31 Roundup following was back on campus for the big day: Mansfield has found another booster for a reactivated Williamsport Alumni Club or—a brand new Alumni Club of Lycoming County. She is Mary Alice Davis (Mrs. Harley R.) Worthington, Editors have already sent Mary a print-out on all Lycoming County alumni. She plans to contact Arnold Sundberg in Jersey Shore and also Carlton Hess. Seems between the three of them, some action should be forthcoming, which would be heartening to all here at the college. The Worthingtons live at 714 Elmira St. (Box 808), Williamsport, Pa. 17701 . . . A card causing editors both pain (Couldn't get away) and nostalgia (Played the course many times) from Alice and Mike Hrycenko vacationing over the "Fourth" at Fred Waring's Shawnee Inn and Shawnee championship golf course, back in editors' bailiwick, advises: "You should try your golf game here—very challenging! Our regards to all our friends." Incidentally, as editors write this/nose to grindstone, the skies out there are Mediterranean blue, sun is warm but not too warm, temperature is an even 70 degrees, fairways are hard—giving premium bounce and roll for the short—ball golfer, the greens are like velvet and—Oh brother! How painful can things get! And then the Hrycenkos have to keep sending those full-color picture postcards of golf courses. But they still have editors' thanks for their support of the new Mansfieldian in typical Hrycenko style on Alumni Day. Mike and Alice are at home (when at home) at 126 Sunnyside Lane, Bell Mawr, N. J. 08030 . . . Catherine Rice Mordon, State Street, Millville, Pa. 17846, retired as of June 11, 1971 . . . But Classmate Carol Eighmey Taber, 807 Hanshaw Rd., Ithaca, N. Y. 14850, has no such thoughts of retiring. She's teaching American History in Ithaca High School, and has done so for the past 20 years. Carol's husband, Claude, was killed in an accident three years ago. There are two daughters and seven grandchildren. Carol will be on sabbatical the second semester of next year. Expects to study but—"in a warm climate and near a beach." . . . Wilhelmina Frith Voss, whose husband, Marion J. is director of research at Thatcher Glass, is still teaching—in Sing Sing Road School, Horseheads, N. Y. The Voss' live at 319 Westinghouse Rd., Horseheads, N. Y. 14845 . . . Phyllis Horn Meikle is a housewife these days while husband Robert is senior engineering associate at Corning Glass. The Meikles live at 110 Grace Blvd., Painted Post, N. Y. 14870 . . . Edith Winner Stecker, 241 E. Central Ave., South Williamsport, Pa. 17701, became a double grandmother first time around. Her first grandchildren (last October) are twin girls . . . Genevieve Seagers Howard wintered in Florida last year and expects to travel extensively in the future. Genevieve's husband, Harold, passed away two years ago. Genevieve relays best regards of Thelma Greeley Oliver, Belleair Beach, Fla., to all her friends. Genevieve's address is: 619 Cayuga Heights Road, Ithaca, N. Y. 14850 . . . Another Genevieve. This time it's Genevieve Hager Sherman whose three children, daughter-in-law, and son-in-law are all Mansfield graduates. One daughter-in-law is a nurse. There are four grandchildren. Genevieve lives at 241 S. Academy St., Mansfield, Pa. 16933 . . . Mary Guiles Krieger, Box 235, Lawrenceville, Pa. 16929, has been a caseworker for the Pa. Department of Public Assistance for the past 34 years . . . Other reunioneers on the Alumni Day register were Frederick L. Watson, R. D. 1, Monroeton, Pa. 18832; Harland L. Sherman, 241 S. Academy St., Mansfield, Pa. 16933; Mabel Squier (Mrs. Stratton) Stevens, 1620 Highland Ave., West Chester, Pa. 19380 . . . Helen Mae Best (Mrs. Miles) Forer, Liberty, Pa. 16930; Merrill Brodrick, Mansfield, Pa. 16933; Laura Brainard Allyn, Warren Center, Pa. 18851; Margaret Brainard Pitcher, Warren Center, Pa. 18851; Doris Antisdal, R. D. 2, Nichols, N. Y. 13812; Eloise Knapp Van Kirk, 234 E. Franklin St., Horseheads, N. Y. 14845; Lowell Carpenter, Ulysses, Pa. 16948; Howard and Berneta Lefler Baker, 115 Katherrin St., Port Allegany, Pa. 16743; M. Louise Hetrick, 24 S. 29th St., Camp Hill, Pa. 17011; Cora Parry Miller, 28 Thomas St., Harrisburg, Pa. 17101; Alice Beaumont Gray, R. D. 2, Laceyville, Pa. 18623; Regina Barnes Kritchman, 913 Front St., Vestal, N. Y. 13850; O. Wendell Davis, 74 Walnut Ave., Floral Park, N. Y. 11001 and Mrs. Davis, real Mansfieldians who have editors' thanks; Robert Grant, 1660 Parkview Ave., Seaford, N. Y. 11783 . . . And the one guy who started it all—he was around all right—but he was the one '31er who failed to sign the register. Fred Jupenlaz, of course.

The Schanbachers—Harold ('28) and Anna Doughton—have lived in Liberty, Pa. ever since their marriage in 1935 and seemed to have thrived in the climate of this Southern Tioga town. They've raised eight children, the youngest of whom is in 8th grade and the oldest of whom, Bill (MSC '59) is teaching in the Spencer Van Etten School. The two oldest girls are married and are homemakers. Mary Jean '62, is teaching in England. Another son is an ex-Navy man, while still another, John '69, is teaching in the Ridgebury Elementary School. Harold has been retired for several years—but Anna's gone back to teaching. She's planning to get back for her 40th next Alumni Day. The Schanbachers' address is simply Liberty, Pa.

16930. Anna, who is a proud "Wearer of the Ring," for which editors are grateful, is the new treasurer of the spanking new MSC Alumni Club of Tioga County . . . Gomer Lewis, who has just completed 39 years of teaching, the last 30 of which were at Westfield, N. J. High School, spent the summer in Maine and is right now probably on junkets to Spain and Portugal. He has editors' thanks for the fine contribution in support of the new Mansfieldian. There's an interesting clip on Gomer on the "In the News—Alumni" pages of this issue. His address is: 329 Kimball Avenue, Westfield, N. J. 07090 . . . According to a note from Esther Lind Ferris, also MSC '39, husband Lyle last month was in the hospital. Editors trust that by this time there has been a full recovery. Both, apparently, are retired. But besides being a housewife, Esther occupies herself with private tutoring, church work, A. A. R. P., Gold Card Club and W. S. C. S. activities as well as several community projects. Lyle is a member of the Elmira Kiwanis Club and is a 32nd Degree Mason. The Ferris' live at 1253 Pennsylvania Ave., Pine City, N. Y. 14871 . . . Ramona Rought Stauffer's husband, Robert, has just been appointed "Ag. Director of District II." Editors' congratulations. Also, for four married sons and four grandchildren. Ramona's teaching 3rd Grade in the Benton Area Schools. The Stauffer's address is R. D. 2, Benton, Pa. 17814 . . . Mildred Wiggins Campbell reports that the highlight of her 1970 tour in Europe was attending the Passion Play at Oberammergau. Mildred's living at 33 Prospect St., Hudson, Ohio 44236. Both Mildred and Ramona Stauffer were back on campus for Alumni Day—as was Mary Treat Davis, 85 N. Main St., Mansfield, Pa. 16933.

From the daughter of the late Anna M. Scheeley Schwab, a fine gesture in her mother's memory. Since daughter, Jean M. Dougherty, R. D. 1, Candor, N. Y., enjoys reading the Mansfieldian, she will be included in the files as an associate alumna . . . Both Helen Morandi Kennedy and her husband, Thomas G., are retiring from teaching "and moving to new home in Vero Beach, Fla., to fish, swim—and play!" At the time this information was received, the Kennedys were living at 226 N. W. 93rd St., Miami, Fla. 33150 . . . Registering on Alumni Day were Ferris Lutes, 159 Sullivan, Mansfield, Pa. 16933; Gladys Chatterton, 20 Maplehurst Park, Horseheads, N. Y. 14845, and Kathryn L. Warner, R. D. 5, Montrose, Pa. 18801.

Mary Alice Davis and Harley Worthington
They could help the cause in Williamsport.

Eva Marie Yurkewicz who, as reported in the last Mansfieldian, has switched to vocal music after 17 years of teaching band music and directing high school bands, is music supervisor in the Vocal Department of Mahanoy Area Joint School District. But aside from that she has a No. 1 predilection: her church. For the past 35 years she's been the organist of the famed "Our Lady of Siluva" Church at Maizeville, Pa., which little town has the distinction of having the only Shrine to Our Lady of Siluva in the United States. Proud of her affiliation with this church—as, incidentally, she is of her Mansfield ties—Eva explains that Siluva, meaning pine cones, is a little village in Lithuania, now a part of Soviet Russia. It was at Siluva that "Our Lady" appeared to the villagers and asked them to build a church. Here in the U. S., many years later, the bishop asked Eva's pastor to call the newly rebuilt church at Maizeville "The Shrine of Our Lady of Siluva" where all people of Lithuanian extraction could make pilgrimages. (The Shrine was rebuilt after a fire which completely destroyed the old church and which occurred on the Feast of Our Lady. Hence it was dedicated to her in its new edification.) Eva invites all Mansfieldians who are preparing an itinerary of Pennsylvania's points of interest to come and visit the Shrine. It's officially listed on the Commonwealth's places of interest.

Eva, a truly proud "Wearer of the Ring," has editors' thanks for everything. Her address is: 401 W. Coal St., Shenandoah, Pa. 17976 . . . The Chester P. Baileys, editors of the Mansfield Advertiser, were among those prominently on the campus, Alumni Day, as was Mrs. Kenneth (Pauline Steigerwalt) Whitney, of 1221 Rosemont Lane, Abington, Pa. 19001.

This was a reunion class and quite a few members were back on campus for their 35th. Among them: Marion Parmenter (Mrs. Leon) Ballard, who has two home ec daughters—Marilyn, M.Ed., Penn State, and Linda, B.S., MSC '69—and whose address is R. D. 3, Box 106, Troy, Pa. 16947; Lenore Morrow (Mrs. Joseph E.) Trostle, who presently lives at Laysville, Pa. 17047, but who is looking forward to retirement after 28 years of teaching home ec and to moving into a new house; Dorothy Starrett Yoh, Boyertown, Pa. 19512; Mary Ashkar, Hughesville, Pa. 17737; Leon and Kathryn Jones Lunn, 23 St. James St., Mansfield, Pa. 16933; Norma Strait Howland, Tioga, Pa. 16946; Kenneth Whitney, 1221 Rosemont Lane, Abington, Pa. 19001, as was Mrs. Whitney ('35); Mathilda Scheele Miller, R. D. 1, St. Thomas, Pa. 17252; Lorena Jerald Penno, 52 Elmira St., Mansfield, Pa. 16933; Mabel Pearson Smith, Eaton, N. Y. 13334; Louise Wilcox Haines, 7 Albany St., Homer, N. Y. 13077; Mildred Miller-Wilson, New Park, Pa. 17352, and Ford A. Reynolds, 307 Bennett St., Luzerne, Pa. 15662.

Mary Greiner Wheeler has hardly been idle. She lists her "position" as housewife to husband Robert, a mining engineer with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, has raised five children—Mary Alice, 26, Ruth, 24, Nancy, 23, all with bachelor of arts degrees; Raymond, 17, high school senior, and Anna, 13, 8th grader—is a Girl Scout leader, a public library volunteer, a Sunday School teacher, a member of D. A. R. and D. A. C. (state chairman of patriotic education, D. A. C.), and a volunteer at the Liberty Bell Shrine in Allentown, Pa. Oh yes, there's also a grandson. Mary's address: R. D. 1, Emmaus, Pa. 18049 . . . Lone registrant for '38, Alumni Day, was Leona Kingsley Dummore, 46 Kingston Ave., Port Jervis, N. Y. 12771.

The Class of '39 fared no better than '38, Alumni Day. There was again one lone registrant: Jean McClelland Carpenter, Ulysses, Pa. 16948.

When Mary Michael Brace received her doctorate in home economics education from The Pennsylvania State University recently, the occasion seemed to set off a chain reaction of MSC-Brace-related news events. (See "In the News—Alumni" photo montage pages in this issue). One story was purely serendipitous: Editors about to do a story on Mary's doctorate, found that all seven members of the immediate Brace family held degrees from Mansfield. Another news story had to do with the election of Ken Brace, MSC '57—yes, Mary's husband—as the first president of the newly-formed MSC Alumni Club of Tioga County. Corrections are needed, however, in the story of the seven Braces: Daughter-in-law Linda was MSC '67. Mary's mother was the late Catherine Bailey Michael who graduated from MSC in 1910 and then again in 1912, after additional work. The Braces live Kline is living in Beaver Springs, Pa., where, in fact, she's been living since husband Ray, an automobile dealer, was discharged from the U. S. Army in 1945. It's there she reared the N. C. A. A. wrestling champ of 1969—none other than son Gobel, a graduate of the University of Maryland, married "and the father of a handsome three-year-old son." The Klines have also two daughters—Kathryn, a 1971 high school graduate, and Carolyn, a senior this year who is considering Mansfield. Writes Jean: "After marriage I taught one year, then retired from teaching to devote all my time to family, church and community activities which I have found most fulfilling." The Klines' address is simply Beaver Springs, Pa. 17812 . . . Marion Diltz (Mrs. A. C.) Young is another new "Wearer of the Ring." Editors' congratulations and gratitude for her over-and-above support of the new Mansfieldian. Marion lives at 157 Carpenter St., Du-shore, Pa. 18614.

Extremely anxious for a few words from friends and classmates is A. Elizabeth Samson known to those classmates and friends as "Sammy." So right off, here's Sammy's present address: Bamberg Service Club, Hq. 3d Bde, IAD, APO, N. Y. 09139. Sammy was home Alumni Day but could not attend the event because of the death of her brother. She writes: "All of a sudden wonderful things began happening to me after years and years with no communications from Mansfield S. C. and friends. First, the Mansfieldian magazine came along then, of course, your letter (from Classmate Ruth Marsh) this spring. Since 1960 I have been working in recreation in the Army service clubs (not the infamous ones that made the news last year) as ours is strictly for recreation with no funds, gambling or alcohol involved. I worked for two years at Ft. Irwin in California and then went to Korea in 1962. This year I was most fortunate in getting an assignment in Europe and will be here for at least two years. Warner Barracks, on the outskirts of Bamberg is my present home in Germany. It's a beautiful country. I plan to travel as much as possible. Wish I could now share my experiences with family and friends." A proud "Wearer of the Ring," Sammy has editors' sincerest thanks . . . The pursuits of Mary Catherine English (Mrs. C. A., "Al") Whartenby have certainly not been the usual. Holding the J.D. degree from Golden Gate College School of Law, she is the assistant manager of the San Francisco office of the Connecticut General Life Insurance Co., a member of the San Francisco and American Bar Associations, the San Francisco Estate Planning Council, the American Society of Char-

Mary Catherine, who will "enjoy being back on the mailing list" after having "received no mailings for some years," sends "greetings to the Class of '41." The Whartenbys live at 40 Corte Alegre, Millbrae, Calif. 94030 . . . This was a reunion class, and the 30th did not do too badly. Among those who returned to the campus for the big day last May were Yolande Flowers (Mrs. Leon W.) Rathbun, 34 Angola Road, Cornwall, N. Y. 12518, who is teaching kindergarten in Neceburg, N. Y., and who has three grown children — all teachers; Clyde W. Winer, 231 Metzger Ave., Butler, Pa. 16001, who is still supervisor of music in the South Butler County School District; Ruth Hughes (Mrs. Jack) Marsh, 184 N. Academy St., Mansfield, Pa. 16933; Margaret Nicholis Smith, Marydale St., Hepburnville, Pa. 18332; Elmer S. Stevens, 234 Grant Drive, Haver, Pa. 17331; John J. Frenchko, 113 Martha Road, Binghamton, N. Y. 13900; Violet Grigg Flynn, 517 Hazlewood Ave., Middlesex, N. J.; Mary Demyan, Box 139, Old Mill Road, Millersville, Md. 21108, and Ivan D. John Hartranft, chief master sergeant of the 313th Tactical Airlift Wing at Forbes AFB, Kan., is now wearing a distinctive service ribbon to mark his affiliation with 313th which recently received the U. S. Air Force Outstanding Unit Award. Editors' congratulations . . . Lenore Owens Lawson is head teacher in the School Community Services of the Harrisburg-Steelton-Highspire Technical School. Her corrected address is: 321 Yew Place, Harrisburg, Pa. 17104. She has editors' heartiest thanks for her support of the Mansfieldian . . . Lone registrant of '43, Alumni Day, was Mariam Eastman Dickerson, Star Route, Mansfield, Pa. 16933.

From Jean Buck (Mrs. Richard A.) Howe comes a note and two contributions, one in support of the new Mansfieldian and one by way of a news clipping on her roommate for two years at Mansfield, Bernice Roupp, which and who, both, are really something. (See "In the News—Alumni" pages in this issue). Jean's husband, Dick, is executive vice president of First Citizens National Bank, which recently opened its new building in Mansfield. (See cut somewhere in the vicinity of the Roundup on '02). The Howes live at 24 College Ave., Mansfield, Pa. 16933. Editors' thanks for everything.

For the benefit of '45ers who might have passed over the '44 Roundup, there's quite a news piece on "Woman of the Year" Bernice Roupp on the "In the News—Alumni" pages of this issue.

Incredible. But there's not a single item on the 25-year class.

Dan Thomas is one of five MSC grads teaching at Coughlin High School in Wilkes-Barre. Olin Evans is another (See '54). Dan's address is 139 Abbott St., Wilkes-Barre, Pa. 18705 . . . Mary Dorance Moore is rounding out 20 years of teaching home economics, the last 17 years of which have been at the Addison Central School in Addison, N. Y., and has also finished off 33 graduate hours of work at George Peabody, Syracuse, Cornell, Cortland and Elmira. Husband Leland, who spent 10 years in the

Anna Trowbridge Underwood, Laceyville, Pa. 18623, might have felt a bit alone, Alumni Day, unless other '48ers failed to register. At least she was the only one to sign up.

'49

Same was true of Les Evans, a member of the MSC faculty, but it probably didn't bother him; had his hands full as committee chairman.

'50

Editors' congratulations to Clement Michael Zubres. Clem recently received his master of education from Frostburg State College at Frostburg, Md. He lives at 5210 Mineola Rd., College Park, Md. 20740 . . . Al Kjelgaard, a member of the faculty and also the alumni committee, was prominently around Alumni Day.

'52

Alumni Affairs Office has one perennial complaint: It suffers from delayed action. For instance: Marietta Tiffany has long since been Mrs. Gene Potok and the mother of two boys; Barbara Tiffany has long since been Mrs. Gordon Robeson and also has two boys. Marietta now lives at 670 Valley Road, New Canaan, Conn.

06840, while Barbara lives at 28519 North Olmstead, Ohio 44070. Thanks to Mrs. Walter Tiffany.

From Lola Bailey Long (MSC '21) comes news on son Robert. He's now located in DeLand, Fla. and is a supervisor in the State Department of Welfare. His address is R. D. 3, Box 159, DeLand, Fla. 32720 . . . From the State University of Illinois comes a news release on Dr. Samuel Woodard. Sam, who has been serving as an associate professor of educational administration, has just been appointed director of the University's School Intergroup Relations Consulting Institute. Congratulations from MSC. Anyone else wishing to extend them should direct them to Sam at Illinois State University, Normal, Ill. 61761 . . . Now here's one that establishes some sort of record for distance—if not also loyalty: Helen Russell Taylor apparently came all the way from California to be the lone registrant for her class on Alumni Day. She lists her address as 1029 Park St., Huntington Beach, Calif. 72940.

Olin Evans, a member of the faculty of Coughlin High School in Wilkes-Barre, reports there are four other Mansfield graduates teaching there at Coughlin (see also '47). Olin's address is 77 Davis Place, Wilkes-Barre, Pa. 18702 . . . Lorraine Brass Thurston is now teaching Grade 3 in the Clark Wood Elementary School in Elkland, Pa. After her graduation from MSC, Lorraine taught for five years in the Addison (N. Y.) Central School. After her marriage to Alfred Thurston, an MSC alumnus, she gave up regular teaching and signed up as a substitute in the Northern Tioga School District, in order to have more time for Steven Dale, now in Grade 6, and Laura May, now in Grade 3. Apparently she has since gone back to full-time teaching. She has editors' sincere thanks for the kind words and the contribution in support of the new Mansfieldian. The Thurstons live at 204 River St., Elkland, Pa. 16920 . . . Leslie Vroman, MSC associate professor of elementary education, signed for '54, Alumni Day. The Vromans live at 205 Sunnyfield Dr., Horseheads, N. Y. 14845.

The Pennsylvania State University has conferred the doctor of education degree in higher education upon Charles John Igoe. His dissertation: "Philosophy of Change and Educational Policy." Charles, these days, is wearing two hats at Susquehanna University. He's an assistant professor of education and is also coordinator of the Student Volunteer Program. And lest anyone assumes that SVP at Susquehanna is another run-of-the-mill program, a news release describes it as "one of the most expansive and effective volunteer programs . . . in the country." Recently, Charles was one of 28 persons throughout the Nation appointed to a federal commission of consultants for volunteer programs. Also, he's writing a manual "outlining the procedures and steps necessary for any group or college interested in initiating a volunteer program." Charles joined the university staff as an instructor in physical education and assistant football coach, later taught English, and is now in education. He serves on the university's Advisory Council and Teacher Education Committee and is a former chairman of the Athletic Committee. He's a member of the Snyder County Board of Assistance, is a commentator at St. Pius X Church in Selinsgrove and is vice president of the Northern Deanery School Board. He holds membership in Phi

A memorandum just now crossing editors' desk suggests that several other Mansfield grads have received advanced degrees from Penn State. No names as yet, but the search is on . . . Donna Congdon (Mrs. Leslie) Vroman (see '54 above) represented her class, Alumni Day.

The search (see above '55) paid off. Among others who received advanced degrees at Penn State University recently—besides Charles Igoe ('55) and Mary Brace ('40)—was Charles W. Jones, 1520 Braewood Dr., Harrisburg, Pa., who received the doctor of education degree in educational administration. Editors' congratulations . . . And still another new doctorate. This one conferred by the University of Iowa upon Warner M. Houth, 333 Park Ave., Huntington, N. Y. 11743. It's a Ph.D. in education. Congratulations from MSC . . . Signing the Alumni Day register were Chairman of the Day Merle E. and Eleanor S. Stillwell, 102 Shady Dr., Indiana, Pa. 15701; Genevieve Madigan Corwin, 6 Hinds St., Montrose, Pa. 18801, and Robert H. Terry, Box 45, Dillsburg, Pa. 17019.

This should have been added to the last line of '56 above: Signing for her class, Alumni Day, was Shirley Flohr Terry, also Box 45, Dillsburg, Pa. 17019, as it should be.

Bennie S. Truax, formerly band director in the Huntingdon Area School District, had a big September. First, he received his doctorate in education from Penn State and then he assumed his new duties as director of bands and associate professor of music at Shippensburg State College. He will direct both the Concert Band and the Marching Band. Before joining the Huntingdon faculty last year, Bennie was a graduate teaching assistant for two years at PSU. Prior to that he was for six years chairman of the Music Department and band director in the Wellsboro Area School District. He and his wife and two sons are residing in Scotland Hills, Scotland, Pa. 17254 . . . Daniel Doud, 19-22 Sahle Place, Fredonia, N. Y., an assistant professor at SUNY at Fredonia, this summer attended an advanced science Seminar in Combinatorial Theory at Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me. Dan received his doctorate from Syracuse University in 1969 . . . Bill Sandler has been named associate dean of students and director of the Office of Student Personnel at the University of Miami, Coral Gables, Fla. The alumni file card on Bill is not a correct one, but the university's full address is: P. O. Box 8105, Coral Gables, Fla. 33124. Bill's been at UM since 1962, except for a year (1967-68) in which he served as dean of men and assistant professor in the school of Education at the Pacific Lutheran University. He returned to UM in 1968 as associate dean of men and became dean of men the following year. He and his wife, Anita, have two daughters, Lisa Jo, eight, and Christine, five . . . George Beyer, son of editors' neighbors, former faculty member Leonard K. Beyer and Mrs. Beyer, was married this past summer to Dana Lee Gisselman. Editors' felicitations. Both are associated with the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission in Harrisburg, Dana as an archivist and George as associate historian. They are residing at 9 Richmond Lane, Camp Hill, Pa. 17011.

The Pennsylvania State University has conferred upon Gerald D. Williams, 355 Laurel Lane, State College, Pa. 16801, the doctor of education degree in higher education. Salutes from MSC (See also '40, '55, '56 and '69) . . . Sam McInroy, associate professor of mathematics, Corning Community College, was one of three members of the Corning faculty representing the college at the fifth annual meeting of the New York State Mathematics Association of Two-Year Colleges. (See Mansfieldian, October 1970, under '60) . . . Ron and JoAnn O'Neil Firestone, both of this class, are living up in the north country of Warren, Pa. Ron is a teacher in the Warren County Schools and, incidentally, is head basketball coach of the Edinboro State College campus in Warren. The Firestones have one son, Douglas, four. Their address is 810 Hillcrest Drive, Warren, Pa. 16365.

Don and Marilyn Simmonds ('57) Howe and their two children, Kathleen Susan, 10, and Jeffrey Donald, 9, are living at 110 Pine Circle, Horseheads, N. Y. 14845. Don, who holds the M.S. from Alfred University, is a guidance counselor in the Elmira City School District. He is a past president of the ELmira Lions Club and the Chemung County PTA and a past superintendent of the Sunday School of the Presbyterian Church. Marilyn is teaching first grade in Horseheads . . . Members of the 10th reunion class back on campus, Alumni Day, were Ruth Hutchison (Mrs. John T.) Kovich, Box 501, Tioga, Pa. 16946; Marie Trapani and Don Souder, 117 Eighth St., Souderton, Pa. 18964, and Edgar Cushard, 65 Third St., Mansfield, Pa. 16933, a member of the faculty and Alumni Relations Committee.

Carol Kuehner returned from a junket to Norway, Sweden and Denmark just in time to meet editors' request for a picture, and just in time too to start her 10th year of teaching second grade at the Herbst School in the Allentown, Pa. School District. Carol received her master's from the once all-men Lehigh University and is presently a cooperating teacher for Kutztown State College. As a "Wearer of the Ring," she has editors' congratulations and gratitude. Carol's address is R. D. 4, Lehigh, Pa. 18235 . . . On the campus, Alumni Day, were Sandy Snader Bower, Newtown Rd., Mansfield, Pa. 16933, and Fred Seltzer, 561 W. Penn, Carlisle, Pa. 17013.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Douglas S. Campbell, a son, Channing Trevor. But he's not the first one: there are also Christopher, 4½, and David, 2½. Doug, an MSC instructor in English, won a summer research grant to study the recently purchased SUNY at Binghamton Library's collection of the notebooks, letters and manuscripts of the Irish poet, Padriac Colum. Doug's a candidate for the Ph.D. in English Literature. The Campbells live at 7 Shurrock St., Wellsboro, Pa. 16901 . . . James and Carole Cummings ('70) Stabile are in Texas where, at North Texas State University, Jim is working on his degree in musicology; he is, that is, when he's not distracted by Carole, 7, Asunta, 6, or John, 3. The Stables live at 912 Kendolph Drive, Denton, Tex. 76201 . . . Showing for their class, Alumni Day, were Eleanor Bradt Prutsman, R. D. 2, Millerton, Pa. 16936, and Kenneth Chilson, Box 373, Shinglehouse, Pa. 16748.

Editors' congratulations and gratitude to Adrienne Scott Van Noy, R. D. 3, Troy, Pa. 16947, whose over-and-above support of the new Mansfieldian entitled her to be another proud "Wearer of the Ring." . . . Alumni complain when they don't get a Mansfieldian, but Diane Hess Ault's complaint was quite the opposite: she and her family have been getting too many. Over the years new addresses have been accumulating without, for some reason in Diane's case, any elimination of the old ones. Editors are glad to advise that the situation has been corrected and that Diane will

The school provided concentrated work in the performance of chamber and orchestra music as well as opera, lieder and vocal chamber music. It afforded also an opportunity for composers to write for specific performing groups. Currently, John is assistant professor of music at Fairmount State College and Ann is instructor of music for preparatory students. The Schooleys are at home at 1138 Bell Run Road, Fairmount, W. On behalf of a proud MSC, editors congratulate also Jean Brenchley on her newest appointment of an unusual and promising career (See "In the News—Alumni") . . . Ruth Lynn (Mrs. John E.) Polger has a new address. It's 177 G. Overmount Ave., West Paterson, N. J. 07424 . . . Surprisingly and prominently around for the organizational dinner meeting of the Alumni Club of Susquehanna County at the Montrose Inn last spring was Larry Crounse—all the way from Endwell, N. Y. He had a reason: "The reason I attended the meeting was that several of us in Broome County talked several years ago about starting a club. To my knowledge no one has yet tried to organize a club. I think now would be a good time to start organizing for a September meeting. I was impressed with the number of people that attended the Montrose meeting and hope that we can do as well in Broome County." Editors assure Larry this office will throw him every assist possible. A print-out on Broome County and an organizational handbook were made available sometime ago. Larry's full address is 3223 Metz Ave., Endwell, N. Y. 13760 . . . For a newsbit on John and Ann Weaver Schooley, see '64 above . . . Signing in for '65, Alumni Day, were Carl Rehkop, 66 Wayne St., Carbondale, Pa. 18407, and Jean Spencer Chilson, Box 373, Shinglehouse, Pa. 16748 . . . And a new address—and name—for Leona Thompson. The new address (as though that's of first importance) is: Box 20B, West Woodbound Dr., Wilmington, Del. 19803. The new name: Mrs. John P. Provinski. "After a beautiful honeymoon week of skiing in New Hampshire, they returned to the working world" in which John is with Du Ponts and Leona is assistant manager of food service, University of Delaware. Editors' felicitations.

John Brown is a history teacher in the Watkins Glen School District while wife, the former Danna Griffiths (MSC '64) is an English teacher and department head in the Middle School. There's little time for anything except work and study these days for the Browns. Both are working on their master's degrees at Elmira College. The Brown address is: R. D. 1, Watkins Glen, N. Y. 14891 . . . Editors' congratulations to Don James Inscho, R. D. 1, Mansfield, Pa. 16933, and Jim Kinsler, 352 E. Fifth St., Emporium, Pa. 15834. Both recently received masters' degrees: Don, from Bucknell; Jim, from Saint Bonaventure . . . Although she failed to sign the register, a completed information form indicates that Editors' thanks to Tom Hotalen for his support of the new Mansfieldian and also for his highly articulate and incisive critique of the "profession," which editors would have liked to run, but Tom said "no." Incidentally, editors once knew an Army chaplain by the name of Hotalen—? Tom's address is Farm Road, R. D. 1, Copake, N. Y. 12516 . . . Something seems to be amiss with the information received from the Don Baylors (she's the former Barbara Miller, same class). Their address was—or is—5228 Chicago Ave., 1, Tacoma, Wash. 58499. Don was—or is—serving a two-year hitch in the Army at Fort Lewis, Washington. And either Don or Barbara was—or is—teaching English at Stroudsburg High School, clear across the country in Pennsylvania. Perhaps this note will straighten it all out . . . Most recent classes have a generous sprinkling of advanced degrees, but the big push for master's degrees is being made especially by the '67ers. Among recipients of the past year are, from the Pennsylvania State University: Bruce Hughes, R. D. 1, Lawrenceville, Pa. 16929; Frederick Huzey, 916 Walnut St., Montoursville, Pa. 17754; Richard L. Longbottom, Millheim, Pa. 16854, and James Mudge, 121 N. Main St., Mansfield, Pa. 16933; and from Kent State University: Joseph Grabusky, 5314 St. Rte. 43, Kent, Ohio 44240; from MSC: Diana Davey Garrison, 1134 Broadway, Elmira, N. Y. 14904; from Bucknell: Albert J. Glennon, 246 S. 8th St., Shamokin, Pa. 17872, and Thomas Lee Hotalen, whose address

Both Ian Ronald and Karen Eagleson (MSC '69) Horen are teaching down Jersey way. Karen is a home ec teacher and departmental assistant in the Franklin Twp. High School at Somerset, N. J., and Ian is teaching in the North Brunswick schools, is also a member of the executive committee of N. B. E. A. Their address is: 70 J. F. K. Blvd., Apt. 25E, Somerset, N. J. 08873 . . . By now, according to all deductions, John and Mary Ann Gabryluk Krisa should be the proud parents of a 3½-month son or daughter. Editors' felicitations. Also on the occasion of John receiving his doctor of jurisprudence from the West Virginia University Law School, Mary Ann, who holds a master's degree also from West Virginia, is teaching German at Morgantown High School, but she lists her address as c/o 1348 Vienna St., Northampton, Pa. 18067 . . . Editors throw sharpest to Stan Doepke who, as an Army specialist five, serving with the 101st Airborne in Vietnam, has been awarded the Army Commendation Medal. Stan is a Sigma Tau Gamma and Gamma Theta Upsilon. His wife, Denise, lives at 2100 Desert Dr., Las Cruces, N. M. . . . Barbara Sieg has editors' felicitations. She's now Barbara J. Meyer and is living at 710 Hickory Lane, Easton, Pa. 18042—only 12 miles south of the Blue Valley of Bangor. She has also editors' thanks . . . Again, felicitations are in order: Gloria Bower has become Gloria White and is living at 3-B U. C. Building, Warwick Apts., Aberdeen, Md. 21001. Gloria's teaching home ec at the Edgewood Senior High School while her husband, 1st Lt. William F. White, is the assistant registrar at Kirk Army Hospital, Aberdeen Proving Grounds . . .

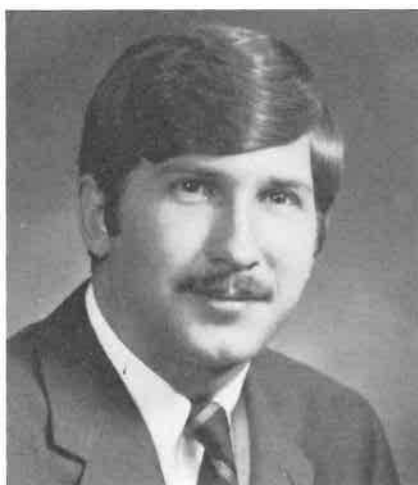

Editors can always use family pictures, any they can get. Signing in for their class, Alumni Day, were Pete Simar, Turtlepoint, Pa. 16750, and Raymond Long and Merle McCalips who've had changes of address but indicated only the insufficient State College, Pa.

There's a newsbit on Karen Eagleson Horen under '68 above . . . Among five MSC grads receiving master's degrees from Bucknell this past spring was Joanne Susan Mayer, Box 3, Morris Run, Pa. 16939 . . . And among six others receiving advanced degrees from Penn State during the year were Ronald R. Fish (M.Ed.), R. D. 3, Mansfield, Pa. 16933; Louise Lopes (M.Ed.), 1175 New Jersey Ave., Hellertown, Pa. 18055, and John Himes (M.S.), 117 Taft Ave., Elkland, Pa. 16920 . . . By this time, Richard and Naomi Young Miller should be at home at their new address: Apt. I-134, 777 Cherry Tree Road, Chester, Pa. 19014 . . . Constance Szybist (Mrs. Francis C. III) Roupp has received the master of library science degree from the State University of New York at Albany. Congratulations from MSC. Francis is also '69. The Roupps have a new address: 109 Center St., Athens, Pa. 18810. They were around Alumni Day and so was Myrna Tanner Marshall, 42 Denwood Terrace, Bath, N. Y. 14810.

J. Horace Strunk, Director
Office of Public Relations
And Alumni Affairs
Mansfield State College
Mansfield, Pa.

Dear Mr. Strunk,

. . . Recently, I received the ring which was ordered some weeks ago and I am well pleased with it. My old class ring has long since worn away so that only the gold is visible. The new ring is beautiful and is a real classic.

The same jewelers supplied our 1929 rings but in those days nothing was standard; every class selected its own design and sold them through a class agent. The agent in 1929 just happened to be me. . . .

Sincerely,

J. Brit Davis
President
Class of 1929

Apparently "Wearers of the Ring" are quite happy with their gifts of individualized class rings sent them for their "over-and-above" support of the new Mansfieldian, which means contributions of $50 or more.

Alumni not now wearing a class ring may still become "Wearers of the Ring" by filling out the form below and mailing it to the Office of Public Information and Alumni Affairs, South Hall, Mansfield State College, Mansfield, Pa. 16933.

Three styles of rings are available as is the choice of birthstones. There's a fine heavyweight men's ring; a miniature of that same ring, designed for women, and an exquisite ladies' filigree dinner ring.

Each contribution of $50 or more helps to keep the Mansfieldian alive; but this office, with the cooperation of the manufacturer, makes the arrangement one of value for value received. Alumni filling out the form below will receive ring sizers and an order form which should then be returned along with a contribution of no less than $50. Delivery takes approximately five weeks. Checks should be made payable to The Mansfieldian.

I should like to become a "Wearer of the Ring." Please send me a ring sizer and order form.

MSC'S Varsities to See More Action This Fall and Winter

With expanded schedules, Mansfield State College's varsities will see considerably more action this Fall and Winter.

The cross country team has added the greatest number of new opponents: Bucknell University, Eastern Baptist Seminary, Clarion State College and Lock Haven State College.

The varsity basketball team will participate in the Christmas Tournament at Indiana University of Pennsylvania that will include three colleges that sent teams to the NAIA playoffs last year at Kansas City. Also added to the basketball schedule is one game with Lincoln University, a top contender for the NAIA District 19 title last season.

Elmira College has been added to the wrestling and golf schedules and the football team has added Bridgewater State College, Bridgewater, Mass., but has dropped Slippery Rock State College from its 1971 schedule.

After his one-room school experience, Ludington progressed to a three-room school "where three teachers taught all eight grades." During the war he taught in a junior-senior high school, where, because of a teacher shortage, "I taught everything nobody else would teach."

He came to Centre County in 1946 as principal of Harris Township Elementary School and "I have been a principal here ever since."

At the student party he was presented by the school's portrait of himself.

"I appreciate upon me. They were Speaking of his student real terrific about retiring."

Ludington said he plan, after his retirement each day as it comes of it."

He said he will rest years I should rest."

He plans to stay in area where his four grandchildren reside.

Alumni Day Set For May 1 At Mansfield State College

Alumni Day at Mansfield State College, scheduled for Saturday, May 15, will have an added sparkle, thanks to the students of the Women's Senate and the Government Association.

The special feature will be the first annual Miss Mansfield State College Pageant. The pageant, and final judging, is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. in Straughn Auditorium. Music will be by MSC's "Esquires."

Although details are still to be worked out, a pageant preview, or fashion show, is planned for sometime during or immediately following the alumni luncheon.

tion meeting will be held in Straughn Auditorium from 2 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. The annual luncheon is scheduled for 12 p.m. in Manser Hall. The "Alumnus of the Year" will be cited at this time.

The annual Alumni Tea and Reception at the President House will be between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m., as will all five year class reunions, each at designated places on the campus.

Festivities this year will sport still another first: The first annual Alumni Weekend Band Concert. The Mansfield State College Symphonic Band, under the direction of Richard N. Talbot, will present the concert.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Without the "over and above" support of First Citizens National Bank, Mansfield, this issue of the Mansfieldian would not have been possible.

That support was extended specifically as a tribute to the late Percy A. Coles, a Mansfield graduate, Class of '02, a former president of the Mansfield State College Board of Trustees, and the president of First Citizens National Bank from 1962 to 1972.

That tribute, in this issue, is presented as "Mr. Mansfield: A Eulogy."

PROJECTIONS OF INCREASED ENROLLMENTS NOW TERMED 'EXCESSIVE' AND 'UNREALISTIC'

President Park, In Report to Faculty Assembly, Says New Stances and Circumstances of State Pose A Challenge; Proposes Two New Major Curricular Changes: Two-Year and Five-Year Programs

Projections of increased enrollments at Mansfield State College to 5,800 students by 1976-77 are now considered "excessive" and "unrealistic," Dr. Lawrence Park, MSC president, reports.

The Mansfield president said that talks with Secretary of Education John C. Pittenger and members of the board of State College and University Directors developed the consensus that the growth rate among the State colleges would average from two to four percent a year.

"At that rate," Dr. Park pointed out, "We here at Mansfield may peak out at about 4,000 students. The Mansfield enrollment is presently 3,129."

Those and other observations touching on major policy directions were made by the MSC president in a report to the MSC Faculty Assembly on recent top level meetings that he, along with other members of the administration, faculty and student body, attended in Harrisburg.

Dr. Park pointed out also that whether or not Mansfield will grow will depend a great deal on the outcome of state-wide planning which will take place within the next few months. Alluding to a letter from Warren E. Ringler, acting commissioner of higher education, Dr. Park indicated that state officials are looking to the State-owned and private colleges to "regionalize" themselves in order better to serve the educational and manpower needs peculiar to their respective regions. MSC's "region," Dr. Park indicated, would comprise the counties of Tioga, Sullivan, Bradford, and Lycoming.

But the main emphasis of the president's report was on curricular programming. "The new stances and circumstances of the State constitute a challenge to the faculty to re-think our whole range of curricular offerings with a view to using our resources more efficiently and to offer our students more realistic opportunities."

At this point, the president proposed two new curricular changes: one, limited two-year associate degree programs; the other, a five-year program leading to a Baccalaureate in Human Services which would involve three years of college study plus two years of planned work experience in a related service field.

Of the two-year programs, Dr. Park said that they would be "related closely to present resources and the manpower needs of our area or region" and would be carried on only "in close cooperation with community colleges—not in competition with them." It is expected that discussions on this point will begin soon with Williamsport Area Community College and state officials.

Stressing some advantages of the five-year program, Dr. Park pointed out that it would reduce the cost of a degree to a student by more than 25 percent. The proposed program would also increase the number of degree earners without the necessity of accompanying increases in faculty or physical resources. It would "make certain that programs of the college are more pertinent and relevant. It would open up new job opportunities and contribute to the manpower needs of society," Dr. Park emphasized. The proposed program would be carried on in the framework of the liberal arts disciplines.

Referring to a letter from Secretary of Education Pittenger, Dr. Park pointed out that while the State's moratorium on new programs in the State colleges has been lifted, no new programs would be approved by Harrisburg unless other programs are "correspondingly reduced or eliminated to prevent escalation of budget, staff or enrollment for the institution."

"It is a real challenge to us to develop new programs within that framework," Dr. Park added.

Another area highlighted by the report was recruitment of students. "We will need to be more aggressive in recruitment so as to get a more heterogeneous student body from across the state," Dr. Park stated.

"We must also continue to seek students from community colleges in order to support community college development." By virtue of this recruitment among community colleges, the report suggested, "fully 60 percent of our enrollments should be eventually in the junior and senior classes."

"Also, we must continue in our efforts to attract black students—as per the charge from the Secretary of Education." A corollary need, the report suggested, is more black faculty.

But in recruitment generally, Dr. Park envisioned some difficulty. "We anticipate that it may be more difficult to attract students in the future," he said. He attributed the difficulty to "cost factors," "parental second thoughts about the need for a degree ('Why go to all the expense and trouble when plumbers, carpenters, mechanics are in greater demand?)," "the availability of spaces in more colleges," and "the changing job market in teacher education."

The report concluded that growth of the college can be possible without increased expenditures or undue use of resources by way of the college's continuing education program, the proposed two-year associate degree program and the newly-proposed five-year academic-work experience program.

Introducing:

THE NEW TRUSTEES

The Mansfield State College board of trustees has three new members. Appointed by Gov. Milton Shapp earlier this year, they are John J. Rigas, Coudersport; F. Duane VanNoy, Troy, and Charles M. Lugg, Nelson. They succeed former State Senator Jo Hays, State College; Donald Gill, Wellsboro, and Robert M. Jones, Blossburg.

Since 1952, Mr. Rigas has been the owner and president of various Community Antenna Systems in New York and Pennsylvania. Also during those years he was associated with Sylvania Electric Corporation at Emporium and the Air Preheater Corporation at Wellsville, N. Y.

A graduate of the Wellsville, N. Y. High School and a veteran of World War II in which he served with the Armored Infantry, John Rigas was graduated in 1951 from the Rennsselaer Polytechnic Institute with the bachelor of science degree in engineering management.

A past president of the Coudersport Rotary Club, the Coudersport Chamber of Commerce, and the Pennsylvania Community Antenna Television Association (1970-71), Mr. Rigas is presently a director of the Citizens Trust Company of Coudersport, president of the Charles Cole Memorial Hospital Board, and a member of the Masonic Blue Lodge of Wellsville, N. Y., and also of the Coudersport Consistory.

Duane VanNoy is a Troy attorney, a 1946 graduate of Troy High School who served two years in the U. S. Armed Services (1950-52) and who then for 11 years operated a general store in East Troy. It was not until 1963 that he entered Mansfield State College. He was a Dean's List graduate in 1966.

After teaching for one year at Interlaken, N. Y., Mr. VanNoy entered the University of Louisville Law School, graduating from that institution also as a Dean's List student in 1969. He opened his practice in Troy in 1970 and is married to the former Jane Adrienne Scott, also a graduate of MSC, Class of 1964. They have a daughter, Regina Faye.

Charles Lugg is a Trans-World Airlines flight captain and also is a Mansfield State College alumnus. A graduate of Elkland High School (1954), he matriculated at MSC in 1955. In 1956 he joined the U. S. Navy and became a carrier pilot, serving as such for five years in Western Pacific Theater.

After his service with the Navy, Mr. Lugg returned to MSC for his degree and then became a TWA flight crew member and then successively flight engineer, co-pilot and captain.

COLLEGE PLACEMENT OFFICE NOW OFFERING ALL SERVICES TO ALUMNI

New Dimension is an Aid to Graduates Seeking Different Employment or Those Who Want to be Apprised of Job Opportunities and Employment Trends

The Career Planning and Placement Office at Mansfield State College has taken on a new dimension: it's an alumni placement service for Mansfield graduates of both the teacher education and arts and sciences curricula.

Placement Office Director Thomas J. Costello explained the new service as an aid to graduates who are seeking different employment or graduates who want to be regularly apprised of job opportunities and employment trends.

Mr. Costello stressed at the same time, however, that graduates desiring the service would have to so notify the Placement Office and simultaneously update their confidential folders on file in the office to include post-graduate courses or degrees, additional experience, new references and any other pertinent data.

Once a person has updated his folder, Mr. Costello explained, an employment vacancy list will be mailed each month showing vacancies in all fields including education, administration, guidance, business and industry.

To keep abreast of present and future employment trends and vacancies, the office holds membership in several national placement associations, including the College Placement Council, Inc. and the Association for School, College and University Staffing. The office is applying for membership also in the Middle Atlantic Placement Association which has to do with placements in business and industry.

In addition, the Placement Office has a specialized library devoted solely to employment data including volumes of the Placement Annual and the Encyclopedia of Careers in Vocational Guidance.

MSC alumni desiring this service may write Thomas J. Costello, Director, Placement Office, Mansfield State College, Mansfield, Pa. 16933, or phone 662-2114, Ext. 407.

KNOXVILLE—Mansfield State College possesses a distinguished alumni chapter at Case Elementary School here. Every teacher and supervisor is a MSC grad.

They are a happy group and you can feel the warmth among them as they plan together and teach together in one harmony. Each has seen many changes in the system and all feel that a "change is good, a must if you are to keep up with the changing world."

Some have returned to Mansfield since graduation and there, too, have found a drastic change.

Thomas Huzey, elementary supervisor of the Case and Westfield elementary schools, graduated from Mansfield in 1967 and Penn State in 1970 majoring in education administration. This is his first year in the Northern Tioga School District.

"I feel that I received adequate preparation from Mansfield to go on to Penn State for my degree," he says.

Upon returning to Mansfield he has found it radically different. At the time he attended, there were the North and South Hall. Now there are four dorms.

Mrs. Maude Broadbent graduated in 1928 from Mansfield State College and has taught for 38 years in Pennsylvania. She taught 35 years in the Northern Tioga School District, two in Emporium and one in Westfield before the jointure and merger.

She, too, has seen great changes and improvements, "all for the better."

"If I hadn't enjoyed teaching, I wouldn't have taught these many years," says Mrs. Broadbent. She has two sons, Bruce, associate professor at Penn State on the York Campus, and George, associated with the Pennsylvania Gas and Power at Warren.

Mrs. Naoma Leathers graduated from Mansfield State College in 1944.

She recalls, "I graduated during the war years. The fellows were nearly all taken in the service in large busloads following special assemblies. Consequently we had very little in the way of social activities or sports events. Now I marvel at the many activities on campus there, the additions to the curriculum staff and new buildings, constantly being added.

"We all are very proud of the high standards of education being offered in our own state college in a nearby town for our children."

She continued: "Hats off to Jack Wilcox and his superior Opera Workshop Productions through the years. Their music department is my special interest."

Mrs. Leathers' oldest daughter, Janice, attended Mansfield for two years and now is a senior social service major at Lock Haven. Her youngest daughter, Rhonda, expects to be a music major at Mansfield in September, 1972. Her son Doren is a third year math-physics major at Lebanon Valley College.

Mrs. Helen Pratt graduated from Mansfield in 1952 and is "amazed at the growth of the college in the last few years. I enjoyed very much working with student teachers from Mansfield."

She lives out in the country with her husband Gerald and two sons, James, 18, and Joel, 15. She enjoys gardening, canning, baking and reading, besides teaching.

Named "Teacher of the Year" of the Cowanesque Valley elementary teachers in 1969 is Miss Hazel Brown, who has taught over 40 years in the Knoxville School.

She has a record of not missing a day of school except once owing to the illness of her mother.

She graduated from Mansfield State College in 1930 and has returned only to take refresher courses. She has found the change tremendous and says, "I feel that if you don't change with the times, you're out."

James Gardner, supervising elementary supervisor of the Northern Tioga School District, graduated from Mansfield in 1954 and has served the district for four years. He was elementary supervisor in the Southern Tioga District for two years, elementary principal of Liberty Elementary School for four years, taught sixth grade at the Canton Elementary for eight years.

Ed. Note—Other MSC faculty at the school, apparently unavailable at the time this feature was done, include: Dorothy West Gleason '41, special reading; Donald Schauer '69, instrumental music; Carol Bender Baglini, Jan. '72, art; Joan Gleason Seeley '71, librarian, and Dorothy Finemeyer Seiz, Jan. '72, music. Maiden names which might be helpful to classmates but which were not included in the story were those of Winifred Snyder Doan, Elizabeth Caffo Howe, Maude Merrick Broadbent, Helen Seeley Pratt, and Naoma Wood Leathers, to whom all thanks are due.

Not to take anything from Betty Campbell's excellent story, but editors must add the topping: the Knoxville School is known as the Gertrude Case Elementary School. Gertrude Case is still living in Knoxville and is approaching her 96th birthday. She too—of course—is a graduate of Mansfield, the then Mansfield Normal School, Class of 1894 (See Roundup, '94).

As for the great change in Mansfield, he says "the physical difference is obvious."

He added, "the caliber of Mansfield graduates is of the highest. It is encouraging to witness the changing role Mansfield State College is assuming in regard to public education agencies in its service area. Mansfield through its continuing education and other programs is creating a leadership role in the educational community."

Gardner has five children, three in the Junior-Senior High in Cowanesque, one in the fifth grade and a preschooler.

Arthur Warren graduated in 1934 from Mansfield State College and has taught 37 years, 18 years in the district—Liberty Township in a one room schoolhouse for one year; Chatham township for 18 years. Following the burning of the Little Marsh School, he was transferred to the Knoxville School. He has found tremendous changes in the school system and says, "I am glad to try something new."

Mrs. Winifred Doan graduated from Mansfield State College in 1964. This came after she decided to pursue her college education after 15 years out of high school and the raising of four children.

"My social life was quite different than most of the students on the campus," she says. "I commuted every day during regular sessions from 1960 to 1964."

On a visit to MSC she observed many changes in buildings in the past 10 years. "But since my oldest daughter, Sherry also graduated from Mansfield in 1969," she said, "I know the same excellent programs and professors remain." Her youngest daughter, Marcia, a senior at Cowanesque Valley High School, has also chosen Mansfield as her college. A son, John, expects to enter Corning Community College in January.

Mrs. Elizabeth Howe who graduated from MSC in 1954, visited Mansfield College the day they dedicated the Decker Gymnasium. "I was very impressed with such a beautiful building, including an Olympic-size swimming pool, named in honor of Mr. Decker, who was an instructor at the College while I was there," she said.

She has three teen-agers, so her education continues with the changing world.

'MR. MANSFIELD': A Eulogy

By J. HORACE STRUNK

The Mansfieldian's and First Citizens National Bank's tribute to an unforgettable Mansfieldian.

He was "Mr. Mansfield."

Percy A. Coles, whose life was a style unto itself and spanned the history of Mansfield from well before the turn of the century through a major part of the 20th, passed away on March 15, 1972.

His death turned one of the last pages on a remarkable era. His life helped to open a new one.

Percy Coles was born September 4, 1883, the son of a weekly newspaper publisher in Mansfield. Life wasn't easy for a boy in those days. Work was the order of the day. Percy was both milkman (a cow tethered in the backyard pasture was his responsibility) and paper boy for his father. Also, he was the bill collector on subscriptions—and payments in those days were made more frequently in eggs and potatoes than in cash.

Percy's Mansfield then was not much more than a hamlet. Dirt streets, few sidewalks and poor street lighting (kerosene lamps). Officially recorded major nuisances were dogs and drunks.

But then suddenly progress set in. Fire protection, water supply, sewage disposal, electric lighting—all were in the making. Industries—a cigar factory, novelty works, furniture factory, laundry, foundry, brick yard—were brought into town by a revitalized board of trade.

It was a time of expansion for the Normal School too. During this decade many new buildings were added to the campus.

And it was also the time (1900) for Percy Coles to enter the Normal School. That was three years after the first electric lights were installed. It was one year after Dr. Andrew Thomas Smith was elected principal and, whether or not by coincidence, the same year that "an addition furnishing toilet facilities for the boys was built at the back of South Hall." Progress seemed always to follow Perc.

Percy when he entered Mansfield
Progress seemed always to follow.

Things went well for Percy on the campus, until the one day he was expelled—at least momentarily. Seems that Perc, always the gourmet, was displeased with the dinner biscuits this one evening. But so was everybody else, and there were plenty left on the tables. So Percy and a few friends grabbed up arm-fuls for an after-dinner biscuit battle. That was all right until Percy, sighting in on a fellow student, missed and winged a pompous professor instead, knocking his hat off. Called in on the principal's carpet, Perc was told that this was it. But then the principal, feeling some charity—perhaps some sympathy—reversed his decision and let Perc stay.

Percy loved his life on the campus.* And he loved even more the era in which he was living. The influences of that era, still fresh and alive, colorful and dynamic, reached him. Percy's reminiscences, and allusions to days past, left little doubt in the mind of the observer that the era around the turn of the century greatly affected his life's tone and style.

It was an era devoid of the two-faced fantasy of television; an era of resourceful—if sometimes straightforward—conversation, and an era of visiting.

It was an era of a certain eloquence in speech and thought.

It was an era, while not of mass intellect, of high intellect; of warmth and feeling and stout loyalties; of simple politics and economies, having at least a semblance of direction.

It was an era sensitive to manners, having still a few crusty but rugged remnants of chivalry, and certainly a high sense of decency, even though sometimes embellished with farces of frills.

This was the period of Chauncey Depew, William Jennings Bryan, Russell Conwell and his "Acres of Diamonds," and the beginnings of the new world's appreciation of Goethe.

These were the times when the images of Stanley and Livingstone, Peary, Dewey, Abruzzi, Goethals were still fresh, as were those of Jenny Lind, Maude Adams, Jane Addams, Sarah Bernhardt, Edith Cavell and Lillian Russell.

Over the era's horizon passed Grover Cleveland, William Howard Taft, Charles Evans Hughes, Teddy Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson.

Andrew Carnegie's grant of $62 million for public libraries launched the era as one of fabulous benefactions.

It was here in history that all of the great symphony orchestras of America were founded with—credit is due—Continental genius.

This too was the period in which the "big" inventions came into their own: the automobile, radio, the wireless, the telephone, with the bold-faced credit lines of the period, however, going to such immortals as Pasteur, Koch, Curie, Welch, Osler and Kelly for selfless pioneering in the relief of human suffering.

These were days of Jack London; of Tolstoi's "Anna Karenina" and "War and Peace;" of Emile Zola and Dreyfus and "J'Accuse"; of Wister's "The Virginian," Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn," and Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac."

* As did brother, Edwin, a former president of the General Alumni Association, and sister, Inez Coles Leonard, who has been and still is "mother" to many a Mansfield student—and to many faculty members as well.

Percy's first year in business
There were 59 to go.

But Percy's attachment to the era of his impressionable youth hardly restrained his complete embrace of the next. Percy never had to "adapt" or "adjust", or at least make any visible effort at it. He was just there, every bit as much a part of one era as another. Witness his unfailing enthusiasm to the last for the people, activities, and events that crowded into what was to become a full life indeed. That enthusiasm, that spontaneous enjoyment of life—one of the salient qualities of his personality—was as marked at a theatre production or football game as it was in a church meeting or a choral festival.

After working summers in a pharmacy in Troy, Percy decided that that was for him. "For some reason I wanted to be a pill-roller." So after graduation from the Normal School in 1902, he matriculated at the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy.

His classmate—and roommate—at the College of Pharmacy was none other than Eli Lilly, who was to become one of the world's leading pharmaceutical tycoons. Their friendship endured through all the years since.

Percy was graduated from the College of Pharmacy in 1907 with the doctor of pharmacy degree.

After stints as a pharmacist in Johnstown and Altoona, Percy returned to Mansfield, purchased the Passmore Drug Store on East Wellsboro Street and started a business he was to operate for the next 59 years.

They were crowded years, packed with people of all walks of life and with a myriad wide-ranging interests. They started propitiously enough. Percy was washing down the storefront window when a friend called him down from the ladder to meet a newly-arrived voice teacher at the Normal School. That was the beginning of the end of Percy's bachelorhood. The new voice teacher was Pearl Lauderbach, of Dallas, whom Percy married on August 14, 1913. They observed their 50th anniversary six months before Pearl's death in early 1964. It was Percy's favorite anniversary, made especially so by son Dick and his wife

Percy, day after moving
Now familiar location: Main and Route 6 (Circa. 1928).

Margaret who surreptitiously planned the whole affair and pulled it off somewhat(?) as a surprise.

But Pearl was not without competition. Another early love of Percy's was golf. After playing at Wellsboro for several years, he and a few business associates decided that Mansfield needed a golf course. He and his associates virtually built the Corey Creek Club course with their own hands. Percy was the club's second president and was the last living charter member.

Percy played golf up until late last summer, when on cooler days he complained he didn't like to play if he had to wear mittens. His scores were respectable to the last; he was always "down the middle" and good with a putter too. But his best score—which he was fond of remembering—was some years ago when he posted two nine-hole rounds back to back for a 34 and a 41. He was best known, however, as a great companion on the course.

With pastor, church officials
The abiding interest.

Cut above carries its own story

Seems as though when Percy was approaching his 50th year in business, everybody thought he was going to retire, so they threw a big party for him at the Legion hall. During the ceremonies, they presented Perc a "Certificate of Retirement" which he promptly took back to the store, hung it above his desk—and then kept right on working for almost another decade.

Another abiding interest was his church, whose offices he served throughout his entire life. He had many other interests to which he would often nostalgically allude:

He was a former president of the Mansfield Fair and Smythe Park Association, a former president of the Business Men's Association, president of the Cemetery Association, and president of the board of trustees of his alma mater, the Mansfield State Teachers College. All that's not to mention one of his more powerful and influential positions—at least he made it so—that of Tioga County Republican State Committeeman.

And all that's not to mention his banking interests. An interesting anecdote is that when Percy was graduated from the Normal School, he was approached by two rather important bank executives who wanted him to enter the banking business. The offer was an attractive one, and Percy, having a predilection for banking too, was in somewhat of a dilemma. As it turned out, this could have been one of the rare instances in which a man was to have his cake and eat it too. For Percy's primary business interests ultimately became the pharmacy and the bank.

Long a director of Mansfield's First National Bank, Percy became its president in 1962. And again, if uncannily, progress seemed to follow him. In 1970, First National merged with Citizens National of Blossburg and the merged institution became the First Citizens National Bank of Mansfield.

In January, 1971, the Grange National Bank of Potter County, with offices at Ulysses and Genesee, also merged with First Citizens of Mansfield.

First Citizens' total resources in 1962, when Percy became president, were $5.87 million. In January, 1972, First Citizens' total resources had climbed to $28.83 million.

Another 50th anniversary
Percy's favorite.

With Eli Lilly (center)
The friendship endured.

At the Bankers' Convention
Another love was golf.

But Percy had one last consuming interest—a new bank building for First Citizens. He lived to see its plans drawn. Negotiations for land and construction consummated. He lived to break ground for the new structure and then to formally welcome friends to the cornerstone laying.

At Fire Company outing

Shortly before retirement
There were cobwebs on the certificate.

Ground-breaking, new bank
His last consuming interest.

His brief message of welcome on that occasion was a sort of epitome of his life. It is offered here as another clue to an inimitable personality:

"It is incumbent upon me—as president of First Citizens National Bank—to welcome you here today.

"I know of no occasion in my long lifetime that has been more significant or has given me more pleasure.

"I have lived in this country just 12 years short of a full century.

"And a full century it's been.

"I have come to know most of the people of this Northern Tier. I should know everybody here today; and if you're too young for me to know you, I'll bet—but, of course, bankers don't gamble—but I'll still wager I know your parents, your grandparents, and probably have known even your great grandparents.

"Now all of this is pertinent to this occasion.

"For First Citizens National Bank—even this splendid new facility—is far more than simply brick and mortar. First Citizens National Bank is PEOPLE. Its primary asset is not a dollar mark, it's knowing people. And its primary function is serving people.

"For most of the four score years and eight that I've been among you, I've shared your joys and sorrows, your trials and tribulations. I've heard your problems and have tried to help; but more than that I have always wanted to help to sustain you as a useful member of the community.

"Now all that may seem as though I'm overworking the first person pronoun. Actually, however, I'm speaking for the bank and I wanted to give our commitment to your interests and welfare a personal emphasis.

"Today, a great deal of history will go into this cornerstone. My sincere hope is that the history we write in the years to follow will not only be worthy of the history contained in this stone, but will add immeasurably to the life and happiness of the people of this community through ever-widening perimeters of personal services.

"It is in this context that I must say that I am indeed happy to welcome you here today."

Cornerstone Laying
His message, an epitome of a sort.

With Daisy Kenyon
His 88th birthday was ...

With Bob Jones, Dick Howe
... a double-barreled bang.

Percy celebrated his 88th—and last—birthday, September 4, 1971. Coincidence, perhaps. That was the same day the new bank building was formally opened.

Winning Seasons in Baseball, Track, Tennis, Golf Predicted

1972 Editions of MSC's Varsity Spring
Sports Boast Many Returning Lettermen

By DAN DAY '73

Boasting a strong nucleus of returning lettermen, the 1972 editions of MSC's varsity spring sports should produce winning seasons in track, baseball, tennis and golf.

Perhaps the brightest hopes in many years are those of the Bob Maxson-coached track team with six returning runners who broke Mountie records last season.

The thinclad record holders are: Ned Coulter who set the record in the 440-yard intermediate hurdles, Jim Healy who replaced the 51.3 seconds record for the 440-yard dash with a 50.5 mark, Bob Walls who rewrote the long distance records turning in new record times of 15:31.5 in the three-mile run and 33:12 in the six-mile run, Dave Moody who holds the 100-yard dash record, and Steve Jerolaman who placed fourth in state competition with a 1:54 in the 880-yard run.

Three of the four-mile relayers—Healy, Jerolaman, and Scott Thornsley—are back to improve their record performance of 3:25.9.

The field events will be the Mounties' biggest concern, but George Ayling in the pole vault and Tom Velker in the javelin and shot put events should hold their own while freshman John Miller, holder of the state high school long jump record, is expected to make his mark in this event.

The records for all distances in the running events are sure to fall as the thinclads get used to competition on their new all-weather synthetic track which gives better spring and faster times than the old type cinder track.

Facing their toughest schedule ever, the Mountie baseball team will be out for their fourth consecutive winning season under Head Coach John C. Heaps.

The Mounties will be depending on their strong pitching staff to hold up under the strain of 32 games in a six-week period. Only seven of these games will be on the home diamond.

Another key factor of Mountie success could be the hitting department. Star hitters returning for MSC are first baseman Terry Erway who hit .448 last season, second baseman Joe DeSanto who took 44 bases, scoring 21 runs on 35 hits to post a .412 batting average, pitcher Bob Diliberto who hit .348 and has pitched 13 wins including two no-hitters in his two years on the squad, and catcher Gary Waksmunski with a .310 batting average.

In addition to pitching ace Bob Diliberto, the Mounties will be relying on the arms of Larry Twyford, 8-0 in two seasons on the mound, and Dave Moore who won three games last year hanging up a respectable 2.01 earned-run average. Clutch performer John Ozustowicz and fireballers Don Barnes and Larry Rosetti will add depth to the pitching staff.

The team's strength, according to assistant coach Tom Costello, is depth with several talented freshmen and sophomores waiting in the wings.

Major losses to the Mountie team are all-conference shortstop Tom Cassell, who was snapped up by Boston in the pro draft, and Lebro Menichetti who led the '71 Mounties in the runs-batted-in department. Both were graduated.

To compile another season record of seven wins to one defeat in varsity tennis—including shutout matches against Kings College, Shippensburg State, Bloomsburg State, and Kutztown State—will rest in the hands of new-comers Paul Ivankevich and Roy Justice.

Four returning veterans, Phil Levkanich, Norm Moser, Bob Fegan and Randy Roberts will guide the netters in dual match action but the outcome of state tournament play, in which MSC placed second last year, will depend on help from the untested Justice and Ivankevich.

The big news in tennis will be National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics District 19 championships scheduled for May 13 at Mansfield. The tournament will involve 29 colleges and universities from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, New York, and Virginia. May 13 is also Alumni Day on the MSC campus.

In golf, Coaches Leslie Evans and Dr. Richard Finley should have little trouble producing another winning season equal to their fine 15-8 record of last season.

The linksmen are already on the winning trail as they picked up 5 wins to one loss in fall competition.

Lettermen Gary Sutton, Dennis Pascarella, Bob Overburger, and Jack Carrig will be leading the Mountie team in its drive for another successful season.

Another returning letterman, Dennis Krenitsky, and sixth man Steve Strocko add the necessary depth to the first squad.

'94

Since May 13—Alumni Day—is only five days off the mark, seems there should be some sort of special campus birthday party on that day for a special alumna. She's Miss Gertrude Case, of Knoxville, who on May 8, 1972, will observe her 96th birthday. Miss Gertrude taught 40 years in the public schools of Ulysses and Knoxville "plus five years of private kindergarten in Knoxville." Felicitations may be sent to her at simply Knoxville, Pa. 16928. Incidentally, School is now the "Gertrude Case Elementary School."

Congratulations are in order too for Esther R. Davies Hughes for whom this will be a 70th reunion year. Esther would "be delighted" to return to the campus for the Big Day, May 13, but the campus seems just a bit too far away from Chicago. Esther's living at the Baptist Retirement Home in Maywood where she assists the Home's physical therapist with handcrafts. In addition, for her own pleasure, she weaves, does macrame, moulds and paints objects as birds and animals—and now has taken up water color and oil painting. Says she enjoyed the pictures in the Mansfieldian and remembers Bell Barton, Helen Watts, Gertrude Allen and husband (the late Dr. John Doane), James Bennett, Percy Coles and many others who stir happy memories. This month she heard from Edna Bowman Gardiner "who was Dr. Straughn's secretary." Esther adds: "I live in a home that agreed to take care of me as long as I live for my entrance fee. Guess they didn't figure I'd live so long. Our home is modern in every way." And then, an invitation: "If any from there are in Chicago ever, I'd like them to be my guests for lunch or dinner. It would be so good to see someone. They should phone (Area Code 312) and then 343-9548—and just ask for me." Esther's address is: Baptist Retirement Home, 316 Randolph St., Maywood, Ill. 60153.

In the month's mail, a nice note from Gertrude Allen Doane, whose name alone stirs generations of memories at Mansfield. Her late husband, Dr. John, was the college physician for many years. At Homecoming in 1969, the Doane Health Center was dedicated in his name. Also a Mansfield grad and also a physician was Dr. John's brother, Joseph II, who's seen on Dr. John's left in the cut on these pages. Seen also on the same cut (standing l. to r.) are Dr. Joseph III, Dr. John Jr., and Dr. Bill, all sons of Dr. John and Gertrude and, except for Dr. Joe III, also Mansfield graduates. As a reminder, Gertrude's address is 229 10th St., West Palm Beach, Fla. 33401, which just happens to be also the address of Dr. Joe III.

Merle Cogswell Grant is these days "sitting" with two great grandsons—15 mos. and three years. They're Bob's grandsons. Merle reports that daughter, Phyllis Grant Meretta, has a class reunion coming up May 13, her 35th, and that they all hope to get back to the campus then. Merle's address is 557 Forest Lawn Road, Webster, N. Y. 14580. Merle and daughter Carolyn had planned to attend the dedication of the new Grant Science Center Addition but an accident en route precluded their attendance. Bob, however, represented the family and presented a refinished portrait of his late father after whom the Center is named. The portrait is Merle's favorite.

Constance Rockwell Cooper, writing to change her address, confesses: "My husband and I finally decided we could forego northern winters." The Coopers are now residents of a "very attractive" retirement development (Sunny Shower Villas) located on Tampa Bay. Says they want to be sure to continue getting the Mansfieldian. Their new address is: 125 56th Ave. South, St. Petersburg, Fla. 33705 . . . The passing of Jessie M. Colwill (Class of '21), retired Union City school teacher, was reported by Edith Miller via a note and a clipping from the Hudson Dispatch. Edith once taught in the town next to Union City. Edith's address is: 64 E. Elmira St., Mansfield, Pa. 16933.

'12

Reed W. Hitchcock reports he hasn't been active since May, 1970. But a year of leisure might have been well-earned: Reed taught for three years, and then went into tobacco farming. He was associated with the Connecticut Humane Society for 35 years, 30 of which he served as state president. He was elected to the Connecticut state legislature and served on the General Assembly's Committee on General Law. The Hitchcocks have three sons, seven grandchildren and four great grandchildren. Reed's address is 28 Pleasant St., Warehouse Point, Conn. 06088.

Note from Elsie Burk who reports that the annual dinner meeting of the Mansfield State College Alumni Club of the Greater Philadelphia Area—and that was a doozie to get on the newly-printed charter, something the club had not had for 23 years—will be held again at the Peacock Inn at King of Prussia on the evening of April 22 . . . Dr. Clifford E. Scouten, one of Mansfield's many double alumni ('15 and '25), is now retired and is living in Florida. His address is: Box 433, Ft. McCoy, Fla. 32637.

Carlos and Minnie Mills Dickinson could hardly feel alone in the world. They have four daughters, 17 grandchildren and 7 great grandchildren—all active, with professional titles ranging from artists and nurses to dental hygienists and psychologists. The Dickinson address is: 4 Werner Park, Rochester, N. Y. 14620.

Way down New Mexico way, Hartley B. Dean has a change of address. It's now 4422 Canyon Court, N. E., Albuquerque, N. M. 87111. Apparently, Hartley came mighty close to the O. K. Corral shootout. Or at least the site of it. Might even have walked "where they fell" . . . The missives of Gordon Granger are impeccably typed, crisp, concise—and prompt. Last fall, editors asked Gordon for a snapshot. Later he replied: "Am having some made and will mail you snapshot on Wednesday, January 12th." Envelope containing snapshot was postmarked "January 12th." Someone told editors that Gordon was not receiving his Mansfieldian. Gordon countered that with the terse: "Please be advised that I have been receiving all copies of the Mansfieldian and that you have my correct address in your files." That correct address is: 1507 Yagle Avenue, Prospect Park, Pa. 19076 . . . Editors' thanks to Esther Gere Robinson for the kind words and her support of the Mansfieldian. Comb Times Square in Slaying

By VINCENT LEE and ARTHUR MULLIGAN

Police were combing the Times Square area yesterday for clues to the identity of a killer who fatally shot a vacationing schoolteacher — a former state trooper — as he sat in a car with his wife on Broadway, near 36th St., Sunday night.

Mayor Lindsay described the shooting as a "senseless and vicious crime which must not go unpunished." Lindsay said he had directed Police Commissioner Murphy "to make every possible effort, with special emphasis on the Midtown Police Task Force, to apprehend the perpetrator."

A Science Teacher
Victim of the shooting was Stephen Borg, 40, of Mansfield, Pa., a science teacher at Booth Junior School in Elmira, N.Y., some 20 miles from his home. He had been a New York State trooper.

play in Greenwich Village on Sunday evening and had pulled over to the curb on Broadway, south of 37th St., to decide whether to visit some night spot. It was 11 p.m.

A gunman approached the car on the driver's side and ordered Borg to get into the back seat. Borg, who had $200 in his wallet, stepped on the gas and the car shot forward. The gunman fired twice, hitting the teacher in the head and the back.

Thrown to Sidewalk
As her husband slumped over the back seat, Mrs. Borg tried to get out but it was too late.

firing the two shots, was described as black, about 25, with an Afro haircut, 5-feet-10, wearing brown trousers and a brown shirt.

Police said that Mrs. Borg, a native of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, had come to New York three weeks ago for minor surgery, details of which were not disclosed. When she got out of the hospital last Wednesday, her husband came to join her for a brief vacation. They intended to return home tomorrow.

Borg and his wife lived on a 300-acre dairy farm owned by Borg's father, Herbert, 65, on the outskirts of Mansfield. After leaving the state police, Borg was with his father.

Charles W. DeWitt, 65, of Towanda -- One of State's Most Dedicated Educators

By ASHTON MERRILL

Charles W. DeWitt of 24 Huston Street, Towanda, who was the last of Bradford County's 11 county school superintendents and who for years was regarded as one of Pennsylvania's most dedicated educators.

superintendent in 1954, Mr. DeWitt, his associate for a good many years, succeeded him, being elected by the school directors of the county. Term after term followed as the directors showed their con-boards to three, though that did not change Mr. DeWitt's conviction that such a school is needed in the county to complete its education service to the youth.

Mr. DeWitt was held in high esteem by associates throughout the state in the field of education and in April of 1961 Dr. Charles Boehm, state superintendent of Public Instruction, awarded him a special citation in recognition of his Superintendents in the field of member-ship. He was very thorough and highly conscientious.

Miss Jessie Colwell; Ex-School Teacher

The funeral and burial of Miss Jessie M. Colwell, 70, a former Union City school teacher, took place Monday in Susquehanna, Pa.

Miss Colwell took some of her young relatives from Colorado to the American Museum of Natural History in New York City last Friday and during the tour suffered a stroke. She died in an ambulance en route to Roosevelt Hospital.

Until her retirement, Miss Colwell taught in Sara Gilmore Union City. She was a native of Susquehanna.

member of the National Association of School Administrators; served on the White House Educational Task Force; was a leader in the Pennsylvania State Association of School Administrators.

Former Resident Retires from Education Post

Alfred Lupien of Nutley, N. J., administrative Assistant to the Nutley High School, retired after 29 years in the system. A special feature in the Nutley Sun recognized his accomplishments in the Language Department. An alumnus of Mansfield State College, he earned a master's degree at Duke University. He broadened his field by extensive traveling in Europe, France, Spain, Mexico and Cuba.

Mr. Lupien began his teaching career at Canton High School from 1928-1936. He married the former Kathryn McCurdy who taught in Canton from 1927-1933, a year after their marriage. Mr. Lupien recalled that at that time women teachers could only hold that position for a year after marriage.

traveling, they're at home at 1919 Bucaneer Drive No. 49, Sarasota, Fla. 33581 . . . Sometime ago, Mrs. Paul (Edith) LaFrance wrote the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce to learn if the Bates Studio were still in existence, and, if not, whether the present owners could still possibly have a copy of the picture of Army trainees taken in 1918 on the Mansfield campus. Her late husband was among those on the photograph. The letter was passed along to various people in the community and ultimately landed in this office. After a long search editors found a reproduction of the panoramic photo in the alumni archives. But reproducing the reproduction has been something else. However, editors can now report to Mrs. LaFrance that within the week the photo copy will be winging its way to California where Mrs. LaFrance lives at 421 Winthrop Drive, Alhambra 91803 . . . Note from Esther McCarthy reveals passing of Nellie Major Gilbert. Editors thanks to Esther for congratulatory message. Esther's address is: 542 Bennett St., Luzerne, Pa. 18709 . . . Catherine Frances Golden (Sister Mary Laurentia, R.S.M.) has a new job which, after more than 50 years in school either as principal or teacher, she finds "very relaxing and unique." She is the purchasing agent on the staff of St. Kevin School in Flushing, N. Y. She's active also in the Senior Citizens Club and the Cancer Society. Her address is: 45-50 195th St., Flushing, N. Y. 11358.

The Lafayette ALUMNUS reports that Kim Marvin hasn't slowed down appreciably, is just as busy as ever with Kiwanis, Church, Shrine, Consistory et al. It reports also that Kim and Adeline were recent weekend guests of Mrs. David Skillman at her home, Orchard Knoll, Mountainhome, Pa. (The late David Skillman was for many years secretary of the Lafayette Board of Trustees.) Mrs. Skillman entertained the Marvins with a large reception, and among the other guests, reports the ALUMNUS, were President and Mrs. Bergethon and members of the board of trustees. The Marvins are at home at 48 Sherwood St. in Mansfield 16933, where, on the occasion of Adeline's 75th birthday, they recently gave a party that half the town (almost) will remember.

Martha Whiteley, who went on from MSNS to Ohio Wesleyan for a baccalaureate degree and then, following training at Christ Hospital School of Nursing in Cincinnati, Ohio, became a registered nurse, is now retired. Although apparently officially retired from her post with Women's Society of Christian Service of the United Methodist Church, Martha is still active in the social service programs of her church in Williamsport, Pa. where her full address is 1002 Rural Ave. 17701 . . . With a double alumna there always arises the question of class identification. Gladys Brooks Murray was graduated from the Normal School in '22, came back for her baccalaureate in 1932. Retired from teaching as of 1964, she lives at 10 Fox Terrace, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. 12603 . . . Incidentally—yet it should be more emphatic than that—this is the 50th reunion class! One person who is interested enough to make the trip from Florida—should anything be planned—is Anna Sheffer Gibson. Interested classmates may reach her at 76 Coquina Ave., St. Augustine, Fla. 32084.

The name Mona, in Welsh, has the connotation of "mother." Well, Mona Case Shedden is not only that, she's grandmother and great grandmother as well—of twin boys. She's the mother of Carol and Lynette (MSC '47). Carol has three children, to one of whom must be attributed the great grandtwins. Lynette and Glenn Boyce (MSC '57—he started a family before starting college) have four children—one a teacher, one a high school senior and two sons who are currently U. S. Air Force Academy cadets (4.0!). Lynette teaches in Horseheads, N. Y., and Glenn at Elmira Heights, N. Y. Mona, a widow, is still active in churchwork, but has retired from Girl Scout activity after 18 years' service. She lives at 351 Wilson Ave., in nearby Blossburg, Pa. 16912 . . . Up in Rochester, N. Y., Harold Tassell is an M.D., the father of three grown daughters (Jean, 35; Bonnie, 22, and Nancy, 21), and the husband of Registered Nurse Marjorie. Reports he is "still on the job, busy, and happy as a lark." He failed to say whether or not all that applied to Marjorie. The Tassells' full address is: 251 South Goodman St., Rochester, N. Y. 14607 . . . Editors trust that Mary Maneval has long since received her Mansfieldian. Must've been a delay in the mails. Her address: 427 W. Nields St., West Chester, Pa. 19380, jives with the files. Editors' thanks for her note on Kathleen Strunk . . . Editors' many thanks to Aletha Hallett (Mrs. Sylvania) Andrew for her welcome message and her grand support of the Mansfieldian. The Andrews live on Bella Vista Farm, Ewingsville Road, Trenton, N. J. 08638 . . . Writing from Florida, Margaret Harer reports she has seen Helen Danforth Sherlock and her husband a number of times down there in the land of sunshine. She and Helen were roommates at MSNS. Margaret retired from teaching (in Williamsport) in 1958 and has since been wintering in Florida. However, she now reports that she and her sister have sold their home in the country (Jersey Shore, Pa., R. D. 3) and have taken an apartment in Williamsport which will henceforth be their permanent and year-round home. So Marget's year-round address from now on will be: 715 Campbell St., Williamsport, Pa. 17701 . . . Mildred Brenneman Bigelman, after getting her baccalaureate degree from Newark State College in New Jersey, taught for 37 years at Nutley, N. J. Widowed in 1957, she remarried in 1966 to Edwin Bigelman who—for the possible sake of any MSC traffic violators there—just happens to be chief of police in Rutherford, N. J. The Bigelmans live at 1025 Broad St., Clifton, N. J. 07011.

Mildred Levine Erickson can not only be proud to be a "wearer of the ring," she can be doubly proud that her family made the contribution in her honor in support of the Mansfieldian. Culprit of the undercover negotiations was daughter, Linda Erickson Priester, but more on Linda under '64.

Another double alumna of MSC is Dorothy Seymour Bullard who came back for her B.S. degree 33 years after graduation from the Normal School. Since that time (1959) she taught First Grade for 12 years in Athens Area Schools at Ulster and then retired in June, 1971. Editors' thanks to Dorothy whose address is simply Ulster, Pa. 18850. Incidentally, Dorothy's brood consists of two daughters, two sons-in-law (who take the place of sons), and five grandchildren.

Virginia LaFrance has been retired since 1967 (after 40 years' teaching) but she still does some teaching as well as charity work at Meshoppen's Tyler Memorial Hospital.

Virginia LaFrance
Had a visitor from '27.

She reports that classmate Edythe Neal Myers, who now lives in Wayne, visited her last October and spent hours looking over her Carontowans. Editors would still provide updated printout of class members if she wanted it. Virginia's address is: Box 75, Meshoppen, Pa. 18630 . . . The Pennsylvania State University has conferred the M.Ed. degree in elementary education upon Ruth Allen Brown, 405 Lincoln St., Sayre, Pa. 18840.

Ethel English Bishop Stethers has had a change of address. And a big change it was—from San Diego, California, to within three blocks of Alma Mater's campus. Says she's "never had it so good" as she has it now in her "adorable apartment" at Sherwood Manor, Box 233, Apt. 233, Mansfield, Pa. 16933. Ethel taught in Pennsylvania grade schools for eight years and then went on to pursue "a very active and happy life." She was widowed in 1966. Had two children of whom she is "very proud."

Seems to be a long-standing mixup over two Harriett Davis's in the alumni files. Writes one Harriett Davis: "I am very sorry but I am not a graduate of Mansfield, I have been getting mail from Mansfield for years. I am a graduate of Wilson College and I DID marry a guy named J. Brit Davis, Class of '29. Brit tells me that Harriett Davis was a maiden who attended Mansfield in 1917." What editors cannot understand is how anyone married to J. Brit Davis can fail to be some sort of an alumna of Mansfield—if only in spirit . . . Mary Milota Jackett is not only an admittedly proud "wearer of the ring" but a happy one too. Mary chose the ladies' filigree dinner ring. Of it she writes: "I am very very well pleased with my new dinner ring. It is quite elegant and yet not too fancy, so that it can be worn on all occasions. I am indeed glad to have been able to give my support to the new Mansfieldian." Mary, who's in the Fiscal Division of the U. S. Naval Supply Depot at Mechanicsburg (near Harrisburg), lives at 623 Camp St., Harrisburg, Pa. 17110.

Now it can be told: It was Hazel Brown who alerted editors about Gertrude Case (See Roundup under '94) and her 96th birthday virtually on the eve of Alumni Day, May 13. When Hazel wrote concerning Miss Gertrude, she put it this way: "Miss Gertrude Case of the Class of 1894 at Mansfield, was 95 years old last May 8. She wonders if she is entitled to one of the next Mansfieldians?"—!!?!?! Hazel's address is simply Tioga Co., Knoxville, Pa. 16928. For a glimpse of Hazel (circa. 1971), see cut of the faculty of the Knoxville School on these pages.

Editors trust that, as of this past Christmas, Mike Hrycenko was a proud—if surprised—"wearer of the ring." Wife Alice made the secret arrangements, writing: "Michael has expressed a desire for a class ring to replace the one he lost years ago. I would like to surprise him with one as one of his Xmas gifts." Editors' heartiest wishes to Alice in her objective to break 90, come next season's golf; but caution Mike: "You know what her next objective will be!" Latest report is that the Rev. John Albert Squires is a minister of the Western Pennsylvania Conference of the United Methodist Church at Pittsburgh. He is married to the former Eva Wheeler who 32, 31 and 25 years ago respectively presented him with John Delbert, Paul Deane and Ann (now Kern). The Squires live in Russell, Pa. 16345 where their address is simply Main Street . . . To understate the case, Ruth Melson, who is elementary mathematics coordinator in the Haverford Township Schools, is working overtime. Her teacher training program in elementary mathematics, consisting of cassette tapes and accompanying workbook, was published last spring. Her article on the non-graded mathematics program in Haverford Township was carried by the Pennsylvania School Journal last November. And a non-graded elementary mathematics program she has written for pupils will be published this spring. Ruth is at home at the Radwyn Apartments, L-4, 275 Bryn Mawr Ave., Bryn Mawr, Pa. 19010.

Tonia Botti sent the clipping (See "In the News" pages.) on the tragic death of Stephen Borg (MSC '70), commenting laconically: "Fun City—Fear City—Or anything can happen any time." . . . Note on Janet Artley below under '38.

In the spring of 1944, after having taught school for six years in her hometown of Westfield, N. J., Ruth Arthur went overseas with the hospital service of the American Red Cross. The following year she married the Rev. Frank Heasman, a clergyman of The Church of England, and has been living in England ever since, with the exception of four years (1956-60) which she spent with her husband serving the church in British Guiana, South America. The Heasmans have three children, two of whom (son and daughter) are graduates of English universities and one of whom (daughter) is still in secondary school. But, Ruth writes, "With the exception of a few years when the children were very small, I have taught nearly all my life in whatever part of the world I happened to be." Ruth expects to be teaching English in Somervale Comprehensive School (the new development in British secondary education). She'd be happy to welcome any Mansfieldians in her part of England. The only one she has really kept in touch with over the years is Janet Artley '37. Ruth's full address is: Mrs. Frank Heasman, Westfield Vicarage, Midsomer Norton, Bath, Somerset, England. She has editors' thanks for her support of the Mansfieldian.

Howard ('40) and Barbara Toy Cleave apparently have wasted little time since their days at MSTC. Barbara, now a teacher—intermediate special—in the Great Neck, N. Y. public schools, was a science major at MSTC who went on to get her certification in special education after advanced work at Adelphi University. Prominent in many of Great Neck's social and civic affairs, she has still found time to raise three daughters: Trudy (now 30), a graduate of Duke University (B.S. and R.N.) whose husband, a Bennington, Vt. lawyer, has been a state legislator; Mary (now 25), who, with her husband, is working for a doctorate at Utah State, and Barbara (now 20), a sophomore wild life major at Utah State. Howard, a music major at MSTC, now has his doctorate (Ed.D.) from Columbia University.

News on Howard Cleave above under '39 . . . Between them, Betty Lee and Frank Reimel have 28 private piano students, four sons, a furniture store, a church choir, a children's choir and, not long ago, as a sort of topping, had a 25th wedding anniversary. The Reimels live at 59 High St., Montrose, Pa. 18801 . . . George and Catherine ('43) Guy are living in nearby Blossburg where George is the revenue agent at Blossburg State Hospital. Catherine is a librarian in the Blossburg schools. They have two sons. The Guy address is: 232 Granger St., Blossburg, Pa. 16912.

James Hendricks has retired after 30 years of teaching instrumental music (accent on strings) in Haverford Township public schools. His address is: 117 Deerfield Road, Bryn View Estates, Broomall, Pa. 19008.

Robert Mitstifer has been a math teacher (Curtin Jr. H. S., Williamsport), a principal (Williamsburg H. S., Blair County), and an assistant superintendent (Tioga County Schools). Now he is assistant executive director of BLaST Intermediate Unit 17, headquartered in Williamsport. But the latest is that he recently received the DED in educational administration, from The Pennsylvania State University. A proud—and "pleased"—wearer of the ring is Anita Emmanuel (Mrs. George H.) Kitch. Says she is "proudly showing it to everyone." Still mighty interested in Mansfield, Anita is these days still probably poring over the printout of alumni which editors sent her on Lancaster County where she now lives and works. Fact is, Anita and her family have been living in Lancaster for 11 years. A dietitian for most of those years, she has now returned to teaching: commercial food trades in the Mt. Joy school of the new Lancaster County Area Vocational-Technical Schools. She writes: "I have found teaching here much more enjoyable than teaching in an 'academic' school. There is a great need for vocational-technical training." The Kitchs live at 835 Fountain Ave., Lancaster, Pa. 17601 . . . Fred Terry, who spent three years in the Counterintelligence Corps of the Army, holds an MA in math from both Northwestern University and the University of Illinois and is now working on another master's (in computer science) at Penn State, is presently an instructor in computer science at Penn State's Beaver Campus. He has taught at the American College of Switzerland, Elizabethtown College, Hood College, and Lake Forest College. His address is 368 Beaver St., Beaver, Pa. 15009.

By this time at least some of the MSC alumni living in Berks, Lehigh and Lancaster Counties have heard from Joan Ueberhauer Auman. May (13th) will mark a 10-year period for the Class of 1962, I'm hoping many members will make a special effort to return on Alumni Day." Helen has her master's degree in library science and is library media specialist for the Middle School of Newark Valley Central School District. "Mansfieldian is a joy." Editors' thanks. Helen's address is 25 Maple Ave., Newark Valley, N. Y. 13811.

The Bob Ginters have a new address. It's: R. D. 1, Van Etten, N. Y. 14889. Wife Dorothy is the former Dorothy M. Barndt, MSC '62. Apparently both are elementary instrumental teachers . . . Correction for the files and all interested alumni: Catherine J. Schenck is now Catherine J. Myers (married to Mike in June, '69) and her address is now 1547 Cottage Lane, Baltimore, Md. 21204. She's presently teaching in the Baltimore County School System. Editors' thanks.

Ed Parmenter says he enjoys the new Mansfieldian and especially hearing about his classmates. Says also that the Mansfieldian "could never catch up" to him in these columns. Maybe someone else can; his address is Box 56, R. D. 1, Athens, Pa. 18810 . . . At long last, Malinda McFall (for the benefit of the alumni files) is changing her name and address. With belated felicitations, it's now Malinda Wolf whose address is now 349 W. 6th St., Apt. D-2, Lansdale, Pa. 19446. Malinda taught for four and a half years in elementary school, but is now teaching her own children: Mindy, 3, and Allen, 1. Editors' thanks . . . Cited as Undercover Agent of the Month is Linda Erickson Priester. It was Linda who stealthily negotiated all the arrangements that led to a family contribution in honor of her mother (See Roundup '24) and a class ring for same. Last word was that Mother was "pleased and very excited about the gift." Linda, her husband and two little boys, Shawn and Kurt, are living at East Smithfield, Pa. in Bradford County where their address is Box 82 and the zip is 18817. Linda's been teaching English and speech at S. R. U. High School since completing her student teaching there . . . Sara (Sally) Ann Slamp is just plain "enjoying life" and wants to know: "Where's Jeannie Weenie?" Sally has 20 credits beyond Mansfield (at Syracuse) and is with the Board of Cooperative Educational Services at Cortland, N. Y. She's a teacher of the mentally retarded. And—incidentally—she's the area chairman for the Special Olympics, the North Central Pennsylvania, Regional meet which will be held on the MSC campus — on Alumni Day. Sally's address is 28 Van Hoesen St., Cortland, N. Y. 13045 . . . Prominently active in the recent Blossburg Centennial was Diane Husted Greer (married to Bill) who, for the past four years has been substitute teaching in the Southern Tioga School System. Diane and Bill have a daughter Gale, 4, and live at 141 N. Williamson Road, Blossburg, Pa. 16912 . . . There's a note on Jane Adrienne Scott Van Noy, under '68 . . . Florentino Caimi is supervisor of instrumental music of the Muncy (Pa.) School District. He and his wife Carol have Paul Brian, two, and Tara Marie, one, and live at 213 West Penn St., Muncy, Pa. . . Among MSC grads receiving advanced degrees at Penn State this past year was Jeannette Bailey Rose (MED in home economics), wife of MSC's illustrious business manager, King Rose. The Roses live high on Smoke Rise (P!P!) where their address is simply R. D. 2, Mansfield, Pa. 16933.

A new name and address for Alice Carlson: They're now Mrs. Joseph R. Tolan and 31 Third St., Canisteo, N. Y. 14823. Of course, this news as well as that of Jim's other sister, Mrs. Gib Moore (See '58 and '60) has been furnished by brother Jim Carlson, who was prominently identified with the MSC Admissions Office and who is now pursuing doctoral studies at PSU. For mailing purposes, Jim prefers his address to be simply Turtlepoint, Pa. 16750 . . . Tom Johnson has been named superintendent of the Commercial Property Department at the Columbia office of Aetna Life & Casualty. He lives at 5847 Percival Road, Columbia, S. C. 29200.

The Class of '66 now has a member on the MSC board of trustees. He's Duane Van Noy, Troy attorney, who, it might be said, "came up the hard way." Duane was graduated from Troy High School in 1946. He served in the Armed Services from 1950 to 1952, after which he opened a general store in East Troy. Eleven years later he entered MSC and was graduated in 1966 as a Dean's List student. Duane taught for one year and then entered the University of Louisville Law School and was graduated from that institution in 1969, also as a Dean's List student. He opened his practice of law in Troy in 1970 and is married to the former Jane Adrienne Scott, MSC '64. They have a daughter, Regina Faye, and the mailing address apparently is 16 Canton St., Troy, Pa. 16947 . . . Certainly among the more pulchritudinous candidates for advanced degrees at Penn State this year was Georgia Brooke, upon whom was conferred the MED in general family studies. Georgia's home address is listed as 32 Becker Rd., North Wales, Pa. 19454 . . . Editors' thanks to Jim and Beverly Harlan Kinzer for alerting them on the vital statistics: "Seven pounds, four ounces." Now six-months, Tiffany Ann lives with her parents at Eldred, Pa., where her P. O. Box is 333 and her zip 16731. At three months, Tiffany was "a sheer joy"—could be a double one now.

Editors trust the salary is commensurate with the title: Phyllis Wright is assistant cooperative extension home economist for the Business and Professional Women of Warren County under the aegis of The Pennsylvania State University. That's probably spelling it out too literally, but that's actually her job. Penn State conferred the MED in general family studies last year. Phyllis lives at 15 Conewango Ave., Russell, Pa. 16345 . . . Thanks to Dee Newman (see '68 below) "a few tidbits" on '67 friends. Seems as though the tidbits are all daughters, however. Sue Girtton and Ted Binley have one; so have Ginny (Esther Bramble) and John Vincenti, as have Mike and Linda Rhodes Brace, except

IN THE NEWS:

Score One for Frugality

We deplored in these columns several weeks ago the widespread practice of business, industry and government using three or more envelopes in their mailings when one would do.

Today it is pleasure to report that not everyone is so wasteful and that Mansfield State College, demonstrated recently how it can be done.

The public relations office sent out three stories to the news media — in one envelope. It saved paper, postage, postal service handling and time all along the line. We applaud such efforts to consolidate mailings.

The savings may only be in terms of pennies when you consider just one instance. But multiply these

The College MANSFIELD BAND DAZZLES Mounties Go A-Marchin'

Though it was late, Richard Talbot and his young assistant, Bill Stahl, again went over the complicated game plan. It had to be ready for the following Saturday.

"We'll send the B group down the right side of the field to the 20-yard line, then have the cut to the left. The W group will come down the left side of the field while the P group takes the center."

The two spent almost an entire night drawing up charts. All movements had to come with precision timing. The work was long and not tedious. They were completed plan.

Richard Talbot and Bill Stahl are members of a team, not competitors, but the moving force behind the spectacular 182-piece band of Mansfield State College.

Two years ago, Talbot, unlike most others, was hired as band director, not as an "explosion" buried in the past.

Mr. Talbot is a graduate of Mansfield State College and Drake University.

doctoral studies at the University of Wyoming. His specialty is marching bands.

The new director lit the match for the explosion. Old uniforms, old marches, old music—all were discarded. Even a new name was adopted—the Mounties.

Mr. Talbot met with a manufacturer and helped design the new scarlet and black uniforms. They were fashioned after the uniforms of the Quebec parliamentary guards.

Plans were developed for new marches. Unlike other bands, the Mountie Band doesn't march with knees and arms, Mr. Talbot explained. "We try a dignified walk and the result is a wave action, not bouncing."

Must Shift Gears

Incoming students who participate in the band find some unlearning old habits. "It takes a while to get used to the new style," the band director said.

Mr. Talbot actively retrained his group by sending letters to all freshmen with school band information.

third of the members are majoring in other fields.

To complement the musicians, an eight-man flag line, a rifle team, and color guard were formed. The number of majorettes increased from four to eight.

The size of the band more than doubled to its present 182 members, which makes it one of the state's largest and the largest in the history of the college.

Even Mr. Talbot was surprised with the results of the drive for members. For two years he underestimated the number of uniforms. Both times, the percussion section had to don black turtleneck shirts and pants from the old uniforms.

More uniforms are on order, and the band director expressed hope that maybe next football season his predictions will stand up and all his bandmen will be dressed alike.

Also changed was the music. Mr. Talbot envisions a half-time performance as a Broadway musical. The show should build to a peak.

the other instruments. Not so the Mountie band. "We have a total sound concept in which we try to keep the brass and woodwind sections even," the band director explained. "The bright but not overbearing" bility will better prepare Bill of m for his life's work.

Bill heartily agrees. "My experience here puts me a step ahead of others when I try to find a job," he commented. A school band directorship in New York State or New England is his goal.

Besides conducting, Bill also helps in the massive administrative work of which few people are aware. Many hours are spent developing charts for formations. Looking like a coach's clipboard of football plays, the charts developed by Mr. Talbot and Bill show all the yard lines on the gridiron. Different colored marks represent each band section. The progression of the band through its routines is followed by flipping through the pages. The charts are prepared a year in advance.

Plans Arrangements Bill also helps plan arrangements for away games. His duties include drawing up letters of who sleeps in the hotel.

Following game, Mr. Talbot's letter from the letterbox is a success. The band sells Mansfield its audience doing a good in this case there are two. The Binleys live at 112 Pine St., Bath, N. Y. 14810; the Vincentis, 806 Mt. Vernon Ave., Huntingdon, Pa. 16652, and the Braces, Box 719, Andover, N. Y. 14805 . . . Tanya Hotalen was awarded the MS in home economics education by the State University College, Plattsburg, N. Y., at commencement exercises last August. She's teaching foods and family relations in the Monument Mountain Regional School District, Great Barrington, Mass. Tom's teaching ninth grade math at Philmont, N. Y. Tanya comes through with quite an idea: wishes the Athletic Department would release a bi-weekly report on varsity sports. Thinks "many graduates would pay a couple of dollars a year to keep in touch with Mounty achievements in sports." The Hotalen address is: Farm Road R. D. 1, Copake, N. Y. 12516 . . . Jane Mott and Newton Kulp are the proud parents of a baby girl. But there were many long anxious moments. Little Susan Corinne spent two months in isolation in the hospital "suffering from a serious infection of the blood and hip joint." After "miraculously recovering" from that she was still in a cast from her waist to her toes. As of last January, however, she was home where her parents are "finally enjoying her." Jane, a librarian in the Warminster, Pa. schools is taking a year's leave of absence "for obvious reasons." The Kulp live on Applebutter Road (Box 64), Plumsteadville, Pa. 18949.

Newsful missive from Dee (Deanna Ritchey) and Dan Newman from away out in Wallowa, Oregon, where right now Dee is putting her Indiana U. of Pa. MEd in home economics to work in the "care and nurture" of first-born Katharine Dee. Dan's putting his MEd (awarded same time, same place as Dee's) to work also, serving as guidance counselor at Wallowa High School where, incidentally, he also coaches football and basketball. Before going west, Dee taught home economics in Altoona, Pa. High School where last winter, she writes, "I was involved in an interesting program: providing continuing education for pregnant high school girls." The program, in fact, led to the research for her master's thesis. Among the "tidbits" on other MSC friends, (see '67 above) is one on Kathy (Kathleen Harvey) and Joe Shultz. They have a son, Thomas Anthony, who, at this writing is precisely one year old. The Shultz's live in Nunday, N. Y. where their full address is Box 142 plus zip 14517. The new address for Dee and Dan is Box 511, Wallowa, Ore. 97885 . . . Among 68ers receiving advanced Penn State degrees this past December were Margaret Edsall Perry, 209 14th St., Honesdale, Pa. 18431 (MEd in general family studies); Joseph A. Triano, 1408 Penn Ave., Scranton, Pa. 18500 (MA in history), and Charlotte A. Wilson, 209 N. 4th St., Towanda, Pa. 18848 (MA, English) . . . John Krisa, 812 Maple St., Mayfield, Pa. has been admitted to practice before the Lackawanna County Court . . . A new name and address for Karen Klein. They're Mrs. Thomas N. Bowersox and 114 Orleans Ave., Olean, N. Y. Karen will continue to teach health services in Cattaraugus County while working on her master's at night at Buffalo State. In the wedding party, incidentally, was Sandy Kissinger, MSC '69, who is now Mrs. Leland Wesner, Jr. . . . A change of name and address for Ruth Beitel. It's Mrs. Lawrence Brown, Jr., 405 Lincoln St., Sayre, Pa. 18840 . . . Susan Klitgord Scott, who's teaching first grade in Pine City, N. Y., has finished work on her master's at Elmira College. Husband Bob, who had a great deal to do with the building of the MSC campus radio station, WNTE, is now serving in the U. S. Navy aboard the destroyer U. S. S. Charles P. Cecil. The Scott address is 211 S. Walnut St., Elmira, N. Y. 14904. Editors' thanks to Susan . . . Russ Hyde, who's "living home where the rent is cheap and the food is the best," is a sixth grade teacher "in a little country school in Wellsburg, N. Y." and a master's (Elmira College). He's a vice president of the PTA, and has also been a school director and a director of the Ashland Community Center. For the Recreation Committee, he coaches football in two schools as well as basketball and softball in season. But he's still found time to enroll at Cornell where he will work toward a Ph.D. in administration. Russ visited the campus recently. On the new buildings and campus growth, Russ kept repeating one word: "magnificent." The full name and address is J. Russell Hyde, 777 Maple Ave., Elmira, N. Y. 14904 . . . In the short span of exactly one year, Merle McCalips won a wife and a master's in elementary education. Wife is the former Kathleen Dillon, who works in a local bank while Merle slaves away as an elementary teacher in the State College Area School District. The McCalips live at 1000 Plaza Drive, 212-A, State College, Pa. 16801 . . . The month of May, 1971, was quite a month for Ken McCarthy. In that single month, he became the Rev. Kenneth L. McCarthy, graduating from Colgate Rochester Divinity School with a master of divinity degree; he was ordained into the Christian ministry at the First Baptist Church, Wellsboro, and, still in the same month, was married to the former Marcia Ann Oaks, a graduate of Keuka College from North Rose, N. Y. The only thing Ken had to wait for was his call as minister of the North Baptist Church in New Bedford, Mass. He assumed his new duties this past September. As of then, his address has been 762 County St., New Bedford, Mass. 02740.

Now the Gail Skinners. They're really something. First, Mrs. Gail should be identified as the former Sharyn Fleming. Anyway, these Skinners go out and buy themselves a 95-acre farm and a herd of 85 holsteins and then really go to work.

But there's more on that on the "In the News: Alumni" pages. In the meantime, be it known that Sharyn has completed two and a half years of teaching first grade, started her master's work in a library program at Marywood but is now on a two-year leave concentrating on brand new 7 lb.-3 oz. Christopher Gail. She now identifies as housewife, mother, farm hand, and substitute teacher. The Skinners—of course—live on the Skinner Farm which is located on R. D. 6, Old State Road, Binghamton, N. Y. 13904. They have editors' thanks for everything . . . Cindy Sprout (Mrs. Michael G.) Stratton, as of the latest information, is still at Stillwater, Oklahoma. Husband is finishing up work toward an advanced degree in organizational analysis at Oklahoma State University. Mike finished his military training at Camp David. This past summer the Strattons visited MSC friends Melissa Stevens Washburn, Jean Ruth Breitegam, and Barb Scott Shipman. The Strattons live at 123 South West Street, Apt. 3, Stillwater, Okla. 74074. Editors' thanks to Cindy . . . Janell

Himes, one of the MSC grads who earned her MEd in home economics from Penn State this past December, is teaching home economics in the Center Twp. School District at Monaca, Pa. Editors' thanks for her kind words. Janell's address is R. D. 3, Box 276, Sewickley, Pa. 15143 . . . Editors' many thanks to Stephen Palmer for everything. But now to the news: Steve's now with the Warrior Run School District where he's teaching seventh and eighth grade English—"a real challenge." But the big news is that he was married this past summer to a graduate nurse of Williamsport Hospital — Carol Peters. Editors' heartiest wishes. Steve is taking graduate work at Bucknell. Would accept a few words of encouragement. The Palmer address is: Box 186, Turbotville, Pa. 17772.

Jane Sneed is the Middlesex County 4-H agent with the Cooperative Extension Service of New Jersey. Her address is 581 Dorchester Drive, River Vale, N. J. 07675 . . . Airman Ed Kribel, U. S. Air Force personnel specialist, has been assigned to Shaw AFB in South Carolina for duty with a unit of the Tactical Air Command which provides air support of U. S. ground forces. Ed's home address is 729 Astor St., Norristown, Pa. 19401 . . . Don Kline has been commissioned a second lieutenant in the U. S. Air Force and has been assigned to Columbus AFB in Mississippi for pilot training. He is married to the former Vicki Dippery of Yeagertown, Pa. . . . Airman William Earl is loading and inspecting the weapons used in Air Force fighter aircraft at Nellis AFB in Nevada. He's with a unit of the Tactical Air Command. He is married to the former Jessica Hrebear, of Monessen, Pa. . . . Gregory Zellner recently completed nine weeks of training as a light weapons infantryman at Fort Jackson in South Carolina . . . Finally, editors and staff and just everybody here and at 100 Wakefield Terrace send warmest wishes to Cathilee Salberg, former but intimable student aide in the Office of Public Relations and Alumni Affairs, on the occasion of her betrothal to "good do-bee" Tim Sharretts, Harrisburg. A fitting "—30—" to this Roundup indeed. Others' felicitations may be sent to Cathilee at 314 Market St., Lewisburg, Pa. 17837.

MSC Is Planning For Alumni Day

Saturday, May 13, at Mansfield State College will be Alumni Day, but it will be a lot more than that to a lot more people.

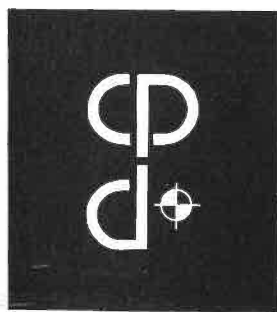

That's the date and the MSC campus is the place that have now been tentatively set for the tennis championships of District 19, National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics. NAIA's District 19 comprises 29 colleges and universities in Pennsylvania, New York, Virginia, New Jersey and Maryland.

Secondly, that's the date and again the MSC campus is the place that have been now established for the North Central Pennsylvania Regional Special Olympics. Prior to May 13, local meets will be held throughout the areas of the region to determine eligibility in track, field and swimming events for the regional meet. J. Stuart Crossin, director, special education in the Wellsboro schools, will be the Tioga County director of the Special Olympics.

Co-chairman of the North Central Regional Special Olympics will be Melvin Dry, MSC associate professor of health and physical education, and John T. Kovich, MSC associate professor of special education.

Winners of the regional meet there will compete in the state championships scheduled for later in the month at West Chester State College. Winners in the state meet will be flown to California where, at the University of California at Los Angeles, they will compete in the national championships.

A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

In many ways this 1973 issue of the Mansfieldian heralds the beginning of a new era. Capitalizing on the impetus provided by Mr. Strunk's appointment in 1969, and now with Mrs. Ruth Marsh as a full-time director, we have confidence that our Alumni Association can provide better services to you and broaden its impact on total College development.

It also comes to your attention at a time when there are significant changes taking place in higher education. The boom and bust of the sixties has given way to caution for the seventies - perhaps even pessimism in some quarters.

You all know of the sudden turn around in the demand for teachers. With more than seventy percent of our students in teacher education programs, the implications for us at Mansfield State College are, at the least, vexing. Fortunately, the quality of the Mansfield graduate and a solid reputation built up through the years has helped our graduates to be placed at a rate significantly above the state and national average.

But it isn't enough to be complacent about past successes. We intend to build upon the present quality teacher education and to develop new career opportunities for students so that each graduate will have a reasonable chance of employment with the granting of a degree. Comprehensive planning is taking place now that will help guarantee such success. In fact, several departments have developed career oriented degree programs which fit the trend of the times. The Biology Department now offers a B.S. in Medical Technology as well as the B.A. and the B.S. in Education. The Geography and Regional Planning Department reflects new emphasis in regional planning. A student earning a degree in Government and Politics can study for a career in criminal justice. A significant new program approach in Home Economics involves the opportunity to choose one of four options (Home Economics Education, Food Services, Consumer Services, and Child and Family Services) under the degree, Bachelor of Science.

These are only a few of the significant changes taking place within degree programs. There is still another Mansfield State College development which is as exciting to me as anything I have seen happen in the past five years. Dr. William Beisel, the Director of Continuing Education, has been working with area school people, members of the medical profession, business leaders and others to review needs and develop regional programs in continuing education. The response to Dr. Beisel's effort has been most gratifying and certainly indicates that people in our area have been thirsting for the kinds of opportunities the College can provide. In the same sense that agricultural extension professionals helped farmers improve their lives, we at Mansfield can make significant educational and cultural contributions to the citizens of our service region through continuing and adult education.

In short, these are indeed interesting times to have a part in higher education. Those of us who live in the day to day happenings of the campus sense and know these new challenges; we need now to find ways for our graduates to understand, and share the new development and to help us change for the seventies.

CAREER PLANNING

A Governor's commission recently completed a study "Retention of School Records" and from that study asked the placement directors of the state colleges to destroy all records for placement after three years retention. This request is a valid one since all our placement agencies - The College Placement Council and The Association for School, College and University Staffing - subscribe to similar policies. We will of course continue to serve alumni by offering the alumni a new set of credentials and keeping them active for a period of three years.

If you are planning to change positions and wish to use your confidential folder please remember that all graduates who graduated prior to 1970 will be required to file for an Alumni Packet which contains new personal data forms and recommendation forms. The placement staff recommends that alumni seek recommendations from supervisory personnel who could best describe their work habits and skills. Since the job market has become a "buyer's market" superintendents have been seeking all the information they can obtain about the teaching skills of potential employees.

Alumni who request placement service may request the vacancy listings without renewing their confidential files. However, in most cases employers are requesting confidential records from either the undergraduate or the graduate school. Our staff recommends that alumni with master's degrees use the services of the college from which they received their masters since those records are more timely and accurate.

The "Career Planning" division of the office is conducting a survey of the class of 1970. This survey is being conducted by the placement staff to determine the general opinions of our recent graduates about the relevance of their education to their present employment. In a very short survey of only ten questions we are attempting to secure information about our college programs.

We hope that the class of 1970 will respond to this survey in numbers which will validate the study. The results will be forwarded to the divisional deans, the department chairmen, and the Alumni Office. We also hope to be very responsive to Mrs. Ruth Marsh, Director of the new Office of Alumni Affairs and help her in any possible alumni endeavors.

In any case, your Career Planning and Placement Office is prepared to help you in any way possible in your endeavor to find suitable positions. On your next visit to Mansfield feel free to drop by our office in South Hall, Room 204.

EQUAL EDUCATION OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM

by David Russell

College attendance, once the prerogative of those with wealth, social position, or special talent and ambition, is coming to be viewed as the right of every American youth. The nation has made significant advances in accomplishing the integration of racial minorities, the education of socially, educationally, and economically disadvantaged children.

Mansfield State College can demonstrate evidence that it is keeping pace with and reflecting both the physical aspects of change and the philosophical changes mirrored in admissions, curriculum and service functions.

In the Fall of 1972 the Equal Education Opportunity Program was formalized. David Russell was appointed director and fourteen students were admitted to the Program.

This program is aimed at assisting and encouraging students with potential for success in college who because of financial or environmental conditions were unable to gain admission into traditional college programs. Students carry a reduced load for the first semester and progression to a normal semester load is encouraged as determined by individual progress and need. Tutorial assistance, specifically in English and mathematics, and counseling services are provided as parts of the Program. Financial aid is available on the basis of need.

The Program is not without problems. David Russell, Director of the Program states, "One of the most immediate problems the student faces is adjustment to college life, which is difficult for any student, but to the EEOP student it is twice as tough for he has an opportunity to make a dream come true." Misconceptions such as the label "Black Program" also plague continuance and growth. Actually the program is open to any student who demonstrates economic and academic disadvantages along with the potential to succeed in college. Naturally money, both in the form of grants and scholarships to aid student subsistence and institutional commitment via salaries, staff, and faculty acceptance all influence continued growth and stature of the Program.

Plans do exist for expansion; the EEOP is actively recruiting with a goal of 40 students in mind. As Director Russell states, "How well the students succeed and the Program grows depends on institutional commitment, communication, and that vital asset, money."

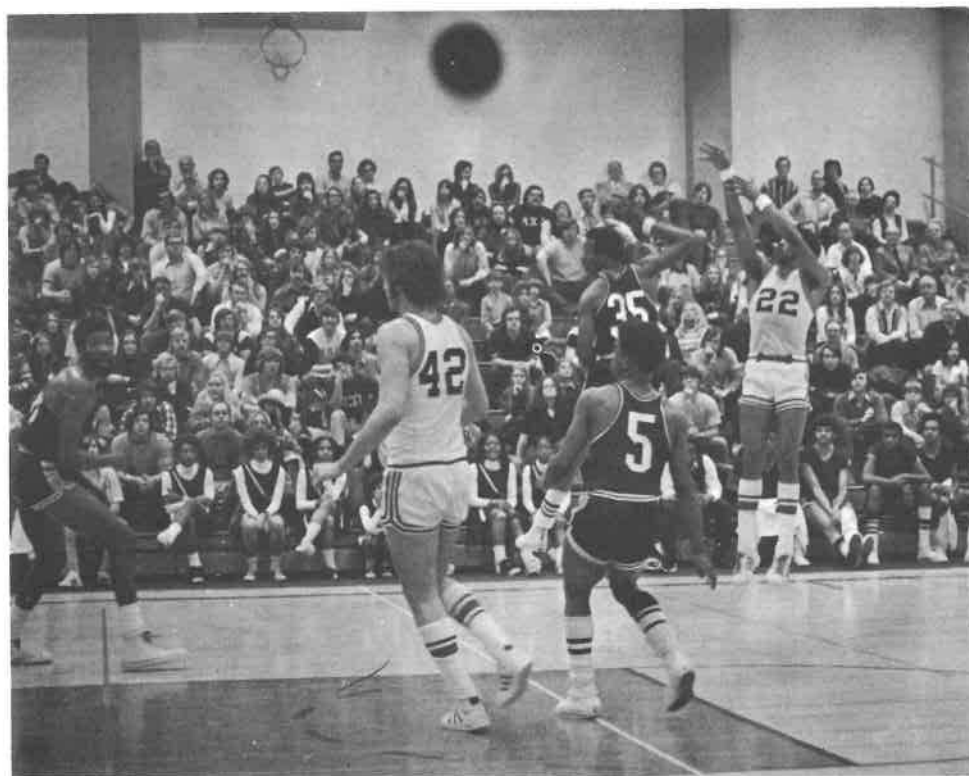

SPORTS

Joe DeSanto, the first Mansfield State College athlete ever named a National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics first team choice, received his All American trophy from Dr. Arthur DeGenaro, Chairman of the MSC Department of Health, Physical Education and Athletics during halftime ceremonies at Mansfield's final home basketball game. Joe, a second baseman, received his Adirondack Bat Company trophy for being the leading hitter in the Eastern United States with a batting average of .469.

Coach Ed Wilson and the Mounties, after seven years, defeated the Wolves of Cheyney State 64-52 in Decker Gym February 10, 1973.

First team all conference player Dennis Lomax - Number 22 - from Donora, Pennsylvania, is the sixth Mansfield State College basketball player to score over one thousand points.

IT'S A MAN'S FIELD

Thirty-four years ago, a Mansfield Dean tried to persuade Alice Frazer to change her mind about her college major - science - because "it's a man's field. You won't be able to get a job." She preferred fighting to switching and today heads a nationwide program to put men into an occupational field traditionally dominated by women - the allied health field.

A former FLASHLIGHT editor, Alice is a Commissioned Officer of the U. S. Public Health Service with the rank of Health Services Director - the equivalent of an Army Colonel. Since 1969, she has directed Operation MEDIHC (Military Experience Directed Into Health Careers), a joint effort of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and the Department of Defense.

Operation MEDIHC provides help to the more than twenty thousand veterans with military allied health training and experience who return to civilian life each year. Studies show that over two-thirds of these veterans are interested in entering civilian health related occupations or educational programs, but that less than one-third do so. Many other veterans who were not medics also wish to consider the civilian health field as they go about choosing a post-military career.

MEDIHC is a State administered program, with supporting assistance funds from the National Institutes of Health, Bureau of Health Manpower Education. In Pennsylvania, the program is located in the Hospital Educational and Research Foundation of Pennsylvania at Camp Hill.

A member of the Class of 1942, Alice taught biology, chemistry, and physics in Maryland, New York and Alaska between 1942 and 1947. In 1949, she earned an M.S.P.H. from Columbia University's School of Public Health and wrote finis to her career in the classroom. She joined the Colorado State Health Department as a public health educator and was made editor of the health department newsletter. Another duty was to put together the health department's annual report. In 1952, she joined the New York State Health Department and was assigned to its Division of Tuberculosis Control. In the course of this assignment she wrote the manual "How to Organize Communitywide Mass Chest X-Rays" which was later adapted for use by the medical civil defense program.

She joined the U. S. Public Health Service in late 1955 and was detailed as Health Education Advisor to the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan for the next five years. She was decorated by King Hussein in 1960 with the Independence Medal - the third woman ever to be so honored by a Moslem monarch.

During these five years, she was a delegate to two World Health Organization Conferences for the Eastern Mediterranean Region, and went to Ethiopia on temporary duty. Among other tasks there, she developed a curriculum in public health education for the Public Health College and Training Center at Gondar.

In late 1964, she went to Vietnam, as a Health Education Advisor, returning in early 1966 to become the Director of Health Education of the Public Health Services' Division of Indian Health. The health education staff of over 70 persons was 80% male.

By 1967, she was Chief, Education Section, Office of Program Planning and Evaluation, Bureau of Health Services. Again, the staff was mainly male. She was awarded the Public Health Service Commendation Medal in 1968 for "... planning and development of three publications on social factors influencing the organization and delivery of comprehensive personal health services".

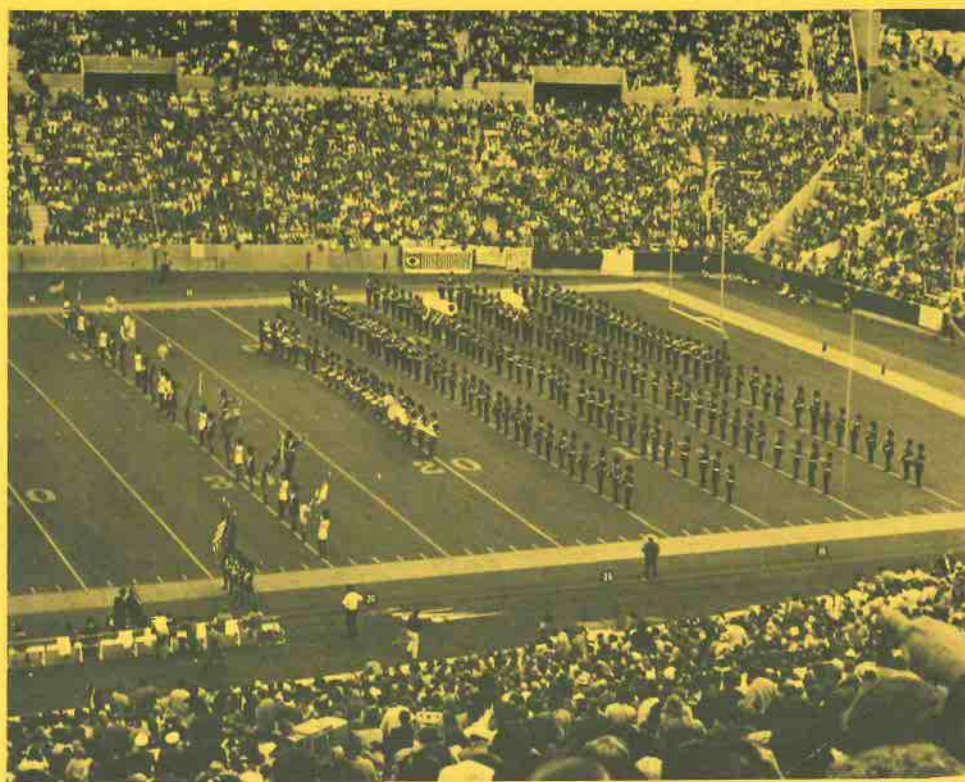

In 1969, she was detailed to the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Health and Scientific Affairs, DHEW, to develop the program which was named Operation MEDIHC. In 1971, the program was transferred to the Bureau of Health Manpower Education of the National Institutes of Health. Her job as National Coordinator demands extensive travel throughout the United States - and occasionally abroad. In October, she joined with representatives from 19 major business corporations and associations in a 2½ week tour of the major American military basis in Europe where they met and counseled over 6,400 servicemen who were within 6 months of their separation date.

She plans to retire from the federal government in 1975. And what then? "Then", she says, "I'm going back to Zanzibar and really look at and explore all the things and places I rushed past in 1957".

(In addition to her stint as Editor of the FLASHLIGHT, Alice served on the Student Council, was a member of Sigma Zeta, the Classical Club and the Women's Athletic Association. She now lives in Washington, D.C.)

MOUNTIE BAND

by Richard N. Talbot

The 1972 football season was a busy and profitable one for the 1972 "Mountie" Marching Band from Mansfield State College. Since September 17th the band produced 10 halftime shows; learning and memorizing all the music and field formations in a very limited amount of time. They accomplished this almost impossible feat thanks to the eagerness of all 218 Mountie members and their very capable leaders; leaders like their director Richard N. Talbot, Associate Professor of Music; Blenda Malmberg, Captain of the twirler corps; and Feature Twirler Debbie Smith who certainly added a new flair to this year's Mountie Band. The Percussion Line was under the leadership of Tony Schmaus. The Flag Line was directed by the co-operative efforts of instructor Al Schulski and field captain Joe Malafrina. The Colorguard and Drill Team co-captains were Karen Lukenda and Nancy Brucker. All of this year's music was arranged by Paul Semicek, Don Sturrock and Robert Goode. Leading the band on the football field was Senior Drum Major Frank Schreiner and Junior Drum Major Bruce Brindza. When all these people were put together the end result was a band that could not be equaled in size, sound, musicianship and marching extravaganza, and on September 24th the Mounties proved it. On that day the band, which had journeyed to Massachusetts, performed their first professional halftime show.

With the stands packed to capacity, for the New England Patriots - Atlanta Falcons football game at Schaefer Stadium in Foxboro, Mass., and the CBS Television coverage, the Mounties thrilled well over TWO MILLION people with their brilliant pageantry. If you were watching the show on television that day you would have heard the CBS announcer say, "I have been broadcasting university and professional football for about 12 years and this is unequivocally the finest band I have ever seen or heard." By the time the Mounties had made their entrance to the strains of George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" they had captivated the 61,000 spectators and brought them to their feet where they remained throughout the rest of the performance. The enthusiastic and excited ovations often drowned out the words of the announcer. The Mountie's second selection was a patriotic flag presentation depicting the battle of the Colonies with England. This was followed by a concert selection, "Good Medicine" which featured the 24 member percussion section as well as the tubas. The final drill and exit routine was performed to the music of Broadway's "Fiddler on the Roof," and from the end zone came the Mountie's theme, "Rule Britannia."

While in New England the Mountie Band performed two other exhibition shows. The band is performing for other exhibitions whenever possible and is now working on the 1973 season calendar. Anyone wishing to purchase a recording of the 1972 Mountie Marching Band may do so by writing

CONTINUING EDUCATION AT MANSFIELD COLLEGE:

CHALLENGE PROGRESS PROJECTIONS

by Dr. William H. Beisel, Jr.

It is a fact of historical significance that the citizens of Tioga and surrounding counties felt strongly about their schools. "I find," said MSC alumna Cecelia Van Ness Shaw, "that until the year 1814 the only education children in the vicinity of Mansfield received, was what their parents were able to teach them from their none to ample store of knowledge, as they sprawled about the great fireplace with its ruddy glow from pine logs throwing flickering gleams over eager young faces of that distant day." During the winter of 1821 and '22 a small school was started in a one room plank house near the railroad.

Under the undaunted leadership of J. S. Hoard, a meeting was held in the M. E. Church on July 26, 1854, "at which time public sentiment was so aroused in behalf of the advancement of the community and the welfare of its youth as to make an out and out decision in permanent plans for establishing The Mansfield Classical Seminary." Mansfield State College was conceived one hundred and eighteen years ago and has been reacting continuously in varying degrees, to the educational needs of the region and state. The Northern Tier Community is again calling on MSC to assist with the advancement of the community and the welfare of its citizens.

On September 15, 1972, the chairman of the Overall Economic Development Program Committee of Tioga County circulated copies of the O.E.D.P. report to each committee member and announced that Tioga County had been designated as a redevelopment area. The document reported area economic progress from 1961 to 1971, development priorities, and development project priorities.

A "Comprehensive Study of Educational Needs of the North Central Region of Pennsylvania" (Cameron, Elk, McKean, Potter Counties) was completed in June of 1968. The report includes chapters related to public school students and programs, adult occupations, post secondary educational institutions, and business and industrial needs of the region. The follow-up study of Vocational - Technical Education Program Priorities released on September 29, 1972 by the Seneca Highlands Intermediate Unit revealed a need for regional educational services of all types.

Concurrently, to the east of Mansfield State College, The Endless Mountains Resource Conservation and Development Project, now in its fifth year of operation, functions in cooperation with the State of Pennsylvania, The United States Department of Agriculture, other federal agencies, local government, and civic organizations. To date, the 27 completed projects have created approximately 257 man-years of employment with an estimated income of $4,803,000. Thirty-nine projects are in the operational stage, which will bring to the area an estimated $66,000,000 and 659 annual man-years of employment.

Mansfield State College is under a mandate from the citizens of the Northern Tier Region to become directly involved with the development of human and natural resources. Therefore, the college community must commit its extensive talents and resources to the Northern Tier Region.

At Mansfield State College, courses and services are available to citizens of Lycoming, Tioga, Sullivan, Bradford, Potter, McKean, Elk and Cameron Counties. The College Educational Delivery System also provides consultant, research, and computer services to schools and governmental agencies, business, industrial and professional groups, and skilled citizens. Groups which want to utilize the modern campus facilities for conferences or workshops should contact the Office of the Division of Continuing Education.

During the Spring Semester 1973, seventeen undergraduate and graduate courses are being taught in Coudersport, Elkland, Mansfield, Wellsboro, Wyalusing, Sayre and Towanda. More than three hundred adult citizens and advanced high school students are enrolled and nineteen instructors are involved. Conferences were also held for teacher aids, school psychologists, special education teachers, and professional personnel who came to the Campus to discuss problems related to juvenile justice, human ecology, and a newly adopted criminal code. Also, a specialty course was taught to enthusiastic anglers preparing for the opening of trout season.

The Division of Continuing Education was involved with the development and promotion of an Institute for Public Affairs funded by the Pennsylvania Department of Education. The Institute was originally conceived by Dr. Robert B. Revere, Chairman of the Department of Government and Politics, to provide opportunities for citizens from the region, state, and nation to study local government, corrections, para-legal studies, and court administration. Short intensive non-credit and credit courses will be taught through the Institute. Regional conferences will be held in three of the four areas. President Park appointed Dr. Michael S. Pincus, Dean of Arts and Sciences, the Honorable Robert M. Kemp, President Judge of Tioga County, Dr. Robert Revere, and Dr. William H. Beisel, Jr. to serve as the Institutes' first Board of Directors. Dr. Revere is Acting Director and Mr. Geoffrey Gallas from the Institute for Court Management, Denver, Colorado was employed as Consultant to the Board.

Three other significant programs are under discussion and should soon be operational. The first will be a Learning Disabilities Clinic designed to diagnose children with learning problems and to train diagnostic teachers. The second promising program is related to man's utilization of land space in the Northern Tier Region of Pennsylvania. An "Integrated Trail System" will be the first stage of the development of an Institute for Human Ecology. Another important area under study is related to the Allied Health Professions. The College, under the leadership of Dean Pincus and Dr. Beisel, is studying a variety of allied health programs which could be developed to provide more career opportunities for students, and to meet the needs of a society which requires more sophisticated health services.

The mission of the College as a multi-purpose institution is to provide higher education and public service to the citizens of the State and particularly to the Northern Tier Region. The Division of Continuing Education, in cooperation with community leaders and the Mansfield State College family, is responding positively to the challenge by delivering appropriate educational programs and services to its constituents.

HOME ECONOMICS ALUMNI

Some of the home economics alumni located near Mansfield want you to know about the many changes in the Home Economics Department at Mansfield State College. Watch for a future announcement of a Home Economics Alumni Dinner on Saturday evening, June 23, 1973. This could be the beginning of a MSC Home Economics Alumni Association. Be on hand for this history-making event and renew acquaintances with people like Mrs. Elizabeth Morales and Mrs. Maryon Farrer Powell and others who have helped to establish and enrich home economics at Mansfield State College.

SPECIAL GIFT

Mansfield State College Alumni Fund shares in the Estate of William McEntee, class of 1907, who passed away January 15, 1972. Through legal provisions in his will, Mr. McEntee has enabled the Association to provide a general scholarship for a deserving student. His kindness and generosity in making the bequest will enable the College to continue to provide a measure of quality education for future generations.

MSC Forms Foundation

Mansfield Foundation, is in the process of "becoming." Various developments in our economy have forced the states to start telling state-supported colleges in recent years that funds are limited. As a result, Mansfield, in company with three or four hundred other colleges, has found that it is responsible for raising funds for special projects and any supplemental income on its own. Money for general scholarships, for development of unusual programs, even for such things as landscaping, for instance, will have to come from independent sources in the future.

For these reasons and for others, the Mansfield Foundation will be very helpful to the maintenance in the coming years of the special kind of education we all expect at MSC. The Foundation is essentially a corporation set up with a tax status which guarantees donations to be deductible. (Usually one could deduct a contribution to the Alumni Association; it would be a perfectly legitimate deduction. However, the Foundation's tax status has built-in guarantees. When one is planning an estate bequest or a sizeable gift, the guarantee is essential.)

The Foundation would make individual funds possible within the limits of the overall trust. For instance, the Mountie Band Charitable Trust, rather than having had to be set up with its own IRS rating and much detailed work, would simply be "plugged into" the Foundation on inception and dissolved when its purpose was complete. Similarly, an alumnus is in the process of establishing a scholarship fund. It will exist as an entity with the Foundation. The Alumni will undoubtedly have a fund within the Foundation, though the Alumni Board has made no decision as to any financial relationship with the new structure.

The Alumni have three representatives on the Board:

Marcella Hyde ('56) of Canton, Leonard Kulage ('70) of Elmira, and Paul McMillen ('69) of Crofton, Md. The three, selected by the Alumni Executive Board, and eight other members comprise the Board of the Foundation. The other members are President Park; Mrs. Ila Hess Wiley ('25), Chairman, Board of Trustees; Joseph Olimpi ('75), President of Student Government; Prof. Sandra Taliaferro, Chairperson, Faculty Council. All of these members are automatically members by virtue of their offices. (The President of the Alumni Association is likewise an ex officio member; but Judge Kemp has designated Paul McMillen to serve in his place on the Board.)

Other members are John Rigas of Coudersport and Thomas Walrath of Wellsboro, representatives of the Board of Trustees; Prof. Robert Bridgman, Faculty representative, and Deborah Moyer of Sunbury, Student representative.

The Alumni Association will still be soliciting funds; in fact, we may be actively building funds for the Foundation, we still need money.

We will keep you posted on what develops as the Foundation Board meets.

THE MANSFIELDIAN

New Summer Image

Summer School certainly has changed. A few short years ago, summer courses were the ones college students took to "rease the D" from the term before, to accelerate for graduation in three years, or to refresh themselves for a job.

These days college summer courses fulfill any number of purposes; they are even arranged so that couples may enjoy a one-credit one week course during a vacation in the summer months. At Mansfield State College this summer, there will be close to forty one-and two-week workshops offered in addition to the usual three and six week sessions. There will also be a free day care center for children between the ages of three and ten, where Mom can drop the kids off while she attends her classes all summer long. For commuters concerned about the energy crunch, there is a car pool center on campus where rides will be coordinated.

Even high school students are getting into the act. For ten years now, the MSC

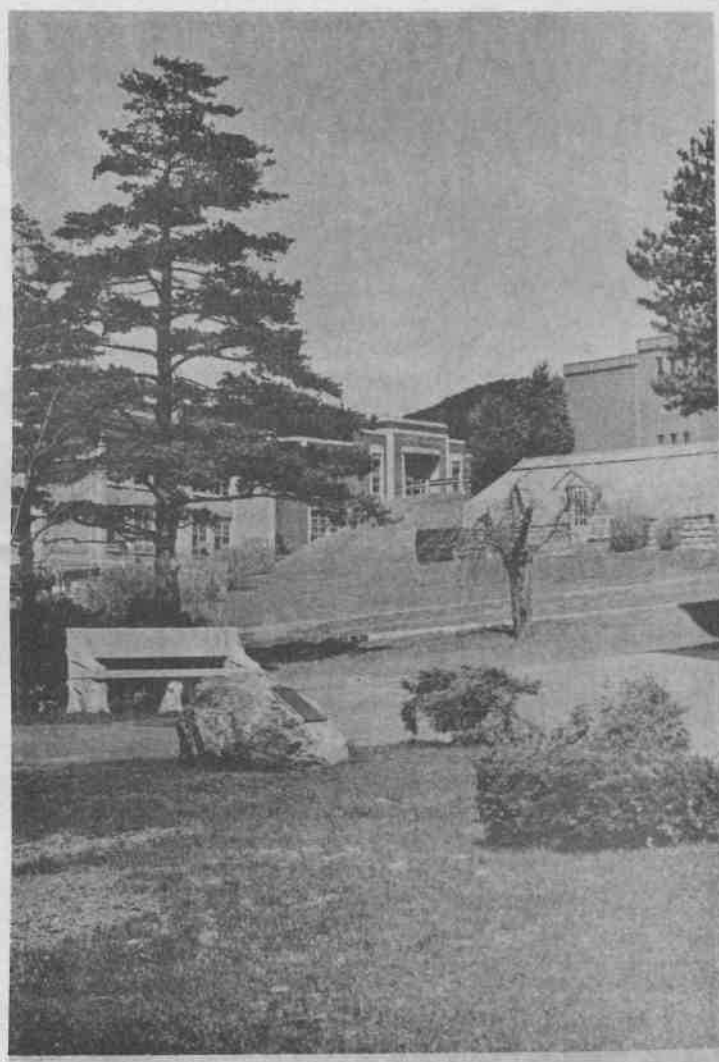

Music Department has run a Summer Music Camp for junior and senior high school students. The Music Camp will carry on this summer as well, and the other arts are now sensing a need for other high school training in the MSC area. This summer for the first time are Art, Theatre, and Writing Workshops being offered for the younger set.

The sixty to seventy high school students who have helped populate the dormitories in the past years have had an influence on the summer social activities, too, and all the summer students have benefited as a result. Films, tours, dances, tournaments, plays, horseback riding, intramural athletics and cookouts are now among the organized events for summer students, and with the workshop programs, the students are quite often the producers of the activities as well as the spectators.

Professors, too, are reacting differently than in past years. Summer school is traditionally what one teaches to keep food on the table - introductory courses to "catch people up" and to supplement the academic year offerings. This year Mansfield is using summer school as a time to present the exciting, innovative courses that a professor may not otherwise get a chance to teach in a life time. "The one-week workshop offers possibilities for courses we simply couldn't handle in a semester," said Dean of Graduate Studies David P. Peltier. The workshops include such subjects as techniques for piano teachers, educational secretaries, and educational business officials; courses in aiding the handicapped in homemaking and handling exceptional children in a regular classroom; and classes in Black Awareness and Living off the Land, among others. There is even a one week course on Wagner's Ring of the Nibelung.

Inquires about MSC's complete summer program may be addressed to Director of Summer School at the college.

The ever-changing face of the campus is especially reflected during the summer. Classes include workshops and many innovative courses that cannot be offered during the semester.

New Trustees Named to Board

Mansfield State College has three new Trustees, two of them from Tioga County. Eugene Kelly, of Roaring Branch, Thomas A. Walrath of Wellsboro, Dr. Harry B. Strickland of Scranton and Edward A. Eshmont of Pottstown were four of the several hundred state appointments made by Governor Milton J. Shapp in January. Reappointed to the Board were John J. Rigas of Coudersport, Duane Van Noy of Troy and Ila H. Wiley of Nelson. Fred A. Jupenlax of Mansfield, Chairman, and Paul Conner of Coudersport are the remaining members of the Board.

Kelly, a supervisor for the North Central District for the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry, replaced Mrs. Margaret H. McMillen of Mansfield on the Board, and Walrath, a lawyer, replaces Mrs. Kathryn Ford of Westfield. Dr. Strickland, Dean of the Graduate School at the University of Scranton, is the replacement for C. Richard Marshall of Dalton; and Eshmont, a senior in liberal arts at the college, takes over for C. Trent Perry, a student who was appointed to the Board of State College and University Directors from the MSC Board.

Kelly's background includes being a sales representative for several nationally known firms; he is a Korean war veteran, recipient of the Purple Heart, Bronze Star, and presidential citation. The father of four, Kelly is the chairman of the Tioga County Democratic Committee.

Both Kelly and Walrath are Philadelphia natives who came to Tioga County twenty years ago. Walrath was graduated from Princeton University with a B.A. and from the University of Pennsylvania with a Doctor of Law.

He practiced law in Athens before coming to Wellsboro, where he now is associated with Lowell Coolidge. The Walraths have seven children.

Dr. Strickland received his bachelor's degree in finance from St. Vincent's College in Latrobe, Pa., and his masters and Ph.D. also in finance from the University of Pittsburgh. He has taught at the University of Scranton for several years.

Eshmont, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Eshmont of Pottstown, is the president of Lambda Alpha Epsilon honorary fraternity, a campus radio news announcer, a newspaper reporter, and member of the debate team. At a recent forensic meet in Towson, Md. where he helped the MSC team rank 2nd of 33 colleges and universities, Eshmont brought home the 4th place trophy for extemporaneous speaking - competing with over fifty other contenders.

Judge Robert Kemp, president of the MSC Alumni Association, swore in the three Tioga County board members in a ceremony in his office.

Nursery School Involves Parents

Eighteen children in the Home Economics Nursery School at the college, all three and four years of age, prepared and served a Thanksgiving dinner for their mothers, then followed in December with a Christmas tree decorating party for their fathers.

The group was divided into six committees of three each, performing assigned tasks like shopping, cooking the 20-pound turkey, fixing the dressing, and others until the meal was on the table. According to Miss Beverly Briggs and Mrs. Betty Lupkowski, home economics faculty, the children made final selection of the menu from choices of food presented to them.

An integral part of an ongoing nutrition education program in the nursery school, the project teaches the children basic nutrition, forms good eating habits, and lets them find personal satisfaction in preparing their own food.

"The children did a good job at the Thanksgiving party," Miss Briggs said. "About 45 people, including the youngsters, gathered for the meal."

For the Christmas party, the youngsters wrote letters to their fathers inviting them to the party and mailed them at the post office. At nursery school, in preparation for the event, the children baked brownies and, at the party, helped their dads make chocolate milkshakes to drink.

Using their creativity to design the decorations, the children fashioned ornaments from paper with scissors and glue. Trees were decorated after a break for refreshments.

"Involvement of both parents in a child's school experience," she added, "can be very satisfying to both the child and his parents. When he or she sees that the parents approve of the friends, teacher and school situation," she explained, "each begins to value them more highly, and in the end feels more positive about himself."

Both parties gave the parents an opportunity to see their child as he functions in his first major experience outside the home.

The nursery school leads each child toward his individual optimum level of physical, social, emotional and intellectual development. In addition, it serves as a facility where students from various courses can observe and work with young children.

MSC's First Male Home Ec Grad

"I really don't feel like I'm the only guy in a field for women," said 21-year-old Bill Martin, "because home economics isn't just cooking and sewing. I would like to think that I'm breaking the stereotype of home economics at Mansfield," he said, adding that somewhere around twelve men each year are graduating from other institutions in Pennsylvania in that field.

In January, William F. Martin became the first male to ever graduate in the Home Economics Department at Mansfield State College and may well become the very first to graduate as a home economics teacher in the state of Pennsylvania. Although male home economists are not uncommon, on a national level male home ec teachers are certainly very few. After student teaching in the Wyalusing school system he obtained a bachelor's degree in Home Ec Education at the conclusion of the fall semester.

Martin, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Martin of 3684 Skyline Drive in Cornwells Heights, Pa., transferred to Mansfield State from Bucks County Community College in Newtown, Pa. because he wanted to enter the field of food service management. At the time he was under the impression that MSC would have the food service field as part of their curriculum, so he stayed in home economics in hopes that the college would expand along those lines. As Martin graduated, however, the MSC home economics field began a food service program as well as Consumer Service and Child and Family Service programs.

The Consumer Service program offers options in Clothing and Textiles, and in Food and Equipment. Options in Child and Family study are included under Child and Family Service.

Discussing the parallel between teachers and others in the home economics field, Martin explained that people think teachers have only a six hour day and don't consider the extra time involved in preparation and correcting papers. On the hidden side of home ec, in addition to cooking and sewing, is course work in housing, home furnishings - encompassing everything from the top to the bottom of the home, working with the handi-homemaker, and the entire spectrum of clothing and textiles. Another aspect is the Consumer Service program for those who plan to become home economists in business. Occupations for home economics people, Martin added, include industrial work such as working in a test kitchen, serving as a consultant or demonstrating items.

"The field of home ec is so open," Martin stated, "I'd like to try my hand at a few areas before I decide what I really want to do."

Entering a field formerly pursued by women at Mansfield State, Martin did not encounter as many difficulties as one might expect. "I had no problem with the students; they accepted my being there because that's what I wanted to do. I did have a lot of guys come to me asking 'How do you wash this?' or wanting me to sew a button on but I told them to learn to do it themselves."

"Even if they didn't accept it," Martin reflected, "somebody has to open up a path. In the long run it will do some good for the school; it's not just the individual people." He also feels the college should publicize what home economics courses are offered to a greater extent and encourage men to take up the field. Some high schools have programs for men and if a lot knew what is offered at MSC the college would get a lot more guys in that area.

Summer Course Offers Challenge

Like other changes, the change in summer school at MSC didn't come suddenly this year. Nine female college students who completed the Art and Recreation for the Handicapped Child course last summer, for example, may well have gained the most valuable experience of their teaching careers.

The course, initiated by Sam D. Thomas, assistant professor of art, includes a one week classroom experience and two weeks at Camp Daddy Allen in Hickory Run State Park near White Haven, Pa. working alongside counselors from the Easter Seal Society (ESS).

"There is a proverb that floats around each ESS camp each year," Thomas said, "to the effect that 'everyone is handicapped, with our kids the handicap is just more obvious.' In working with the handicapped child, one learns to accept the handicap as one accepts any other individual attribute; blue eyes, beards, or skin color—simply as a means of identification of an individual; and to live and work with that individual becomes as natural as working and living with those individuals we usually consider normal."

In the course of the two weeks in camp, there were a total of 83 campers; 59 boys and 24 girls. The campers ranged in age from eight to eighteen years, in height from 24 inches to six feet three inches, and in weight from less than 50 pounds to 210 pounds. Developmental ages ranged from less than two years to reasonably mature adolescence.

The types of handicaps were extremely varied, ranging from Cerebral Palsy, Spina Bifida and Juvenile Arthritis through Trainable Mental Retardation to a few who were merely socially deprived (one of whom had a broken leg, fractured just before leaving for camp.)

Students in the course are assigned to different counselors during the two-week session, so they have a chance to become acquainted with almost all the children, almost all the types and variations of children and handicaps in the camp. All students participate with campers in swimming, ball sports, hiking, archery, arts and crafts, cookouts and sleepouts, fishing, playing in creeks, looking at plants and bugs, feeding the cabin mice, and in all evening programs.

"I began to wonder just what these children's abilities were," said Margi Angotti, a senior art major from Carbondale, "not what they could not do because of their disabilities."

Another student from last summer, junior Sharon McKee of Westminster College, added, "These kids have accepted their handicap—we're the ones who make it hard for them. Camp Daddy Allen made me aware that handicapped people have very 'normal' feelings. Too many people shy away from them and I was that way too before I came. Just because they look different we tend not to accept them as readily into our society," she continued. "How wrong we are, for they can teach us many things we can't see ourselves. I found that one of the hardest things to do was walk as slowly as they do or take two hours just for showers," she observed. "I'm used to being in the 'normal' world where it's so hectic. If I had to pick, I'd choose their way and speed of doing things as better."

Linda Reitz, a junior art major from Montandon, Pa., learned to work with given materials and "how to change ideas to fit what you work with, instead of complaining about the things you don't have," she said. "In my opinion, these kids (and they are kids first, handicapped second) were much easier to work with than 'normal' children, in that they appreciate every little thing you do for them. Saying

'Good morning' with a smile to these kids is like handing them a million dollars," she concluded.

For Marlene Rubert, a junior art major from Towanda, it was heartening to see that most of the counselors really cared for and worked for the good of the children entrusted to them. "The work was often hard and quite challenging," she said. "I felt a sense of accomplishment that the children really did have fun and learned something too."

Activities at the camp sometimes prove as entertaining to the students as they do to the children. "Have you ever considered Easter in July?" asks Marlene. "It's great fun for the children and one of several program highlights of the camp. The dining hall is decorated in an Easter theme and the Easter Bunny comes to each camper (and counselor too) to fill the basket each makes. Campers and staff also make Easter bonnets for a parade, with prizes in several categories, followed by an all camp swim. After dinner there is an all camp birthday party. Everyone sits at the table of his birth month. Each table makes up a song for their month and cheers contestants on in various relays."

A senior home economics major from Mansfield, Sheila

Yellets, commented, "I had seen the look of joy on a boy's face when he helped his team win in a wheel chair race during Olympic Day. Seeing a girl that could never walk accept life and find it good; these children displayed a courage in facing life that I for one can never forget." She concluded that "I have enjoyed receiving these six credits more than any other course at the college."

The best activity of the two weeks for Mary O'Hara, a senior from Norristown, was the dance. "It was just so great seeing everybody up and dancing. Kids in wheelchairs were spinning around and kids on crutches were rocking back and forth, there wasn't one person there who didn't dance. A little boy in braces from the waist down was dancing with me and he looked up and said, 'I never thought it would be this much fun.' I couldn't help smiling the rest of the time."

"You haven't lived all your life until you have 'danced' with a child on crutches or in a wheel chair," agreed Marlene. "The last camp night," she explained, "there was a lovely banquet dinner followed by a dance to the latest taped music over a high fidelity system. Each camper looked like an angel all clean and dressed in their finest clothes. Some of them were a little shy at first but persistent coaxing got most everyone on the dance floor at last. How they really enjoyed it."

At the beginning of the course, the students shared a fear of the handicapped, common in society. "From the start I noticed that the kids were a very special bunch," reflected Sharon. "They were more independent than 'normal' kids when I thought they should be less so. I think I was trying a little too hard the first day. I thought they weren't normal and they thought they were. Someone was wrong and I found out it was me."

At the end of the course, Mary noted, "There were many things I learned these past two weeks, about myself and about other people, which I could never have gotten out of a book."

Margi reacted similarly, saying, "All that I learned and experienced while working with these children for two short weeks will stay with me forever. I only wish that those who were not so fortunate as I was to experience what I did could at least get a vivid picture of what it was really like."

Others can. In a summer school workshop the course is offered on undergraduate and graduate levels. The three-week, six-credit course will begin June 24 on campus with two-hour morning and afternoon session. From June 26 to July 13, students will participate at Camp Daddy Allen and within 15 days (by Monday, July 29) submit a paper to the instructor.

Although students in Special Education are welcome, the course is designed primarily for those in normal education situations to provide a broader base for the understanding of children.

Local Ecology

Studied

One of many interdisciplinary courses to be offered at MSC this summer is "Culture and Ecology of the Pine Creek Area," to be taught by Dr. David Darby of the Geography Department and Dr. James Glimm of the English Department. The course as planned is highly innovative and, both professors readily admit, is somewhat of an experiment. But it promises to be fun and an enlightening experiment.

"The Pine Creek area is a vanishing resource which must be protected. Twice in the history of Pine Creek," Dr. Darby points out, "the area has been 'ripped off;' first for its lumber and then for its coal. By making people aware of the limited resources available, and the increasing demand for those resources, I hope to illustrate the need for environmental planning," he said.

Dr. Glimm's interest in the area centers around its unique culture. After considerable contact with the people, he found them to be of limitless interest; they eagerly share recollections, family remedies, and folk songs with anyone displaying an interest in their lives. "To put students in closer touch with the past with living a more basic and simple life, in close contact with the earth, I encourage my students to talk with people in the area too."

To accomplish their plans, both professors intend to place the most emphasis on direct contact with the area and its people. They intend to have a few classroom sessions, but like some other courses at MSC recently, the "classroom" will be outdoors a good bit of the time. Hiking, canoe trips, interviews with area residents, and possibly even a camping trip are planned. Students will be encouraged to pursue whatever interest they have in the region, as it pertains to either geography or English.

As Dr. Glimm so aptly expressed it, the course is "not intellectual as much as it is emotional." Both professors display a deep concern with showing their students, through direct observation, a region and a way of life that are all too quickly disappearing from this country. Illustrating their objectives is the end of the course requirement to have each student present a report to the group of his own activities during the course, and how the specific facet of the Pine Creek area which he studied affected him as an individual.

Esquires Become Concert Jazz Band

"The Esquires," traditionally MSC's "dance band," has changed its face - something that has been going on gradually for several years.

Actually, the MSC Concert Jazz Band, as the group is now formally known, is part of a national movement in music that has brought the once-considered strictly extra-curricular jazz straight into the highest academic echelons of performing arts.

The progress of the Mansfield band has paralleled the national mood. The group first was formed by students in the 'twenties and named the "Red and Black Serenaders", to become known throughout the early 'thirties as the "Red and Blacks" in honor of the MSC colors. In the late thirties, the band, still extra-curricular and now strongly influenced by the "Big Band" era, became "The Esquires."

In 1967, Richard Talbot came to Mansfield, where he and the stage band adopted each other. Talbot had had a good deal of experience as a jazz drummer, free-lance professionally and in the service, and his background gave another aspect to the group.

Of course, across the country in the years between 1967 and 1973, jazz has become one of the most popular options of students in music. And to fledgling music teachers graduating from universities (Mansfield included), the challenge is made to "teach jazz." This year, then, jazz has become part of the curriculum at MSC just as it has in the decade in North Texas, University of Indiana at Bloomington, and Ohio State University.

Mansfield's first step was to get a new instructor whose specialty was jazz and who could develop a whole new aspect of the music program. He is Thomas J. Ryan, a saxophonist who has taught and played professionally for fifteen years and who has both his bachelor's and master's degrees in music from Ohio State.

Prof. Ryan is very happy with the Concert Jazz Band. "They have evidently always played with a great deal of musicianship and enthusiasm," he remarks. "With hard work and the right kind of support they could be highly competitive with the best college bands in the country." Ryan explains that the stage band now, with the development of the jazz curriculum, would reach the same professional level as the other large ensembles at Mansfield.

The area the band is concentrating on now is improvisation and originality. Ryan points out that there is much excellent material being arranged for jazz groups now; however "unless you're improvising, you are still saying what someone else has said in his band. And you must also remember that the originality is an element inherent in jazz.

Without the originality, you're not in the idiom."

Another area in which the 22-piece band has changed its image - and another reason for their no longer formally referring to themselves as "The Esquires" - is Stephanie Mingos, a pretty red-haired piano player from Sayre. Women's lib is not the reason for Stephanie's participation in the band; she's there because she's good, Ryan declares. And there will probably soon be other girls in the band, because he has heard of girls in the department who are said to be good in the idiom, too.

Both Ryan and last year's director Talbot laud the seniors in the jazz band particularly. They are Dave Burkhart on trumpet; Paul Ivankevich, student leader and lead alto sax; Joe Scartelli, electric bass; Larry Smith, tenor sax; and Jerry Osman, trombone.

ATTENTION HOME EC ALUMNI

The MSC Home Economics Alumni Association will hold its Second Annual meeting Saturday evening, June 22, during Alumni-Weekend. Meeting notices will be sent to anyone who pays the annual dues of $2.00 or to those who request information. (Send request for information on meeting only to Mae D. Bleiler, 1618 N. 11th Street, Reading, Penna. 19604.)

Anyone paying dues before May 31, 1974 will be a charter member of the MSC Home Ec Alumni. We hope to reach a total of 100 members by the June meeting. So send in your dues now. The 100th member shall receive a free reservation to the dinner meeting.

I wish to become a charter member of the MSC Home Ec Alumni Association.

Wings for Mansfield Draw Campus Interest

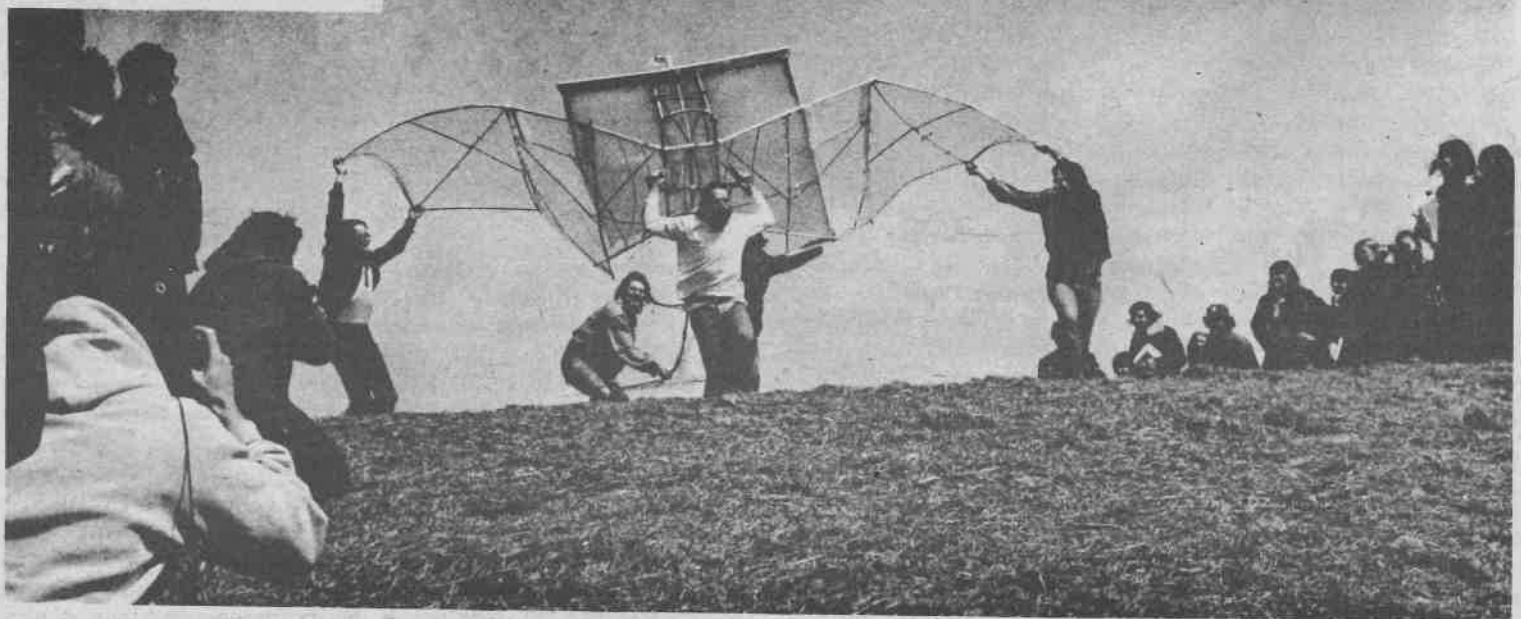

Part of the appeal of being a college student has always been the individualism; the fact that students dare to be different. Campus fads have ranged from goldfish swallowing and telephone booth cramming to the latest "streaking" craze. Interestingly enough, it has been the youth on college campuses that have reflected attitudes of society—perhaps to the extent that they can do what people in society have always wanted to do but couldn't because of the stigma involved in doing something unconventional.

In the 1950's, students were more or less non-questioning and conforming; in the 1960's, dissenting and rebellious. For the 1970's, attitudes toward ecology and individualism are prevalent, and students are more innovative and more concerned with "doing their own thing" than ever before.

Senior philosophy major Joe Mullen, for example, explained that his construction of Icarus wings was "something I've always wanted to do since I was a little kid."

"News" that Joe Mullen was building a set of wings in the art studios in North Hall spread around campus during the several weeks of construction. Students, faculty, and staff soon learned of the project and, for a time, campus discussion turned from "streaking" to Joe Mullen.

Although he is scared to death of heights, Mullen set about building the 18½-foot set of wings, named "Andrea I" after a close friend and former MSC student. His project was viewed by his peers with good-natured bantering and curious observation; in either of the last two decades he probably would have been ridiculed for undertaking such a task.

Comments many early aviators received like, "It'll never get off the ground," Joe took with a grin. One varsity athlete quipped, "If man was meant to fly he would have had wings," then apologetically offered, "I was only joking."

It cost Joe nearly $50 to build the wings, using an assortment of materials. "I cut up my aluminum tripod easel, a smaller wooden easel, and my back-pack that I used to use for hiking," he said. Tree branches, bamboo sticks, aluminum and magnesium were used to make the framework. He used epoxy glue and nylon cord to hold it together, then sewed silk nylon material with fishing line to cover the wings.

When the frame was completed he took the wings outside to test for size and weight, and to pose for pictures for The Flashlight. Interest in Joe's project continued to rise as the flight date got nearer, and he talked about the project in a WNTV Radio interview. Mullen explained that his knowledge of aerodynamics was limited and "either it will fly or it won't. It's that simple," he said.

Construction and campus talk continued. In preparation for the flight, at a previously unannounced site or date, Joe practiced head stands, went on a diet, and learned how to fall. "I jumped over the salad bar a few times up in Manser cafeteria," he joked.

Joe asked on lookers to meet between Memorial and North Halls before going to the flight location. "I don't want to walk up alone," he said simply. And he didn't.

On March 26, several hundred people gathered outside the art studios while Mullen assembled the wings, and as he marched to a hill on the south side of campus, several hundred more observers joined the procession. At the top of the campus ski slope, leading down to the pitcher's mound of the new baseball field, a crowd larger than those attending Mountie sporting events watched with eager anticipation as he made final preparations for flight.

Three friends steadied each side of the wings and the flight began. After running and leaping approximately 75 yards in hopes of becoming airborne, Mullen came to a stop and let out an anguished cry. He was convinced by the crowd to give it a second try, but before he started a gust of wind broke the left wing of his craft. "It didn't work," he cried. "Let's get drunk."

Afterward, he repaired the wing and placed the craft on exhibit during Fromage Nouveau—the arts fair held April 1-7 in the Recreation Center (old gym). When asked later about the flight attempt Joe stated, "It's a good thing it didn't fly. I could have gotten hurt!"

MSC Profs Swap Jobs with Elmira Teachers

For years teachers have been saying what every college professor needs is to spend just one day teaching in a public school. Three faculty from Mansfield State College provided some proof for that statement recently when members from the college exchanged roles for the day with three faculty from Parley Coburn School in Elmira.

"I'd forgotten how physically exhausting teaching is," remarked Dr. Richard Finley. "Someone who teaches prospective high school teachers really ought to go back occasionally. It really opened my eyes."

Edward Trexler, a 1969 MSC graduate, added support to the difference in teaching environments saying, "It was an easy day." However, he explained that the experience was very worthwhile and that the school was looking forward to another exchange.

Dr. Finley, Dr. Richard Heck and Dr. Robert Swinsick from the college secondary education department traded roles for the day with Trexler, Walter Fischl, and Theodore Faber from Parley Coburn.

According to Paul Hafer, also from secondary education, who coordinated the exchange, the swap of faculty grew out of the participation and observation program for secondary education majors at the Elmira school. While the Mansfield faculty substituted in social studies, science, and math classes the trio from Parley Coburn met with classes in Educational Psychology, Introduction to Secondary Education, and History and Philosophy of Education on campus.

The exchange provided an opportunity for high school teachers to talk with prospective teachers about their role in the teaching profession, and it gave the college personnel a chance to reinforce and refresh their ideas about what high schools are like.

"I'd forgotten to what extent we institutionalize the lives of children," Dr. Heck commented, "and for that matter, the teachers too." Moving from a college environment to a junior high environment so distinctly different from their own, each of the Mansfield teachers had not recalled so vividly the demands of time for classes, study halls, and the extras that make it difficult to plan, to be innovative and to devise special things to do with the students.

"Students and faculty at Parley Coburn welcomed and accepted the Mansfield faculty," Dr. Swinsick commented, adding that because of an apparent good relationship between teachers and students at the school,

"we felt very comfortable during our stay at the school."

On the other hand, the learning experience wasn't all one-sided. Parley Coburn faculty talked of teaching experiences using classroom situations to help prepare the future teachers. Trexler said, "It gave us a chance to get some fresh ideas. Discussions and questions in the college classes had us defending some of the educational methods we use to students who had been in similar situations." In addition, he noted that people who were very close to student teaching were concerned about their upcoming experience. He feels it would be more beneficial for students to have two student teaching experiences of nine weeks duration rather than a full semester.

Suggestions from the day's exchange included thoughts of college students observing their instructor during his teaching of the junior high class to see how theories of teaching were put into practice. If a few students would not be able to report back to a large group, then a videotape might serve the purpose.

The Elmira faculty felt that the observation and participation program is really needed but also saw a problem. "If students are not required to go to class, how can they be responsible teachers? You can have liberty but you have to have responsibility along with it."

Faculty from both schools found the experience very beneficial and agreed similar exchanges should be conducted more often, but with more people from more areas of specialization, and perhaps with more schools.

Cont. Ed Program Offers More "Apples"

Apples have always been associated with education over the years and Mansfield State College has a new apple. It's called continuing education, now in its fourth year at the college but with many new and interesting courses to "take a bite of."

In addition to the usual full listing of degree credit courses for the Spring Semester, glass blowing students, for example, develop basic techniques and skills in the art of glass control and handling as directed by Keith Price. Price is employed as a glass blower with Corning Glass Corporation.

Offered again was Fly Tying, not only a step-by-step personal instruction for fishermen to complete a fly on their first attempt that will take trout, but an advanced course in addition to take the serious fly tyer and fly fishermen through professional fly dressing techniques into trout stream entomology and selection of the right fly. Instructor C. Merton Pierce from Williamsport demonstrated use of materials, dyeing and bleaching, and fly casting from the simple roll cast to the double haul and steeple cast. Both courses were held on campus.

The focus for many of the courses offered throughout the northern tier has been on contemporary problems. Conservation of Natural Resources, taught by David Darby, considers man's relationship to the wildlife, grassland, minerals, water and recreational resources of the United States and their conservation. Major topics for study in the course, held in Coudersport, include the U.S. potential to meet demands of an increasing population undergoing rapid urbanization, the development of the conservation movement, the resource concept and resource use conflicts. Others considered are land use patterns, land policy, and land use competition.

A special education course, Introduction to Exceptional Children, was taught in Sayre by Emery Breniman and Nancy Brubaker. It includes career opportunities in special education, rehabilitation and related areas, as well as the needs of children who are exceptional in emotional, social, physical, and intellectual development is contained in Introduction to Exceptional Children.

Of course, other studies successful in past years are still popular. Elizabeth Corner's Foundations of Nutrition at the Robert Packer Hospital, for instance, offers study in Public School Nursing. The course is an overview in principles of normal nutrition as they relate to therapeutic conditions, food habits, marketing, and budgeting. Food nutrients, including sources, daily allowances, metabolism, nutritional needs of all age groups, and dietary means of promoting optimum health will be studied.

Many other courses are also offered each term and for the summer. For a complete listing of those offered at a specific geographical center, contact Dr. William H. Beisel, Dean of Continuing Education at Mansfield State College.

Festival Theatre Moves from Tent to Barn

Mansfield Festival Theatre is opening the season without the tent. The big blue and yellow tent nestled against the Mansfield mountains is giving place to a similarly striped pole barn which, though not so picturesque in theory, will be immensely more practical for the season.

Dr. John Tillinghast, Chairman of the Mansfield State College Theatre Department and Director of MFT, is enthusiastic about the barn's possibilities. "This will make staging much more flexible. We will no longer be held to the arena, there will be a genuine stage house, thrust stage, and a bit of a loft." (Well, what else would you expect in an acting barn?) For virtually the first time, the actual capacity for the MFT will be 300. Both previous seasons, seating of an orchestra and/or staging itself has taken chunks out of the audience area. The new barn will not only take care of that problem, there will also be no obstructions in visibility, and the weather will not be the decisive factor in performances it has been in the past. (Two years ago Agnes wiped out opening night of "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown.")

In addition to the college theatre majors supplementing the visiting professionals this season, high school students will be participating as well. The Department is offering a summer workshop for high schoolers, where they can work directly with the five shows going on. Townspeople will again be involved in the heavily musical summer.

The projected program for the 1974 season is June 13, 14, 15, 20, 21, 22, - "Little Mary Sunshine"; June 27, 28, 29, July 4, 5, 6 - "Two by Two"; July 11, 12, 13, 18, 19, 20 - "Life with Father"; Aug. 1, 2, 3, 8, 9, 10 - "Private Lives"; Aug. 15, 16, 17, 22, 23, 24 - "Man of La Mancha."

Education Continues in Dorm Life

Dorm parties aren't "like they used to be" at Mansfield State College. Students still play games, and of course there are still battles between floors, suites, and areas.

However, the games people play in the dorms these days are likely to have some strong redeeming educational value, especially since the advent of the Student Affairs Educational Planning Committee, comprised of seven members of the professional staff of the college. The group defines its purpose as the coordination of the "education that goes on outside the classroom" and intends "to create programs designed to fulfill educational needs which cannot be met in class, to help meet educational and social needs of students, and to provide an atmosphere within which faculty and students can interact informally." For the first time in years, the residence halls are staffed by live-in professionals trained in counseling and curriculum; so this time is ideal to be developing the co-curricular program, an assistant dean points out.

Probably "non-curricular sociology" is the subject that gets the most emphasis in the committee's work. One of the programs starting in January is a study of the Tioga County area. Students who have come to MSC from cities see the Mansfield community as a homogeneous little town nestled in a pretty valley. "Aren't there any poor people?" and "Why would anyone choose to live here?" are questions that arise often. Dean of Students Rodney Kelchner is attempting to answer them. With the help of local people who know the area well and who have chosen to live where they do, the students are going to "investigate" Tioga County; they will travel by bus around the county and make some comparisons. Kelchner says, "There is no credit for the course, but the experience may well be very valuable in connection with another class the student may take."

Members of the staff are conducting study skills classes and "practical knowledge" seminars in dormitories. Looking for an apartment? Want to know what to look for in a lease? a contract? an insurance policy? Come to a two-hour session in the lounge and find out.

What's it all leading to? Well, for one thing, to a living-learning center in the residence hall, the committee hopes. Perhaps some time in the next year or so, students will be receiving credit for adjunct courses that are interdisciplinary in nature - and carried on some place other than in a classroom.

In the meantime, though, all sorts of learning situations are being developed in the dorms. A faculty member who has been involved in some of the simulation games commented, "I bet at the next shaving cream battle in the dorm they'll have a physics prof there to explain the functioning of aerosol cans, a mathematician to describe the natural arc of wet mass in flight, an environmentalist to comment on the effect of shaving cream upon body and wood surfaces, and an English prof to analyze the level of the communication that goes on."

One of the most common fantasies of anyone who has a talent is to be displaying his art in the most venerable structures in the world — and receiving the highest recognition for it.

Forty-seven talented students who comprise the MSC Concert Choir fulfilled a lifetime's worth of fantasies over their New Year vacation, 1974. They went to Europe with six other American choirs to meet and sing with five European choruses — and their concert halls included the Papal Auditorium of the Vatican, St. Peter's Basilica and Notre Dame de Paris. And as a result of a competition at the Anselmo Monastery on the Aventine Hill the first day of the festival, the Mansfield group was presented with a rarely awarded gold medal by the Rome International Choral Festival, the first presented in three years of competitions.

Some of the Choir's time in Rome was spent sight-seeing, and it was during one of the tours that what one Mansfieldian referred to as her "most musically thrilling" moment happened. The Choir was touring the catacombs under Rome "seeing where the early Christians had hidden and listening to the guide's description of their martyrdom" when the group reached the chapel.

Told they could sing in the chapel, Director David Dick asked the Choir what they would like to sing. " 'Crucifixus,' " several students replied immediately, referring to a difficult Renaissance Motet by Antonio Lotti that they had learned last semester.

One of the chaperones on the trip, Janet Hill, said, "You know, that Choir is so finely disciplined that they sounded as though they had been practicing an hour. Well, it was truly beautiful. There was no audience to inspire them, but the kids were so moved by the experience that I am sure they'll never forget it. I won't."

The emotional effect that was inevitable in the historical association with nearly all the landmarks where the choir sang was heightened by the acoustical properties of the structures, making the musical attributes of the experiences absolutely unique. The singing in the Catacombs would naturally be unusual but the properties of the other structures where the Choir sang are almost equally impossible to duplicate in the United States. St. Peter's Basilica, for example, has a five or six second "decay," caused by size, shape and the immense amount of marble in the room. This falling away of sound, up to a certain point, makes any choir sound better because the voices blend so perfectly. Even Notre Dame, by comparison, sounded acoustically "dead", according to choir members, though the sound there was better, in choral terms, than in any concert hall where the Mansfield Choir had sung before the European experience.

The Concert Choir sang also for Sunday mass in a smaller church in the medieval town of Sacrafano, a short distance north of Rome.

Dr. Kent Hill, professor of music, was asked what the most thrilling moment of the week-long European experience was for him as an audience. He replied, "Oh, there is no question at all. One moment was unquestionably the most thrilling to me." (Pause) "After all those choirs had sung, the Mansfield choir walked on and after three notes, showed they were head and shoulders above the others. The thrill to me was how beautiful the choir sounded — not in comparison to anyone else — but just how beautiful they sounded."

Showing the "Folks at home" that beautiful sound, the Choir performed at a Wednesday noon concert in the Capitol Rotunda. Many of the Commonwealth's outstanding music groups have performed there in Harrisburg since the Department of Property and Supplies began sponsoring the event, but a spokesman said Mansfield is the only group that prepared for their appearance with a "practice session" in St. Peter's.

The Harrisburg dome, with the same acoustical effects as its famous prototype, witnessed the Concert Choir drawing people out of offices and passersby from the halls when they began to sing. Most of the approximately 200 gathered were seated while others leaned over balcony railings and some were passing through.

The "practice session" fulfilled a dream for many of the Choir's members; the Rotunda performance relived it.

Mounties in England

Americans aren't the only people who go wild over "Alabama" and "Two O'clock Jump."

When 190 members of the Mansfield State Mountie Marching Band went to England recently, they found that the "dignified" English aren't proper all the time, because they let loose when listening to foot-stomping, hand-clapping, rowdy music the same way we do.

The band went to Harrogate, England to participate in the second Annual International Youth Bands Festival sponsored by the Council for International Contact in association with the Harrogate District Council. The Mountie Band was the only band from the U.S. The other bands were from Ireland, Germany, and England.

The nine-day festival in Harrogate was filled from beginning to end with activities that kept the bands moving constantly. During the day the band toured the historical towns and sites of that area, such as Masham, Knaresborough with its castle, York with its Roman wall and Majestic cathedral, and the Fountains Abbey, to name only a few. At the same time the band would give one-unit parades through the towns and outdoor concerts afterwards. Everywhere they went, they were well received.

Speaking of outdoor concerts, the weather wasn't exactly all sunshine and warmth. Although there was little rain, the days were cool and damp. The English are quite used to this but unfortunately many of us tourists are now suffering from bad colds.

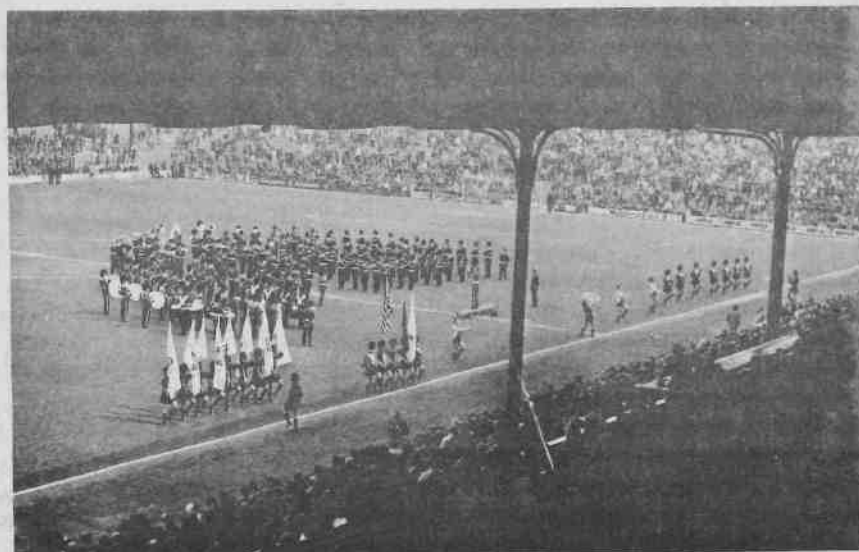

The evenings were also full of things to do. The band members attended many concerts and played some of their own. Of course there were also receptions, dances, and parties. It was at these that we could all sit down and get to know the kids in the other bands. We had no trouble communicating with the Irish and English, but the German students tended to create a slight problem. This was quite a young band, over half of its members being under 12, but somehow we all communicated and got along just "smashingly."

The band members always found time to shop in the English stores. It seemed that sweaters and Wedgewood china were the two big things that kids wanted to buy. Even though these two items received a lot of attention, the shops that really got hit hard were the pastry shops. There probably isn't one pastry shop in northern England that wasn't mobbed by the entire Mountie Marching Band.

After the youth festival it was arranged for the band to travel to London for an extra four-day stay. In Harrogate the band stayed in hotels, but in London they were housed in private homes. This gave the band members a chance to find out what the English people were like. We learned of their lifestyle and found that on the whole they are a warm and friendly people. During the stay in London, the band did much sightseeing and saw all the famous spots, Buckingham Palace, Windsor Castle, Picadilly Circus, etc., plus a few out of the way special areas. And of course everyone had to get at least one ride on the famous English double decker buses.

The band played only three concerts while in London, one at Windsor Wild Animal Park, one at a professional soccer (they call it football) game at Crystal Palace, and our final concert was given for the families who so freely took us into their homes during our visit. I know that when we left on Monday (22nd) there were many, many kids who were quite sorry to leave England. The plane ride back went quite smoothly and I am proud to say that no one got air sick on the plane.

Alumni Affairs Has Busy Year

It has been an interesting year in the Alumni Office at MSC. In August, Ruth Marsh left us (thank heaven she's still just down the street), and the Alumni materials were moved out of South Hall over into first floor North Hall, where they sit file to file with the Public Relations paraphernalia.

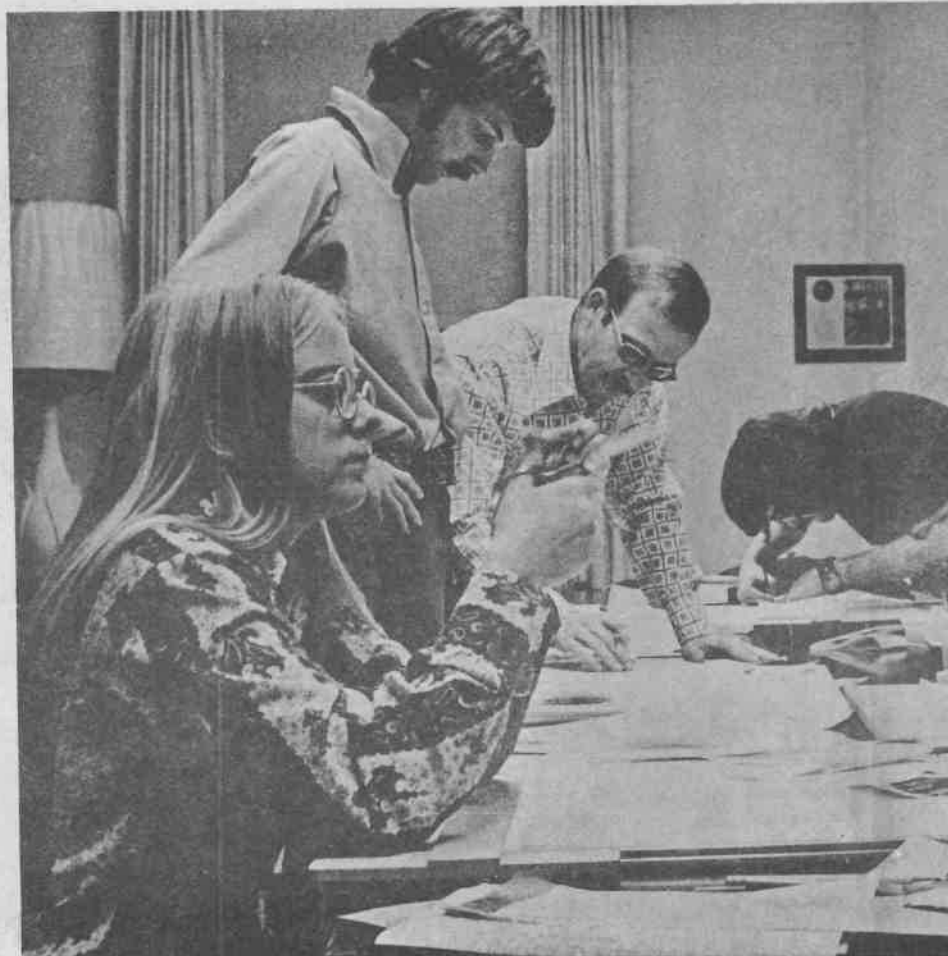

In view of the fact that enrollment at MSC, as at other colleges, was apparently going to be the problem of the year, the Alumni Board promptly agreed that support of the college recruitment effort was a good project for us. As a result, much of our office resource material has been put to that use.

One of the major projects has been the "matching" of newly admitted students with alumni in their home towns. Having alumni again play "big brother - big sister" and keep the Mansfield name warm for prospective students between admission and September of their freshman year has been a very successful idea. We cannot yet evaluate it in terms of new students, but we've had such good response from alumni that we think the results in the building of the organization are bound to be good. (We have received stacks of updated addresses from the effort and keeping files up on p is a major concern in any C alumni office.) The responses tic v from the alumni with offers bee to help have been great. pro Thank you, all.

Of course attracting stu- mag dents starts before admis- sen sion, and today college re- boo cruitment is one of the most 197 competitive of all areas. such Audio-visual materials and and various methods to promote loo the MSC programs are nec- Star essary to keep the college Edu competitive in its presenta- tions. Alumni Office Year in '74

One of our most optimistic ventures for the year has been to join "The Graduate" program. "The Graduate" is a glossy, beautifully done magazine written for college seniors. Subheaded "A Handbook for Leaving School Post 1974," it features articles on such topics as Job Hunting and the Employment Outlook, Time Study, Planning, Starting a Business, Graduate Education, Futurism, and Adjustments to "learning" outside of school. (Ed. note: The magazine is really frustrating. Several articles tell everybody what it took us ten years of hard knocks to find out.) A copy of "The Graduate" is being given to each of MSC graduate with "Compliments of the Alumni Association" printed on the cover. The publication is a useful and impressive gift, we think, and it is serving the purpose of introducing the association to our newest members.

The "Matching Gift" program has not had an overwhelming response yet, but the plan has so far elicited about $300 for the Mountie drive and about $50 for the Alumni Association. We do have high hopes for it in the next few months.

Our biggest headache of the year has been our tax status. The relationship with IRS has always been a good one, but our definitions have not been as clear as one would hope. Present negotiations with Internal Revenue are confirming our position. This year, with a great deal of help from the college business manager, Mr. Trainor, we have the problem on the way to being solved, we feel.

One of the most gratifying aspects of working in the Alumni Office is the two handfuls of students who work here and the Alumni Board members who are always on call. Ruth Marsh has been invaluable this year, and Paul McMillen is constantly in contact to help us out.

We have an immense amount of organizing to get done; Ruth Marsh was so beautifully in charge that we suffer by comparison. However, frenetic as the year has been, it has been a good one, we think. Stop in and see us someday.

Things you can do to help your Alumni Association:

1. Come to Alumni Day (June 22)
2. Send money; MSC Alumni Association
3. Recommend a student
4. Send us your updated address.

'Trash is Cash'

Several hundred visitors came to the Mansfield campus early in April for a conglomeration of activities, highlighted by the Home Economics Department's second annual "Trash is Cash" Ecology Fair.

More than 270 entries from area students in pre-school, elementary, junior-senior high, and adult categories emphasized how today's way of life presents a need for ecology. "In order to live in our future years as we live today we must all become personal conservatives in the use of material goods," says the Home Ec Department.

Using at least 75 percent of discarded materials for construction of the entries, students showed how a little thought and creativity can turn useless discarded trash into unique decorative or useful items.

Other campus events included Fromage Nouveau, the Arts Fair with an exhibit of works by students and faculty as well as presentations by MSC dance students, the Readers Theatre showcase, the Black Awareness Association Gospel Choir, poetry readings with guitar, movies each evening and an international display of food and customs.

The College Players production of Bertolt Brecht's "The Good Woman of Setzuan" was held during that week, then on Saturday the set came down for a Speech and Theater Festival for area schools. MSC faculty hosted the event and served as judges for the competition.

By prior arrangement, many groups visiting Mansfield saw a Planetarium show and "View from Space," a collection of 49 color and 20 black and white photos taken in space by astronauts or instrumented satellites. The exhibit, organized by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, was circulated by the Smithsonian Institute and was accompanied by a color film on Apollo 8 flight.

Campus guests also had the opportunity to "Talk to a Computer" as they toured the Computer Education Center, and saw first hand the operation of radio station WNTE.

Adding to the variety of entertainment that week, the Concert Jazz Band performed in Steadman Theatre. An arrangement of Ladd McIntosh's "Charts" was just one of the features by the 23-member group.

A doll house constructed of recyclable materials was one prize winner from among more than 270 entries in the ecology fair.

Open Education Week

Held in Elem. Dept.

Everybody talks about "Open Education," according to elementary education students at MSC, but unfortunately, too often, teacher-education institutions actually experience the new teaching only after hitting the classrooms themselves.

Therefore, the professors at Mansfield have developed an "open week" where juniors at the college practice what they preach about "open education." For two weeks in their "professional block," college students are relieved from duty in their own classes to participate in a variety of activities to illustrate "openness." One open week takes place in the first third of the semester, the other toward the end.

From Monday through Friday then, the students spend their days in teaching their own first group lessons, in participating in awareness sessions, in observing special lessons in field trips to completely "open schools," and in simulated open classroom situations.

This is the second year the elementary department has utilized open week, and the response from the students has been good. For one thing, they feel it makes them more competitive. In days when schools are being very selective about teachers, questions from prospective employers have sought responses about attitudes as well as knowledge. One applicant reported to Dr. Mary Robinson, a coordinator for "Open Week": "He (a principal) asked me how I felt about open education. It helped a lot to have experienced the open week," Dr. Robinson remarked, "Before, our principal would have asked, 'What do you know about open education?' Since our students were not taught in open classrooms, their exposure to open week is about all they have in practical experience to be able to respond to such a question."

Students commented on the shock of finding out how much preparation is necessary for teaching in an open classroom. Evidently the process that is apparent in the open class is only a small part of the operation. "I never realized before open week how self-disciplined one had to be in an open class," remarked Suzy Bachovchin of Monessen. "You don't realize how much work is behind it until you experience it."

Dr. Luther Pfluger, chairman of the Elementary Education Department, remarked, "The point, all the way through, is that we are giving the students options. When they decide what kind of teaching they are going to do, it will be on a basis of having tried different kinds." The whole open week was made up of options; students themselves made a choice of participation in at least five of eleven major activities during the week. Both Dr. Robinson and the students commented on the value of the "change of pace" for a student at this point in the semester. The freer time gives students more flexibility to develop their own projects, and some felt the idea of its being an "open week" made them less inhibited in responding to Professor Robert Putt's open classroom set-up where one day he had them use open classroom techniques with their own projects—stations where they studied film, video tapes, books, planned learning devices, and constructed materials.

All the professors who teach the "professional block" courses participated in "Open Week": Dr. Robinson and Mr. Putt, Miss Catherine Kuster, Mr. James Quinn, Mr. Robert Johnson and Miss Jeanne Kellerman.

When asked if "Open Week" had affected them as their professors had hoped, students replied that they had mixed feelings: "It was funny," Libb Reichard of Myerstown said. "I don't think my particular group did well in finishing our project, but it was very fulfilling personally. I learned a lot." "Yes," added Duane Vicini, another fall term "Open Week" veteran from Warren. "It wasn't exactly what you expected. For instance, I wanted to work with 5th and 6th graders and I was assigned to 1st and 2nd for 'Open Week'. I knew I wouldn't like it. What shocked me more than anything was that I liked it very much. Now I am seriously considering switching to the primary grades."

Most of the "switching" that students do as a result of open week will not be as dramatic as that of Mr. Vicini's, but they all seem to feel that the "openness" they have experienced will make that first year of teaching a little bit more secure, and for the few who will be hired to teach in completely open classrooms, it may just prove to be their most valuable experience in college.

Students Do Research at Argonne Lab

Two students from Mansfield State College are among fifty in the country who are working with research scientists at Argonne National Laboratory during the spring semester. Mansfield is the only school this semester to send more than one student.

Thomas Taylor, a senior physics major from Bellefonte, Pa., and John E. Swanson, a senior math major from Clarendon, Pa., will each receive a semester's worth of academic credit for work at the laboratory, one of the major research organizations of the Atomic Energy Commission. Their appointment in the program, for sixteen weeks, began January 28.

Located 25 miles southwest of downtown Chicago, Argonne is devoted to research and development programs related to nuclear and other civilian energy supplies. Although the facilities are owned by the U.S. Government, the Laboratory is operated by the University of Chicago under policies formulated by the Argonne Universities Association.

Both students work primarily on a research project in one of Argonne's scientific divisions, spending four days per week on the research project. One day per week is reserved for scheduled research support activities.

Taylor is working under the direction of Dr. A. Yokosawa in the Polarized Proton Target Experimental Group. His assignment is helping in the analysis of data from a run of negative pions scattering backwards off the polarized protons.

"It's an opportunity I'll probably never get again," Taylor commented. "I couldn't be anything but happy. Personally, I think it will open a lot of doors."

Swanson is working under the direction of M. Derrick measuring the inclusive neutron spectrum produced by particle-to-particle interactions. The technique used is to scan hydrogen bubble chamber pictures and look for examples of secondary elastic neutron proton scattering associated with primary particle-to-particle interactions.

Both are working in the High Energy Physics Division, where the only two students working this semester will be from MSC.

Dr. John Walker, associate professor of mathematics, said Swanson is "one of the finest students we have, but that sort of goes without saying since he has been appointed at Argonne."

Several others from Mansfield have participated in the program in the past with more expected to be nominated later this year. Donald Banks, William Bruger, and Kathy Denniston received appointments to Argonne in 1970 and 1971. Each applicant, according to Argonne specifications, is expected to be an honors-caliber student—normally with a "B" or better average in science, mathematics and engineering subjects.

"I don't know how many other schools have had dual award recipients," said Dr. Donald Darnton, vice president for academic affairs,

"but this is certainly rewarding both to them and to the college."

A spokesman for Argonne, Jerry Baird, observed that it was rather unusual for more than one student per school to receive an appointment to do research at Argonne but several schools have sent two students in a semester in the past. He added that both Mansfield students were well qualified and were placed very quickly.

Dr. George Mullen, chairman of the physics department of Mansfield, explained that Argonne is possibly one of six large research centers in the U.S. and probably one of the top 20 in the world. "It is an experience for the Mansfield students that is hard to beat," he said. "Something that couldn't be done at a small school. Without a doubt, they are meeting and working with the top people in the field."

Competition for studies at Argonne is mainly among smaller colleges, explained Dr. Mullen. They tend to pick small schools because they feel larger colleges and universities have facilities for research on campus.

After nominations for appointment are sent to Argonne, the final choice is made by scientists in each division that the student will be working with. Taylor remembers that he was asked to choose five areas he might like to work in and that he was selected for his second or third choice of research areas.

Both students receive free lodging in the student apartments at the Argonne Guest Facilities, a travel allowance for one round trip from the Mansfield campus to Argonne, and a $100 honorarium. Each will submit a report on his research project at the end of the program, to Argonne and to Mansfield. They will complete studies at Argonne May 17 and return to Mansfield the following day for graduation.

Microbooks Supplement Library Files

Real book lovers at Mansfield State College—the ones who sit and stroke calfbound volumes and caress the vellum page by page—don't quite approve of the method, but even they are impressed with the nearly 50,000 new "microbooks" in the MSC library. A microbook is just a book photographed on microfilm; the print is reduced by up to ninety times, the pages reproduced as is and it all fits (if it is less than 1000 pages) on one 3" x 5" card. The student then reads the "books" at a machine in the library.

And for those people whose love for books hinges on their portability, a new lap-reader for microforms has been developed, weighing less than a moderate-sized dictionary if one chooses to carry it around.

The combination of having the new "volumes" on the microfiche (cards), the lap-reader, and the very fact of having those millions of pages of print available is quickly reconciling the book-purists to the microforms.

Those millions of pages have been photographed by Library Resources, Inc., an Encyclopedia Britannica company. What makes them special is that they constitute books that are rare, out-of-print, or prohibitively expensive for a college like Mansfield. They represent, as well, thousands of volumes that would otherwise take up rooms and rooms of shelving.

Close to $190,000 has been spent on the microforms collection since 1971, $85,000 of which was appropriated for the "Microbooks" collections. The rest has been utilized in updating the "serials holdings" of the library and building extensive "back files" of periodicals. James Simonis, Director of Library Services, explains. Mansfield, having been primarily oriented toward teacher education until ten years ago, had built its library chiefly around teaching and education. The transition to liberal arts left the library with much catching up to do in the liberal arts subject areas. The back issues of professional publications on microfilm substantially supplement those areas.

"A liberal arts college which has been buying books for a hundred years would have been accumulating the kind of a collection that we could not duplicate without microform," points out Martha Donahue, Reference Librarian. "Many of these books are not available now. 'Also, when one considers the comparison of cost between a book and a fiche, space that would be involved for that many books, and the amount of work involved in the pre-cataloging and getting a book ready to be shelved, this system saves an immense amount of money."

One of the microbook collections, "The Library of American Civilization," for instance, which contains 19,000 volumes, cost $21,000. There are over 6,000,000 pages in the collection, and it has been estimated that the cost in book form would be over $450,000. Space requirements for the entire collection is six cubic feet—comparable to the space required to handle only the card cataloging for an equivalent number of books.

"The Library of American Civilization" covers all aspects of American life up to the outbreak of World War I; the titles were selected by forty leading scholars in American Studies. "Few, if any, of the largest university libraries have more than 50% to 60% of the titles," explained Treadwell Ruml, President of the Library Resources, Inc.

As a result, special photographic facilities to film all the books of the collection were set up at Dartmouth University, the Universities of Chicago and Illinois, and the Library of Congress. In addition, a special trailer was outfitted to circulate around the country, filming books not available at the other libraries. As a result of the filming, small colleges now can have library holdings to compete with those at the great universities.

In addition to the "American Civilization" collection, the MSC Library has acquired "American Literature," which is in progress. The Library has 17,000 or so completed microcards of the 35,000 projected volumes listed in Jacob Blanck's "Bibliography of American Literature."

A collection known as the "Human Relations Area Files," is another acquisition, designed for cross-cultural and comparative research by anthropologists and related behavioral scientists. This includes articles, books and manuscripts listed in 700 categories, which have been cross-indexed to bring sophisticated original research within the range of undergraduate students. "Black Experience in America since the 17th Century" includes 6000 titles widely applicable in Black Studies, and "The Negro: Emancipation to World War I" deals with books and pamphlets by and about the Negro from 1863 to 1914.

The ERIC Collection (Educational Resources Information Center), a documentation of programs, development, and proceedings in education, is also part of the group of microforms acquired since 1971. "The League of Nation Treaty Series" and the "Microbook Library of English Literature" complete the listing of the new collections.

Some people are concerned that a new generation of machinophiles is being developed. The cold metal of the readers may not be too appealing, but they do warm up. And so do the aforementioned bibliophiles when they actually see the contents of those collections.

J. WILLIAMS

Although teams in athletic programs at Mansfield State College have occupied the news spotlight over the years with their achievements and seasonal records, the Forensic team can match honors against national competition with the best Mansfield team, perhaps in the history of the school.

"We are probably the only team competing against all colleges with no grouping according to size," said Michael Leiboff, director of forensics for the last six years.

What is forensics you say? In a sense it is a club, but since the participants compete against rather formidable opponents in colleges and universities, forensics is a team of students engaged in competitive speaking in several areas. Debate, discussion and individual speaking events such as after dinner speaking, persuasive speaking, oral interpretation and informative speaking are the most popular.

At the national championships for the last two years where Ohio State, Ball State, and Eastern Michigan have dominated the top three places in competition, Mansfield placed 12th two years ago and finished 17th last year. An MSC student "talked" away with a fifth place last year in individual events.

"UCLA, the University of Houston and all the well-known, popular, large schools as well as smaller schools like Mansfield were represented," Leiboff said. Explaining eligibility for national competition, he added that special rules and prerequisites must be obeyed. "You have to have been in the finals of another tournament with at least seven colleges and universities in attendance, and there must be at least 15 persons entered in each event."

"When I first came here it was tough," Leiboff recalled. "There were only one or two people in forensics." This semester there are 17 students involved and only about half of those are speech and theatre majors; others are from political science, psychology and English fields. "Now Mansfield has a very good reputation in forensics," he commented.

"Only one person in the history of forensics at Mansfield has competed in forensics in high school, which proves you don't have to be a speech and theatre major to join. Although if someone had experience I wouldn't throw them out the door," Leiboff grinned.

So far, the forensic team has appeared at a limited number of speaking engagements throughout the community. Through personal contacts, a few events have been attended but plans are made to seek a more active role in the future.

According to Leiboff, this has been the most successful year ever in Forensics. MSC placed consistently high against the best possible competition all year, then wrapped up the season by bringing home more than 30 speaking awards in just three weekend meets.

Mansfield was most successful at its fourth intercollegiate speech contest of the semester, competing at Southern Connecticut State College in New Haven. Overall, MSC placed 7th out of 54 colleges and universities attending the largest contest of the year in the Northeast.

Individually, MSC speakers brought home three trophies. Sharon Bragin (Fairlawn, N.J.) won 2nd place in after dinners speaking among 47 contestants, and 4th out of 70 entries in persuasive speaking. Against 107 contestants in oral interpretation, Leroy Wright (Wyalusing) placed 3rd.

In another contest at Oswego University, Mansfield took 3rd out of 15, finishing behind first place Niagara University and Southern Connecticut in second. Bringing home a total of nine trophies, MSC finished ahead of Syracuse, Albion, St. Lawrence, St. Rose, and Bloomsburg, to name a few.

First place honors went to Keith Semmel (Slatington) in after dinner speaking while Sharon Bragin took the top spot in the oral interpretation category. Sharon received another trophy for third in persuasive speaking and Keith got another for fifth in the original poetry event.

Other awards went to Gary Farmer (Baden) for fifth in oral interpretation, and Leroy Wright brought home three trophies for fifth, third and fourth places finishes respectively in persuasive, informative, and rhetorical criticism events.

Consistent with their high performance this year, Leiboff was elected Governor of Pi Kappa Delta's (National Forensic Honorary) Northeast Province. One of 11 such Governors throughout the country, Leiboff presides over a province that covers eight states and includes more than 30 colleges and universities.

"The whole idea of forensics," explains Sharon, "is not only speaking, and getting in there trying to represent your college, but the team as a whole is very concerned about getting along so they can function together in competition. It's meeting other people, offering advice; learning socially."

Mansfield's team has become good enough so that "many times we make the finals in a round of competition and compete against each other," observes Sharon, "but usually we face students from all across the nation."

Sharon, who graduated in January, used her Forensics experience to obtain a job as assistant debate coach at the University of Maine in Orono. Similarly, Kate Craig finished her four year Forensic career at MSC with a flurry and can draw from her experience as she seeks employment. At the final season tournament at West Chester she won 1st place in discussion, 2nd place in persuasive speaking, and 5th places in after-dinner and extemporaneous speaking.

Recently, MSC competed in the National Championships at the Plattsburg campus of the State University of New York. In individual events, Mansfield placed 11th in the nation out of 105 colleges and universities competing. Leroy Wright placed 7th in Informative Speaking and Keith Semmel placed 13th.

After accumulating more than 90 awards this year, the MSC Forensic team placed respectably for the third consecutive year against national competition. Wright and Semmel, incidentally, competed against more than 150 individuals in each of their respective categories in that competition.

DiBiaso at Notre Dame

Former Mountie basketball great Dick DiBiaso is continuing winning ways on the hardwood in much the same tradition that he imparted to fans at Mansfield State College in the early 1960's. Currently, DiBiaso is assistant coach under Digger Phelps at the University of Notre Dame where the Irish stopped UCLA's 88-game win streak.

Now in his third year at Notre Dame, the 32-year old DiBiaso handles scouting and recruiting assignments in addition to his work with the varsity. His knowledge of the sport has also led to several coaching articles for basketball magazines.

At Mansfield, under Coach Bill Gibson (Head Coach at University of Va.), Dick had a starting role on the varsity squad for all four years. In his junior year the 6-3 forward finished fifth in Pennsylvania Conference scoring while leading the Mounties in rebounding. Team captain in his senior year, DiBiaso scored a career total of 1,208 points at MSC while grabbing 1,000 rebounds — marks which may stand yet as the best ever at the college.

In all four of his years at Mansfield, the Mounties participated in NAIA playoffs and won the State Championship in both his junior and senior years. In 1962, Dick's senior year at MSC, Mansfield lost only once that basketball season—a 61-60 cliffhanger at Bloomsburg. It was that year that MSC set the then all-time high team score of 122 points against Lycoming at home, and repeated the performance against the current Pa. Conference powerhouse Cheyney on the road.

"One of the best forwards that Mansfield State College has ever had," commented former teammate Dave Russell, now director of the college's Equal Educational Opportunity and Minority Affairs Programs. Russell, one of Mansfield's all-time great guards and a member of the elite 1,000 pointscorers, was another reason for the tradition of winning basketball at MSC. "Dick was a great hustler who had a fantastic attitude and was a well-rounded player," said Russell. "He was more concerned with helping the team win than scoring points for basketball at Monessen High School near Pittsburgh, where he graduated in 1958. Four years later with a B.S. in Education (Social Science) from Mansfield State, Dick started coaching at Beacon High School (N. Y.) where he won 30 straight games during his first two years as junior varsity coach. For the next four years as head coach, he compiled an impressive 101-15 record, including one undefeated season. Beacon, hometown of Digger Phelps, also won two state sectional titles under DiBiaso.

In 1968, Dick became an assistant coach to his former mentor Gibson at the University of Virginia. Freshmen teams under DiBiaso's direction posted a 26-19 mark and Dick also handled some area recruiting. He moved on to Notre Dame in 1971.

"There was no hesitation at all when Digger asked me to join him," DiBiaso recalls; and Phelps has not regretted the decision to hire him. Basketball is a tradition with Dick DiBiaso that has impressed not only Phelps, but experts in the sport as well.

Water basketball made a big splash in the intramural sports program this year.

DeSanto

Honored

Women Swimmers

Mark First

"Co-eds" at Mansfield took another stroke toward "equality" when twenty MSC women competed against St. Bonaventure University women in an official intercollegiate swimming meet.

It was the first official intercollegiate competitive meet for women in the college's history. There were some "high club" tennis meets between women at Mansfield and at other colleges this year, but the recent membership of the college in the American Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women makes this meet official.

"We are looking at this as the beginning of a strong women's intercollegiate program," said Dr. Arthur DeGenaro, Chairman of the Health and Physical Education Department. "The girls have certainly waited a long time for it."

Coach Mary Lou Shaw said six members of the team qualified for regional competition at Springfield College in Massachusetts early in March. In its second year of competition the team compiled a 2-6 record as they continued to improve. "The team has outstanding spirit," says Coach Shaw, "and as they gain experience in competition I believe they will improve a good deal more."

At halftime of the MSC-Millersville basketball game February 23 Mansfield's two-time NAIA All-American second baseman Joe DeSanto (Williamsport) received his trophy from acting head baseball coach Tom Costello. Mansfield won the contest 92-89 as freshman Steve Tomlinson sank a bucket and a free-throw with two seconds left in overtime.

DeSanto was first named All-American in his junior year. He also received the Adirondack Bat Company Trophy that same year for being the leading hitter in the Eastern United States with a .469 average.

In his senior year he batted only .396, but this was good enough to be rated 31st in the nation according to NCAA statistics. DeSanto was named to the first string Pennsylvania Conference (State) All-Star team in his junior and senior years.

Not only has he received national and state recognition, but Joe currently holds seven college all-time batting marks for the Mounties. Career marks he owns are hits, doubles, batting average, and runs scored. Season high marks include hits, doubles, and batting average.

Graduating in May 1973 with a B.S. Degree in Secondary Education, Joe completed his four year career in Mountie baseball with a .418 batting average.

Action is always fast and exciting as intramural basketball teams, like the co-ed team pictured above, strive for top honors.

Snowmobile Safety Course Initiated

Using the scenic rolling hills behind the campus for a classroom, some 16 college students have been taking advantage of each snowfall this term to explore the world of snowmobiling.

When the ground was covered with snow, classes met several hours a day nearly seven days a week, whenever students can squeeze some riding time into their busy academic schedules. Sunny days that had the rest of the campus community eagerly anticipating Spring, had those involved with the course lamenting, "My class is melting out from under me."

The course, offered this semester for the first time, is a Snowmobile Safety Training program presented through Arctic Enterprises and dealer Richard Wilson of Mansfield. Arctic has provided a basic course outline and materials in a training package, and Wilson has given the college use of two Arctic Cat Snowmobiles.

"It's not a course where you can just jump on the machine and ride," explains course instructor Dr. Art DeGenaro, director of the Health and Physical Education Department. "The students have accepted that and even those who own their own snowmobiles have learned more about the sport."

Since mid-January the unseasonably warm weather has confined students to a more traditional classroom, viewing slides, films, and studying safety and technical facets of the machines. They learned about the history of snowmobiles, wind chill factors, first aid for frost bite, and the types of clothing necessary to protect the body. Physical fitness necessary for other sports is also applicable to snowmobiling, for machine balance and the strength needed if the sled gets stuck.

As in any other sport, operation of the sleds started with the fundamentals. Snowmobiles were taken over a course similar to that in other safety programs, with emphasis placed on turning, acceleration, skids, and stopping distances. Driver attitudes, important to automobile safety courses, are also applied to the power sleds.

"In the operation of any machinery," DeGenaro reminds the students, "man is the dangerous element."

After a few practice sessions, class members have a chance to experience trail riding over the hills behind the campus that overlook the community of Mansfield, and thereby put some of the classroom theories into practice.

"We're exposing students a new form of recreation," ion," stated DeGenaro. "Some have become enthusiasts, some tried the sport and decided it wasn't for them."

Inclines and snow surfaces like deep snow, "hard pack" and glare ice play an integral role in safe operation of the snowmobiles. Topics like these as well as laws governing the machines, and even tips on purchasing a used snowmobile are discussed in class.

Registration of snowmobiles and a requirement that operators under the age of 16 take the safety course will become effective in Pennsylvania by April 1975. Forms to comply with the new law will be distributed by the Department of Environmental Resources through the Pennsylvania State Snowmobilers Association, dealers, State Park offices and district foresters. Exceptions include snowmobilers who operate exclusively on their own land and non-residents who are registered in another state.

Mansfield State College is currently studying possibilities for expanding the current course to include the younger snowmobilers in the area. In addition to the course as part of the college physical education curriculum, DeGenaro and Dr. William Beisel, Dean of Continuing Education, are offering the course for non-credit next year in Continuing Education.

Wilson Gets 100th Win

One hundred collegiate basketball victories at Mansfield State College have become a reality for varsity coach Ed Wilson as a result of the 91-72 Mountie victory over the visiting Utica College Pioneers in Decker Gymnasium.

In seven seasons as MSC head mentor, Wilson has compiled a 104-65 won-loss record. Last year Mansfield needed 18 victories to reach the coveted goal, but the Mounties fell six shy of the mark.

Wilson has guided the Mountie cagers into the NAIA playoffs four times in his first six years as the MSC head coach. In the 1970-71 season Mansfield advanced to the national playoffs in Kansas City, Missouri, only to lose to a much taller Grambling, Louisiana squad 88-78 in first round action.

A Pittsburgh native, Wilson was a standout performer for Baldwin-Wallace College and was the leading scorer and team captain during his senior year.

In 1958 he entered the coaching ranks as head coach at Brunswick High School (Ohio). Six years later he moved to Trinity High School, Washington, Pa., for two years. He totaled 100 wins while coaching at these two schools; neither school had a winning season in the previous ten years before Wilson's arrival.

Receiving "Coach of the Year" awards in each of his coaching positions for 1963-64, 1965-66, and 1967-68, Coach Wilson is a strong believer in year 'round basketball. He has appeared on the staff of leading basketball camps and is currently director of the M.S.C. Basketball Camp.

Another 100 wins on the way? Who knows.

Winch Voted All-Conference

Senior guard and team captain Walt Winch (Catsauqua) was voted to the second team eastern division All-Pa. Conference basketball squad by the head coaches while freshman guard Stanford Mahan (Pittsburgh) received honorable mention.

Winch tied Cheyney's Hammie Byrd with 11 votes each but fell short of first team honors by two votes. As the Mounties' leading scorer he averaged 15.8 points per game and finished fourth in the league scoring race with a 17.0 average in the 14 conference games. His season high offensive outputs were 29 points against Lock Haven and 28 against Kutztown.

Mahan finished as MSC's second leading scorer with a 13.4 average and was sixth in the conference scoring with a 14.1 point per game average. He also led the Mounties in assists with an average of 4.5 per game.

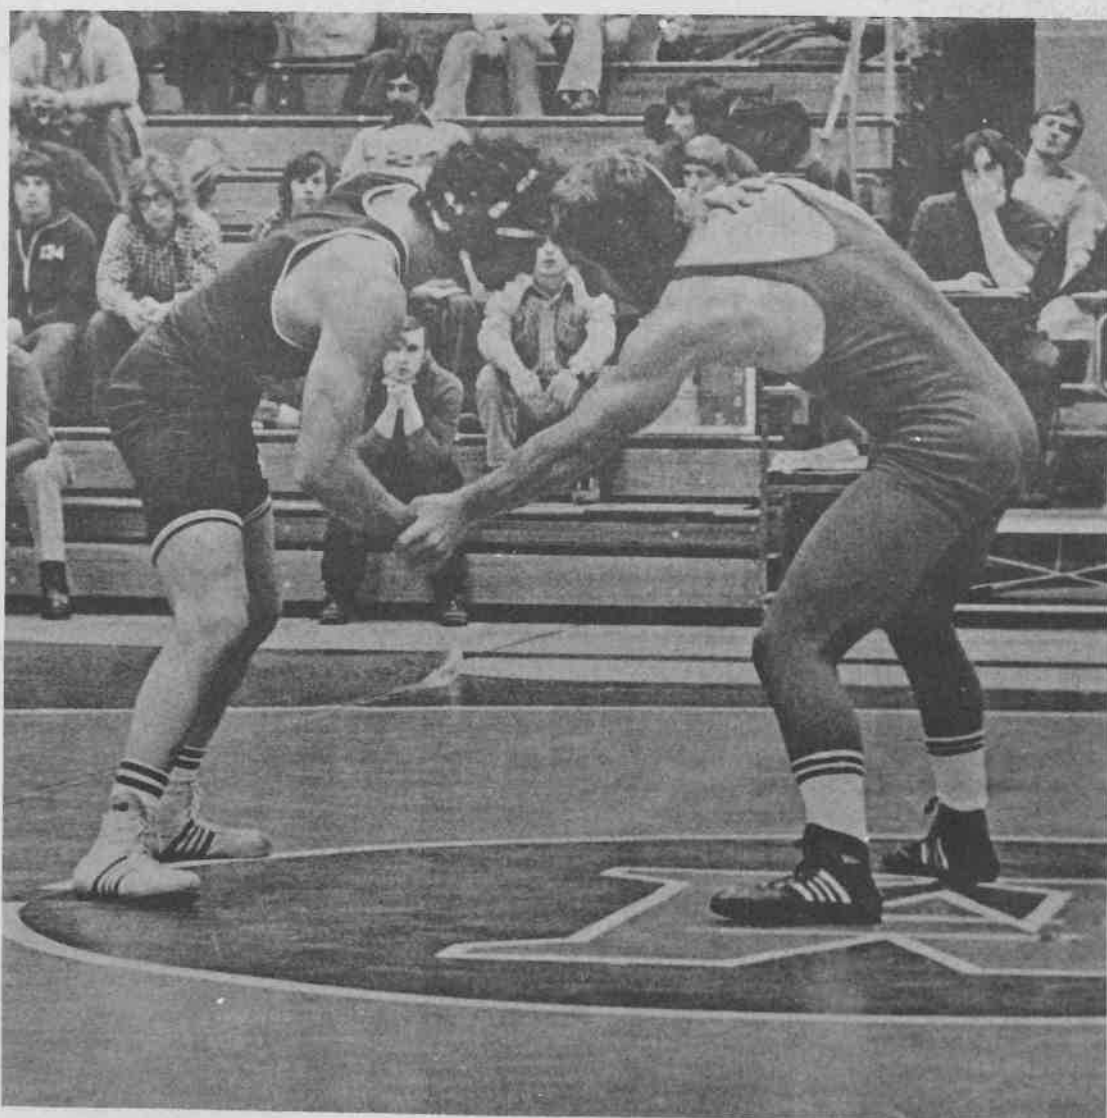

Mansfield finished the season with a 10-13 overall record and posted a 6-8 mark in the Pa. Conference, for fifth place in the league standings. Bloomsburg's John Willis finished first in the voting with 21 votes, followed by Millersville's Frank Gantz with 17, Vince Ellison of Cheyney 15, Phil Walker of Millersville 14, and Cheyney's Leon Bell had 13 votes to round out the first team.

Joining Winch and Byrd on the second team were Mike Reilly (East Stroudsburg), Henry Poteat (West Chester), and Tony DaRe (Bloomsburg).

Others receiving Pa. Conference honorable mention were Al Rossingnoli (Kutztown), Joe Kempinski (Bloomsburg), Jerry DuVall (West Chester), Don King (Shippensburg), and Len Poole (East Stroudsburg).

Sassani Named All-American

Mark Sassani (right) stalks opponent Angelo Natoli of Slippery Rock during a home meet last February. Mark was later named the college's first NCAA All-American.

Mark Sassani, a senior from Mt. Carmel, earned the distinction of being Mansfield's first NCAA All-American athlete by finishing sixth out of 30 wrestlers at the NCAA (division III) tournament held March 1-2 at Wilkes College. Sassani qualified to compete in the tournament by posting an individual winning record of 9-6-2 during the regular season.

An Art Education major, Sassani was the 1973-74 team captain. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Sassani, 100 S. Pine Street, Mt. Carmel.

As a four-year varsity letterman, he compiled a 37-21-3 record while at MSC. Other recognition he has received include first place in the Tyrone Open tournament last summer at 175, second place at the Carlisle Open at 177 and second place at the Brockport Open last November at 190.

Sassani said he was really excited, speechless and very happy about his performance. "It was a tough tournament and a little mistake could have ended any hopes of placing," he said.

Only the best wrestlers competed: the top three place winners in their respective conferences and individuals with winning season records. Sixty colleges from the continental United States sent 258 grapplers to the two-day tournament, with the top three place winners advancing to the NCAA national championships at Iowa State March 14-16. Sassani was among the first six place winners who were all named All-Americans.

Wrestling seven matches in the two-day tournament, Sassani defeated the number five and eight seeded wrestlers and lost to the number one and six seeded men.

Other members of the MSC squad who also competed at the tournament were Jim Bailey (Lewistown), at 126, Mike Fiamingo (Mansfield) at 134, and Rick Henry (Sayre) at 190.

Course in Hunting Offered in Fall

Requirements for the course? A current hunting license in the state in which one holds residence, an agreement to go big game, small game, or bow and arrow hunting - or all of them, two bucks (money, that is) to cover the field trips, and a term paper on some aspect of hunting or wildlife management. A person who fulfills these qualifications and passes the tests this semester receives one credit at Mansfield State College, a certicate to teach the Pennsylvania Hunter Safety Programs, and a whole lot of shared expertise in a subject that he probably has a passion for.

Capitalizing on Tioga County's nicest natural resources, MSC started an Outdoor Recreation-Hunting Skills class this term. Taught by Prof. Murray E. Davidson of the Health and Physical Education Department, the class consisted of twenty-eight students, five of whom came from areas immediate to the college, but of whom an amazing number originate in the Wilkes-Barre-Scranton area, Lancaster-York, Philadelphia, or other cities. There were no girls in the class, Davidson notes, but there are hopes that in future fall semesters, women will be joining the class.

The course started in September with classwork in the knowledge of guns and ammunition and progressed through considerations of hunters' responsibilities, bow hunting, trap shooting, and study of wildlife habits into the real proof: hunting. Prof. Davidson arranged to get out hunting with members of the course once individually and once with the whole group together.

The feature of the class that got the most rave reviews from the students was the guest experts that Davidson brought in. NRA representative in Mansfield Larry Bryan spoke on gun and ammunition with the class; Dr. George Miller, Vice President for Administrative Affairs for the college demonstrated bow and arrow techniques. Dr. Miller's having just returned from a Newfoundland hunting trip where he had bagged both a moose and a caribou with his bow, lent a certain air of authority to his presentation, Davidson chuckled.

A couple of the other guests had equally dramatic reinforcement. Robert Mingle, an 84-year-old retired gunsmith from State College, presented a demonstration on the caring for, handling of and repairing of firearms one day. Members of the class evidently respected his historical authority, but questioned him about the most contemporary firearms. Mr. Mingle dryly outlined the history of one excellent specialty shotgun and quoted the exact current prices on an equally modern rifle.

Arnold Hayden, Pennsylvania's turkey biologist, described the habits of wild turkeys for the class. Two members of the class, all of whom have had several years experience in hunting, were perturbed, having discovered they had been hunting turkeys wrong for years. One immediately went out, followed Hayden's recommendations, and returned with a turkey - his first!

The group made a trip to Hill's Creek Dam for work with Wetland Wildlife expert Dave Brown, and on another occasion met for a two-hour session on hunting regulations with Game Warden Jack Weaver. Another field trip to Pennsylvania State University to the Deer Research Station provided data about the Pennsylvania deer herd and new information about the habits of deer.

The Health and Physical Education Department is very happy with the way the class has evolved. With the strong emphasis on "regionalism" the Pennsylvania State Colleges are developing, the kinds of awareness of surroundings this class has promoted are valuable. The department hopes to make the course an annual offering, and with the prospect of the big dams in Mansfield's future, plans are being tentatively made for a similar course in fishing some day.

Nau Sets Pole Vault Record

Gary Nau, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur P. Nau, Souderston (Pa.), set a new school record in the pole vault in a double victory track meet at Mansfield State College as the Mounties defeated St. Bonaventure 106-37 and Ithaca College 104-41. Nau vaulted 13 feet 6 inches, a foot over the previous record set by Jim Bevan in 1969.

Only a freshman, Nau was also a member of the Mountie varsity football team, playing quarterback in the 1973 fall season. He earned the starting position as the MSC signal caller in the third game and finished the season as Mansfield's leading quarterback. He completed 38 of 79 pass attempts for an average of .481 in six games.

Nau is a Liberal Arts major.

Director of Development

It strikes us that we have been telling you about Coy Gobble, our Director of Development, ever since September, but you haven't met him yet.

Coy's job, as head of development and Executive Director of Mansfield Foundation, Inc., includes supervision of Public Relations, Publications, and Alumni Affairs as well as responsibility for all promotion and fund-raising for the college.

A native of Ohio, Coy received his undergraduate degree from Columbia in economics and did graduate work in sociology and education at Temple and Adelphi. He came to Mansfield from Norman, Okla. where he was Coordinator of Development for the University. Previously, he was Director of Development at Moravian College in Bethlehem and Assistant Director of Development at Trinity College in Washington, D.C.

The concept of development — or advancement, as it sometimes is called — at state colleges is a fairly new one. The image is one of raising money, which indeed is part of the job, but overall, the responsibility is to keep the college competitive in terms of attracting good students, funding exceptional programs, and keeping our relationships in good standing with governmental agencies, the general public, and our own alumni, students, and parents.

Coy is very much aware of the part of the alumni in the whole area of promoting Mansfield. "I think Mansfield Alumni, like those of most state colleges, have more potential for helping their alma mater than they give themselves credit for. Whether they are working at it consciously or not, they are always good will representatives for the institution. In addition, they can help with recruiting, serve in their various communities as resource people for the school, assist with annual giving for projects on campus, and help the administration by letting them know how they feel on certain issues.

Furthermore, those who have expertise in given fields can lend their help to projects for the institution. Money is important, but it is far from the only element in the advancement of the college."

Coy, his wife Ruth Ann, and two sons, Steve, 16, and Matt, 10 live in "suburban Wellsboro," where Ruth Ann raises Kerry Blue Terriers. The Gobles have become active in the St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Wellsboro.

What more can we say? (He is our boss). An alumna from the class of '60 tells me, "He is a charming man." You will be seeing a lot of him, and we promise you'll like him.

J. COY GOBBLE

Personnel Join staff at Mansfield State College

Seventeen new faculty and administrators began working at Mansfield State College with the beginning of the fall semester.

Dr. Walter M. Johnson has been appointed Director of Counseling Services. Dr. Johnson, who has been Director of the Counseling and Testing Center at Metropolitan State College in Denver, Colorado since 1968, holds in addition to his undergraduate degree, and M.A. in Music and Ph. D. in College Student Personnel Administration and Counseling Psychology from the University of Colorado. He was invited to be the John Hay Fellow in Humanities during the summer of 1961 at Bennington College, Bennington, Vt., and he has studied at Yale University.

Assistant Professor in the Department of Speech Communication and Theatre. She holds an M.F.A. in Dramatic Literature from the University of Iowa and a Ph. D. in Theatre from Florida State University where she also has served as an Instructor in Speech.

Appointed as an Assistant Professor in the psychology department, Dr. Peter A. Keller came to Mansfield from the Sarasota Guidance Clinic, Sarasota, Florida where he served as a Community Clinical Psychologist for more than two years. Dr. Keller holds an M.S. and a Ph. D. in Clinical Psychology from the University of Miami, Coral Gables, Florida.

Mr. Edward J. Forbes, III, has also received an appointment as Assistant Professor in the psychology department. He holds an M.S. in psychology from West Virginia University where he is presently completing his Ph. D.

Mr. Stephen D. Brown has been appointed as Instructor in home economics. He holds a M.S. in Home Economic Education from Eastern Illinois University, and has served as a part-time instructor in the Eastern Illinois University School of Home Economics.

Mrs. Sharon M. Zegalia has been appointed Instructor in the health and physical education department. She holds a M. Ed. in Physical Education from East Stroudsburg State College, and has taught physical education in several high schools.

Ms. Pauline Schein is a new counselor in the Testing and Counseling Center. She holds a M.S. in Counseling from the University of Bridgeport, Bridgeport, Conn., and has served as Assistant Coordinator in Volunteer Programs at the University of Bridgeport and in Action for Bridgeport.

The following have received Temporary appointments: Mr. John W. Delonas, who holds an Ed. S. from Michigan State University where he is a doctoral candidate, as Assistant Professor in Special education; Miss Kathy J. Hill, who holds a Ed. D. Ed. Ed. from the State University of New York at Buffalo, as Assistant Professor in elementary education; Dr. Charles R. Givens, who holds a Ph. D. in Geological Science from the University of California at Riverside, as Assistant Professor in Physics; Miss Gearldean Johnson, who holds an M.S. in Home Economics Education from the University of Tenn., as Assistant Professor in home economics; Mrs. Margaret C. McCullers, who holds a M.Ed. in Counseling and who was Educational Counselor at the Philadelphia College of Art, as State College and University Administration in the Equal Education Opportunities Program; Mrs. Sally A. R. Hassinger, who holds an M.S. in Physical Education; Miss Patricia N. Aiken, who holds an M.A. from the University of California at Santa Barbara and who has served as a temporary part-time Music Instructor at Edinboro State College, as Instructor in Music.

Mr. Edward P. Sandor, Jr., has been appointed Assistant Professor in the Music Department. He holds an M.S. in music from the University of Illinois.

Mr. Peter L. Larson is the new Assistant Dean of Students in Residence. He has an M.A. in College Student Personnel from Bowling Green State University, Bowling Green, Ohio, and has served as Resident Hall Director in Adrian College, Adrian, Mich.

Dr. Patricia C. Howard has been appointed

Administrators View Change

by Ron Costello

Recently we asked several administrators at Mansfield for their views about changes at MSC to give you some perspective on what we're like now. Academic programs, social change, and student attitudes were included in their considerations.

Dr. Donald C. Darnton, Vice President of Academic Affairs, said he felt MSC is making significant changes in direction. Since coming to the MSC campus in August of 1973, Darnton said, he has gotten a feel of the MSC situation and has taken a close look at needs of today's youth.

"Today's high school students," Darnton said, "are asking themselves, 'where can I go to college to get a good education and at the same time enjoy a close and personal relationship with the instructors? Students entering college today want a school where the professors are concerned about them as individuals. They want to be treated as people—not just numbers.'"

"I can see," he said, "at MSC where students and instructors share a close educational experience. Professors may take students to their homes to meet their family and share some real life experiences."

It is feasible, Darnton said, that MSC will offer courses designed to develop a closer relationship between professor and student. Freshman students, he said, are away from the home atmosphere for the first time. Their value systems pull in different directions, he said, and they are entering the institution with such questions as "who and I, and where am I going?"

"We should react to those kinds of questions," Darnton said. "I can see new courses in values and value clarification available to incoming freshmen."

DEAN KELCHNER

Rod Kelchner, Dean of Students, has seen many changes since he became dean in 1964. By the turn of the decade there were new ideas. Controversy over curfew and sign-in requirements faded until those rules gradually became defunct. Limitations on student activities off-campus eased and both male and female students were allowed to visit each other in off-campus housing.

In 1972, MSC "broke the ice" by creating co-ed residence halls. The first was the "Pine Crest experiment" which housed men and women in the same dormitory for the first time in the college's long history.

"The Pine Crest experiment," Kelchner said, "was an attempt to get students together, both male and female, who were interested in a quiet academic atmosphere. The kids who lived in the experiment that first year did do better academically. Everyone got along just fine. The experiment worked."

The Pine Crest experiment was the forerunner of co-ed living on the MSC campus. The men and women, living separately on alternate floors of the dorm, were allowed to visit each other at any hour of the day or night. From there, Kelchner said, the campus went to open visitation on an experimental basis and eventually to experimental co-ed living in other dorms."

I think young people like a variety of living styles," he said. "MSC will always have students who prefer open visitation and co-ed dorms. However, we will also have students who want a choice of how they live, and MSC will always provide that choice."

When asked about co-habitation living, where students at such academic settings as Harvard and the University of Pennsylvania have extended co-ed living to the point of removing the signs from the men's and ladies' room doors, Kelchner looked down at the floor for a brief moment and smiled.

"I can't see MSC taking the signs off the bathroom doors," he said. "There's a limit to everything and I just can't see co-habitation living on this campus."

"When I was a college student our dorm hall door was locked tight at midnight and students just didn't question that fact. In fact, we didn't even think about it. The Dean never came around to ask us what we thought. I think this is the biggest change on the campus today—students question rules and regulations today to the point of making positive changes."

DEAN PINCUS

Academically speaking, Dr. Michael Pincus, Dean of Arts and Sciences, said technically there haven't been any major changes in the general education requirements at MSC. During a student's first two years of study he or she completes course work in the general education program which is broken up into the "Model Five" requirements. Out of five classifications of Model Five, students must select four areas of study and complete four courses or 12 hours of study in three of the areas they select. The student must also complete two courses, or six hours of study in a fourth group in Model Five, and may eliminate the fifth group of classification in Model Five. Model Five's areas of study are: humanities, languages, sciences, mathematics, and social sciences.

"When I went to school," Dr. Pincus said, which he admitted was some 20 years ago, "the general education requirements were much more specific. There just wasn't a choice, you took what they told you to take. Today, however, there is a bit more choice. In the past any change in the general education program was simply unheard of; you couldn't substitute anything for anything."

Pincus said the types of courses in the general education program have expanded. In the past, he said, a western civilization course was simply a straight western civilization course. But today, he said, students can take a variety of western civilization courses.

Many people at MSC are concerned with the present Model Five program, Pincus said. People both for and against the program want to keep striving for a better way of offering a general education program to our students, Pincus emphasized.

"One thing that has changed over the past years," Pincus said rather humorously, "is the gentleman's C grade. Back in my time a C grade was a darn good grade. During the late 1950's that concept seemed to change and today the C grade is in bad shape."

Two of MSC's biggest assets are unquestionably the areas of study in music and home economics. What roles do these two departments, both conservative in nature, play in the changes taking place at Mansfield?

Professor James Keene of the music department feels there is a definite change within the student body profile at MSC. Most students at MSC, Dr. Keene said, are a first generation of college students who are attempting to pull themselves up "by their bootstraps."

"During my seven or eight years on the MSC campus," Dr. Keene said, "I have found students to be very enthusiastic about their studies, no matter what department they are involved with. In fact, many students become angered if they are shortchanged with their education."

Dr. Keene said the music program has not undertaken any real revolutionary changes in the past few years; however, he said minor changes have occurred in some areas. In science, he explained, new ideas are constantly bringing changes into the field, but fields such as art and music remain fairly stable from year to year.

"Of course," Dr. Keene said, "we are always introducing new teaching techniques into our methods of courses each year. Revisions and changes of this nature must occur in any department."

DR. KEENE

MISS KELLER

"The home economics department is a diverse field," explained Home Economics Professor Katherine E. Keller; "we want our students to teach what the public wants to learn. Our goal is not to equip society with great fashion designers, but to train teachers who can relate to society through home economics and to train people who can function in the field of home economics."

Ms. Keller said the home economics department is changing to meet the needs of a changing society. She said, for example, that the "field experience program" has been introduced into the home economics curriculum to give students more work in various fields before graduation. Students will receive actual work, Ms. Keller said, in areas such as food service programs, or school nutrition programs.

"The home ec department has also changed in size in the past few years," Ms. Keller said. "In 1965 we had 280 students enrolled in the department. Last year we had 500 home economics students. Of course, our new building helps." (With the addition of Butler Center for music, the Arts Building became the Home Economics Center).

"Really, I think the biggest change in the home economics department is the students—they are so much more involved today. They want to participate more, and it doesn't matter if that participation is with national organizations or with local high school clubs."

"Today's students can get three to four credits along with course work," she said, "by working at a hospital or school food program during the regular semester. This semester, one student is working at a family agency and another is presently working in the college cafeteria."

"Students are more aware of their working potential today," she said. "They expect to work upon graduation, much more than they did 10 or 20 years ago."

Students enter college today with a broader background, more travel experience, and a better overall picture of where they fit into today's society. This experience rubs off in their schooling and makes them better equipped to face society when they graduate from MSC, Ms. Keller said.

An Alumnus Named Jim White . . .

The Jonathan George March Scholarship was the incitement the new Mansfield Foundation, Inc. was waiting for.

One day last summer there was a phone call to the Alumni Office. "Do you know an alumnus named Jim White who graduated about 25 years ago?" (I didn't and he wasn't in our files.) "Well, he's coming to lunch in half an hour. Meet us at the President's Office." ('Us' was Steve Hulbert, the president's assistant, and Ed Trainor, the business manager, two of everyone's favorite people.)

Running madly for a 1950 Carontawan, I saw Jack Wilcox, who belongs to that MSC generation. "Do you remember Jim White?" I yelled. "Class of '50?"

"Yeah," he answered. "From Wellsboro. Big, good-looking guy." That much I could have found out from the Carontawan, but I yelled, "Hope he hasn't changed. I'm having lunch with him," and moved on to the yearbooks. They corroborated Jack's testimony, said Jim was in secondary ed, was in Phi Sig 3, 4; Secretary 3; College Players 2, 3, 4. The Shakespearean quote, "It is no act of common passage, but a strain of rareness" beside his picture might or might not mean something. I hoped it did.

I called spies in Wellsboro. "Yes, he's in the oil business in New Orleans or somewhere down south. I heard he was in town."

I gave up and decided to go to lunch. Sure enough, his description was the same. And though we had lost track of him, he hadn't lost track of us. Friends in Wellsboro—in particular our Alumni President Judge Bob Kemp—had been keeping him posted on the college over the years and on our current needs.

We found out that Jim has indeed been in the oil business—he's a wild-catter, an independent oil dealer with a base of operations in New Orleans. He has had extraordinary success in finding oil, a fact that he attributes to luck, an explanation that holds little liquid of any kind.

Well, even face-to-face, that's about all we found out about the 1974 Jim White, but we certainly enjoyed some stories about the 1950 edition—not much changed, we gather—and his MSC friends. There was a story about the dean who locked the doors of South Hall on the bunch of veterans who had been out soaking up Northern Tioga County culture one spring evening. The dean awoke to find a six-foot stack of South Hall doors neatly arranged outside his own exit.

On another occasion, some of the same group were moving a piano up (down?) the stairs in South Hall during late hours and dropped it. Down a whole flight.

Evidently the whole group had a thing about steps. Another member tried driving his father's new car up the steps by the oak. "How far did he get?" I gasped from a paroxysm of laughter. "About two thirds," said Mr. White, deadpan. Needless to say, lunch was delightful, and I apologized mentally to whoever chose the quote in the yearbook. He/She was certainly on the beam.

And Jim White gave us an oil well.

Actually what it is, is the proceeds from a well, which the Whites have earmarked as a nest egg to provide a yearly scholarship for a Tioga County student of average ability who might not otherwise be able to attend college. (The recipient this year is Peggy Graff of Elkland, a freshman home economics student.)

"I would like to have it named the Jonathan George March scholarship after my wife's grandfather, who was active in Tioga County education," Mr. White said.

And so it is. And that was the beginning of the Mansfield Foundation, Inc.

Jonathan George March

"The petals of a yellow rose lie scattered on the lawn
A streak of light from yesterday to greet tomorrow's dawn."

The poem was written by Jonathan George March, a bit of a legend in Northern Pennsylvania schools in a time when each teacher taught poetry, anatomy, hygiene, agriculture, plane geometry, Latin, geography, history, science, and a little bit of art. Mr. March deserves the memory. He spent close to sixty years of his adult life in Tioga County education.

He started his professional life teaching in a one room schoolhouse in Charleston in 1892. In 1894 he moved to Wellsboro, where he taught for five years. From 1899-1901, he taught at Antrim High School, and he was principal at Tioga from 1901-1904. He was then principal at Lawrenceville from 1905-1915, when he became Assistant County Superintendent of Schools. He became Superintendent of Schools in 1925 and remained in the post until 1934 when he retired.

However, he really didn't stop at that point. Walter Swimley, retired Superintendent, says, "Mr. March was still going to district meetings and consulting with us until well into the 1940's. He was really very involved until late in life." Mr. March died in 1950.

To ask any of the teachers in the county who worked with Mr. March about him is to receive an immediate, "He was such a nice man—very well thought of." One of them recalled his farm outside of Wellsboro where he experimented with fruits and vegetables. "He planted an experimental orchard," Cynthia Dailey White, his granddaughter, says. "He wanted to develop an apple for a one-apple pie—and he did. He also developed a new strain of lima bean."

Mr. March designed and patented a pump—over which he had a conflict with the U.S. Patent Office because they said it was impossible to build a perpetual motion pump, which is what it was. The Whites have and cherish the patent papers.

Despite Mr. March's accomplishments, he was a very retiring man. It is a favorite family story that when he first went to call on Miss Luella Wheeler, later Mrs. March, he inadvertently sat on the flowers he had brought her. The

PEGGY GRAFF

Marches had two daughters, Emily Dailey, Mrs. White's mother, who lives now in Texas, and Anna Weir, who resides in Florida.

Mrs. Dailey recalls that an honor her father held very dear was the life membership to the national PTA which the teachers of Tioga County gave him on his retirement.

"He was a bit of a poet . . . quite a philosopher," Mrs. White says. "You know, I knew Jim meant to give the scholarship to Mansfield—we had talked it over—but he hadn't told me he meant to name it for my grandfather. It was a delightful surprise."

It was for Mansfield, too. It seems very much an honor to us that as a college originally built around the education of teachers, our first "permanent" scholarship center on a person who so completely exemplifies in education the qualities we have valued and tried to nurture for over 100 years. We are very proud of the Jonathan George March Scholarship.

Commencement

Highlights of the 1974 Mansfield State College Commencement were the conferral of degrees on the largest graduating class in the history of the College and the selection of one of the graduates, Miss Linda Schwab, as "Outstanding Senior."

Dr. Lawrence Park, President of the College, conferred 628 baccalaureate degrees in August and December 1973 graduates and 1974 May graduates and 35 master's degrees.

Miss Schwab, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schwab, Star Route, Mansfield, was active on the Day Students Executive Board and in numerous honorary societies and service organizations.

Instituted this year, the Outstanding Senior Award will be presented annually at Commencement Exercises to a graduating senior who has brought recognition to herself or himself and to Mansfield State College. Nominations for the award are received from various academic departments and selection is made by a faculty-student committee.

Concert Wind Ensemble

The Mansfield State College Wind Ensemble was chosen by the Eastern Division of the Music Educators Nationals Conference (MENC) to perform at their April convention in Philadelphia.

According to notification received at press time from Dr. Herbert Schultz, president of the Eastern Division MENC, the Wind Ensemble was set to play at 1:45 p.m. on Monday, April 21, at the Masonic Temple in Philadelphia.

Donald Stanley, director of the Wind Ensemble, explained that only a few groups from the eastern area are selected for the honor. Tapes of earlier performances were submitted to a MENC screening committee prior to the groups' selection.

The Wind Ensemble, founded in 1955 by Professor Bertram Francis, has earned the reputation of being one of the finest college concert bands in the northeastern United States. Performances during the group's annual tours throughout the state and at local and state music conferences have been widely acclaimed for their high level of musical and technical achievement.

The versatility of the Wind Ensemble is reflected in their fall tour program which includes compositions by Paul Hindemith, Giuseppe Verdi, Floyd Werle, John Philip Sousa, and Leonard Bernstein to name several. Each concert is designed to offer a variety of music to satisfy all types of musical tastes.

On Sunday, April 20, the day before their Philadelphia performance, the Wind Ensemble performed on campus in Steadman Theatre. The 3 p.m. show included selections to be performed for the MENC.

At the beginning of each semester, the personnel of the Wind Ensemble are selected by audition. Many of the instrumentalists are music majors at the college but membership is open to all students and other departments at the college are represented. Approximately 90 percent of the 48-member group are upperclassmen.

Other activities of the Wind Ensemble include the Open Band rehearsals for members of the Northeastern District Band and for the Northcentral District Band. The group has also assisted with several performances on campus. The Wind Ensemble performed a concert with the college Concert Choir last fall and teamed with the choir for a memorial concert honoring Dr. Sylvester Schmitz on November 3. (See story page 15). Dr. Schmitz, formerly Chairman of the Music Department and later Vice President for Academic Affairs, was Dean of the School of Fine and Applied Arts at MSC.

Recently the Wind Ensemble assisted a Concerto Concert featuring Harvey Phillips, whom an MSC Music professor call "the Horowitz of the tube," as the climax of a two-day tuba symposium. Phillips performed with two other soloists, Toby Hanks of the New York City Ballet Orchestra and Earle Louder, former euphonium soloist with the U.S. Navy Band.

The Concert Wind Ensemble also serves as a laboratory group for students in the Music Education curriculum by performing student band arrangements and providing students with an opportunity to conduct and rehearse musical selections.

"It gives a student taking a course in orchestration a chance to hear his arrangement for an instrumental group after completing other course requirements," Stanley said, "the same is true for students in the conducting classes."

Stanley, an Associate Professor of Music, has classes and private lessons in trombone, euphonium, and tuba as well as coaching small brass ensembles and conducting the Concert Wind Ensemble.

Four Faculty Retire

It was celebration time for four of MSC's favorite citizens, and friends of all of them gathered to "help them retire" in various festivities all week. Helen I. Henry, Melvin (Molly) Dry, Robert (Tut) Moore, and King Rose officially left their posts at the College after a cumulative 52 years of service.

Dr. Henry, who came to Mansfield from Downer College in Milwaukee in 1955, is a professor of music. She received her B.S.

from the University of Illinois, studied at University of Kansas and Illinois Wesleyan, completing her Ph. D. at Northwestern University.

Parties for them included an official reception by the College Wednesday; a Music Department party for Dr. Henry, given by the Music Education Section, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Wunderlich Friday; a Tuesday luncheon at the Woodshed for Mr. Dry and Mr. Moore, given by the Health and Physical Education Department; and a special "secretary party" for Mr. Rose at the end of November.

King Rose became Business Manager at the College in 1963. A local businessman with a wide background including his own automobile dealership, Mr. Rose took over at the college in what Dr. Park describes as "years characterized by tremendous physical growth and, I believe, significant qualitative changes in the College."

"Tut" Moore and "Molly" Dry are old college friends from undergraduate days at Lock Haven, who both came to Mansfield in 1962. Both are associate professors in Health and Physical Education, whose plans include intensive bouts of golfing after retirement. "Tut" has been Director of Athletics since 1965.

New Dorm Readied

by Fred Schobert

Cedarcrest Manor, a dormitory currently under construction at Mansfield State College, is scheduled for completion in January 1976. Joseph Maresco, Associate Dean of Students, said that the college plans on using it during the fall of that year.

The same contract which calls for the building of the new dormitory also calls for the demolition of North Hall, the oldest building on campus. Dean Maresco said it was too early to give a date for the destruction of North Hall, currently used as a women's dorm and, on the ground floor, for offices.

Dean Maresco said that in theory Cedarcrest Manor could be filled with upper classmen. He also said that it hasn't yet been decided whether or not Cedarcrest will be co-ed. Dean Maresco emphasized that the status of Cedarcrest's living conditions would depend on the student's interests and whether there were enough students interested in living in the co-ed situation to warrant making the dormitory co-ed.

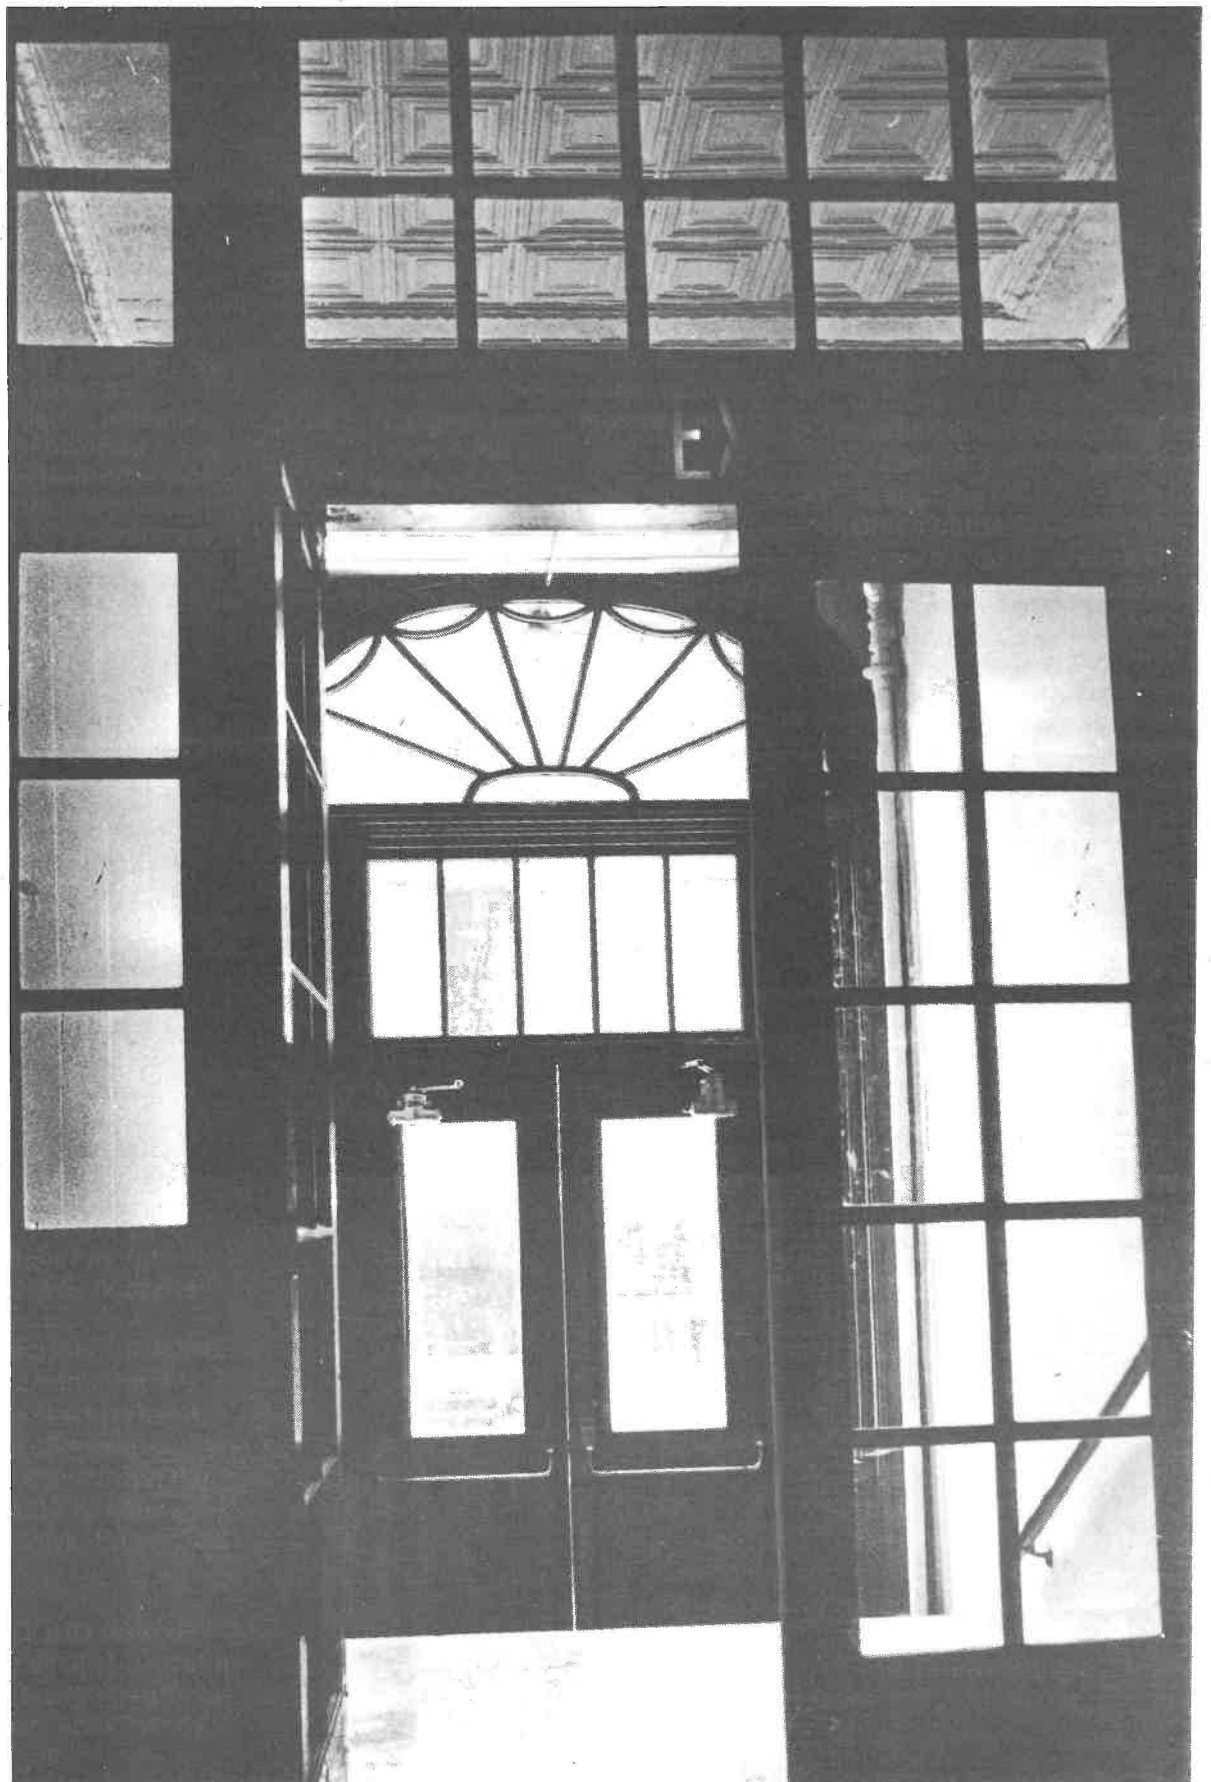

Concerning the interior layout of Cedarcrest, Dean Maresco stated, "It really will be a distinct difference from what we have now." Cedarcrest will be a two-wing building, with each wing consisting of six floors. The two wings will be connected by a two-story common area. Each wing will contain 300 beds.

Some of the innovations of the new dorm include four suites of rooms on each floor, one in each corner. These suites will consist of two bedrooms and a living room. Each suite will house a maximum of six students. Dean Maresco said that this would give groups of students who want to live together the chance to do so. Connecting the suites will be the typical double rooms.

Also on each floor will be four study lounges and two elevators which will service each wing. Dean Maresco expresses hope that all the furniture will be movable in order to give students greater freedom in setting up their own living arrangements. However, this has not been definitely decided upon.

Ideally, the suites will have the same square foot allotment per person as the normal double rooms have.

Currently, the resident housing capacity of Mansfield State College with North Hall, Oak and Hickory is about 2100 students. With Cedarcrest, the housing capacity will stay the same.

Home Economics Study in England

December 26th was an exciting day for 18 M.S.C. students majoring in Home Economics. It was the day they left Philadelphia International Airport for two eventful weeks in England.

Mrs. Janice Kennedy, assistant professor of home economics, and her students studied about England each week for the semester prior to their trip.

Each of the girls were required to write three papers about England for the course. One paper was written on a topic pertaining to home economics in England, another was written on the basis of information gathered during the trip, and the third was an analysis of why the first two papers were the same only different.

Highlights of the visit included a tour of London, and chances to see such things as the Houses of Parliament, Winchester Cathedral, Salisbury Cathedral, and Stonehenge. Much of the tour, logically, was home ec oriented. The group went to the Victoria and Albert Museum to see the costumes, jewelry, furniture and other items; to Jaeger's on Regent Street, a high fashion separates firm; and Harrod's—the bomb which exploded there just before Christmas did not crack a dish in the china department.

Living with English families during their stay, the MSC group quickly acquired a new vocabulary for familiar things, such as "petrol" for gasoline and British expressions like "Oh, jolly good," and "good show."

The host family part of the trip was arranged as part of a travel exchange program with the Council for International Contact that Mrs. Kennedy has been working with since 1967. Recently, the Stowmarket Brass Band, the Essex Youth Orchestra and the Lincashire Youth Orchestra visited the U.S. and the Mountie Marching Band journeyed to England for the International Youth Band Festival last year (Mansfieldian May 1974.) Also, two years ago another home ec group traveled across the sea.

Friendships that have been developed through the exchange visits have strengthened the goodwill ties between the two countries. Mrs. Kennedy concluded about the trip, "Our stay in England was brief but each girl had a story to tell and memories that would last a lifetime."

"You never know a wild flower until you eat it," says Edeline Wood, the guest consultant at the Living Off the Land Workshop at Mansfield State College this week. The Wild Banquet to celebrate graduation was this afternoon with the forty students, Miss Wood and her mother, and Professor June Rudy preparing a completely wild dinner, most of the ingredients gathered by the students this week.

Miss Wood, who is an associate and friend of Euell Gibbons, author of "Stalking the Wild Asparagus," spent much of the week on field trips throughout Tioga County with her students, teaching identification of the edible and palatable plants as well as preparation.

The menu today included bear, venison, woodchuck, fish, day lily buds, water-cress salad, dandelion crowns, French Fried elderberry blossoms, cattail stalks, blueberry muffins, day lily French bread, persimmon nut bread, fruit soup, blueberry pie, blueberry cheese cake, may apple chiffon pie, and other things.

Some of the wilder members of the class were stalking a wild rattlesnake to round out the menu, but he did not appear on the final bill of fare. We wonder who chickened out—the banquet guests or the snake?

The Workshop has been one of the offerings of the MSC Division of Continuing Education.

Kim Marvin

Mansfield State College won its first basketball championship back in 1916, only the school was called Mansfield State Normal School then and its team was led by a 5'8" forward by the name of Kim Marvin.

Marvin was a local boy, born in Liberty, who moved with his family to Blossburg where he learned to play basketball in the gymnasium attached to Bishop Darlington's church.

Normal School's 1916 team went 11-2 and Kim Marvin collected 201 points to lead everybody in scoring. There were no real sophisticated leagues set up like there are today and Normal School played just about anybody who could dribble a basketball—semi-professional teams included.

"We had a great team that year," the 80 year-old Marvin said while relaxing at his Sherwood Street home. "We didn't have any big play-offs or anything like that. But West Chester Normal School also had a fine team and our college president arranged a championship game with them at the Harrisburg Armory in the spring of 1916.

It was a good match. The eastern Normal School power against the western Normal School power (West Chester). However, the Mounties blew the Rams off the court, 37-16. "Back then," Marvin said, "baskets didn't come a dime a dozen like they do today. We played our home games in the old gym where Manser Hall is now.

"Basketball has really changed since then," Marvin said. "Back then teams carried only about seven men. You played until someone knocked you out. It was a version of modified football. Nobody ever fouled out back then and there was only one ref—you could get away with plenty."

Kim Marvin proved to be just as fine a coach as he was a player. During the 1929 season, Marvin's team rolled up 11 straight victories without a defeat. In 1959, with a certificate from Mansfield State Normal School, a bachelors degree from Lafayette University, an M.A. from New York University, and 40 some years in the teaching profession under this belt, Kim Marvin retired.

All-American NCAA Wrestlers

Two Mountie wrestlers were named as NCAA All-Americans in Division III and the Mansfield team placed an admirable 12th in the national tournament in March held in Cleveland, Ohio.

Juniors Mike Fiamingo of Mansfield and Dave Gardner of Wingate received the All-American honor by finishing in the top ten wrestlers in the tournament.

Fiamingo led Mansfield this season as the 142-pounder posted a 13-2-1 seasonal record and went on to win an impressive nine of eleven tournament matches. He placed second at the Pennsylvania State College Tournament in Kutztown and placed fourth in the NCAA meet.

The 150-pound Gardner, a co-captain, finished with a 9-5-1 record and placed sixth in the national competition.

Considering that he sustained an injury in the Pa. State Tournament quarter finals, the NCAA finish is even more impressive.

Fiamingo and Gardner become the second and third Mansfield wrestlers to achieve the All-American honor. Mark Sassani earned the distinction of the college's first a year ago.

First Woman Trainer

Judy Hoffman, a junior General Studies major from Montrose, Pa., began working last fall as one of the four student trainers. This marks the first time at Mansfield that a woman has invaded the previously male territory.

For the most part, Judy's job as a trainer has been a good move for the college. Coaches of women's athletic teams can now send injured players to the training room for aid where previously only a serious injury could persuade the girls to tread on the "sacred" ground.

Recalling her first week as a trainer, Judy said some of the guys gave her a hassle but observed that "They're getting used to my working here. I like to feel I contribute, that I liven things up a little. Sometimes I don't feel very efficient though, there is so much to learn."

Sport and Society

The sporting crowd and how the features and conditions of collective behavior affect it, is part of a new course offered at Mansfield State College for the spring term. "Sport and Society," is a three-credit course, says instructor Charlie Griffin.

Griffin explains that the course will deal with distinctive sport subcultures such as the "boxing crowd" and the "bowling alley gang" and their reaction to sport. "We will take a look at everything from professionalism to college athletics to Little League baseball, depending upon what the students want to talk about," he said.

"Americans tend to be more concerned with getting the job done rather than the movements involved," Griffin said about the aesthetics of sport, another course topic. As a part of "Sport as a Culture," he said the class will consider sport and the arts—how sport is reflected in music, oil paintings, and others.

Mid-Atlantic Basketball Champs

For the first time in 11 years, the Mounties returned the Pa. Conference title to Mansfield by beating Cheyney State in an 80-79 thriller. MSC took the conference lead mid-way through the season by beating the Wolves at Cheyney and by topping Millersville here at home. But Cheyney came on strong with a seven-game win streak that could have forced a tie and a playoff if the Mounties had not pulled it out.

It was Stan Mahan's key free throws in the final seven seconds, for his 28th and 29th game points, that iced the Cheyney game. With the momentum from that game, MSC upended nationally ranked Edinboro 79-70 for the state title and went on to sweep the Mid-Atlantic Regional crown at Scranton (NCAA Division III).

The Mansfield squad topped Franklin and Marshall 85-70 in the opener and beat the University of Scranton 80-65 the night for the regional championship. In the NCAA quarter-finals at Glassboro, N.J., MSC bowed to the Profs 60-49. Glassboro went on to become runner-up, losing the national championship by only three points.

Although the whole MSC team has been outstanding all season, 6-2 sophomore guard Stan Mahan led the team. He was named to four different all-tournament teams this season, including MVP at the regional. A starter since coming to Mansfield as an all-city pick from Pittsburgh, Mahan has netted 701 points in two years. His finest game came against the Royals of Scranton when he poured in 32 points.

Coach Ed Wilson will have all of his basketball Mounties back next year.

QUOTE OF THE YEAR?

Dr. John Heaps, head baseball coach at Mansfield, who has had difficulty finding a third baseman, now has his son doing a fine job at the hot corner: "I figured if I couldn't recruit a third baseman, I might as well breed one."

Baseball Tradition

"Impossible!" That's the word used by Dr. John Heaps, head baseball coach, as he was questioned about the possibilities of the Mounties for the 1975 season. Gutted by the loss of their two best players in the January pro draft, and hurt badly by graduation, the MSC squad does appear to be carrying a heavy pack.

Before you tune out the hardballers, however, you have to look at the standards they are trying to uphold: six consecutive winning seasons, five straight playoff appearances, nine players drafted by the pros over the past six years, State College Champs in 1970 and runners-up in 1972. No one feels the team will not be competitive; the coaching staff is worried that the 1975 team might not be able to carry out this tradition.

The team is not undermanned and broken is spirit. MSC returned from a road trip south to Virginia and North Carolina with a 5-3 record.

Let Me Be Me

By JOHN BROCKWAY

A heavy rain beat hard on the windshield that night. But who cared?

It was hell-raising time for the eight Mansfield State College students packed three in the front and five in the back as the car sped back toward campus.

Joan Patterson was one of the five crammed into the back seat. She was enjoying the time away from all the classrooms and books and . . .

Suddenly things weren't right. The car, bumpy, a crash, everything spinning, spinning . . .

That was Dec. 10, 1966—nearly eight years ago. When things came back into focus, when the world quit spinning and light came in again, Joan Patterson was alive. But not the same Joan Patterson who hiked and danced and took part in every kind of sport. Those days were gone.

Joan Patterson now couldn't move much more than her head. Her mind was clear but the movements in her arms and legs, in her body from the neck down, weren't there.

All too often we take them for granted. Walking. Throwing. Sitting. Bending. In eight years, these things Joan has had to think about. Just think about.

Half the Story

But that's just half the story.

Out of this tragedy, this life of dependence on others, has emerged a new Joan Patterson, an attractive young woman whose courage and acceptance has had to touch many others.

She doesn't see it that way.

She is still Joan Patterson in her own eyes: energetic, ambitious, wanting to do the sort of things all 28 year olds are doing—perhaps more.

Her Own Words

In her own words this is Joan Patterson:

"It would be sensationalism to start with day one, hour one, to write my story. I would, maybe, but for one far-sighted reason. Someday I hope to write a book. I suppose everyone who has experienced unusual, traumatic and changing circumstances due to one extreme happening considers their situation important enough to warrant a book. Egotistic? Perhaps. But I feel I want others to know through fine print and their own imaginations what it is like to be me."

Until you have met Joan, she appears to be a helpless young woman living day in and day out in the drabness of a wheelchair. Quadriplegic, she is defined medically.

Paralyzed from the neck down with limited use of her arms, through therapy she is able now to feed herself, handwrite, type, and so on, with the use of specially designed splints.

How many times has she felt obliged to tell the story to pitying eyes and sympathetic ears?

"It becomes boring to continuously explain to people what I am capable of doing. I am certain that it seems so terrible that I will never walk again yet terrific that I do what I do despite this. Sounds unfeeling? Do not misunderstand me. I am extremely grateful that a Supreme Being granted me my life and a second chance. Fate, if you wish."

Fate? Perhaps.

But something more than fate pushed Joan on to finishing college from her wheelchair. And something more than fate has given her the desire to want to be useful and a part of the world to which she was given a second chance.

"I am realistic in my attitude toward most things. I realize that my family and friends have done much more to preserve values and to inspire than I shall comprehend. I was realistic enough to know that I could finish college after my accident. At 28, as I look back, I realize that this was not a goal that I could have accomplished as smoothly as I did without the moral support of those who had confidence in me. I would have had a much rougher time. I do need people very much."

*God slept while we sang and was awakened with a crash and an anguished cry.
Out of the endless night
We said our only prayer . . .
God; let us sing again.*

--- Joan Patterson

Need people? A young woman who before the accident was just a few months away from marriage, whose life now is limited to where the wheelchair can go? Needs people?

And beyond that, she grasps for the true meaning of being normal, other than walking and moving like the rest of the world. Normal by accepting whatever life that has been given to her.

"I am dependent on others for care. This is only one phase of a change that I have learned to accept. I must accept myself—if I cannot, how can I expect others to?"

This is the ME now. So I read, I eat, I sing melodies.

But I think, didn't you know?

And I dream, I ponder, I question actions and ideas.

I change.

I smile easily.

Tears sometimes burst forth.

I pray.

So now do you think I merely exist?

What I am trying to stress is the fact that I am still a complex individual. I am still the serious and fun-loving girl of my college days. Time and place necessitate change."

Time and place.

1966 . . . in college, heading for a teaching career.

1974 . . . living in a cheerful but confining room at Lysock View. A convenient place, but a place where the old spent last days. Not the place for a young girl who still has the zest of her college days inside her.

But that chair. The limitations. The pitying looks. Like anchors weighing the spirit in harbor.

Yet how is it the more one talks to Joan, the more one realizes that she is not confined. It's miraculous, but it's there. She is moving. She's at sea, slowly, but moving.

"I will never be famous or spotlighted center stage; but my desire for living hinges more on finding or making happiness as simply as possible. So; if that makes me a dreamer, alright with me. Man stripped of his dreams is nothing."

Posters on the quiet peach walls of Joan's room are on outward reflection of those dreams.

One read:

There is a brand new morning rising clear and sweet and free:

There's a new day dawning that belongs to you and me.

It's there in her own writing—that movement of a free spirit:

"Mice crawled and scampered along the splinty floor;

Dust filled my nostrils.

The sunlight slid in through a crack of the busted board in the wall.

I thought how dusty and prickly this haybale was.

But alone and quiet, I could dream of grandeur."

The magic continues. The power to convert her dreams into reality. She wants work. Practical everyday work, like the kind so many go to with one eye on what has to be done and one eye on the clock.

"I have the patience, I believe, to work with the retarded and I love it."

"At present, I find it necessary to reside at Lysock View. I am still sending out applications for jobs which are so scarce and trying to convince people that I am capable of working. My self-confidence is quite high. Why am I living here? I hate it, not being 90 years old. I am waiting, pushing forth in many avenues for the chance to be employed."

Eventually, the pity is gone, replaced by an overwhelming gratitude to God for having been given the chance to meet this giant of a woman.

"I hope in your mind's eye I have become the ME that I know myself as. One of the best compliments I have received from my friends is that they don't pay any attention to my wheelchair—I'm just one of them. Gives me a certain peace of mind. It is not always easy."

Rural Studies Cooperative First

Mansfield State College is among eight colleges and universities in central Pennsylvania who will be working together for the first time on a joint project.

The Pennsylvania Department of Public Education has awarded a $22,000 grant to assist in the project, the formation of a cooperative Rural Studies program.

The schools involved with the project are Mansfield, Bloomsburg State College, Bucknell University, Lock Haven State College, Lycoming College, Pennsylvania State University, Susquehanna University, and Williamsport Area Community College.

The program is believed to be the first in the nation in which rural society will be studied by undergraduates from a liberal arts point of view through cooperation among several institutions.

Dr. Michael S. Pincus, Dean of Arts and Sciences at Mansfield, has served as the college's representative in the development of cooperative programs. "The grant from the state for the development of the Rural Studies program should serve as the impetus for other cooperative ventures," Dean Pincus said. "We can foresee vastly expanded programs among the colleges without the duplication of faculty and other resources that separate programs would require." Dean Pincus also noted that an additional result of the Rural Studies' catalog of resources could be a master plan for higher education for the region. "The possibility of joint programs among the institutions in the region, including public and private colleges, community colleges, and universities, is an exciting challenge. Such programs can bring very valuable projects to the Northern Tier region."

"Mansfield has a very unique contribution to make to this institute," said Dr. James Y. Glimm, associate professor of English at Mansfield, "because of its location in a 'wild' setting. A spectacular environment like Pine Creek and the state forests is a strong point for this area, just as studies and problems of urban encroachment, rapidly developing urban areas, would be a strong part of the program for Susquehanna and Bloomsburg."

Dr. David Darby, assistant professor of geography and regional planning at Mansfield, feels that this project is the first step by the state in pushing the colleges toward similar joint efforts. "Fifteen years from now," he speculated, "there will be cooperative projects in a lot of areas. Colleges like Mansfield don't have the resources to offer a program in rural studies, for example, so a cooperative effort makes a great deal of sense." Under the planned program, an MSC student might spend a semester at Penn State or another school, and receive credit at Mansfield.

The first year of the program will consist primarily of an inventory and assessment of the resources available at the cooperating schools, detailed planning and development of the program, and the preparation of courses. These courses would be offered beginning in the summers of 1975 and 1976 and in the 1976-77 academic year.

Among members of the Board of Directors for the program are David Darby and James Glimm at Mansfield State College.

Flashlight

Don't be in the dark by missing the highlights of another MSC school year. Instead, let the national and regional award-winning newspaper of your alma mater, the Flashlight, throw some light on academic activities, campus comedy, and spectator sports. Subscription rates are $3.00 a year for Pa. and N.Y. State residents and $4.00 for all others. You'll get all 20 issues, including back issues if you check, payable to The Flashlight, arrives late.

Old Time Rally

Nearly 200 people, adults and children, gathered at the Corey Creek Golf Course Country Club last summer for an Old Time Union Rally sponsored by the Association of Pennsylvania State College and University Faculty (APSCUF) at Mansfield State College.

"We had several motives for the rally," said MSC APSCUF President Ms. Sandy Taliaferro. "One was a good time, one was a membership drive for prospective members, and one of our long time goals has been to promote a feeling of togetherness among the faculty. It's the first time we've had a friendly get-together," she observed, "everything has been in the form of a business meeting before."

About 120 adults and an estimated sixty children enjoyed a buffet style meal and the casual, conversational atmosphere that went with it. A rather steady rain that day had dampened plans for a picnic, but by evening the weather had cleared enough for the children to romp outside on the lawn. Members of the faculty sat on the sun deck singing union songs to the accompaniment of three guitars.

Music was collected with the help of the APSCUF State Office and the MSC Music Library for a "songbook." Dick Walker, Stephen Brown, and Beverly Briggs were the guitarists.

"Because it was fun we thought we might try it again some time," commented Mrs. Taliaferro.

Ms. Taliaferro noted that Mansfield has a rather high percentage of faculty belonging to the union (87 percent) and their participation was evident at the rally. Although families began drifting homeward by 9 p.m., the singing and guitar playing continued past midnight.

Robert Packer Affiliation

Mansfield State College will grant Associate in Science degrees to respiratory therapy and x-ray technology students from the Robert Packer Hospital in Sayre, Pa.

In the new hospital-based program, instructors from Robert Packer Hospital will provide technical education while professors from MSC will teach academic courses at the hospital through the Division of Continuing Education.

Mansfield State College is one of the few state colleges in Pennsylvania that has been authorized to grant a two-year Associate degree. During the spring semester of 1974, 114 students were enrolled in six MSC courses held each week at the Robert Packer Hospital.

Students enrolled in the program will meet accreditation standards established by the American Medical Association as well as the MSC admissions office.

Dr. William Beisel, Dean of Continuing Education at MSC, said the program will open doors for both the hospital and MSC and will have immense potential for the Sayre region. "There is a tremendous amount of enthusiasm from members of the administration at MSC and at the Robert Packer Hospital for the project," Dr. Beisel said. "If community support warrants the addition of special interest courses, the college will make every effort to meet the needs of the community for all types of college courses."

MSC President Dr. Lawrence Park commented that the college felt the program was essential to help meet the educational needs of the region. Because of the lack of other state institutions in the area which can offer such programs, Dr. Park said, the Department of Education approved our request.

Registration

Mansfield State College's new system of registration adopted to ease the crowds at registration lines smoothly processed some 2,523 students for the start of the spring semester.

Dr. Donald Darnton, Vice President of Academic Affairs, who along with a registration committee worked to improve the registration system, said the new system was adopted to have as few people as necessary on the day of registration which was January 13.

Shortly after the close of the fall semester, each student was sent two mailing cards at his home address sometime before Thanksgiving. The first card was from CCSI (college banking service) concerning the student activity fee. The second card was from the revenue office concerning tuition, dorm, and food bills.

If both cards were returned with payment to the college by December 3, and if students met their requirements with the scheduling office, housing office, and supplied the college with any additional information concerning change of address, etc., the student would then receive a notice from the college saying he or she is exempt from registration on January 13.

"The new system worked well," Dr. Darn-ton commented. "You could see a big difference in the lines on registration day. Of course the system is not perfect yet. We'll work to improve it each semester, but we are on the right road."

Dr. Darnton said the new system enabled 1,700 MSC students to register before January 13 and be ready for the start of the new semester. As far as he knew, Dr. Darnton said, this was a "first" at MSC.

Black History

Seven students and an instructor sat comfortably in the living room while a projector flashed images on a screen. They watched, and listened intently: "Give us the ballot," echoed the synchronized words. "Even though you may be able to sit at a lunch counter once forbidden to you . . . and even though you can now ride in the front of the bus, once denied to you . . . and even though the Supreme Court has said your children are no longer supposed to be excluded from white schools . . . if you are kept from voting in what is suppose to be a democracy, how can you think of yourself as free?"

Robert Wooley, assistant professor of History at Mansfield State College, uses the Richard W. Bruner filmstrip series "Rush Toward Freedom" for his course, "Black Man in White America." The course, said Wooley, is not just a straight Black History course, but encompasses race relations, sociology, Black art, and Black History. Generally speaking, Wooley said, the course is one of the more heavily enrolled history courses.

Classes in the fall and spring semesters, consequently, are not conducive to the informal living room gathering which students experienced in Wooley's summer class. Wooley said that more and more black students seem to be taking the course.

Wooley explained that the course was a discussion type, rather than a lecture, and since he wasn't Black, Wooley said, he had to work harder at presenting materials. "I use audiovisual equipment such as films and slides," Wooley said, "to get the white students to feel as Black as any White person can to have an appreciation for the Black Experience."

Wooley's exams for the three-credit course reinforce his approach to the class. Students are given the name of a particular Black person in history and asked to explain life for that person who lived in a "white" society. Students were also required to keep logs of their intellectual journeys throughout the course. That "journey" could be prompted by the readings, discussions, or anything connected with the course, Wooley said.

Students handed in the logs each day and Wooley would examine them and make comments to help students expand their thinking in certain areas.

One student who participated in Wooley's summer course, Vincent Jenkins, a sophomore English major from Pottstown, Pa., said that before he took the course he didn't realize why Blacks, and whites for that matter, act as they do and live in areas that they do. Jenkins, one of the two black students in the course, said students can get a different outlook on racial problems and a better understanding from a course in Black History.

Jenkins concluded that the text for the course was a valid one, presenting stories and opinions from Blacks from all walks of life. "Mr Wooley has a remarkable insight into the problems of racial relations," Jenkins said. "The course was excellent."

Strange Sights

Strange sights were seen in the Mansfield community one Friday night last summer, in the Plaza parking lot and up and down Main Street. Heads turned — cars stopped — and children came running.

People inside stores turned to stare—then had to smile—at the sight of an elephant on the sidewalk outside.

"I don't believe it," one observer commented, "I just don't believe it. I've never seen a real elephant before."

Mignon, a two-year-old, 3,000 pound elephant, is very real and she was on Main Street Friday Night. Although there was only one ("one is enough," said MSC play director Jack Tillinghast"), the elephant was helping to advertise Mansfield Festival Theatre's production of "Two by Two," an adaption of Noah and the Ark.

Tillinghast, producer of the Festival Theatre, hired the elephant for the evening from animal trainer Earl Hammond and his wife Liz of Tioga, Pa. The Hammond family trains animals for advertisement purposes.

"Two by Two" was written with Richard Rodger's music and produced for Danny Kaye about three seasons ago in New York. The play, which opened during the first three days of last August, reflected the views of of at least three writers of Noah plays written in the last fifteen years.

Attendance at the Saturday performance, which followed Mignon's appearance in the Plaza parking lot, was significantly larger than any other evening performance of "Two by Two," Tillinghast explained. "Whether or not that was due to the appearance of the elephant," Tillinghast said, "no one knows. But many of the theater-goers did mention the elephant Saturday night."

doesn't always mean success, as some of the Mansfield State College faculty will tell you

(They lost to the girls' hockey team: 2-0)

What it does mean at Mansfield is simply a relaxed informal learning environment, where students & faculty get to know one another as people, too.

If you're one of those special people who are seeking the freedom to try your own ideas, Mansfield can give you the elbow room and options you need. Choose from over sixty majors in Liberal Arts, Fine Arts, and Education.

We're a little out of the way, but it's worth going out of your way for something special.

MANSFIELD STATE COLLEGE
MANSFIELD, PA. 16833
An Equal Opportunity College

1900

RAYMOND G. PATTERSON, a 1900 graduate of MSC, has made a $1000 presentation to Westfield State College in Westfield, Mass. for the beginning of a college archive.

Mr. Patterson was a professor of history at the college for over 30 years. He is the author of the "Patterson Tests or Study Exercise" on the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. They are used as model tests for classroom use by high school and college teachers.

Mr. Patterson, now 93, was always interested in the college's history and felt that something should be done to preserve its historical evidence. He endowed the archive "to promote the College's service to humanity."

The archive is in memory of Horace Mann, a nineteenth century educator and founder of Westfield State College. Westfield State College opened Sept. 14, 1839 with twenty students.

MABEL EVANS MARSHALL is living with her daughter in South Amboy, N.J. at 17 Merritt Ave.

MILDRED MALLERY TEWKSBURY is living in Jamaica, Vt., with her daughter, Anne.

1913

NELLIE LENOX RICHMAN, of R. D. 2, Wysox, Pa., retired after 28 years of teaching. She fulfilled her dream to see the West by working for the YMCA and National Park Camps.

1915

ESTHER DAVIES HUGHES is now living at the Baptist Retirement Home, 316 Randolph St., Maywood, Ill. At the age of 92, Mrs. Hughes still sews, moulds in clay, does decoupage, macrame and paints in oils.

MARGUERITE WHITE VANDERGRIFT, formerly of Wellsboro, Pa., is now living in Greensboro, Md.

CLARENCE R. ROBBINS is living at 1507 Arrowhead Drive, Sun City Center, Fla. He retired in 1966 as Director of Adult Education for North Central Schools in Syracuse and has developed his hobbies of constructing grandmother and grandfather clocks and gardening.

1918

MARY FINLEY, of 204 Woodrum Ave., Pearisburg,

Va., reports that she and seven other class of '18 graduates keep in touch with a "Round Robin" letter.

MARVIS REYNOLDS BURROUGHS and her husband are living in Chatangua, N.Y. They both retired from Berca College in Kentucky in 1965 where they taught geography and geology.

1923

FLORENCE AUSTIN MCCONNELL has sent a record of "Hail Mansfield," composed by Dr. Butler, to be placed in the school's archives.

1924

GRACE HUSTON WOLFE is living at 3401 Barbour Lane, Louisville, Ky.

VELMA HILFIGER BAITY is living in Montoursville, Pa. Her oldest granddaughter, Ann Lee Baity, is now attending MSC. She retired from teaching in 1970 after a 19 year career. She is a member of the Presbyterian Church, State Retired Association of Teachers and the Local Branch of Lycoming County.

1931

BETHIA E. CAREY is now living in Kennett Square, Pa. at Kendal at Longwood.

1933

The 50th reunion of the class of 1924 was held on June 22, 1974. Of the original 170 members of the class, 31 attended the event.

Registration was held in Laurel Lounge where members of the class were presented carnations, complete with red and black ribbons.

In the course of the general alumni meeting, it was discovered that the class of '24 boasted the largest representation of any alumni class in attendance. Following a luncheon in Manser Dining Hall, the class gathered in Pinecrest lounge for a time of catching up and renewing friendships.

Among those in attendance were:

Frances Gates Eld of Coudersport, Pa.
Grace Housknecht Lupton of Bressler St., Sayre, Pa.

Velma Clarke Looney of 725 Winson Ave., Elmira, N.Y.

Hester Boudette Woodworth of 200 S. Bishop Ave., Secane, Pa.

Dorothy Tozer Miller of Star Route, Pleasant Mount, Pa.

Margery Warren Dye of 413 Prospect Ave., Olean, N.Y.

Merle Garrison of Mulberry Hill, Mansfield, Pa.

Mildred Levine Erickson of 213 Ribinwood Ave., Elmira, N.Y.

Julia Rathbun of 773 Main St., Olean, N.Y.

Mary McGlynn Park of 748 Main St., Avoca, Pa.

1961

ROBERT T. PIERCE, a major in the Air Force, was decorated with his second award of the U.S. Air Force Commendation Medal in recent ceremonies at Lindsey Air Station, Germany. Bob was cited for meritorious service as commander of a USAF support unit at Diyarbakir, Turkey.

GARY MOORE and his wife, Janice Hass Moore ('60), are living in Greenwood, N.Y.

rently Associate Professor of Music at Fairmount State College, has received a $1000 grant from the commissioning of a song cycle for lyric soprano, piano, and selected percussion instruments. The song cycle is being written specifically for his wife's voice, Anne Weaver Schooley ('64).

RONALD T. BOYANOWSKI has been appointed principal of the Mansfield High School.

JOHN G. PEYSER received his Masters in Elementary Education from Shippensburg in May 1974.

JULIE A. REITZ of RD1 Lewisburg, Pa., received a MEd. in Education of Exceptional Children from Penn State University in August 1974.

CAROLYN CARBAUGH KEITH was awarded her Masters in Reading in May 1974 at Shippensburg.

1967

DEAN T. DUFFY and his wife, JESSIE LONG DUFFY ('68), are in the process of building a new home on Keuka Lake in Penn Yan and have recently returned from a trip to Europe. Dean received his M.S. degree and certification in 1971 from Alfred University and is presently a Guidance and Drug Counselor at Marcus Whitman High School. Jessie received her M.S. degree and certification from Elmira College in 1973 and after teaching for three years, is now a full-time mother to Dean T. Duffy Jr.

WAYNE D. FAUSNAUGHT received his Master of Science in Education from Bucknell University June 2, 1974.

JOHN R. VINCENTI of 204 McBath St., State College, Pa. was awarded his Master of Education from Penn State in August 1974 in Academic Curriculum and Instruction.

GARY C. WENZEL was awarded his Masters in English from Penn State University.

NANCY FRIENDS YOUNG was married in 1974 and is living with her husband, Ron, at 2411 Mina Drive, Allison Park, Pa.

RICHARD E. BOWEN, received his Doctor of Philosophy in Chemistry from MSC.

ANTHONY J. CAPUTO is living at 308 Bantell St., Johnstown, Pa.

DOUGLAS F. RODNEY received his Master of Science in Library Science from Shippensburg State College.

ELSIE R. ANDERSON is now living at 120 W. Jersey St., Apt. E-3, Elizabeth, N.J.

MSC CLASS OF '35

The class of 1935 keeps in touch using a "Round Robin" letter. The letters go from one member to another and then each member discards his last letter and adds a new one.

During the last 40 years, they have followed each others lives from the birth of their children to the birth of their grandchildren.

The first letters included interesting information on careers, marital states and children of each of the members. Then the letters included the education and activities of those children and finally their marriages. Often the "Round Robin" included pictures, news clippings and recipes. Now, retirement and future plans of the Class of '35 are discussed in the letters.

PAULINE BILLINGS ANDERSON is at home during the winter months in Penllyn, Pa. and spends the rest of the year at Lake Ganoga. After 27 years of teaching Home Economics and Guidance Counseling, Mrs. Anderson is now enjoying a "sabbatical year" which allows her to visit with each of her four married sons and three granddaughters.

EVELYN RUBENDALL BARNHART taught Home Economics until her marriage in 1938 to Richard B. Barnhart, who completed a 35-year career in the Food Service Division of H.J. Heinz in May 1974.

The Barnharts have three children. Dr. Jean E. Romsted graduated from SMU and the IU Graduate School and is now working at the Huron County Medical Center in Norwalk, Ohio. James graduated from Purdue Engineering and is now with the 3M Co. in Saint Paul, Minn. Bill graduated from Knox College and the University of Chicago Graduate School and is now the political editor for "The Trib," a suburban division of the "Chicago Tribune."

MEDELLNA SENSINGER HOUSE-KNECHT taught Home Economics for eight years, was a hospital dietician for two years and is presently engaged in homemaking. She married ARTHUR H. HOUSEKNECHT ('34) in 1939 and following WWII they moved to New Jersey where he became affiliated with Standard Oil. Mrs. Houseknecht accompanied her husband on business trips abroad while he served as Executive Director of Training for the corporation. After her husband retired from Exxon in 1967, they moved back to Pennsylvania and are presently located in the Hughesville area.

Her present activities include church work, craft projects, membership in the local Business and Professional Women's Club, gardening and the development of wildlife habitat on their property.

MILDRED TITUS WARD was the Farmer County Supervisor of Home Economics for Sullivan and Wyoming Counties after her graduation from MSC. In 1946, she married James Ward and they moved to New Jersey. The Wards have a son and a daughter.

The Wards are kept busy at home with organic gardening, bee keeping and bird watching and at church serving on various boards, teaching Sunday School. Mrs. Ward has also been the Sunday School Superintendent and is presently the church librarian.

HELEN MEYERS DILTZ is living in Dushore, Pa. Her husband was a pharmacist and she is managing the store since his death. She taught music in the public schools for six years.

Mrs. Diltz has five daughters, two of whom are twins. They are all married and she has seven grandchildren. In the summer, the family enjoys swimming, boating and fishing and in the winter, snowmobiling and tobogganing.

OLIVE HARRIS COOLIDGE and her husband, PAUL, were the only married students on campus during their senior year. They taught music near Syracuse for three years before moving to Washington.

The Coolidge's have three children and five grandchildren, three of whom are in the Metropolitan area. The other two are living in New Hampshire.

Olive has worked at Perpetual Federal Savings for the last 15 years. Paul went with Procter Electric Co. in 1939. During the war years he worked at the Pentagon.

In the past few years, they have enjoyed trips to Venezuela, London - their favorite city (next to Washington) and Italy. They describe Washington as "a very exciting place to live" and especially enjoy the Kennedy Center for the performing arts and are "inveterate Red-skin fans."

KATY DILDINE KNOWLTON and her husband, BILL ('34), are both retired and living at Broolssview Drive, Hamilton, N.Y. They keep busy visiting their three children and six grandchildren who live in Michigan, Maryland and New York.

ELIZABETH THOMAS CAMPBELL lives at 73-300 Broadmoor, Thousand Palms, Calif. She has one daughter, Carolyn, and for granddaughters ages 11, 10, 7 and 4.

After retiring from Bank of America as a Escrow officer, she is now working for Circle K Food Markets. Mrs. Campbell has just returned from a two-week train cruise in Mexico. In addition to working and traveling, she also sings solos in Unity of the Desert in Palm Springs, Calif.

SIDNEY ROSEN BARNES and her husband, Art, are living in Waltham, Ma. They lived in Rochester, N.Y. or five years and Art worked for Kodak. In 1942, they moved to Massachusetts where Art became associated with Polaroid and moved, throughout the years, from researcher to Vice President - General Manager.

They have four children. Peter is a marine geologist with the Government Geological Survey in Palo Alto, Calif. Virginia is an anesthesiologist at Bayshore Hospital in Middletown, N.J. as well as a mother of two boys. Thomas is a mechanical engineer in the Aeronautics Division of G.E. in Lynn Mass. Robert is a sixth grade teacher in Porterville, Calif. The Barnes have nine grandchildren.

Mrs. Barnes has been in choral groups and she and her husband enjoy the symphony and the Camber Music groups in the Boston area. Mrs. Barnes is active in church, local and national Ecumenical activities, as a volunteer in the Boston Black Community and the state mental hospital.

Art has retired from Polaroid to pursue a career in Regional Planning for the future with emphasis on the importance of citizen involvement.

HOWARD L. HENDRICKS and GERALDINE REEM HENDRICKS are looking forward to traveling throughout the U.S. in their Vega Travel Trailer after Fritz retires in June. Having traveled around the world on an educational tour in 1970 and visited Europe last spring, they hope to again travel abroad after they "explore their own continent."

Fritz has been a school administrator for the past 40 years and they have lived in Lehman, Millersburg and Shillington, where he became the first Superintendent of the Governor Milton Schools.

In 1955, Geraldine returned to teaching, after an absence of 20 years and she retired in 1973.

The Hendrick's have two children, Jack and Priscilla, and six grandchildren.

ALUMNI WEEKEND

JUNE 27, 28, 29

FRIDAY

Check-in at Pine Crest Dormitory
Mansfield Festival Theatre Production

SATURDAY

General Business Meeting
Alumni Luncheon
Anniversary Class Meetings
MFT
Parties (Dorm and at Country Club)

SUNDAY

Church Service

Dorm "rental" is minimal and the food is reasonable for those who wish to stay on campus. Since Laurel Festival weekend is June 21, area motels should have some vacancies.

But you don't have to wait for anniversary year. Call some of your class friends, or just come join the fun.

And while you're planning ahead, mark October 4 on your calendar for Homecoming 1975. MSC, with the best gridiron squad in five years, will clash with Cheyney State.

THE COVER

Mansfield State College has been recognized as a Bicentennial Campus by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration. Tioga County Bicentennial Chairman Chester Bailey ('35), right, made the presentation to J. Paul McMillen, chairman of the College's Bicentennial Committee, and Dr. Donald C. Darnton, acting president.

ANOTHER CHANGE

For the third time in as many years, The Mansfieldian has a changed appearance. The changes have resulted from a search for an "identity" for The Mansfieldian while attempting to achieve a harmony between communication efforts and rising costs of publication. Please bear with us — we think we're making progress.

After a successful Annual Giving campaign last year, we are pleased to report that The Mansfieldian will be coming your way four times each year. You can expect the next issue in September. An increasing number of colleges and universities send magazines and newspapers to alumni on a similar schedule to increase communication. Not wanting Mansfield to be "left out," we joined the alumni editors who publish more frequently.

Last year when a high unemployment rate caused a critical eye to be cast upon higher education, Dean of Students Rod Kelchner asked a number of Mansfield graduates for information to be used during summer orientation. Showing examples to incoming students of our alumni who put their degrees to use restored somewhat the faith in a college education. The campus newspaper, Flashlight, used the information in a weekly column about "Luminous Alumni." News editor Deb Haldeman wrote the series, and several of her articles are being printed in this Mansfieldian.

Another problem facing the Alumni Association is the selection of the outstanding alum to be cited at the annual meeting each Alumni Day. Thomas Wierbowski, who has chaired this committee for the past three years, has asked that all correspondence be directed to The Mansfieldian. Fred Jupenlaz '31, former chairman of the MSC Board of Trustees and retired educator, was honored in 1975.

Trustees Approve Remission Of Fees For Senior Citizens

Persons receiving social security or equivalent retirement benefits will be given remission of fees per course audits for all classes where space is available. This action was approved by the College's Board of Trustees last fall.

Dr. Lawrence Park, the president of Mansfield State, indicated that senior citizens, in all instances where class space is available, would be allowed to audit classes free of charge. He expressed pleasure at the Board's adoption of this resolution, pointing out that it would be "a rewarding experience for the students, faculty and the senior citizens."

Dr. Lawrence Park, president of Mansfield State College, was granted sabbatical leave for the spring semester by the Board of Trustees. In making the announcement, Board chairman Mrs. Ila Wiley of Nelson, Pa., said Dr. Park's leave was effective December 19, 1975 to June 9.

Meeting in executive session at the Board's monthly meeting on campus last November, the Board also approved the appointment of Dr. Donald C. Darnton, vice president for academic affairs, as acting president during Dr. Park's sabbatical.

In related action, the Board endorsed the following administrative structure at the College:

Dr. Michael S. Pincus, acting vice-president for academic affairs; Mrs. Elaine DiBiase, assistant vice-president for academic affairs; and Dr. John R. Walker, assistant to the vice-president for academic affairs.

During his sabbatical, President Park has been working with the American Association of University Administrators, of which he is currently the regional membership chairman and a member of the Association's Board of Directors. He has traveled extensively about the country promoting the fledgling organization and talking about the aims and objectives of AAUA on other college campuses. Dr. Park has also worked with a team involved in a study on the effects of collective bargaining on college administration, which is under the auspices of the Carnegie Foundation.

Dr. Park, who has been at the helm of the Mansfield institution, since 1968, also continued some special assignments for the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

NEW TRUSTEES

Four new members of the Mansfield State College Board of Trustees were confirmed by the Pennsylvania State Senate following their appointment by Governor Milton J. Shapp.

The new members of the Mansfield Board are: Dr. Monroe O. Blake, Athens; Thomas R. Phinney, Blossburg; Dr. E. B. Watkins, Elkland; and F. Duane Van Noy of Troy.

Drs. Blake and Watkins and Phinney filled expired terms of trustees leaving the Board, while Van Noy was appointed to fill a vacancy.

A senior staff physician at the Robert Packer Hospital in Sayre, Dr. Blake was named to the expired term formerly held by Thomas A. Walrath of Wellsboro. He has been appointed to serve until 1979.

Dr. Watkins, a practicing dentist in Elkland, will serve until 1981, filling the expired appointment of Fred A. Jupenlaz of Mansfield.

Phinney, who was named to the post formerly held by Paul M. Conner of Coudersport, will serve on the Mansfield Board until 1981. He is the district commercial and industrial consumer service representative with the Pennsylvania Electric Company.

Van Noy, who served previously on the institution's Board, has been appointed to fill a vacancy and his present term will run until 1977. A practicing attorney in Troy, he was first named to the College's Trustees' Board in January, 1972.

With these appointments, the Board is now at its required size of nine.

Other members of the Board are: Mrs. Ila L. Wiley, Nelson; Dr. H. B. Strickland, Scranton; Eugene Kelly, Roaring Branch; John Regis, Coudersport; and Keith Semmel, the student representative who is a senior speech communication major from Slatington, Pa.

ALUMNI WEEKEND

Many of you who have returned for Alumni Weekend in recent years may have gone back home with the feeling that too much was crowded into a short weekend and the hours flew by before you got a chance to really visit with old friends.

A lot of new things have happened with the alumni this year, and it stands to reason that some of these things are bound to carry over to alumni events. Having done some traveling ourselves, we are sympathetic to the weariness you experience after a journey coupled with a rushed weekend. Why not plan your alumni activities this year around an extra day or so of vacation? Our plans for Alumni Weekend reflect this thought.

For example, you could arrive on campus one day earlier for alumni activities and take a more leisurely pace through the weekend. Register for your room on Thursday in time to take in the Mansfield Festival Theatre production "Pursuit of Happiness," a comedy set in Revolutionary times. Spend Friday renewing your acquaintance with the area or engaging in your favorite pastime. Corey Creek Country Club has reduced green fees for golfers, MSC tennis courts are available, as well as the swimming pool in Decker Gym. Nearby Hills Creek Lake has facilities for picnics, swimming, boating and fishing. Of course the Corning Glass Museum and the Pennsylvania Grand Canyon are interesting places to visit no matter how many times you've seen them before. The Pennsylvania Lumber Museum in nearby Galeton (across from Denton Hill) is a tremendous collection of memorabilia from an era gone by and the Tioga-Hammond Dam just north of here has had such an impact on the area that even one who lives here has trouble keeping pace with the changes.

Friday evening for those who missed the Thursday show, is the MFT show and a sky show in the George B. Strait Planetarium. Prof. Richard Mason's tales of mythology and astronomy fascinate people of all ages; witness more than 10,000 visitors to the facility from several states during an average year.

By Alumni Day on Saturday, you have arrived on campus, had a chance to rest and unwind after your trip (you don't have to do ALL the things just mentioned; these are possibilities), and you're ready for a relaxed day with the General Business Meeting and a social luncheon. Class reunions are scheduled for the afternoon. Interested classes or groups may schedule individual parties through the Alumni Office, as opposed to one general party that evening.

Mansfield area churches are always open and welcome guests for Sunday services at the church of your choice.

The Mansfield Festival Theatre show will play Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and the Planetarium show will run both Friday and Saturday at the same time. A more leisurely weekend pace will also allow you time to get acquainted with the campus, rather than rushing through a Saturday morning tour in time for the alumni meeting.

All alumni activities should be fun, and the Alumni Day Committee this year has worked with this goal in mind for you. There are many new ideas on campus that are really exciting. We think you will agree.

MANSFIELD FESTIVAL THEATRE

ERIC POPPICK

Former TV Actor, Director Is New Theatre Director

Former television actor and director Eric Poppick of Austerlitz, New York has been hired as a temporary assistant professor of Speech Communication and Theatre at Mansfield State College.

Poppick, who has appeared in the television serials "Secret Storm" and "Somerset," succeeds Frank Ball as the director of Mansfield's theatre productions. He is a 1968 graduate of Boston University where he earned a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in theatre.

While a graduate student at the State University of New York (Albany), where he obtained the master's degree in theatre, Poppick also was a member of the faculty and went on to direct the summer theatre in Albany.

"It takes a lot of long hours, hard work and dedicated people to put a summer theatre together," he pointed out, explaining that summer theatre, in general, has this characteristic.

Poppick also directed another summer run at Theatre by the Sea in Portsmouth, New Hampshire.

During his initial stint at Mansfield State, Poppick co-directed the spring musical "George M." with Jack Wilcox. This show, based upon the life of American composer, George M. Cohan, played to a sellout crowd March 18-20 in Straughn Auditorium.

Commenting that he comes from a diverse background and is used to both the big city life and small town life Poppick said, "The school (Mansfield State) has a lot of possibilities. There are two nice theatres to work in and about four shows are scheduled during the year. I like the students and the department."

Mansfield Foundation Marks Funds for Festival Theatre

The Mansfield Foundation has earmarked an additional $7,000 for the Mansfield Festival Theatre's 1976 season. J. Paul McMillen, executive director of the Foundation and Director of Development at Mansfield State College, announced recently.

"Now that we are assured of a successful season," commented Dr. Jack Tillinghast, director of the Mansfield Festival Theatre, "we can be concerned with the business of production and not have to worry about finances. The extra attention we can devote to our shows, I think, will result in another successful season."

In a letter to Dr. Tillinghast apprising him of the Foundation Award, McMillen said, "We are pleased to be able to lend our support to such a fine activity as the Mansfield Festival Theatre, and want to wish you continued success."

For its fifth consecutive season, Mansfield Festival Theatre will produce five plays with a total of 30 performances during the summer. Heading the list of shows are two Bicentennial presentations, "Pursuit of Happiness" and the musical "1776." The Mansfield Foundation, on recommendation of the College Bicentennial Committee, has already awarded $2,000 to help produce those plays, bringing the total to $9,000.

Completing the list are: "The Odd Couple" slated for July 22-24 and 29-31; "Dracula" scheduled for August 5-7 and 12-14; and "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown" for August 19-21 and 26-28.

Most of the MFT actors came from New York City with talented local performers supplementing large cast shows. Again, attendance rose and box office receipts grew proportionately.

A growing Mansfield Festival Theatre presented five more productions during its fourth season last year at no increase in prices.

"For the first time, the Theatre experimented with bringing a 'star' package to campus with its production of 'I Do, I Do,' featuring two top rated television serial performers. This was so successful," said Dr. Tillinghast, "that similar programming is planned for future seasons."

Mansfield Festival Theatre will open its fifth season June 24 with "Pursuit of Happiness." The show will run June 24-26 and July 1-3. The ever popular "1776" will follow July 8-10 and 15-17.

Dr. Tillinghast has already begun the task of auditions to fill roles for the current season. In his words, "1976, here we come."

CAMPUS NEWS

Two New Academic Programs

Two new academic program offerings are available at MSC. The College has been authorized to grant the bachelor of arts degree in criminal justice administration and a bachelor of science degree in information processing. Both of these recent approvals of new academic programs are part of a major mission area in human services that stem from statewide efforts in long range planning.

With the authority granted by the State Department of Education to offer a degree in criminal justice administration, this area, subsequently, has been moved from under the political science umbrella to form a separate department, headed by Dr. Robert B. Revere, formerly the chairman of the College's department of government and politics.

The information processing program, more aptly known as computer and information sciences, is housed in the department of sociology-anthropology. According to Theodore Slabey, coordinator of the program, information processing is an applied computer program as opposed to computer science.

Slabey, who holds a master's degree from George Washington University, contends that the Mansfield information processing program is unique when compared with similar programs at other colleges. "We teach computer programming, but we also stress the need to produce graduates who have an understanding of people and organizations, and how they function, along with a comprehension of the role of computers in society."

The degree in information processing, similar to the bachelor's degree in medical technology which is also offered at Mansfield State, is a professional degree, Slabey says.

Already, twenty-three students have declared information processing as a major; and by the end of its fifth year, Slabey boasts, "We'll have approximately 120 majors."

MARY JANE USINGER

Coed in Competition For Irene Ryan Theatre Award

Mary Jane Usinger, for her very dramatic role of Ada Lester in Mansfield State College's production of "Tobacco Road," has been nominated for the prestigious Irene Ryan Scholarship.

Miss Usinger, a sophomore theatre major from Media, Pa., was nominated when the College Players' production of "Tobacco Road" was reviewed in competition in the American College Theatre Festival. Mansfield State College was one of five finalists theatre groups in the East selected to participate in the regional theatre festival at Temple University in Philadelphia on January 23.

The play, directed by Dr. John Tillinghast, chairman of the department of speech communication and theatre at Mansfield State, is the version adapted for stage by Jack Kirkland of Erskine Caldwell's award-winning novel. The College Players' production of "Tobacco Road" was chosen from more than 30 plays presented by collegiate theatre groups in the states of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Miss Usinger, who has starred in a number of lead roles in productions on the Mansfield stage since she enrolled two years ago is the daughter of Mr. John S. Usinger of 330 Kirk Lane, Media. Her dramatic role in "Tobacco Road" catapulted her into the competition for the distinguished Irene Ryan Award, which is regarded as the "academy award" of collegiate theatre.

Interdisciplinary Course in Rural Studies Offered

A novel, intercollegiate, and interdisciplinary course for both undergraduate and graduate students will be offered for the first time this summer.

"History of a Rural Community: Wellsboro," a history course on folk tradition and oral history; population mobility and economic development will be offered during the College's summer session, beginning on June 21 and running through July 30.

According to Dr. Robert W. Unger, professor of history, the course will cover a different area in each of the six weeks it is offered, ranging from folk tradition and oral history and tradition techniques to population mobility and economic development. The course will be team-taught with Dr. Unger, one of the lecturing faculty, being assisted by faculty from four other institutions.

Students enrolled in the all day course will live in private homes in the Wellsboro area. Enrollment in the course is limited to 15 undergraduates and five graduate students.

This summer's course is a forerunner of a proposed intercollegiate major offering in rural studies at several Pennsylvania colleges and universities, Dr. Michael Pincus, acting vice-president for academic affairs at Mansfield State, said.

Persons interested in making application for enrollment in the course or seeking additional information, should contact Dr. Robert W. Unger.

Opportunity to Study 'N' Teach In England This Summer

Mansfield State will again offer area teachers an opportunity to study in England from June 17 to July 10, with a chance to travel in that country on weekends.

A graduate level course, Introduction to British Education, is aimed at providing elementary teachers a first hand look at the innovations, accomplishments and problems of British primary education.

"The unique aspect of our program," says Dr. John Heaps, professor of elementary education, "is that our teachers go right into the classroom and work shoulder to shoulder with the English school staff and get involved with British children."

Dr. Heaps, who spent a year teaching in the Ermine Middle School in Lincoln, England, is instructor for the course.

"The course gives teachers an awareness of how teachers from another culture cope with problems common to all teachers," Dr. Heaps added. He also indicated that the British teachers are anxious to learn from their American counterparts as well, so the program produces an exchange of ideas.

During the course, the open-classroom approach will be evaluated and special attention will be focused on individualized instruction and continual progress programs.

Lincoln, England, where the teachers and persons enrolled in the course will be based, is located in the midlands roughly halfway between London and Edinburgh.

It is in a convenient location from which to visit some of central England's most interesting and beautiful attractions. In addition to sights in England, students in years past have used free weekends to visit Switzerland, Austria, Venice, and Italy as well as Scotland. An optional junket is planned this year to Denmark, Sweden, Switzerland and Norway for the group during the final week of the trip.

About 20 teachers made the England trip last year, earning 3 credits for participation in the practicum. In addition to these 3 credits, this year, students may also wish to earn an additional 3 credits by participating in the Introduction to British Education seminar offered by arrangement.

Interested persons may contact Dr. Heaps, Department of Elementary Education, Mansfield State College, Mansfield, PA 16933.

English Professor Named Commonwealth Distinguished Teaching fellow

Dr. Stanley R. Harrison, earlier named to a distinguished teaching chair at Mansfield State College, has been designated a Commonwealth Distinguished Teaching Fellow along with ten other college professors in Pennsylvania State College system.

Their selection, and that of ten other professors chosen to receive Distinguished Academic Service Awards, was announced by a seven-member commission chaired by Dr. John C. Pittenger, Secretary of Education. The winners, who will receive a total of $83,000 in prizes in recognition of their distinguished teaching or academic service, were selected from a group of 50 nominees from the 14 state colleges.

Dr. Harrison, a member of the Mansfield State College English faculty since 1970, will receive a stipend of $3,500 in recognition of his selection to a Commonwealth Distinguished Teaching Chair.

A Ph.D. in literature from Michigan State University, Dr. Harrison is the author of several short stories and plays and poems. His novel, That Leaves Clubs and Spades, was just completed in September, 1975. He also recently completed the play, I Alone Am Edmund, the writing of which was supported by a summer research grant awarded to him by the state through the College.

In 1969, prior to joining the Mansfield faculty, Harrison spent a year as writer-in-residence at Transylvania College. He has also taught at Michigan State University, University of Rhode Island, Virginia Tech University and Tulane University.

Continuing Education Offerings Span Northern Tier

More than one hundred course offerings were available as a part of the continuing education program at Mansfield State College this spring.

The courses, offered throughout the northern tier areas, included seventy-three evening classes on campus. According to the spring term bulletin of courses, released here by Dr. William H. Beisel, Dean of Continuing Education, there were some fifty-eight undergraduate offerings and thirty-six graduate courses offered for credit, with an additional thirty-three non-credit courses.

Classes are held for Sayre and Athens at the Robert Packer Hospital Patterson Building; in Towanda at the Middle School cafeteria; in Sullivan County at the Library in Dushore; in Williamsport at the Cochran Elementary School cafeteria; in Wellsboro at the high school Room A-6; at the high school library in Coudersport; and in Blossburg at the North Penn High School, Room 6.

On the Mansfield campus, there were 22 courses offered for non-credit — including three workshops presented at no charge as a public service. Breaking down the 73 evening classes, there were 43 undergraduate-level courses and 30 graduate offerings.

While the specific number of courses offered each term may vary, classes are offered throughout the northern tier of Pennsylvania.

DR. STANLEY HARRISON

"Classroom in a Suitcase"

"Me? I look like a traveling saleswoman of some kind. An Avon lady perhaps," declared Patricia Royko, describing her dissimilar appearance to teachers as they arrive for work.

Miss Royko, a junior special education major, designed a "classroom in a suitcase" for itinerant teachers who work with retarded preschoolers in their homes, as part of an independent study project at the College.

The project was conducted last year while she was a sophomore at Mansfield State and tested in the field last summer. A resulting paper from the project has been published in the February issue of Early Years, an educational magazine published by Allen Raymond, Inc. in Darien, Connecticut, for teachers through grade three.

The "home suitcase," filled with teaching devices designed especially to help prepare exceptional children for school, was a constant companion of Miss Royko last summer as she traveled around testing the use of her "classroom in a suitcase" idea.

PATRICIA ROYKO

"When a child is moderately retarded, there's a great danger that his handicap will go unrecognized until he's finally floored by academic failure," Miss Royko said. The child is usually labeled "retarded" and faces ridicule from his peers, a stigma that's almost impossible to escape during his school career.

The role of the itinerant teacher is to identify learning disabilities before the child enters the educational mainstream. A special education program is then planned and carried out in the hope that the child will have an academic career without the trauma of failure.

Miss Royko explained that existing facilities for exceptional preschoolers are few and far between, and if youngsters needing help cannot get to the classroom . . . "Well, somehow or other, the classroom must be brought to the child."

A learning kit called the "Teacher's Traveling Aid" (TTA) was designed by Miss Royko and constructed by her father. The TTA focuses on six basic concepts: (1) self-help development; (2) motor coordination; (3) language skills; (4) math skills; (5) social relationships; and (6) creativity. The kit will soon be patented and Patricia Royko, through her attorney, will deal with companies for its production.

Estimated cost for the kit is $25 and several preschool teachers have already indicated they would like to buy it.

Dr. Verne Jeffers, professor of elementary education, had a hand in the initial development of the TTA. For his course, "Teaching Mathematics in the Elementary School," Dr. Jeffers required that his students develop a project which will aid them later as teachers.

"Miss Royko incorporated classroom aids to develop math skills in her kit that were talked about in the course," Dr. Jeffers added. "As the project developed, she stopped by my office to have me react to her ideas."

In a similar course under Dr. Richard Shick, chairman of the department of special education at Mansfield State, Miss Royko elaborated on her concept. Dr. Shick added that prior experiences Miss Royko had working with handicapped children led her to pursue her idea into the final project.

"A senior editor of Early Years came to my home last summer to see the kit in action," recalled Miss Royko. "From then on, things went uphill." Her article was published in the magazine and she has received inquiries from prospective employers who thought she would be graduating soon.

She also presented the TTA project last November in Pittsburgh at the state convention for the Council for Exceptional Children.

Active in campus organizations, Miss Royko is membership chairman for the Council for Exceptional Children and a member of the Intervarsity Christian Fellowship. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Royko of 14 Allen Drive in Wayne, New Jersey.

"It would be nice to conclude this account of the TTA with the statement that I achieved blue-ribbon successes with all of the exceptional children I visited," the Mansfield coed said. "I didn't of course. But then, I didn't expect to!"

"Itinerant special education teachers aren't supposed to be miracle workers anyway," she pointed out. "Their job is simply to make things a little easier for the exceptional child in future years. Thinking of it in those terms doesn't sound like very much, I admit.

But think of it in terms of a young child not having to experience the pain of academic failure and it somehow becomes tremendously important."

Halloran Scholarship Established

A $1,000 scholarship has been established at Mansfield State in the name of Thomas R. Halloran. Presented annually through the Mansfield Foundation, the scholarship will be awarded to a student from Potter County with selection of the student made by the College.

Halloran, a 1955 graduate of Mansfield State, is owner and president of Aqua-Flo Chemical Company in Charleston, West Virginia. He is president of the Sacred Heart School Board in Charleston and is on the Board of Directors of the West Virginia Kidney Foundation and of Pike Chemical Company.

"I can't tell you how delighted I am to be able to do this," Halloran said of the scholarship. "I feel I owe Mansfield a great deal, so maybe this will suffice for partial payment."

A native of Coudersport, Halloran was a member of Phi Sigma Pi (national honorary fraternity) and Kappa Delta Pi (honor society in education) while he was at Mansfield State. During his senior year he was president of Student Council.

Halloran lives with his wife Catherine and their four children at 1638 Woodvale Drive in Charleston, W. Va.

SPORTS

Mike Fiamingo Closes Outstanding Wrestling Career

For most collegiate wrestlers, a 17 and 1 season would be tremendously rewarding. But for Mike Fiamingo, Mansfield State College's All-American wrestler, the disappointment at the end will always be remembered. Despite the success of the dual meet competition, when he overwhelmed almost all of his opponents, the catastrophe of the conference championships will always be there.

Besides battling through 17 of 18 dual-match opponents, the Mansfield native captured a second-place award at the 22-team Millersville Open and picked up the championship and "Outstanding Wrestler" trophies at the eight-team Northern New York Invitational.

But it was the end that will haunt the four-year varsity wrestling star. Fiamingo was seeded first in the Pennsylvania State College Conference Championships at Bloomsburg (Pa.) in the 134-pound bracket. When he received an opening round bye, it seemed that even luck would be on his side, but not for long. As he watched the first round matches, he repeatedly said, "I wish I was wrestling this round, I usually need a match to get loose in these tournaments."

Whether he was loose or not, he started slowly in his quarter-final match against Shippensburg's Chris Choiniers. Fiamingo fell behind early, not particularly uncommon for him, then came back to tie Choiniere at the first period's end. Fiamingo fell behind again as the second period opened at a furious pace, and as the two rolled uncontrolled toward the back of the mat Fiamingo landed awkwardly on his left arm and his career was over. He dislocated his elbow.

MIKE FIAMINGO

Although he talks calmly now about the incident as "just one of those things," one notices the pain, not from his arm, but from not being able to compete.

Most of the Mansfield supporters were so confident of a Fiamingo victory that most of them were watching another Mountie at the same time on another mat when Fiamingo suffered his injury. "It shocked everyone," said coach Murray Davidson, "Mike never even missed a practice in four years, and that one injury ruined his shot at the state and national titles."

Davidson obviously wasn't the only person who felt Fiamingo had a shot at the titles, and his records show why. He finished his career with a 49-17-2 dual record which was 30-3-1 during his final two campaigns. Fiamingo's only loss this year and one of his two last year was to 1973 national champ

Don Rohn from Clarion, who didn't lose to anyone this year and who won his fourth straight state crown.

Fiamingo placed second to Rohn at the state meet last year at 142-pounds, and went on from there to finish fourth at the NCAA Division III Championships to gain All-American status.

This year Fiamingo would have had a chance to join 1972-73 baseball star Joe DeSanto as the only Mansfield State athletes to twice be named All-American.

A graduate of Jackson Memorial High School in Jackson, N.J., where he won a Regional Championship in his senior year, Fiamingo was an instant success at Mansfield. As 126-pound freshman, he broke the school record for pins by decking eight opponents. Last year as a junior he upped the record to nine, and this year he improved it to 11. His career record at Mansfield certainly assures his reputation as a collegiate wrestler will always be among the very best in Mansfield State wrestling history.

Although there was some hope that Fiamingo would be ready for the national meet, his injury was much too serious to heal in two weeks.

Then came the hardest time for Fiamingo — watching. He said, "It's frustrating, just painful to watch wrestling when you know you should be out there. Especially when you see guys you beat making their way toward the title, it's just plain tough."

Tough may be the best way to describe Mike Fiamingo, he was definitely one of the toughest ever to wrestle at Mansfield and he certainly had one of the toughest breaks a Mountie athlete ever suffered, and lastly, tough will be the assignment coach Davidson faces to come up with a replacement for Mike Fiamingo.

Balascik Moves Among Elite Company At Mansfield State With 1,004 Career Points

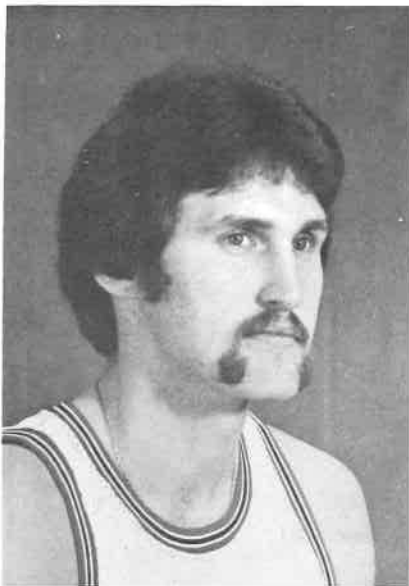

Joe Balascik, Mansfield's robust basketball center, saved his best for the last in moving into the elite club of 1,000-point scorers.

Balascik popped in 32 points in the final game of his intercollegiate career, an all-time single game high for him, as he moved into 9th place on the list of all-time leading scorers at Mansfield State with 1,004 points.

The 6-6½ senior from McAdoo, Pa., entered the NCAA Division II playoffs needing 33 points to reach the 1,000-point plateau. After the Mounties' 65-54 opening setback to Widener (Pa.) in which Balascik scored only 5 points, the prospect of reaching the 1,000-point mark looked indeed bleak. However, Balascik connected on his first five shots early in the game against Grove City and the ball kept coming his way. Five minutes into the second half, he pocketed a jumper from the top of the key to get his 1,000th point.

Balascik's 1,004 total moves him into 9th place on the Mounties' all-time list, two points ahead of Walt Bartkowski, in 10th spot with 1,002, and just behind Dave Russell, who is ranked 8th with 1,061 points in three seasons.

Reggie Cox, a 6-5 senior from Pittsburgh, concluded his career with 746 points to move into 17th place on the Mounties' all-time career list behind Jim Turner (791). Cox, a juco transfer who topped the Mounties in scoring this season with 407 (17.0) points, amassed his career total in only two seasons.

"Spotts" Decker Memorial Awards

Two Mansfield State alumni were named as the recipients of the Marion E. "Spotts" Decker Memorial Award.

Mark Sassani of Mt. Carmel and Richard Taulton of Clairton were designated as the first "Spotts" Decker Memorial Award recipients. The awards were presented by Mrs. Marion E. Decker, the wife of the late director of athletics at the College, and Dr. Arthur P. DeGenaro, the acting athletic director.

Sassani, an All-American wrestler, was cited as the College's most outstanding athlete in 1974, while Taulton, an NCAA All-American high hurdler, was honored as the school's best athlete in 1975. The Spotts Decker Memorial Award, named in honor of the Mansfield State alumnus who was employed at the College from 1946 until 1968, will be awarded annually to the College's most outstanding athlete.

Sassani, the 1974 winner, distinguished himself as the College's first NCAA All-American wrestler, finishing sixth in the NCAA championships in 1974.

Taulton, the College's first state champion in track since 1968, blazed an unbeaten trail in dual meet competition in track for three years. His 14.6 clocking in the 120-yard high hurdles earned him the state crown in 1975. That same year, he finished second in the NCAA Championships.

The late Mr. Decker came to Mansfield as chairman of the athletic department and director of athletics in 1946. He served in that capacity, and as an instructor of physical education, until 1965, when the responsibilities were divided with Decker retaining the departmental chairmanship and Robert "Tut" Moore assuming duties as athletic director.

A 1924 graduate of Mansfield State, Decker was physical education director and coach at Athens High School for 5 years before moving on to Williamsport High School where he worked until coming to Mansfield in 1946.

The multi-million dollar gymnasium complex, on which construction was begun in 1968, the year Decker passed away, was named in his honor and his 22 years of service to athletics at Mansfield State College.

Mansfield State's Basketball Mounties Get Invite to NCAA Regionals

Mansfield State College's basketball Mountaineers were invited for the second straight year to play in the NCAA Division III regional playoffs March 12-13 at the University of Scranton's fieldhouse.

The Mounties, who advanced all the way to the quarter-finals last year, competed in the Mid-Atlantic region along with the host University of Scranton, Widener (Pa.) and Grove City.

Edward Wilson's Mountaineers finished the regular season with a 16 and 6 won-lost record and were ranked 10th in the nation among NCAA Division III schools. Against a highly-touted Widener (19 and 6) in the opening round of the Mid-Atlantic regionals, Mansfield bowed 65-54. They came back to capture consolation honors by dropping Grove City (16-4) by a 79-53 score.

Mansfield State's Lady Mountaineers Conclude First Basketball Season With 5 and 6 Log

On the hardwood this year for the first time at the school in 49 years, the Lady Mountaineers of Mansfield concluded the season with 5 wins and 6 losses.

After sound beatings by Pitt-Johnstown (73-33) and Lock Haven (86-53), Mansfield responded with five straight wins, including two forfeit wins. Elmira College dropped a 2-0 decision to Mansfield State College, then the Lady Mountaineers trounced Alfred Ag. Tech. (56-30), Penn State-Wilkes Barre (63-24) and SUNY Binghamton (79-44).

On the return match-up, Penn-Wilkes forfeited. Mansfield lost the remaining four games on their season slate, but turned in respectable performances against powerful Bucknell University (58-51) and twice against a tough Corning Community College squad, 53-40 and 65-63. SUNY Geneseo edged Mansfield 61-54 in the other contest.

Mansfield pulled within 3 points in the last two minutes against Bucknell Bisons and Corning outscored Mansfield in the closing minutes of both of those games, while Geneseo erased a 10-point Mansfield advantage to come from behind in their win.

Alicia Hamerla, a 6-foot freshman center from King of Prussia, led Mansfield with 123 points for a 13.6 per game average. She was second in rebounding with 73 at a 8.1 rate per game. Her best game of the season came in the final contest against Corning where she poured in 34 points and grabbed 14 rebounds.

Freshman guard Lisa Messing of Millerton hit for 10.0 points per outing, finishing with 90 points for a 42.7 per cent shooting average. She led the squad in steals (48) and assists (32) as well as snaring 32 rebounds.

Philadelphia native Sheryl Brown, a 5'8" sophomore forward, grabbed a team high 85 rebounds for a 9.4 per game average while netting 67 points for a 7.4 clip. Her scoring high came against Binghamton with 16 points (10 rebounds) but her final games against Geneseo and Corning saw her haul down 16 rebounds each with a combined scoring total of 15.

Former Montrose standout Jesie Cherundolo, a 5'10" sophomore forward, was third in scoring (8.0) and third in rebounding (7.7). Senior guard June Goodenough from Hallstead, finished with 61 points for a 6.8 average. She was second in assists with 10.

As a team Mansfield edged their opponents by nearly one point, averaging 55.9 points per game to the opponents 55.0. The Lady Mountaineers connected on 209 of 595 shots from the floor for a respectable 35.1 per cent. At the free throw line Mansfield State College hit on 87 of 166 for a 52.4 per cent.

Mansfield pulled down 360 rebounds for the season for a 40.0 per game average. The team also had 64 assists and stole the ball 173 times.

Mrs. Sharon Zegalia, coach of the Lady Mountaineers, will lose only one member of her squad, guard June Goodenough, through graduation. In addition to several promising players coming up through the ranks, Coach Zegalia expects some new recruits to give the squad a boost next season.

Dave Jackson Wins Mike Daniels Award

Dave Jackson, a senior at Mansfield State was the recipient of the second annual Mike Daniels Memorial Award.

The memorial award, established in the honor of the late Mike Daniels, a Mansfield State alumnus, baseball star and former Athens High School athletic director, is awarded annually to the College's most valuable baseball player.

"Mike encouraged the growth of amateur baseball even though he was a professional scout," Dr. John Heaps, the Mounties' baseball coach, said. Daniels, who died following open heart surgery in 1974, was an outstanding baseball player for the Mansfield Red and Black diamonds.

Jackson, this year's winner of the Daniels Award, is from Columbia Cross Roads, Pa. He set a school record last year for most homeruns, blasting seven, while leading the Mounties in hitting with a .367 batting average. It was Daniels who encouraged Jackson to pursue college baseball at Mansfield State following a successful high school career in Troy.

MOUNTIE ATHLETIC CLUB

A Mountie Athletic Club has been formed to support intercollegiate Mountaineer teams at Mansfield State College.

"College athletic programs are a popular topic for discussion," declared Rod Kelchner, dean of students at Mansfield. Kelchner was elected president of the Mountie Athletic Club recently at an organizational meeting held at the Corey Creek Country Club.

"Mansfieldians have often spoken of the need for a club to support our various intercollegiate teams," Kelchner continued. "Now the club is a reality."

Other officers of the Club are Dr. E. E. Barber, first vice president; David Cummings, second vice president; Mrs. Helen Lutes, secretary; and Terry Mudge, treasurer — all of Mansfield.

Appointed to the Board of Directors at the meeting were: Dr. James Wilson of Wellsboro, Ronald Boyanowski, Wickham Booth, Mrs. Arlene Decker and George Tomlinson of Mansfield.

The Mountie Athletic Club was designed to promote the athletic program at Mansfield State through the purchase of equipment, budgetary support and other projects identified by the College's Athletic Policy Committee and approved by the College President.

Membership, which includes two contributions, is open to anyone who supports the Mansfield State athletic program. "Club dues of $10 will be used to support club functions such as sports banquets, club publications or other social activities," stated Mrs. Lutes. She added that members are to also make a contribution to the Mansfield Foundation, Inc., earmarked for the athletic program.

"Your contribution to the Foundation will be used according to the educational theme of the Foundation to directly support our athletic program," said Mrs. Lutes.

For its first social event, the Mountie Athletic Club will hold a golf outing and picnic Friday during Alumni Weekend at the Corey Creek Country Club. All interested persons are invited to attend.

Send both the membership dues check (made to Mountie Athletic Club) and a check of any amount (to the Mansfield Foundation) to: The Mansfield Foundation, P.O. Box 431, Mansfield, Pa. 16933.

MOUNTIE ATHLETIC CLUB

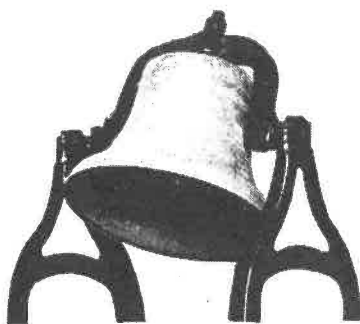

Please enroll me as a charter member of the Mountie Athletic Club. Enclosed is my check for $10 for membership dues, payable to the Mountie Athletic Club. To complete my membership I am also sending a check for $_____, payable to the Mansfield Foundation, Inc.

Although any contribution to the Foundation is acceptable for membership in the Mountie Club - you may wish to join one of the four clubs within the Foundation. They are as follows:

Benefactors Club — $50 - $99
Founders Club — $100 - $499
1857 Club — $500 - $999
Presidents Club — $1,000 plus

Send both checks to MOUNTIE ATHLETIC CLUB, P. O. Box 431, Mansfield, Pennsylvania 16933.

Thank you for your support.

BLACK AWARENESS WEEK

"While most of the nation prepares to parade and celebrate this 200th anniversary, a large and growing American underclass still waits for its own declaration of independence to take effect," Georgia State Senator Julian Bond declared.

Addressing an audience of nearly 400 persons on campus during the observance of Black Awareness Week, Sen. Bond said during the Bicentennial year "we find our condition, in a very real way, unchanged."

Regarded as the apotheosis of the new politics which burst on the scene prior to the 1968 convention, Bond was barred from taking his seat in Georgia legislature until the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the legislature had erred in refusing to seat him.

"It is readily apparent in the Bicentennial year that we are the 200-year old victims of the philosophy of ethnic purity; of those who believe that Black people, who arrived in America the year before the Mayflower did, constitute members of an alien group. These master race theories have consigned us to second-class citizenship and second-class lives, and made our intelligent participation in the citizenship process all that more important."

Stating his views on domestic issues, Bond called for an elimination of poverty through a real full employment, free health care for all Americans, a wider distribution of income and wealth and effective social control over corporate monopolies.

"These hold the promise of no perfect world," Bond declared, "but do hold the hope that we may create a system of laws and relationships between us that promise more than the present system of privilege for only a few."

Responding to questions from the audience in Straughn Auditorium following his address, Bond said that his personal choice in the race for the Democratic nomination is Rep. Udall (Morris), describing the Arizona congressman as the "only remaining democratic candidate who has any allegiance to the traditional liberal principles that a section of the Democratic Party has tried to uphold over the last 30 years. He's the only one who comes close to my position on the issues."

JULIAN BOND

Udall, Bond declared, "is the only one who can keep alive a 'flicker of hope' that we can do things better, differently and extend social and economic justice to a larger and larger number of people."

Referring to Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington, Bond said, "He proposes a frightening foreign policy. He's over eager on the button and I would be afraid of almost constant war."

But Bond lashed out hardest at former Georgia Governor Jimmy Carter's apology for remarks on "ethnic purity and alien groups." Carter's remarks on preserving the "ethnic purity" of urban neighborhoods "totally disqualifies him as a presidential candidate," Bond maintained.

"It is really astounding for a candidate running for public office in 1976 talking about ethnic purity and alien groups," Bond said. "It's frightening to me and not sufficient to apologize in my view."

NIKKI GIOVANNI

Bond continued that "Carter strikes me as a man careless with the truth; a man unable to come to grips with any issue. To his credit," Bond pointed out, "Senator Jackson will tell you where he stands on most things, even if he is wrong. Governor Carter will not be wrong or right, or even half wrong or half right."

Interestingly, the "Princess of Black Poetry," Nikki Giovanni walked on stage two days later, stepped to the same microphone Bond used and said, "I understand Julian was here the other night and was not very kind to Governor Carter; I'm going to do just the opposite. I like Jimmy Carter and I support him."

Miss Giovanni then encouraged the Mansfield students in attendance to get involved in life and to excel academically. Her dialogue and poetry which followed portrayed her vibrant personality, leaving no doubt in anyone's mind that she truly is a princess.

Black Awareness Week Observance

Georgia State Senator Julian Bond, poetess Nikki Giovanni and jazz pianist Ramsey Lewis headlined an outstanding program of name personalities who appeared on campus during the fourth annual observance of Black Awareness Week, April 8-15.

The weeklong program, sponsored by the Black Awareness Association, the Human Relations Planning Committee, the Equal Education Opportunity Program, and the College Union Board, was designed to create a greater awareness among the various races and ethnic groups in our college community and to establish a more positive atmosphere in dealing with attitudes and understand how they influence behavior.

"We feel that the activities of Black Awareness Week will allow everyone to examine racial prejudices and review their attitudes and experience something new and different," Carlotta Green, a junior from Pittsburgh, said. Miss Green is chairman of the BAA committee planning for the full week observance.

The week opened April 8, with the appearance of James Paige, director of the Temple University Student Resource Center. He will speak on "Black America: Prospective 1976."

The Penn State Gospel Choir portrayed a story of people in its Sunday afternoon gospel singing concert at the United Methodist Church. One of the major attractions of the week of activities was Ramsey Lewis and his new nine-member group, playing the sound of disco-funk.

Larry Lebby, a South Carolina artist who is well known for his realistic and provocative sketches of life, gave an art show April 12, in the art exhibition room of Alumni Hall.

Lebby, who has won many awards for his work at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the Columbia Fine Arts Museum, has had a number of one-man shows and is widely recognized for his artistic achievements.

The climax of the Black Week occurred with the appearance of Senator Julian Bond. The Georgia legislator, who has been the embodiment of the New Politics since 1968 when his appearance at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago symbolized the changes taking place in the party, addressed the Black Week audience in Straughn Auditorium. A reception, open to all interested persons, was held in the Home Economics Center immediately after Bond's speech.

The Mansfield Gospel Choir, a newly-organized campus group, made its debut April 14, in Laurel B lounge on the Black Week program.

The final evening of the weeklong observance brought to the campus for the first time a young lady hailed as the "Princess of Black Poetry." Nikki Giovanni, whose writing has been best described "as an extension of herself," read from her poetry.

Miss Giovanni, a 1967 graduate of Fisk University, wrote her first book within two years after her graduation; and since then has written 12 books of poems, essays, and conversations. A reception was also held for Miss Giovanni in the Home Economics Center.

APPOINTMENTS

DAVID STEARNS

Stearns Is New Dean of Admissions

David Stearns has been named as the new Dean of Admissions for Mansfield State College, succeeding Leon Lunn who retired.

Stearns, former Supervisor of Admissions at Fort Lewis College in Durango, Colorado, assumed responsibilities last August. A graduate of Fort Lewis College who obtained his master's degree from Adams State College in Alamosa, Colorado, Stearns had been Supervisor of Admissions at Fort Lewis since 1970.

Fort Lewis College is a state supported, liberal arts college with a full time enrollment of 2,700 students. The school's enrollment increased every fall while Stearns was head of the admissions program. In 1970 their enrollment was up 12.2 percent with subsequent increases of 9.1 percent, 8.3 percent, 3 percent and in the fall of last year, 11.4 percent.

Prior to his position at Fort Lewis College Stearns was a high school history teacher and head basketball coach at Centauri High School in La Jara, Colorado and held the same positions at East Greene High School in Grand Junction, Iowa.

In 1966-67 Stearns was selected as an outstanding basketball player at Fort Lewis College and was named to the Colorado All Star basketball team in 1967. He was president of that college's Alumni Association from 1973-74 and a member of Phi Alpha Theta (National Honorary History Fraternity) and Phi Delta Kappa (Educational Fraternity).

A dynamic young individual, Stearns has already launched a major recruiting effort at Mansfield.

Leslie Evans '49 and Robert Swinsick '57 Assume New Posts

Leslie D. Evans, class of 1949, has been named chairman of the Secondary Education Department at Mansfield, assuming responsibilities formerly handled by Dr. Robert Swinsick, class of 1957, now Dean of Teacher Education.

Dr. Swinsick moved up to fill a vacancy left by Dr. Richard Wilson, class of 1935, who retired. Both new appointments were approved by the Board of Trustees last August.

A member of the College's faculty since 1967, Evans has been supervisor of student teachers as well as instructor of "Teaching Math in Secondary Schools." He is a member of the Leadership Committee for the National Council of Teachers in Mathematics, and a member of Phi Delta Kappa.

Dr. Swinsick returned to the campus in 1968 as Supervisor of Student Teaching. He has served as chairman of the Secondary Education Department since 1970.

Evans attended school on the Mansfield campus from kindergarten through college. "At that time the elementary, junior and senior high schools were all located on campus," he said, "and all student teaching was done directly on campus." Evans felt that it was a distinct advantage to receive his education here and return to teach later.

After graduation from college he taught math at North Side High School in Corning, N.Y. before returning to the campus high school to supervise all the demonstration and student teaching. When the campus school closed in 1959, Evans moved to Mansfield High to teach Math.

As head basketball coach for Mansfield High School, Evans guided Tiger teams into the P.I.A.A. playoffs three out of four years, including two district championships. Later at Mansfield State, Evans coached the varsity golf squad for five years.

He received his M.Ed. degree from Penn State and has done graduate work at Geneseo State (now the State University of New York at Geneseo) and Elmira College. He pursued an emphasis in education foundations and evaluations.

A past president of the Mansfield Lions Club, Evans was chairman of the Administration Board of the United Methodist Church.

A former teacher at Port Allegany Union School District, Dr. Swinsick served as Assistant Principal and Principal over a six year period at Shipensburg Area School District. He earned a Master of Science Degree in education from St. Bonaventure in 1960 and his Doctor of Education from Penn State in 1968. Dr. Swinsick specialized in Administration and Supervision at both universities.

While at MSC in 1957 Swinsick was named to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities. In 1972 and 1973 he was selected as one of the Outstanding Educators of America.

He is a member of the National Academy for School Executives, the National Association of Teacher Educators, the National Organization for Legal Problems in Education, the American Association of School Administrators and the Pennsylvania Association of Teacher Education.

DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

JOHN A. HOLLEY

John A. Holley has been appointed Director of Public Relations, announced Dr. Lawrence Park, MSC president.

A native of Baltimore, Maryland, Holley was Director of Public Relations at Morgan State University for four years prior to his appointment to the post at Mansfield. He has been involved in news and public relations work since college and has held several positions in the field over the years.

At North Carolina Central University in Durham, North Carolina where he obtained a B.A. in Sociology and English in 1958, Holley served as Sports Editor of the school paper Campus Echo and moved up to Associate Editor. He was Editor of the Eagle (yearbook) and Student Affairs Coordinator for Student Government Association.

During his junior and senior years Holley worked as a student assistant in the Office of Public Relations as Sports Information Director. He was also statistician for the basketball and football teams and a member of the Thespians.

Holley studied for an M.S. degree in Public Relations at the State University of Iowa School of Journalism with additional study at Richmond Professional Institute and the University of Notre Dame.

In 1962 Holley was assistant to the Executive Secretary of the Virginia Teachers Association and Editor of the VTA Bulletin, a monthly journal. He served as Director of Publications and Publicity until the end of 1964.

For the following two years he was Director of the News Bureau and Publications at Shaw University in Raleigh, N.C. Later, Holley accepted a position as Director of Public Information Services at Albany State College in Albany, Georgia where he served for five years.

His 1973 and 1974 editions of the Morgan State football guide won national awards, being acclaimed as the No. 1 press guides in the College Division by the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA).

John Holley also maintained membership in numerous professional organizations. He is a member of the Baltimore Public Relations Council and the Maryland-D.C.-Delaware Press Association. Holley belongs to the Public Relations Society of America and the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) as well as the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA), the Football Writers Association of America (FWAA) and the U.S. Basketball Writers Association (USBWA).

In 1963 he served as Publicity Chairman for the seventh annual convention of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Holley assumed duties at Mansfield State in October.

LUMINOUS ALUMNI

by Deb Halderman

GERALD BAILEY

A recent graduate of Mansfield State, Gerald Bailey received his degree in June of 1971. His efforts since then have shown the value of his art training at Mansfield. From Mansfield, Bailey went on to the University of Iowa where he graduated in May 1973 with a Master of Arts in drawing. Six months later he graduated with honors, again from the University of Iowa, with a Master of Fine Arts in drawing.

Bailey returned to the east coast in January of 1974 when he presented a one man art show at the Arnot Art Museum in Elmira, N.Y. For the next five months he attended the New York Studio School, where he studied under the skillful guidance of Jack Tworckov, Mercedes Matter, and George McNeil.

In Sept. 1974, he returned to Elmira, where he taught printmaking and drawing at the college until April of last year. A month later, Bailey, his wife, and two children (Marc and Jennifer), moved to New York City. He is still residing there, and is presently making prints in the Soho district.

KENNETH B. LEE

Originally from Eagles Mere, Pa., Kenneth Lee received a Bachelor of Science degree from Mansfield in 1948. He attended Dickinson School of Law where he received his Juris Doctor in 1950.

In 1953, Lee was elected District Attorney of Sullivan County, and in 1956 was elected to the Pennsylvania House of Representatives. Reelected every two years, Lee served in the House until 1972, compiling 18 years of service.

During his political career Lee served as the House majority leader in 1963-64 and minority leader from 1965-66. In 1967 and 1968, Lee was Speaker of the House, a post he again filled in 1973-74. Between those two periods as Speaker, he was the minority policy chairman in 1969-70 and served as minority leader in 1971-72.

In the 1974 gubernatorial elections, Lee ran unsuccessfully as a running-mate of Drew Lewis against the Shapp-Kline ticket. Lee is active as a member of the Board of Trustees for the Pennsylvania College of Optometry, is a director of the First National Bank of Dushore, Pa., and is practicing law.

MICHAEL J. REID

Michael J. Reid graduated from Mansfield in 1971 with a Bachelor of Science in Elementary Education and a minor in Social Science.

While at MSC, Reid served as treasurer of the Student Government Association and participated in football and wrestling for three years.

After graduation, Reid worked as a recreation counselor for the New York State Division for Youth with children from the inner cities of New York. Later Reid set up recreation programs for the Elmira Correction Center in Elmira, N.Y., supervising a maximum of 120 inmates. He also taught a course in Black History under a federal program.

From 1971-74, at the same time he held the previous positions part time, Reid taught sixth grade in the Elmira City School District, coached junior varsity football at Elmira Free Academy and assisted coaching elementary wrestling and basketball.

For the past two years he has been an admissions counselor at the State University College at Cortland, N.Y. Reid serves as a liaison officer with the financial aid office and is active in recruiting minority students.

DICK DiBIASO

Selected as head basketball coach of Stanford University in early 1975 Dick DiBiasco was a 1962 graduate of Mansfield State. He established many school records wearing a Mountie uniform, and currently ranks among the top players on MSC's all-time scoring and rebounding list.

Since his graduation, he has been involved in coaching for some 13 years. He started out as a coach at the high school in Beacon, N.Y. where, over a period of six years, his teams compiled a 101-16 record. In 1963, the junior varsity teams had a record of 31-1, winning 30 games straight in one stretch. Over four years, the varsity team had a 70-15 record, during which time they won three league championships, two New York State sectional championships, and had one undefeated season.

In 1968, DiBiasco left for the University of Virginia where he was to work under Bill Gibson, his former coach at Mansfield. It took two years for the two coaches to rebuild the basketball program at the University, after which time the Virginia team was able to post a record of 15 wins and 10 losses, the team's first winning season in seventeen years.

DiBiasco left the University of Virginia in 1971 for Notre Dame, where he spent the next four years as assistant basketball coach for the varsity team. He also did much scouting and recruiting of players, and he ran a summer sports camp. While he was at Notre Dame, the Fighting Irish twice competed in the NCAA Tournament and once reached the finals of the NIT. They also snapped UCLA's 88 game winning streak and beat the NCAA championship Bruins last season.

One summer he organized and directed his own three week basketball camp in Italy and DiBiasco has also written several articles on coaching for well-known basketball publications.

DiBiasco is married and he and his wife, Shawna have 2 children: Brian, age 11 and Shawna Re, age 8.

JOAN PATTERSON

Since her story was told in The Mansfieldian last May, Miss Joan E. Patterson has been making news. She was named to direct a pilot program in Lycoming County, part of the state-wide Pennsylvania Fellowship Plan to recruit citizens on a volunteer basis and match them one-to-one with mentally retarded persons of all ages.

According to a newspaper account carried in the Williamsport Grit, Miss Patterson visits clubs and organizations in the Williamsport area to talk about the program on an individual basis. Under the plan, the article explains, citizen advocates are called "fellows" and their mentally retarded associates, "friends," to gain a personal, rather than official or professional relationship.

"Most of our volunteers try to be with their 'friends' at least once a week," Miss Patterson said. "More than anything else," she added about the program, "it's a giving of yourself."

She said she is getting a lot of cooperation with the fellowship plan but hopes to have a lot more volunteers.

Miss Patterson was paralyzed as the result of an automobile accident in 1966. A sophomore at Mansfield State at the time of the accident, Miss Patterson went on to graduate in 1968.

Miss Patterson is employed at Hope Enterprises, Inc. in Williamsport, where she directs the fellowship program.

At the annual conference of the Governor's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped last September in Hershey, Pa., Miss Patterson received the "Handicapped Pennsylvanian of the Year" Award from Lt. Governor Ernest Kline.

The state Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation provided Miss Patterson with a motorized wheelchair and sponsored her last two years at Mansfield, where she majored in special education. During a year spent at the Pennsylvania Rehabilitation Center in Johnstown, she received therapy and learned to care for herself. She also taught remedial reading to other handicapped persons.

Through the new program headed by Miss Patterson, the mentally retarded in Lycoming County are beginning to find friendship and enjoy new opportunities.

BARBARA J. FEGLEY has been awarded a graduate teaching assistantship in the Department of Geography at Bowling Green State University in Bowling Green, Ohio.

LOLA SMITH received a dietetic internship at the New York Hospital (Cornell University Medical Center), one of 11 students from across the country to receive such an appointment.

JAMES W. DUNLOP

Dr. James W. Dunlop, 61, Class of 1935, died unexpectedly August 7, 1975 near Salt Lake City, Utah.

Dr. Dunlop, professor of music education at Penn State University, was for 29 years conductor of one of the Nation's top marching bands. A former President of the American Bandmasters Association, Dr. Dunlop was cited in 1972 as "one of the 10 most outstanding educational music directors in the United States and Canada."

In 1973, Dr. Dunlop was guest conductor for a performance at the John F. Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. by the United States Navy Band. He received national acclaim for various televised performances at the Orange Bowl, Cotton Bowl and Sugar Bowl games.

Born in Morris Run in Tioga County on October 12, 1913, Dr. Dunlop was a graduate of Mansfield State College with a degree in public school music. He received a master's of music degree from the University of Michigan in 1939 and was awarded the honorary doctor of music degree by Salem College in Salem, West Virginia.

IN MEMORIAM

Franklin B. Hege, 54, Class of 1942, died May 24, 1975. He was head of the music department for State College Area Schools, supervising eight bands and three orchestras, in grades 7-12.

In 1961, the Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction used Frank Hege's junior high music course as the guide for its State Course of Study in Music. In 1950 and again in 1960, the music department received the highest rating of any department in the local schools by the Middle States Association.

The son of a Lutheran pastor, Frank Hege was a devoted Christian and a dedicated churchman.

FRANKLIN B. HEGE

JOSEPH A. DEANGELIS

Joseph A. DeAngelis, 28, Class of 1968, died March 22, 1975 as a result of an automobile accident.

A member and officer of Sigma Tau Gamma Fraternity while at Mansfield, Mr. DeAngelis enlisted in the Army after graduation and attained the rank of 1st Lieutenant.

Later he earned his masters degree at the State University of New York at New Paltz. Mr. DeAngelis was an eighth grade social studies teacher at Goshen Middle School. Principal Kenneth Hubley described Mr. DeAngelis as a "very popular teacher — kids identified with him."

editorial . . .

If there's one thing you remember about Mansfield it's that news travels fast in a small town and everyone knows what's going on -- right? In many cases this may be true, but in regard to Mansfield State's more than 10,000 alumni it becomes very difficult to keep track of everyone.

Often people who have been married for a number of years forget to notify the Alumni Office of their change in name. Then when a new address comes into the office, unless the maiden name is mentioned, it is very difficult to locate that individual in our files.

You probably also remember your friends, the fraternity or sorority you were in, the members of the athletic team you played with or the members in the band you played with. (Keep this in mind, I'm coming back to it.)

When you got married, did you marry another graduate of MSC? Of the same or different class? Are you sure we have a current address for you or did you move recently (I did) and forget to notify the Alumni Office? Did you mention your wife or husband's name even if they are not Mansfield graduates?

Finally, tell us about what happened to you since graduation or what your current occupation involves. When you do, friends you haven't seen since graduation may get your address and write you a letter, and it will help our files tremendously.

I said I'd get back to friends, fraternities, sororities and bands. Both the Esquires and the Mounties Band want to get some of their former members together for a jam session or concert. A special alumni group is also being formed to help draw the group together. First the Home Ec Department, now the Esquires and the Mountie Band, soon a much more active Alumni Association. But we need your help. We're here. We need YOU!

ALUMNI HONOR DR. RICHARD M. WILSON

Dr. Richard M. Wilson was honored by the Mansfield State College Alumni Association June 26 at its annual business meeting in Straughn Auditorium.

Dr. Wilson was presented the "Alumni Citation Award" by Thomas J. Wierbowski '68, chairman of the nominating committee. He was cited for his outstanding accomplishments in the field of education, and his services to the College and community.

After graduating from Mansfield in 1935, Dr. Wilson went on to earn both the M.Ed and Ed.D degrees from Pennsylvania State University. He returned to his Alma Mater in 1946 as supervisor of the campus junior high school, and remained at Mansfield in various capacities until his retirement in 1975 as Dean of Teacher Education.

Dr. Wilson was the recipient of MSC's first Honorary Doctorate of Pedology degree at Commencement Exercises held in May of 1974. He was very active in the affairs of the College's Alumni Association and served as a director of that organization for numerous years. Many students and faculty will remember his assistance, dedication, and service. Dr. Wilson donated his time and effort to Mansfield's students, alumni, faculty, and community for which he received the Alumni Association's highest honor.

THREE NAMED TO ALUMNI BOARD

Three alumni were named to the Board of Directors of the Mansfield State College General Alumni Association at the 108th Alumni Day business meeting.

Thomas J. Wierbowski '68, William Fravel '57 and Richard M. Wilson '35, all from Mansfield, were elected to the Association's Board for a three year term. Mr. Wierbowski teaches music in Shartlesville, Pa., but spends his summers in Mansfield. Mr. Fravel is the owner of the Myer's Insurance Agency in Mansfield.

Presiding over the session was the Honorable Robert M. Kemp '49, President of the Alumni Association.

Mrs. Marcella Hyde '56 is the alumni board representative to the Mansfield Foundation.

Judith Smith

Many alumni are unaware of one of our most important alums, Judith Smith. She is the Alumni Association's representative to the College Board of Trustees. Her position is one of invitation from the Board, giving the alumni a direct means of communicating needs, feelings, and attitudes about the College to the Board.

Mrs. Smith, from Wellsboro, Pa., graduated from MSC in 1965 as an education major.

Elected to the Alumni Association Board in 1975, Mrs. Smith also serves as a Board member and past president of the Tioga County Partner's in Progress, a rehabilitation workshop for the handicapped. She served for seven years as Director of Hope Enterprises, Inc. in Williamsport, Pa. Hope Enterprises, Inc. includes the School of Hope, a rehabilitation workshop, and five residential homes for the handicapped.

Judith Smith is married to Frederick W. Smith '59, and they reside at 36 Morgan Terrace, Wellsboro, Pa. 16901.

Any alumni who wish Mrs. Smith to communicate their views or comments about MSC should write to her home address.

MOUNTIE BAND TO PLAY IN NEW YORK

For those of you who enjoy pro football the nationally televised New York Jets-Miami Dolphins Football Game on November 7 is a must. The Mansfield State College Marching Band directed by Richard Talbot will be performing the half-time show. This isn't the first time the Mountie Band has performed before a national audience. In 1976 they gave the half-time performance for the New England Patriots-Atlanta Falcons Game, and again in 1973 they played at Three River Stadium when the New York Jets-Pittsburgh Steelers met. In 1974 they represented the state of Pennsylvania as a Bicentennial representative when they performed at Hargate in England. So if you get a chance please watch.

In addition to these performances the Mountie Band will play at Bloomsburg September 25, Mansfield's Homecoming October 9, and other related football games, and finally on Monday, November 8, "A night with the Mounties" will be held at Straughn Auditorium at 8:00 p.m.

Another program the band is attempting to organize this year is an Alumni Band. This is a project of the alumni chapter of the Tau Beta Sigma Band Sorority. Anyone who would like to take part in this activity should contact Mr. Talbot directly or any member of the alumni chapter.

James Myford, the prize-winning sculptor, poses below the wall relief sculpture recently hung at Mansfield State College. The aluminum casting, which measures 6 feet by 8½ feet, is mounted on the wall of Alumni Hall. Myford has won several top awards for his cast aluminum work which is represented in numerous collections including the Carnegie Library.

HOMECOMING OCTOBER 9th

There are two times a year the alumni are especially encouraged to return to the campus. The one being Alumni weekend and the other being Homecoming. This year Homecoming will be October 9, and a lot of planning has gone in to assure everyone a good time. So, take a look at the program and decide for yourself.

There will be a concert Thursday night in Straughn Auditorium, featuring Commander Cody. The weekend will officially begin Friday with a dance and mini-concert featuring T & T in the Recreation Center (old gym) from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m.

Floats and activities for the annual parade downtown will focus on the theme "200 Years of Progress". The parade, including the Mountie Marching Band and area high school bands will be gathering for "Band Day," beginning at 10 a.m.

You'll have time to join the Mountie Athletic Club for a brunch at 11:30, winding up just before the pre-game ceremonies at 1 p.m. All alumni are invited for sandwiches and cold drinks at the Mansfield Festival Theatre tent adjacent to the football field.

Band winners and float prizes will be announced during pre-game ceremonies. President Lawrence Park will crown the 1976 Homecoming Queen.

Kickoff for the contest against the Marauders of Millersville State is set for 1:30. During the last three clashes with its MSC counterpart, Mansfield has been beaten soundly twice and battled to a 6-3 decision in the other game. Coach Bernie Sabol's Mounties will be out to make up last season's loss.

Nearly 1,500 band members make quite a sight, and sound, as they cover the football field for the half-time show. The Mounties Marching Band will perform immediately following the game.

Then there is time for you to get together with friends before the dance and party at Corey Creek Country Club beginning at 8 p.m.

The Alumni Association has been trying to develop a stronger organization. More activities are planned. Things are happening on the old campus. Bring your friends and classmates to support your Alma Mater and have a great time, too.

MANSFIELD STATE'S 111th COMMENCEMENT

Mansfield's 111th Commencement exercise was held May 15 at Van Norman Field. Donald C. Darnton, the College's acting president presided over the ceremonies.

Including baccalaureate, associate and graduate degrees a total of 707 degrees were conferred. Among the 646 persons receiving baccalaureate degrees 146 graduated with academic honors, including 10 who graduated with highest honors.

Richard E. Hastings, Jane E. Hindman, Suzanne Ross and Mrs. Gwendolyn N. Tama topped the 1976 graduating class with perfect 4.00 cumulative averages (all A's). Hastings, a criminal justice administration major, is the son of Mr. & Mrs. Robert P. Hastings of Little Meadows, Pa., while Miss Hindman, the daughter of Dr. & Mrs. Ira Hindman, Sr. of Wellsboro, Pa., is an English and Philosophy major. Miss Ross, who received the B.S. degree in special education, is the daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Eugene Ross of Ridgway, Pa., and Mrs. Tama, whose major concentration is in public school nursing is a resident of Towanda.

Twenty-six Associate in Science degrees were awarded by the College in X-Ray Technology and Respiratory Therapy in conjunction with the Robert Packer Hospital in Sayre. Dr. Darnton conferred the degrees while Dr. Paul Royce, director of medical education at the hospital presented the degrees.

Thirty-five graduate degrees completed the 1976 graduating class. There were 29 Master of Education degrees. Seventeen of which were in elementary education, seven in special education, one in mathematics, two in English, one in history and one in music. Other graduate degrees included four Master of Arts degrees in English, and two Master of Science degrees in music. Since 1966, when the graduate program started a total of 207 graduate degrees have been awarded.

GRAD NAMED OUTSTANDING SENIOR

Keith Semmel of Slatington, Pa. was named the Outstanding Senior for 1976 at commencement exercises held May 15. The award instituted three years ago is presented annually to a graduating senior who has brought recognition to himself and the College. Nominations for the award are received from various academic departments with final selection made by a faculty-student committee.

Semmel, a speech communication and theatre major, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David C. Semmel, of R. D. 1, Slatington. Graduating with a 3.20 cumulative academic average, Semmel has been awarded a graduate assistantship at Bowling Green State University this fall.

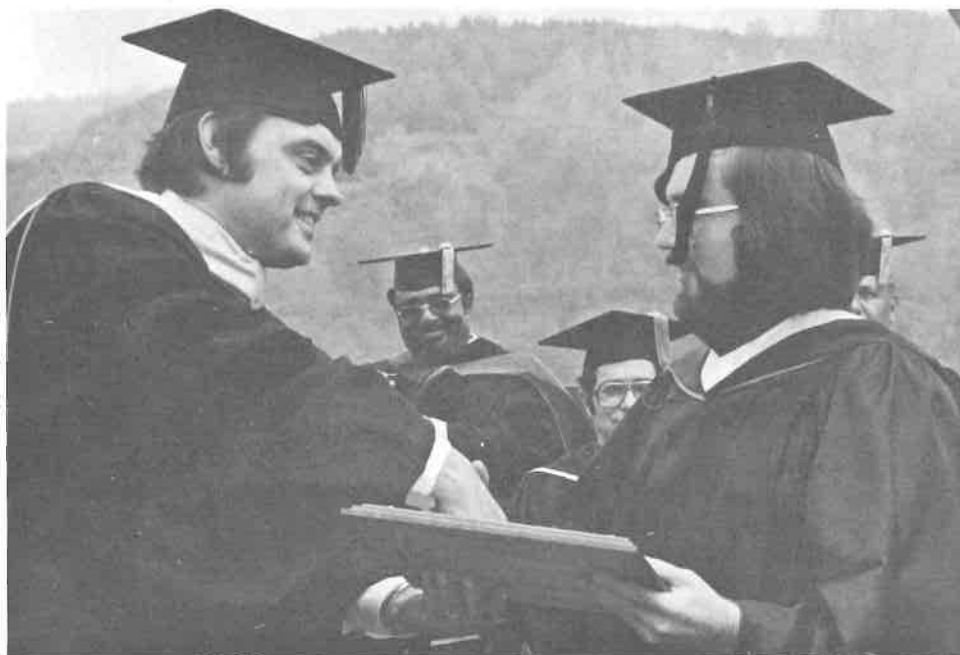

Semmel's honors include being Vice-President of the Student Government Association, a member of the Mountie Marching Band, resident artist for the campus newspaper and a member of the forensic team. He was named "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities" and is a member of Pi Kappa Delta an honorary speech fraternity.

As a part of a comedy team with senior John Williams of Blossburg, Pa.,

Semmel made a hit with audiences in Pennsylvania's Northern Tier.

One of his professors, Dr. Vernon Lapps said of him, "Not only is he an extremely talented comedian, artist, speaker, and musician, but he is also a very good student and an involved, aware human being".

Dr. Robert Scott, Vice President of Student Affairs - left and Keith Semmel - right.

COLLEGE OFFICIALS AND BUSINESS LEADERS MEET

Tioga County area businessmen and College officials met recently to discuss ways the College could better serve the business and professional communities in Pennsylvania's Northern Tier.

At a dinner meeting, held at the Penn Wells Hotel in Wellsboro, the businessmen suggested expanded Continuing Education courses in computer education, finance, accounting, and industrial relations. Local businessmen also volunteered to speak to classes at the College and invited classes to tour local industry facilities.

Another suggestion included a college-sponsored lecture series, inviting noted speakers in business from around the country.

Twenty-five representatives from the banking, utilities, coal, trucking, tannery, and industrial communities attended the meeting.

MANSFIELD RECEIVES GRANT

Mansfield State has been awarded a $50,000 grant by the Pennsylvania Department of Education to fund the College's Equal Education Opportunity/Act 101 programs.

According to David H. Russell, director of special programs the appropriation will be used to take in between 80 and 90 students this year, nearly 30% more students than a year ago.

The Equal Education Opportunity program, which was initiated on the Mansfield campus in 1972 with only internal support, offers an opportunity for a college education to young persons who for societal, cultural, educational, or economic reasons were denied that chance. The program seeks to strengthen those skills considered fundamental to academic success.

The College received Act 101 funding for the EEO program for the first time in 1973.

MANSFIELD STATE SECRETARY WINS STATE COOKING CONTEST

A College secretary captured first prize at the state level in a national chicken cooking contest and competed in national finals on July 14 in Philadelphia.

Ann Marie Beuter, secretary for the department of health and physical education, finished first in the state cook-off at the Colonial Park Mall in Harrisburg, competing against winners of three other regional cook-offs. Her recipe for chicken cacciatore was selected by the judges from more than 500 recipes sent in throughout the state of Pennsylvania.

The contest, sponsored by the National Broiler Council and the makers of Ac'cent Flavor Enhancer and Mazola Corn Oil, requires a recipe with a broiler or fryer chicken as the predominant ingredient. At least one teaspoon of Ac'cent flavor enhancer and one-fourth cup of Mazola corn oil must also be included as an ingredient.

SMALL BUSINESS MANAGEMENT PROGRAM OFFERED

Twenty-three persons successfully completed a program in the management of small businesses offered by the Division of Continuing Education at Mansfield State College.

The series of short courses, designed to emphasize practical rather than theoretical aspects of management and operations, was sponsored jointly by the Small Business Administration with the cooperation of its regional office in Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

According to Dr. William H. Beisel, dean of continuing education, "particular attention was given to details of organization and the operation of a small business".

Twenty-three of the forty-seven participants in the program received certificates for completing at least four of the six mini-courses.

CONTEST HONORS ANNOUNCED

Corning-Painted Post West High School in Corning, NY, walked away with top honors in the second annual S. Manford Lloyd Math Contest.

The contest, named for professor emeritus, S. Manford Lloyd of Mansfield, is a cooperative venture of the College's Mathematics Department and the Mathematics Club.

David Plummer, a 10th grader at Corning-Painted Post West, took first place in the contest by scoring highest on a two-hour examination from among 129 contestants. Plummer received a $100.00 savings bond and helped his team capture the winning team trophy from among participating schools.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE INTERNSHIP PROGRAM OFFERS EXPERIENCE

According to Dr. Robert B. Revere, chairman of the criminal justice department, one of the largest problems in administering the program is thinking half a decade ahead. The criminal justice field although only ten years old has been developing so rapidly it is difficult to keep pace with the changes. Although the criminal justice program at Mansfield has been in operation for only one year it is already the fastest growing department on campus.

The purpose of the program is to educate criminal justice careerists pointing out that students no longer have to choose a specialization in Law Enforcement or Corrections.

Mansfield's program is fairly well known in the state. More than 40 agencies participate in the program by providing adjunct faculty and a vehicle for the summer intern program. Several other agencies in New Jersey and as far away as Michigan are also participating.

The internship is also a stepping stone for students in that many of the agencies where they did their field experience often offer employment to those same students upon graduation.

There is no limit to the different experiences students become involved in while doing their internships. They work with District Attorneys, Sheriff's offices, prisons, juvenile facilities and alcohol and drug abuse centers.

Keith Williams

WILLIAMS TELS AMERICAN STORY ABROAD

"All play and no work," is how Keith Williams describes his job as an actor with the prestigious National Players of Catholic University, Washington, D.C., but when he gets back to his home in Scranton at the summer's end he will undoubtedly be tired.

Williams, a 1971 graduate of Mansfield State College, has been on tour with 15 other members of the National Players, representing the U. S. Departments of State and Defense in presenting a cultural reflection of this country abroad. "The Cavalcade of the American Theatre" has carried the nation's 200th birthday message across the country and over the Pacific to the Orient and on to Europe.

Early in May the Players had a four-day stand in Honolulu, then to several islands on their way to Taipei, Taiwan. After a week in Guam, Williams and the Players went to Clark Air Force Base in the Phillippines, followed by Tokyo, Japan; Hong Kong and Tehran, Iran. Starting at Istanbul, Turkey, the group branched out to other communities for a twelve-day tour of that country and by June 25 had arrived in Frankfurt, Germany.

The European leg of the tour included Italy, Spain, Belgium and Holland, wrapping up in late August.

After a summer stint at Marywood College in the Poconos right after graduation Williams went for postgraduate work at Catholic University. Even with keen competition he spiraled to the forefront and won critical acclaim from reviewers of the Washington Post and Washington Star for his appearance in "Dark of the Moon."

His education and training have been all encompassing since his childhood days when he was an accomplished guitarist at age six. At a youthful age 26, Williams has completed 20 years in the entertainment business and he's looking forward to a long and successful career in the theatre.

SOCIAL RESTORATION PROGRAM RESPONDS TO EDUCATION'S NEEDS

A new interdisciplinary, graduate-level program to train educational specialists in social restoration began this summer at the Mansfield campus. The program is designed to train specialists to work with delinquent and alienated youth, and coincides with a current trend in society to move away from punishment as a traditional response to acts of disruption. Dr. Richard Finley, a professor of secondary education, heads the program.

Mansfield will become one of only a few institutions in the United States to prepare specialists in social restoration. Others are scattered across the country. "Consequently there are a lot of people who work in related areas of social restoration, but very few who have had training or background in the total dynamics of the field" added Dr. Finley.

Conceded that schools, including those preparing teachers, have done little to develop pre-delinquency programs, Dr. Finley said, "the public school teacher understands the education system. He generally doesn't understand the criminal justice and the social agency system." Underscoring the need for an interdisciplinary program Dr. Finley added, "He (the public school teacher) only understands one component affecting youths."

Dr. Finley referred to the "education specialist in social restoration" as an identification tag for certification in the program. "You won't come out of the program a sociologist or a psychologist, which are very special kinds of curriculums," he explained; "but you will take some special education, remedial reading, abnormal psychology, education of disadvantaged children -- a composite."

In addition to course work in education (elementary, secondary and special ed), psychology, sociology, and criminal justice administration, students in the program will be placed in a field experience with the assignment changing each semester.

"As a social restoration intern," Dr. Finley continued, "students will work with people and agencies as an active member of the agency and be involved with experiences aimed at the development of three general skills: diagnostic and remedial teaching, crisis intervention; and knowledge of the community -- particularly as related to agencies where clients may seek aid."

Built into the program will be a series of seminars, tutorials, or workshops to share common problems of academicians, practitioners and interns. The sessions are to be held both at the field site and on campus.

SCHOLARSHIPS AWARDED

Paula Jean Clark and Denise Bell were awarded scholarships by the Mansfield Foundation, Inc. for the 1976-77 academic year.

Miss Clark was awarded the Thomas R. Halloran Scholarship, at $1,000 annual award to a Potter County resident. She is a freshman art major from Austin, Pa.

Miss Bell was awarded the Jonathan George March Scholarship in the amount of $800.00. She is the third recipient of this award, and is a sophomore general studies major from Wellsboro, Pa.

The Halloran Scholarship was established last year, while the March Scholarship was established in 1974 by James White '55.

DR. HALCHIN NAMED TO COMMITTEE

Dr. Lilla Halchin, professor of home economics, has been selected as one of five educators to revise a portion of the National Teachers Examination.

Dr. Halchin will work on the committee to revise the home economics education area of the examination. The exam is administered by the Educational Testing Service in Princeton, N. J.

A member of the Mansfield Home Economics faculty since 1965, Dr. Halchin was included in "Who's Who Among American Women" for 1969, and was listed among "Outstanding Educators for the Year" for 1975.

18 STUDENTS CITED AT FINE ARTS AWARDS PROGRAM

Eighteen students were cited for outstanding achievement during the school year in the observance of the first annual Fine Arts Awards program.

The students were recognized for service, scholarship and performance in the departments of music, art, speech and theatre. Dr. David Peltier, acting dean of fine arts, presided, while the chairmen of the three departments presented the awards.

In the art department, Dr. Jay D. Kain, chairman, cited Colleen Coyle, a senior from Butler, Pa., as the outstanding senior. Susan Lee, an Owego, New York junior, was recognized for service to the department. Mrs. Charlean Patterson of Middleburg Center, Pa., was cited as the art department's outstanding scholar. A senior, she graduated with highest honors, a 3.96 cumulative average out of a possible 4.00.

Dr. James Keene, head of the Mansfield department of music, recognized the achievements of music students. Rhonda Leathers, a senior from Knoxville, Pa., was named that department's Student-of-the-Year. A soloist with the College's concert choir, Miss Leathers also received the Sigma Alpha Iota Award for highest scholastic honors in the department. She graduated with a cumulative of 3.67 scholastic average.

Six other students were awarded scholarships of between $100 to $200.

Dr. Jack Tillinghast, chairman of the department of speech communication and theatre, passed out Mansfield State's version of "academy awards." The College Players production of "Tobacco Road," directed by Dr. Tillinghast, was selected as one of five shows in the east to participate in the American Theatre Festival at Temple University. Roles in that show also earned many of the fine arts awards.

Fred Bennett, a Harrisburg senior, and Mary Jane Usinger, a sophomore from Media, Pa., were named Best Actor and Best Actress for their lead roles in that production. Miss Usinger was selected for competition earlier this year for the prestigious Irene Ryan Scholarship for her sterling performance in "Tobacco Road." Six other students were cited for outstanding accomplishments during the year.

Dr. Michael J. Pincus

MSC DEAN INCLUDED IN INTERNATIONAL BOOK

Dr. Michael S. Pincus, Dean of Arts and Sciences, has been included in the Fourth Edition of Men of Achievement, an international publication.

A member of the Mansfield faculty since 1972, Dr. Pincus recently, (June 21 - 27) presented a paper at the Institute of Hispanic Culture in Madrid, Spain. The Institute is closely tied to the University of Madrid, an organization devoted in Hispanic research.

Ernest Kay, editorial director for the International Biographical Center in Cambridge, England, said the publication is "the only illustrated work in existence devoted to the recognition and achievement of men of all nations." The publication was established in 1969 by the International Biographical Center in Cambridge.

STRING QUARTET PERFORMS CONCERTS

A series of concerts was performed by the Mansfield String Quartet during the month of July in Pennsylvania's Northern Tier.

The quartet performed under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts, Mansfield State College and the Laurel Arts Festival.

Members of the string quartet were Dr. James Keene, violin; Dr. Edwin Zdzinski, violin; Mrs. Mary Keene, viola; and Hampton Mallory, cellist.

The concert series included performances in the Galeton, Mansfield, Athens, and Wellsboro areas.

The works of Haydn, Beethoven, Brahms, Faure', Dvorak and Schubert were included in the string quartet's summer programs.

Mallory was a guest cellist from the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. He graduated from Harvard University in 1972 and was awarded a Fulbright Foreign Grant to study cello in Paris, France with Maurice Gendron. Dr. Keene and Dr. Zdzinski are professors of music at Mansfield State College while Mrs. Keene is founder and director of the Laurel Arts Festival in Wellsboro, Pa.

MSC PROFESSORS AWARDED GRANTS FOR SUMMER STUDY

Dr. George F. Sefler, chairman of the philosophy department and Dr. Jay Gertzman, associate professor of English were awarded National Endowment for the Humanities Grants to participate in summer seminars.

Dr. Sefler participated in a seminar at the University of California at Berkeley, while Dr. Gertzman studied at Princeton University.

Dr. Sefler studied the philosophers Martin Heidegger and Maurice Merleau-Ponty under Dr. Marjorie Grene, a professor of philosophy at the University of California at Davis.

Dr. Gertzman studied "Seventeenth Century Poetry: The Individual in a Century of Revolution" under Professor Earl Miner, a graduate professor at Princeton.

The purpose of the grants is to provide college teachers with an opportunity to work with distinguished scholars in their fields.

FINE ARTS FLOURISH

Dr. David Peltier

The fine arts are thriving at Mansfield State College as the School of Fine and Applied Arts enters its fourth year as a separate division. I have had the pleasure of serving as the Acting Dean of the School for the past two years during which time a new emphasis in communications-broadcasting has been initiated, and two new Bachelor of Arts programs in Art History and Studio Art have been developed by our faculty and await final state approval. A Music Therapy program is in the early planning stages. Enrollments have never been better within the School as close to 500 students are now associated with an art, music, or speech-communications-theatre program at Mansfield.

Physical facilities on campus for the fine arts also have undergone dramatic changes recently. New television facilities are being developed in North Hall this year, and modern acting-theatre facilities will soon be completed in Allen Hall. The Art Gallery was established in one wing of Alumni Hall this past year to accommodate a constantly changing art show open to the public, and all painting classes have been moved to more comfortable and scenic surroundings in what was formerly known as the Hut.

In addition to fine art events discussed in other sections of the Mansfieldian no week passes during a semester that does not include a faculty or student concert, an art show, a speech and debate tournament, or a theatrical performance. Some of these activities have helped Mansfield to become recognized as the fine arts-cultural center of the region. I cordially invite your participation in these events and will attempt to keep you informed of future activities.

ESQUIRE ALUMNI GROUP FORMED

Mansfield's most prestigious dance band has a new name and a new sound. It's called the "Esquire Jazz Ensemble." Many will remember the group under the name of the "Red and Black" or later as the "Esquires." Professor Tom Ryan directs the group.

Members of the concert jazz band, mindful of their heritage, are forming an Esquire Alumni Association to support and encourage performance and study of jazz. So get those instruments out of the closets and look to participate.

The group plans to incorporate a "Jazz Weekend" at MSC during the 1976-77 school year if there is enough interest. Ideas for events for this weekend include a performing alumni band, a high school jazz ensemble festival, jazz clinics, and a big name concert.

The support of all MSC alumni is needed with a special effort from those who were previously involved with the "Red and Black" or the "Esquires." The questionnaire below was designed to supply information which is necessary to establish a mailing list for all interested alumni. A $1.00 donation will assist with organizational expenses.

MANSFIELD FESTIVAL THEATER

PEANUTS RETURNS TO MSC -- Members of the 1972 cast for "Your're A Good Man Charlie Brown" are shown in a scene from that show. The first show to play in MFT's tent played again in Mansfield for the finale of the 1976 season.

The fifth season of the MFT coincided with the nation's celebration of its 200th birthday. It was fitting that two of the regularly scheduled five shows were chosen to honor the bicentennial. THE PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS, a delightful comedy about love and courtship at the time of the American Revolution, and America's prize winning musical 1776, both funded by a bicentennial grant administered through the Mansfield Foundation, led off the summer festivities. Audiences were enthusiastic and the summer program got off to its best start ever. Season ticket sales, thanks to the superb effort of Mrs. Sarah Peltier, doubled over the previous season. Sarah, our tireless promotions director, was continuously on the road carrying the message of the Festival Theatre to every community within a fifty mile radius and, sometimes, beyond.

The third show was Neil Simon's funniest play, THE ODD COUPLE. This is the play that inspired the long-running TV series of the same name starring Tony Randall. Although we were not able to get Mr. Randall to duplicate his award winning performance at our theatre, we did, nevertheless, continue a practice started during the fourth season in engaging two highly talented professional actors with much TV credit to appear on our stage. Allan Montaine and Nicholas Ritt, both veterans of some of the leading daytime television serial dramas, convulsed Mansfield audiences with their antics. These actors maintained the high standards established by Patricia Bruder (Ellen Stewart on "As The World Turns") and Len Gochman (Another World and Somerset) who starred in the musical hit I DO! I DO! during the 1974 summer season.

The fourth play presented the most famous (and delightful) horror figure of all time to the Mansfield Festival Theatre stage. Who could resist the urbane and fatal charm of Transsylvania's most distinguished citizen, Count DRACULA! Shrieks, gasps, (and even a few laughs) were heard each night as the vampire stalked his prey.

The season closed with a repeat performance of the very first show to be presented at the Festival Theatre, YOU'RE A GOOD MAN, CHARLIE BROWN. When this musical was first staged at the MFT in June of 1972 the opening was delayed one week by the appearance of hurricane Agnes, a prima donna if there ever was one! As soon as Agnes left town audiences were eager for the kind of relaxed family entertainment that CHARLIE BROWN offers. So successful was this show that scores of our patrons requested its return. We fulfilled that request to standing-room-only audiences during its late August run.

So concluded the fifth and most successful season at the Mansfield Festival Theatre. Attendance was up by over one thousand persons compared with the previous season. Through the efforts of a dedicated staff, talented actors, key college agencies, the Northern Tier of Pennsylvania was, once again, provided with quality family summer entertainment through the auspices of the college.

DEDICATION OF ATHLETIC FIELDS

Four athletic fields were dedicated during Alumni Weekend in honor of four of the College's outstanding citizens.

The honorees, who are all deceased, rendered distinguished service to the College and achieved national recognition in their respective fields. Representing the honorees were members of their immediate families.

Dr. Lawrence Park, the College's president, dedicated the John F. Myers Band Field, Edward C. Russell Football Field, Lavere J. Spaulding Soccer and Hockey Field and the Joseph Shaute Baseball Field.

Myers came to Mansfield to teach music at the College in 1924, and was band director for fourteen years. During his tenure he also directed the annual band festival, bringing a number of name bands and personalities to the campus for guest performances.

Russell took over as head coach for the football team the same year Myers joined the Mansfield Staff. In eight seasons, teams under his guidance compiled a record of 24 wins, 22 losses and 5 ties. During his school days Russell was an outstanding player for Mansfield, and went on to an outstanding career at the University of Pennsylvania where he clashed against the legendary Jim Thorpe of Carlisle. Later with the Canton Bulldogs professional team, Russell and Thorpe played together as the team captured the pro football championship in 1916.

Spaulding, a native of Tioga, Pa., gained an interest in soccer while attending Girard College in Philadelphia. At Mansfield, Spaulding continued his interest in the sport. When James Swartwood, who organized the team at Mansfield, left school, Spaulding carried on as player-coach of the soccer team. He played for several years before graduating in 1931.

Shaute who played professional baseball for 13 years, attended Mansfield State Normal School for two and one half years beginning in the fall of 1919. He was a star athlete on the football, baseball and basketball teams while enrolled at Mansfield. Following his baseball career with the Cleveland Indians, Brooklyn Dodgers, Cincinnati Reds, and a Scranton baseball club, Shaute retired from baseball and entered politics, serving as Lackawanna County sheriff and treasurer.

A MOUNTIE ATHLETIC CLUB, . . . WHY?

The last edition of the Mansfieldian contained an announcement of the formation of the MOUNTIE ATHLETIC CLUB. The club is now a reality with a membership of nearly 100 and a continuing recruitment effort.

The club has completed two projects. On May 2nd, club members and their families hosted our Championship Baseball Team at a picnic at the Water Tower Picnic Grounds. A great variety of picnic foods were provided by Mountie Clubbers and the baseball players provided the appetites. In addition, the club purchased individual trophies for each team member.

A second project was the sponsorship of the first Alumni Golf Tournament. The tourney was held at Corey Creek Golf Club on June 25, and over 50 golfers participated. To cap the day, a picnic dinner was served to over 200 Alumni and friends of the college.

Perhaps a review of these projects would help us to understand the need for a Mountie Club. Successful athletes and athletic programs require various kinds of support. Enthusiasm among the fans, people who take a special interest in the players, groups who offer to help a coach with player recruitment, crowds at games, are some examples of the kind of support a Mountie Club can offer.

Another kind of support is financial. Athletics at Mansfield are funded by two sources. The college budget supports the coaches, and the physical facilities. The students via the Activities Fee, provide money for equipment, transportation, officials, and meals. Both sources are being strained. Inflation is a factor. The need to expand our Women's Intercollegiate Program is another factor. In essence, the cost of our athletic program are increasing at a rapid pace.

The Mountie Club hopes to supplement the financial support of the college and the students. Membership in the club requires two contributions. The first is designated at $10.00. This payment will be utilized in a number of ways. Awards to members of teams, events such as tournaments, group gatherings, before or after games, perhaps an Athletic Banquet, are examples of how the Board of Directors of the Mountie Club may choose to allocate the $10.00 payment. A second contribution, in the amount of your choice to the Mansfield Foundation may be designated for a specific sport or for athletics in general. From the funds placed in the Foundation, we hope to assist the athletic program in a variety of ways. The purchase of equipment, recruitment aids, coaching aids, and extraordinary transportation expenses are examples.

Athletics are an integral part of the educational program at MSC. Please support our teams by writing two checks --one for $10.00 to the MOUNTIE ATHLETIC CLUB, and the second in the amount of your choice, to the Mansfield Foundation, Inc.

Thank you.

ALUMNI WEEKEND

If you missed Alumni Weekend June 25-27, you missed a great time.

The Mountie Athletic Club tee'd off with an Alumni Golf Tournament and picnic at Corey Creek County Club. More than 200 people attended the picnic while Gary Sutton '73 and Jean Kodish, wife of Ray Kodish '49, captured top prizes for the day.

A new constitution was approved by the Alumni Association at the general business meeting on Saturday. Thomas Wierbowski '68 presented the Alumni Citation Award to Dr. Richard M. Wilson '35 (see page 1), and the class of 1926 had the most alumni in attendance.

Following the luncheon in Manser's main dining room, a band practice field, a football practice field, a baseball field and a soccer/hockey field were dedicated (see page 10).

Class reunions were held that afternoon and MSC President, Dr. Lawrence Park, had a Tea for alumni at his home.

Saturday evening there was a party for the alumni, sponsored by the classes of 1953-58. Nearly 250 people gathered at Corey Creek for the event. Mountie Band Director Richard Talbot and several alumni provided the music.

At one point in the party DR. Robert Swinsick and Dr. Vincent Smichowski auctioned off each other's necktie to raise funds for the Alumni Association.

Other activities on the fun-filled weekend included swimming at Decker Gymnasium, tennis on the varsity courts, and "Pursuit of Happiness" at Mansfield Festival Theatre. Sky shows were also given at the George B. Strait Planetarium in Grant Science Center.

Next year is going to be similar, but you don't have to wait that long. (See page 3 for Homecoming details.)

SPORTS

'76 FOOTBALL OUTLOOK

"To write about the coming football season," said Rod Kelchner, a former assistant football coach at Mansfield State and currently Dean of Students, "is to cope with usual dilemma of sports journalism. You can consider a schedule dotted with new opponents, the replacement of key personnel lost via graduation, the relative strength of other conference foes . . . but the unpredictable nature of college athletics will get you every time."

Last year's Mountie squad posted a 5-4 record, the best since 1969. The team led its conference in rushing yardage and was second in total defense. Halfback Mike Kemp (Reading) tied for conference rushing and scoring honors.

But Mansfield lost heavily through graduation and Coach Bernie Sabol will need time to rebuild. Gone is two time All-Conference lineman Dave Fisher, All-Conference and Dave Snitger and much of the offensive line. Another All-Conference selection, defensive end Bob Widhson, and standout defensive back Charlie Fox have played their last game for the Red and Black.

On the other hand, Coach Sabol has the nucleus of a fine team returning. The offensive backfield will feature the running of Kemp and fullback Bruce Musselman (Waxall). Fran Tagalang is listed as the starting quarterback but there is a possibility that Keith Shanebrook (Littlestown), a running back in '75, may be converted to the signal-calling slot. Ron Allen (Harrisburg), Jim Jackson (Easton), and Neil Evans (Scranton) will be competing for places in the starting unit.

The offensive line shows some strength at the tackles and ends, but the interior lacks experienced people. Bryon Walters (Camp Hill), and Joe Saad (New Castle) are capable tackles, while Jeff Johnston (Erie) can handle an offensive end spot. Rick Carty (Easton), a line backer in '75 will be converted to one of the terminals. At the outset, Vince McMonigle (Hazelton) and Tom Letcavage (Shamokin) hold the edge at the guards, and Dave McIlwee (Scranton) is the center.

The defensive unit can produce experienced performers in ten places. John Evans (Philadelphia), George Lazar (Hazelton) and Steve Botchie (Steelton) will anchor the front four. Line backing responsibilities will be distributed among Bill Forsythe (Shamokin), Rian Hileman (Brogue), Brad Hunsicker (Easton), Mike Silecchia (Horseheads), and Mark Miller (Roseto).

According to Kelchner, strong defensive secondary is a prerequisite in college football. The Mounties have several skilled performers in All-Conference Ed Jenkins (Chinchilla), Earl Bundy (Red Lion), Dave Frisk (Lake Ariel), and Ed Rebstock (Chalfont) in developing a strong effort to stymie the opposition's offensive attack.

Coming back from injuries will be Mike Price (Coraopolis), a speedy offensive halfback who is expected to make the transition to defensive back this season, and All-Conference back Tom Shank (Middletown). Shank led the conference in pass interceptions two years ago and was well on his way last season before being sidelined with injuries.

Looking at the gridiron picture, Kelchner raises some key questions. Will the sophomores develop quickly? Can the passing game improve sufficiently to balance the team's running attack? Who, of the freshmen recruits, can win a starting berth? Is this a rebuilding year or can the Mounties put together another winning season?

"In late August," Kelchner concludes, "about 100 young men will report to the campus for pre-season practice. They hold the answers."

FISHER EXTENDS TRADITION

One reason the Mansfield State baseball Mounties extended their season into Mideast Regional Division III play is a 145 lb. shortstop named Glenn Fisher.

But good shortstops are nothing new to good baseball at Mansfield. In fact they have become a tradition.

Since taking over the head-coaching job for the Mounties in 1966, every one of John Heaps' shortstops have been scooped up by the major league teams. Two are still playing professional baseball. When the new coach took over for Bill Gibson in '66, the first thing he went looking for was infield strength.

He found a young man in Milton, Pa. named Mike Derr who covered the infield for Milton High like a blanket. Derr played for Heaps from '66 until he graduated in 1969, at which time he was drafted by the Chicago Cubs and played minor league ball for three years.

After Derr, Heaps brought home Ted Cassell, who Heaps says was the finest amateur player he has ever seen.

"He was an outstanding defensive player," Heaps said. "Tom played third during Derr's senior year and then moved into the shortstop position when Derr graduated. Cassell wasn't that strong a hitter . . . but boy, could he play the field." Cassell went to the Boston Red Sox upon graduation where he was tagged as Louis Apricio's replacement. Boston also signed a kid in '71 named Rick Burleson, who now covers the turf for the Sox at Fenway Park, and according to Heaps, is the reason Cassell is still playing in the minor leagues.

After Cassell came Tom Brookens, an infielder from Fayetteville, Pa., who last year was taken by Detroit in the first-round of the major league draft. Tom Brookens also had a twin brother, Tim, a Mountie centerfielder who was also claimed in last year's first round draft by the Texas Rangers.

"Tom Brookens accepted a sizable bonus," coach Heaps said. "He came as a second baseman but we converted him to shortstop. Tom is now the starting shortstop for Montgomery in double A ball."

Then came Glenn Fisher, like Derr, from Milton, and like Derr, Cassell and Brookens, a Mountie shortstop destined to play professional baseball-somewhere.

Heaps says Fisher, who also came to Mansfield expecting to play at an infield position other than short, turned this year's ball club around when he was switched to the deep-spot at the beginning of the season.

Heaps didn't hesitate to make comparisons between Fisher and the Mountie shortstops that preceded him.

"Cassell and Brookens were rippers," Heaps said, "they ripped at everything they hit. They hit with terrific power. But Fisher is different . . . he's a smart hitter, a ballplayer's ballplayer. He'll hit the ball where it's pitched.

"Cassell and Brookens might have been a step faster than Glenn, but they swung big. Fisher is a short swinger; he gets out of the batters box much faster and tends to get more infield hits.

But, admits Heaps, there's more to the Fisher story; something that doesn't show up in the box scores, that can't be seen in the batting average.

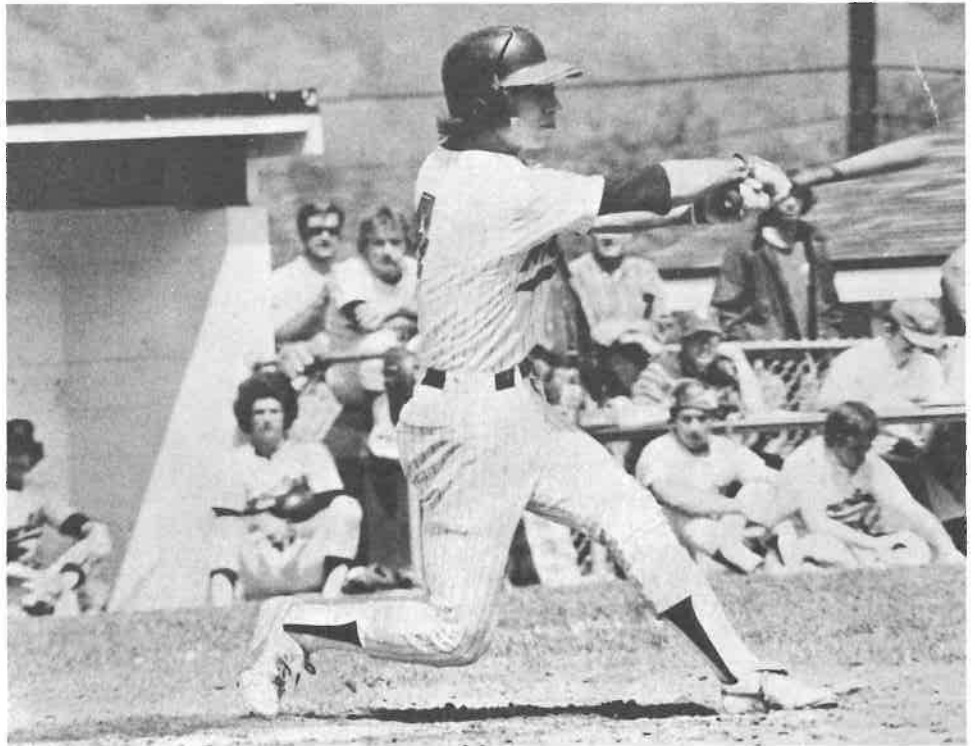

"Fisher's greatest advantage," Heaps said, "is his attitude. He has that over all of the infielders I've coached. Glenn is a total team player, he's a leader on and off the field. And that wins ball games."

It also draws major league scouts.

During the Division III tournament held here, major league scouts from nearly all of the 26 teams were present. Many came to see Glenn Fisher. One scout in particular, Jocko Collins, has been following Fisher for the past two years. Collins wants Fisher in the Mets' farm system next year.

According to Heaps, Collins talked to Fisher at the East Stroudsburg game last year and it made a great difference in his performance from then on.

There's no question in my mind that Fisher will be signed, he's just an excellent team player."

LEON HASKINS NAMED ALL-AMERICAN

Leon Haskins, an outstanding athlete in basketball as well as track, earned All-American distinction for the second straight year in track as he captured fifth place in the triple jump at the NCAA Division III Track and Field Championships held in May at the University of Chicago.

The Lynchburg, Va. senior's jump was slightly shorter than the 48'9" leap of a year ago, but he improved his overall standing by moving from sixth to fifth place.

A popular student at Mansfield, Haskins received a standing ovation as he received his commission as a Marine Lieutenant during commencement exercises. Haskins will begin his military career with the U. S. Marines at Quantico, Va.

MOUNTIE BASEBALL SQUAD IS MIDEAST RUNNER-UP

An up-and-down tournament, that at times looked reminiscent of "Home Run Derby," saw the host Mounties win two games then drop into a tough losers' bracket and come back to force a final game. Mansfield finished as runner-up in the NCAA Division III Mideast Regional behind Wilkes College of Wilkes-Barre.

Clutch-hitting catcher Ken Suchoski and left-hander pitcher Andy Kresky of Wilkes and Mansfield's classy shortstop Glenn Fisher and catcher Scott Smith were all named as co-MVP's of the tournament when the Most Valuable Player balloting ended in a four-way tie.

Smith was elected to the All-Tournament first teams as designated hitter and the Mounties placed four others on the second team. Included were first baseman Cy Falatko, second baseman Joe Nicosia, outfielder Mike Donnelly, and right-handed pitcher Mike Tancredi.

Others participating in the tournament were Ohio Northern University, Marietta (Ohio) College, Ashland (Ohio) College, Widener College. The Mounties topped Ohio Northern and Marietta before bowing to Wilkes 7-6. Coach John Heaps' team came back to defeat Ohio Northern, Ashland and Wilkes (7-6) to force the championship game. Wilkes, however, blasted Mansfield 11-0 in the final contest.

Earlier, the Mounties clinched the Eastern Division crown and went on to take the Pennsylvania Conference title by dropping Lock Haven State, 4-1 and 4-3.

The Mansfield State nine also grabbed an Eastern College Athletic Conference tournament title at Elizabethtown over Lock Haven, Muhlenburg, California (Pa.) State, Scranton University and Susquehanna University.

Mansfield finished the season with an impressive 27 and 12 record.

FIRST CAGE RECRUIT

Ken Johns, a 6-1 guard from Brownville Area High School, has become the first prep basketball player to indicate his intentions to enroll at Mansfield this fall.

Johns, who played both the forward and guard positions for Brownville Area High School, led his team in scoring this year with 474 points for a 21.5 average per game. He was a unanimous selection to the Section Four, WPIAL all-league team and the most valuable player of the section.

A Pittsburgh Press first-team prep selection, Johns, in a three-year career, scored a total of 1,079 points. Reputed as a real "pure shooter," Johns is being looked upon to provide some outside offensive punch for the Mountie attack this season.

VOLLEYBALL BEGINS SECOND YEAR

Women's Volleyball, Mansfield State's newest sport, begins its second season this fall with six returning letterwomen and six freshman recruits.

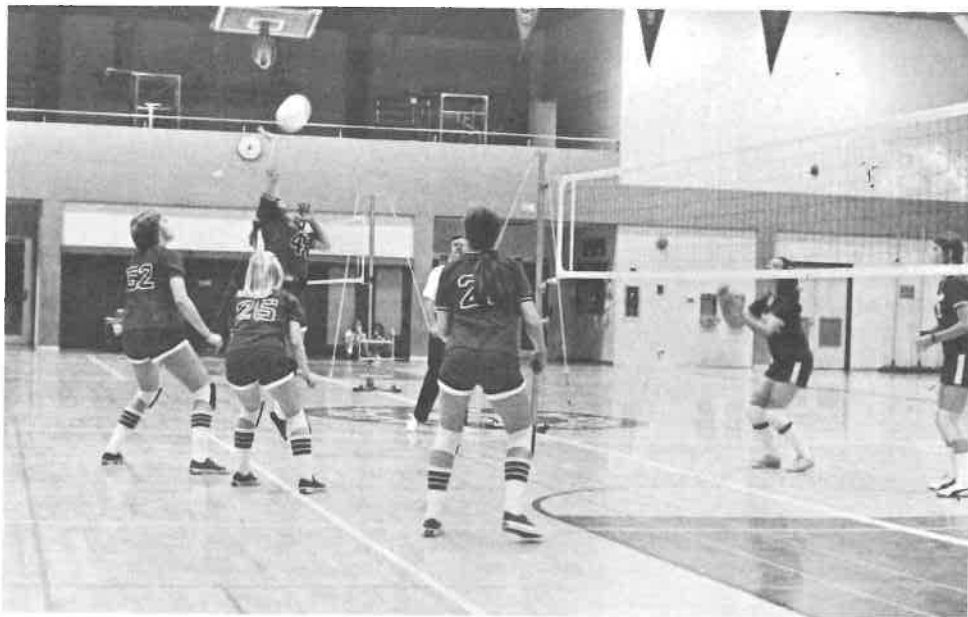

Playing a short season in their first outing, the Lady Mountaineers spiked their opponents for 8 wins while suffering only three defeats.

"Fortunately our first season's experience," said Coach Hugh Schintzius, "was a winning one and the confidence that comes with winning has set a strong positive tone as we approach our second season."

Except for senior Mary Pat Bailey (Mechanicsburg), Coach Schintzius has five sophomore starters returning, Lisa Messing (Millerton), Jean Nochtwey (Blue Bell), Kathy Kelleher (Clarks Summit), Heather Coates (Williamsport) and Terri Renko (Coudersport) all earned starting roles in their freshman year.

With all of his starters back this year, along with several promising recruits. Coach Schintzius feels that the team will have depth at all positions this year.

The Lady Mountaineers face an expanded schedule of nearly 30 matches this season against such formidable opponents as Ithaca College, SUNY Binghamton, St. Bonaventure University, Moravian College, Elmira College, Bucknell University, Lehigh University and Cornell University -- among others.

TOURS

GERMAN STUDY TOUR SPONSORED BY FOREIGN LANGUAGE DEPARTMENT

Sixteen students, including alumni and friends of the College, participated in a study tour of central West Germany and Berlin this year.

Under the sponsorship of the Foreign Language Department, the tour went via Paris to significant areas such as Frankfurt, Weisbaden, Bonn, Cologne, Heidelberg, Offenbach, Bielefeld-Sennestadt, Hannover and Berlin. William Bogart, chairman of the department, headed the tour group.

Contact was made with the educational system of West Germany by direct visitation of schools in session. The group also received an educational "plus" by attending a session of a Burschenschaft--a traditional German fraternity--at the University of Mainz. Among other things, the group visited the Gutenberg printing museum, the gothic cathedral at Cologne, a European Common Market modern farm, and visited the Axel Springer Verlag in Berlin, the printing house of some of the most widely circulated newspapers and periodicals in Germany. Here they talked to the editor in chief and were given a complete tour of the facilities, right down to its platform 150 cm from the Berlin wall, with a view of the other side--East Berlin.

Dr. H. C. Heyle, Director of People-to-People Germany answers questions for MSC study tour.

Approximately two thirds of the time, housing for the group was provided by private citizens of Germany under the auspices of People-to-People Deutschland or by the Jugendkammerorchester of Bielefeld-Sennestadt. Living with families and adapting to their styles provided international cultural and political understanding.

A highlight in the understanding of practical differences in political ideologies was provided by crossing the border by train into and out of the German Democratic Republic (East Germany) and observing the thorough inspection of the train, the border with its barbed -- wire, mines, fences, border police and guard houses. Suddenly the 200th anniversary of America took on new meaning.

The three week study tour, which was available with or without credit, yielded so many valuable impressions and such a degree of cultural understanding from living with Germans in their homes, that it has promise of a repeat in the future. If anyone desires a copy of a report on the tour or wishes to ask questions regarding it, feel free to contact William F. Bogart, Department of Foreign Languages, MSC.

INTERDISCIPLINARY PROGRAM TOURS ENGLAND

A Christmas holiday in England has a good deal of appeal to most people and the prospect of gaining college credit during a two-week tour has even more appeal to most educators.

Last December a group of 28-- students, alumni and Mansfield area residents--went on the tour, taking in such sights as the British Parliament, Westminster Abbey, Stonehenge and a visit to Cambridge.

Mrs. Janice Kennedy '46, professor of Home Economics, coordinated the study tour and plans to take another group this year if enough persons are interested.

"Home Stays," where members of the tour live with local residents in the Andover and Manningtree areas of England, provide an excellent opportunity to meet people and learn about English culture. Mrs. Kennedy has been working with the Council for International Contact (CIC) for several years and has hosted a number of British groups in similar home stays in her home town of Troy, Pa.

A highlight of the tour last year came when Dr. Mary M. Brace '40 presented a citation to Lance Barrett, mayor of Andover, Hampshire, England. The citation came from Dr. Brace's son, J. Michael '66, Mike Brace, also first vice president of the College General Alumni Association, is mayor of Andover, N.Y.

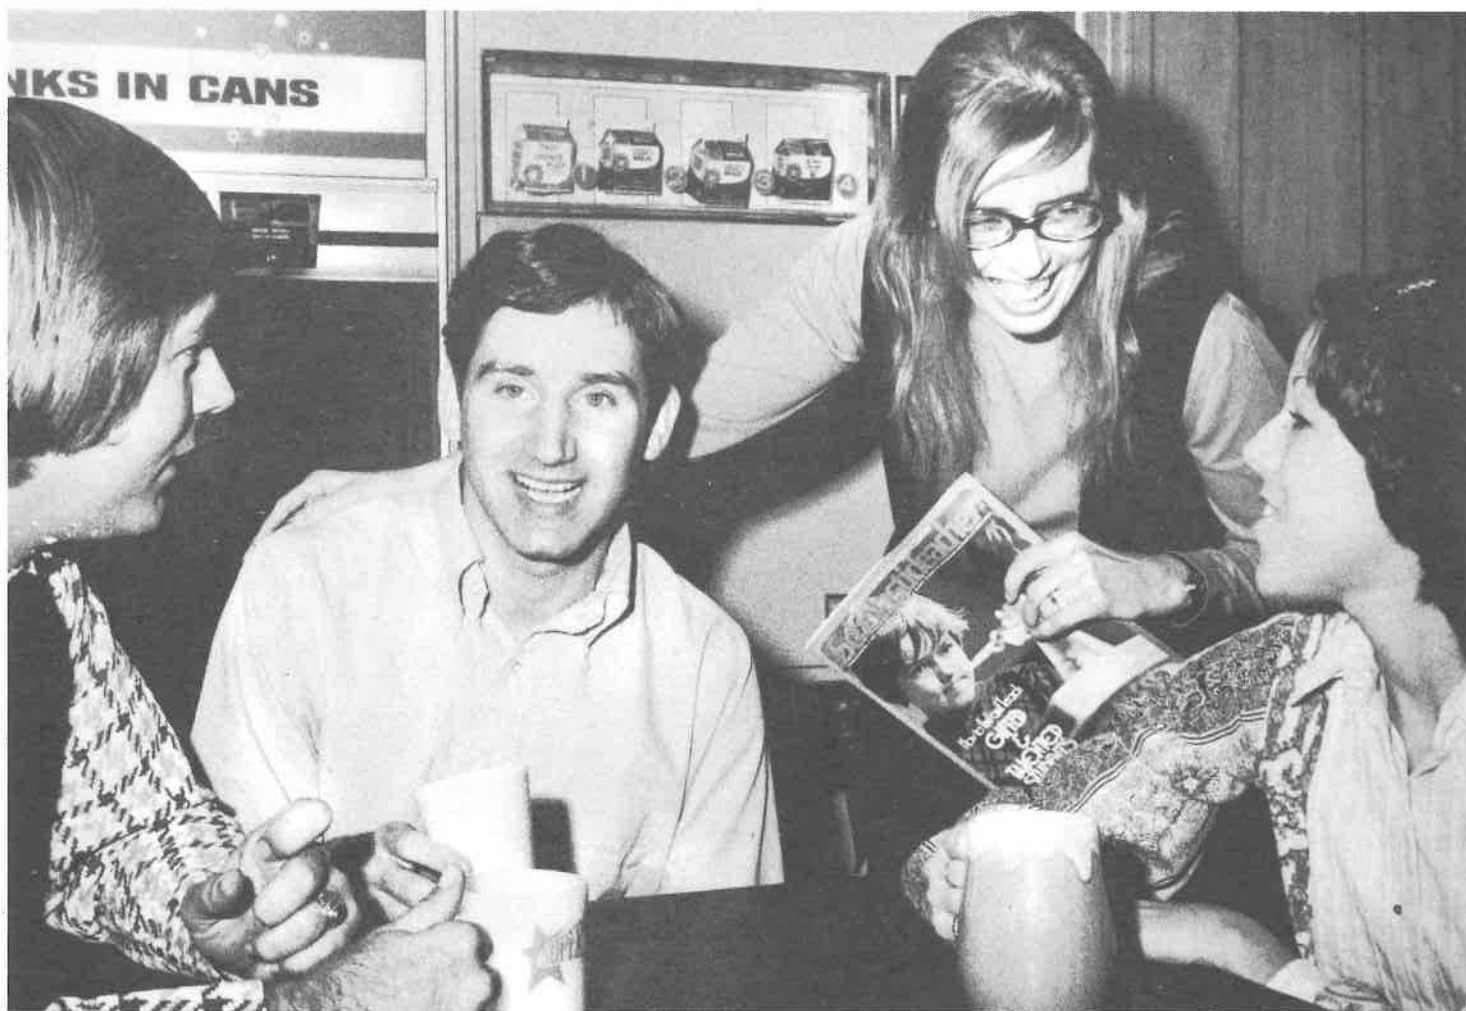

Although the Home Economics Department sponsors the course, the study tour is interdisciplinary. While home economics members of the tour may study makers of fine fabric and pewter, persons with an art or history background, for example, would study aspects of English culture appropriate to their field.

Anyone interested in participating in the course should contact Mrs. Kennedy at the Home Economics Department.

FROM ANDOVER TO ANDOVER -- Dr. Mary M. Brace '40 presented a citation and gifts from the mayor of Andover, N. Y. to the mayor of Andover, Hampshire, England. Dr. Brace's son, J. Michael, sent the citation to Lance Barrett. The presentation was made last January at the Bere Hill Hotel in Andover, England.

Ned Rosman (center)

THE BLIND TEACHER: COPING IN THE CLASSROOM

The students were quiet as the new Social Studies teacher spoke.

Ned Rosman, his back to the class, was hanging a world map with the help of one of his students. Another in the small class tiptoed to the door and gave it a firm knock-knock-knock before retreating to his seat.

Rosman spun, walked to the door and opened it. No one was there.

It could have been a typical first-day stunt played on any teacher in any school. There was one difference: This teacher was blind.

Rosman, a victim of rubella, lost all sight as a seventh grader in his native Lancaster, Pa. He was about the same age as the youngsters described above.

A 1970 graduate of Mansfield State, Ned Rosman taught at Platts Academy in Winter Park, Florida for only one year before the private school closed.

Students began to adjust to a blind teacher, and as they did the teacher began to cope. For most students, it was as if Ned Rosman had always been there—or at least meant to be. Both students and faculty felt that way, perhaps because their association with him put them that much closer to the outside world—the world that is real, a world not sandwiched between the covers of a textbook.

Aside from knowing he has blue eyes and brown hair, Rosman thinks of himself as being tall and skinny, much the way he actually was, compared to his fellow junior high students, when he last saw himself.

"I've always thought of myself as tall," he says.

His former schoolmates have grown, and Rosman, by today's standards, is considered short, or at least slight.

Then again, a man's stature is really a measure of how others see him. Although Rosman is much taller than the junior high students he used to teach, everyone whose life he has touched sees him as a very tall man.

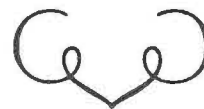

Rosman taught at Winter Park in the 1973-74 school year. For the next two years he worked with the Red Cross in Orlando, Florida as a caseworker with servicemen, veterans, and their families.

Currently unemployed, Ned Rosman is back in Lancaster and is living with his mother at 209 Valleybrook Drive. He hopes to get a job as either a caseworker or guidance counselor with the state Civil Service, in the Lancaster or Harrisburg area.

THE COVER

Mansfield has recently formed an Archives to house those items of memorabilia so necessary in preserving the history of the institution. The cover photo displays a sampling of items from this collection. For more information see page 3.

ON BECOMING INVOLVED

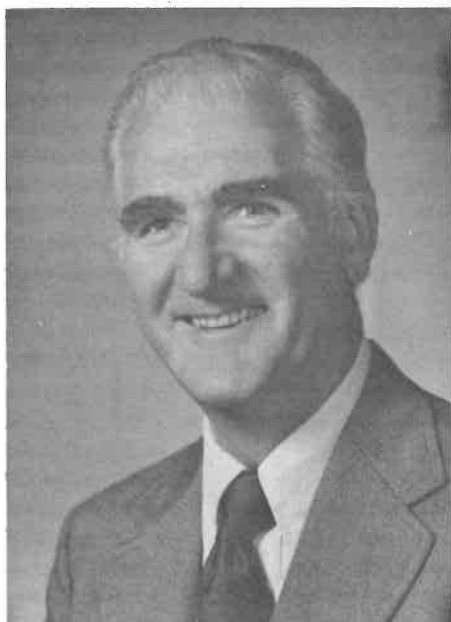

Involvement today seems to be a dirty word, one from which people want to shy away. Why that is, I'll never know; but when I assumed the position of Director of Development in February of this year, I set a goal of attempting to increase involvement through improved programs and services the Alumni receive from this College. In attempting to reach this goal the first thing I did was to move the publication of the Mansfieldian to four times a year. This is the third edition for 1976 and will conclude this year's volume. The next edition will be coming your way in February of 1977. As was pointed out in the two previous editions we are trying a new format attempting to improve on this publication. Your suggestions have been most beneficial in our attempts to achieve this goal. Two other areas of improvement have been Homecoming and Alumni Days. Hopefully this was reflected in the kinds of programs the Alumni Association ran during those times. For those of you who returned for Alumni Day you had the opportunity to participate in a golf tournament, a picnic that evening, various class reunions, and an Alumni luncheon topped off with a dance and party that Saturday evening. For Homecoming the format was much the same; the weekend concluding with a party and dance that Saturday evening. It was a pleasure to see so many of our Alumni return for one of these two days. I believe those who came had an enjoyable time, and I believe they will be very helpful in encouraging other Alumni to return next year. But what about those Alumni who did not come back for either day? If each alumnus would make the effort to invite other alumni to return for either Homecoming or Alumni Day, it would go a long way towards strengthening the total Alumni Relations Program.

Several times this year you have received from this office requests asking your support for the 1976 Annual Fund Drive. The year is rapidly drawing to a close and I would like to encourage you to consider giving if you have not already done so. I have said repeatedly, it is not the amount of the gift that counts, but giving itself. I recognize annual giving is a rather new concept here at Mansfield, and it will take time to develop, but we must start somewhere and that somewhere begins when one makes the decision to become involved.

Giving is but one form of involvement. Returning to visit friends on Homecoming or Alumni Day is another. Watching the College and its programs grow with our students developing into the leaders of tomorrow is but one of the pleasures for anyone that is involved in higher education. Alumni have a responsibility also, to insure that the missions and programs of the college today are in line with the philosophy and direction from which the college developed. When I assumed this position in February, I stated we would be attempting to bring more things your way. In return I ask for your support. If each of you would make that effort, we could have one of the most active and successful alumni programs anywhere.

DR. LAWRENCE PARK TO CHAIR PRESIDENT'S COMMISSION

The chairmanship of the Commission of Presidents of the fourteen state-owned colleges and university has been placed on the mantel of the president of Mansfield State College.

Dr. Lawrence Park was elected as chairman of the Commission, succeeding Dr. William H. Duncan, president of Millersville State College. He will serve for a two-year term, representing the state colleges and university on a committee of the Pennsylvania Association of Colleges and Universities (PACU) and as a liaison for the state colleges in communicating the needs of these institutions before state legislative groups.

Dr. Park, who returned to the College earlier this summer following a six-month sabbatical leave, has been president of Mansfield since 1968. During his sabbatical Dr. Park worked under the auspices of the Carnegie Foundation, studying the effects of collective bargaining on college administration. He traveled extensively about the country on behalf of the American Association of University Administrators (AAUA), promoting the organization of which he is a director and a regional membership chairman.

President Park brings to the chairmanship of the commission of Presidents a broad background in administrative experience as the head of the Mansfield campus for eight years. A native of Newburgh, New York, he taught for seven years at Pennsylvania State University. He was dean of the college and later vice-president for academic affairs at the State University of New York at Geneseo.

An active member of numerous professional and civic organizations, Dr. Park also assumed the chairmanship of the State Long Range Planning Commission this year. In addition, he serves on the State Board of Education's ad hoc committee for establishing a master plan for all of higher education.

DISTINGUISHED FACULTY AWARDS PRESENTED

Two Mansfield State College professors were among the final selections recognized and rewarded for faculty excellence in teaching in the state college system by the Pennsylvania Department of Education.

Dr. Thomas F. Stich, a professor of special education, and Dr. John K. Tillinghast, professor and chairman of the department of speech communication and theatre at the Mansfield institution, were among the winners in the statewide competition selected by a panel of distinguished Pennsylvanians.

Dr. Thomas F. Stich

The announcement of the statewide winners was made in Harrisburg by Dr. John C. Pittenger, secretary of education, who chaired the seven-member commission for selecting the Distinguished Faculty Awards' winners.

Dr. Stich, who is currently on sabbatical leave at Mansfield State, was among the ten college professors in the Pennsylvania State College System designated to receive a Commonwealth Distinguished Teaching Chair for the 1976-77 academic year. He will receive an additional stipend of $3,500. Earlier, as a result on being selected locally for teaching excellence to compete in the statewide competition as a Commonwealth Teaching Fellow, Dr. Stich was awarded $2,500.

Dr. Tillinghast, a member of the Mansfield faculty since 1970, was selected in the statewide competition from among some 29 persons or teams competing for the Distinguished Academic Service Awards. As a result of being cited for "exceptional academic service," the Mansfield drama professor will receive a cash prize of $6,000.

Tillinghast, who directed the College Players' highly successful production of "Tobacco Road" into the northeastern regional competition of the American College Theatre Festival last year, was competing as a state finalist for the second time. He was finalist in the Faculty Awards competition last year, the first year of the annual awards, also.

Stich joined the Mansfield State faculty in 1969. His selection as a Distinguished Commonwealth Teaching Fellow is the second such award for the Mansfield campus. In last year's competition, Dr. Stanley Harrison, a professor of English, was designated as a distinguished Commonwealth Teaching Chair.

DR. JAMES STACY COLES NAMED TO MANSFIELD FOUNDATION BOARD

Dr. James Stacy Coles, president of the New York City-based Research Corporation, has been named to the Board of Directors of the Mansfield Foundation, Inc. at Mansfield State College.

Dr. Coles, a native of Mansfield and 1934 graduate of Mansfield State, became an official member of the Foundation Board Saturday (Oct. 9), announced J. Paul McMillen, executive director of the Foundation, when the Board met during Homecoming Weekend.

McMillen, who is also director of development at the College, said "Dr. Coles brings to Mansfield an awareness and knowledge of the total scientific community."

McMillen added that the Coles family has long been supportive of the College. Dr. Coles father, Edwin, was president of the General Alumni Association for a number of years while his brother, Percy, also graduated from the College and was active in the Alumni Association. The latter Mr. Coles was owner of Coles Pharmacy in Mansfield, still operated under that name.

Research Corporation, McMillen pointed out, is a multi-million dollar foundation which supports research in the natural sciences through grants to colleges, universities and scientific institutions. Dr. Coles has been president of that corporation since 1968. He has served as a director of the corporation since 1958 and is a director of Research-Cottrell, Inc. -- the parent organization of Research Corporation.

Dr. Coles earned A.B., A.M. and Ph.D. degrees from Columbia University after graduating from Mansfield. He was instructor of chemistry at the College of the City of New York, and at Middlebury College in Vermont. From 1943-46 Dr. Coles was research supervisor of the Underwater Explosives Research Laboratory at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Massachusetts.

At Brown University in Providence, R. I., Dr. Coles was professor of chemistry from 1946-52 and was Acting Dean of the College during his last year at that institution. He left to become President of Bowdoin College, a small exclusive school in Brunswick, Maine, where he served for fifteen years.

A former director of the American Council on Education, Dr. Coles was also chairman of the Advisory Commission for the Higher Education Study of the State of Maine. He was a National Science Foundation delegate to the Indo-American Conference on Chemical Education in India in 1969.

Currently Dr. Coles is director of Chemical Fund, Inc., one of the largest mutual funds in the United States. He is a director of Pennwalt Corporation and Edo Corporation as well as trustee-at-large and Treasurer of Independent College Funds of America. Dr. Coles serves as a trustee of the American Savings Bank and the Columbia University Press. He has been a director of The Atlantic Foundation since 1973 and a member of the Committee on International Exchange of Scholars under the National Academy of Sciences.

Honorary degrees bestowed upon Dr. Coles include the Doctor of Laws (LL.D.) from: Brown University, 1955; University of Maine, 1956; Colby College, 1959; Columbia University 1962; Middlebury College, 1962; and Bowdoin College, 1968. He also received the Doctor of Science degree from University of New Brunswick, 1958; and Merrimack College, 1964.

Dr. Coles is the recipient of the President's Certificate of Merit; the U.S. Navy Bureau of Ordnance Award; and the U.S. Army Outstanding Civilian Service Medal.

Dr. Coles resides in New York with his wife, the former Martha Louise Reed. They have three children: Ann, James, and Christopher.

The selections of two of its professors was greeted enthusiastically around the Mansfield campus. Dr. Lawrence Park, the College's president, said, "we are extremely proud of their awards. Both are very dedicated teachers who seem to capture the interest and imagination of all levels of students."

Dr. Donald C. Darnton, vice-president for academic affairs, said that both Stich and Tillinghast's relationship and rapport with students and their ability to teach were evident in a number of ways. Serving as chairman of the College's Faculty Awards Committee, which selected the two Mansfield professors to compete in the statewide competition for the awards, Dr. Darnton said, "... Again and again... in our interviews and evaluation, their insights and abilities to synthesize and capsulize their extensive knowledge kept coming across as their great gifts as teachers."

Dr. Stich received the M.Ed. and Ed.D. degrees from the Pennsylvania State University. He serves as a consultant to the Fairbanks, Alaska North Star borough school district in special education and is currently on sabbatical in that area.

Dr. Tillinghast, a founder of the Mansfield Festival Theatre, received the M.F.A. degree from Yale University and the Ph.D. degree from Indiana University. His name has been placed at the Theatre Collection of the Library of Performing Arts at Lincoln Center in the Guthrie McClintic-Katherine Cornell room for his contribution of original Broadway prompt books of McClintic-Cornell productions.

Mansfield, Pa., 187

As one reflects on the way the campus was when a letter might have been written on this stationery, some thoughts about heritage, tradition and mementos compiled over more than 100 years of history come to mind.

What happened to the original charter of Mansfield State College? Where are the minutes of the organizational meeting which detail activities leading to our present institution of higher learning? What about memorabilia from past principals and presidents of the College — the leaders who have shaped both the direction of the school's programs and the physical plant of the campus?

Questions like these are the reason that Dr. Robert Unger, professor of history, has been designated as archivist. "An in-depth history of the College needs desperately to be written," Dr. Unger declares, "but it cannot be until all of the records, books and papers are assembled in one place."

In this Bicentennial year, Mansfield has embarked on a program of rekindling an archive to house various memorabilia instrumental to the history of the College. James Simonis, director of the library, has provided four rooms to help house these items. The Mansfield Foundation, upon recommendation of the campus Bicentennial Committee, is providing some funds to help get the archives back in a respectable condition.

For so many years it was the responsibility of the Alumni Association and those alums and friends of the College to guard and preserve this material.

"The tragic story of Mansfield's mementos," Dr. Unger points out, "is that much of the material has been lost. Lack of a formal archive has let many things fall by the wayside which should have been preserved to tell the College's story. Other items were lost in the 1972 flood when hurricane Agnes struck."

But the trail of Mansfield State's history has not been completely removed from the local landscape. Although some items from the Fordyce Allen estate were lost, items such as the stationery pictured above, were saved.

Diplomas, meeting notes, pictures of past presidents, and stacks and stacks of photographs, are among the inventory of the archives currently. College quarterlies, programs, speeches, letterheads are also present as well as china, trophies, and a host of other items.

Karl Van Norman's collection of athletic memorabilia is also there. But most of the treasures are tucked away in old cardboard boxes, stored in an obscure room on campus where only a few are conscious of their presence.

Picking up the pieces of the past and rebuilding the archives of an institution with a heritage as rich as Mansfield's is no easy task. Sorting, cataloging and getting items back out on display is monumental, but the College is taking steps to do just that. Finding the "missing links" will take the help of everyone who can contribute pieces of the puzzle to their alma mater.

CEDARCREST MANOR

RESIDENCE HALL

Cedarcrest Manor Residence Hall, a $4.6 million project designed by Ehrlich and Levinson, Philadelphia architects, combines the double-occupancy rooms found in most dormitories with a suite arrangement to offer another variety of living for campus students. Compared to traditional dormitories which have long corridors with rooms on both sides, Cedarcrest is a shorter wider building. The rooms face in toward a common area with student rooms on either side of each other, but not directly across from one another. A two-wing building connected by a two-story common area, the dorm consists of six floors. Nearly 300 persons will be housed in each wing.

The new facility will house 593 students (287 men and 306 women) and will increase the on-campus housing capacity from 1,810 to 2,036. Cedarcrest replaces North Hall, the oldest campus building, which had a capacity of about 370 students. Portions of North Hall, formerly a women's dormitory, are now being used for office space.

A typical floor in the modern building will house 49 students. There are 24 double occupancy rooms, four suites, and one single occupancy room. Joseph Maresco, the College's dean of residence life, says the suites are "mini-apartments" with two bedrooms and a combination living and study area. Six persons will be assigned per suite.

In the whole building, there are forty-six of the six person suites, 151 double occupancy rooms, 11 counselors' rooms, 47 study lounges and two resident apartments. Cedarcrest, built totally of masonry construction, is heated electrically with individual controls in each room.

In other campus residence halls, the common areas (lounges and study rooms) consist of one large room per building. Floors in Cedarcrest are set up as self-contained units. There are study rooms, lounges, kitchenettes and a laundry on each floor.

"The common areas and corridors have been carpeted to reduce the noise and enhance the atmosphere, giving the dorm a warmer, more home-like feeling," Maresco added.

All classes of students will be housed in the new facility, with probably half of the residents scheduled to be freshmen. The building is also fully-equipped for handicapped individuals, with ramps leading into the building and special sinks and lavatories.

The main lounge or auxiliary area has been improved in Cedarcrest. Various programs can be run on a stage in the room and the large room can be subdivided by folding doors. Also included in the center connecting section of the building is a lobby, receiving room, mail room, vending machine-snack area, and a laundry room.

"The new facility," Dr. Robert Scott, vice-president for student affairs, said, "includes all of the finest safety features." Every floor has a hook-up for fire hoses, he pointed out; where, in case of a fire, local firemen can tie in with the main water lines inside the building or they can pump water through the lines. The elevators also have a protective device. In case of fire, they automatically return to the ground floor and remain inoperative to keep persons from possibly becoming trapped between floors.

Other features of the dorm include a suite of 14 guest rooms for all-college use, and several conference and project rooms. The building is not air-conditioned, but air-cooled with a much improved ventilation system.

ROBERT T. MAXSON – TRACK

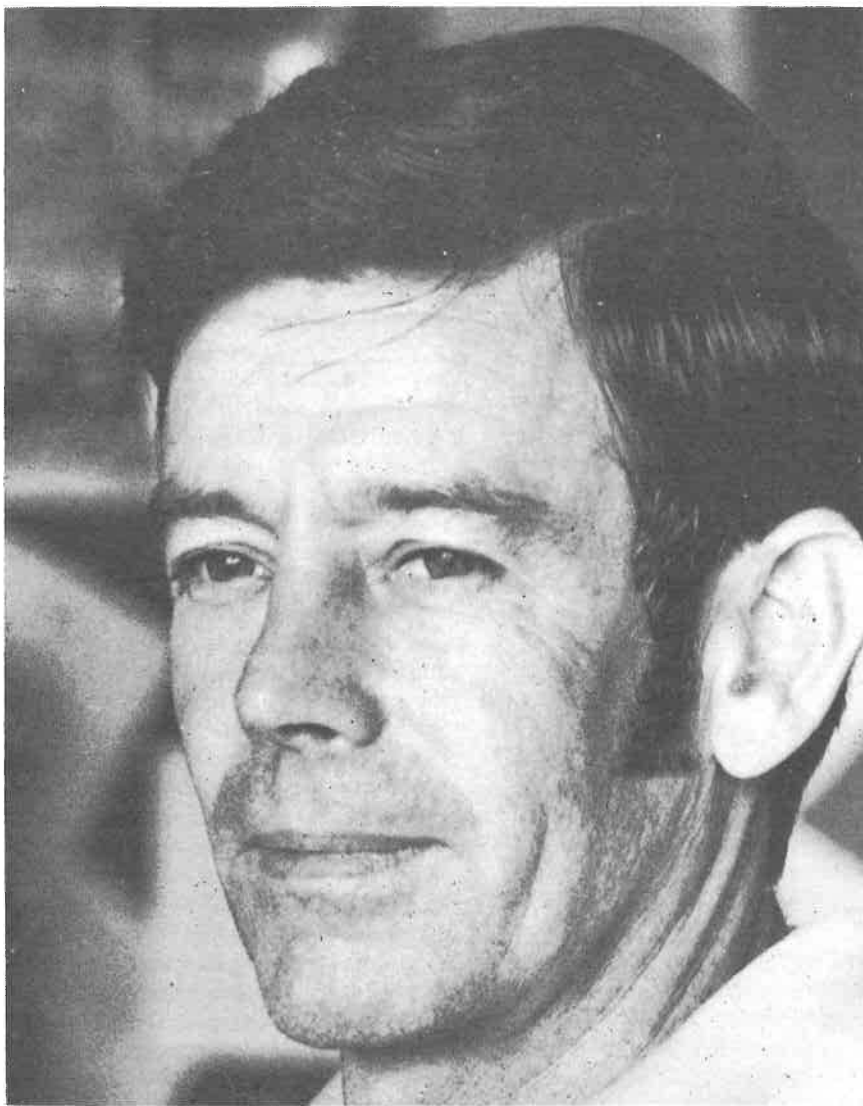

The Board of Trustees, at its April, 1976 meeting, approved the naming of the track portion of Van Norman Field in honor of the late Robert T. (Bob) Maxson.

Maxson, an associate professor of health and physical education and head track coach, was a product of Mansfield State College, graduating in 1952. A native of Shinglehouse, Pa., he was one of the school's most outstanding all-around athletes, competing intercollegiately in basketball and baseball.

Following a stint in the military service and an overseas assignment in Korea, Maxson enrolled at the George Peabody College for Teachers in Nashville, Tenn., where he earned the master's degree. For twelve years, 1955-1967, he taught and coached in the Bradford Area Schools. Maxson assumed the helm as head basketball coach at Bradford High School in 1962 and continued in that capacity for five years, until 1967, leading his team to a second place finish in District 9 for three years and winning the district championship in his final year at Bradford High, in 1967.

At the time of his death, Maxson was in his 9th year on the health and physical education faculty at Mansfield State College. For eight seasons, in addition to his teaching duties and coaching of the cross-country and track teams, he toiled as the basketball assistant to Edward Wilson, the Mounties' head basketball coach.

For the first time, just prior to his untimely passing, Maxson had the time to devote his full energies and efforts to the development of the College's cross-country and track program. The results showed immediately because, last fall, Tom DeRitis of Philadelphia had an outstanding cross-country season, finishing third in the Pennsylvania Conference and qualifying for the nationals.

Last year's crop of young talent, possibly the best at Mansfield State since track became an intercollegiate sport, was the result of Maxson's tireless recruiting efforts and his dedication to seeing Mansfield move forth as a track power on the horizon. He commented, just before the opening of last year's indoor track season, "We have an unusual group of real talented kids that should improve as we get into our outdoor season. I'm looking forward to working with these kids."

Maxson started the annual All-Corners, Twilight summer track meets at Mansfield State which provided track competition for youngsters of all ages. The meets were continued this summer under the direction of Dick Palmer and Terry Mudge, a tribute to Maxson for the tremendous success of the past meets.

"He was always there to lend a hand, offer encouragement and boost a youngster's morale," one of his associates said in talking about the influence of the former Mountie coach.

Maxson passed away in December, 1975, survived by his widow, the former Sara Mae Livingston of Frackville, Pa., and three children Kathi, a junior at East Stroudsburg State College; Carolyn, a Mansfield State freshman; and David, a junior at Mansfield High School.

THE SCHOOL OF ARTS AND SCIENCES: "TRADITIONAL" YET FORWARD-LOOKING

Dr. Michael S. Pincus

While the liberal arts have long been vital to the educational programs of the College, the development of strong Bachelor of Arts programs can be dated to the appointment of a Dean of the "Faculty of Liberal Arts and Sciences" in 1967. Dr. Charles H. Holmes, who was appointed that year, undertook the difficult task of creating a strong Faculty, new degree programs, and an atmosphere of intellectualism. The current Dean was appointed in 1972, and in the Fall of 1973 the present School of Arts and Sciences was created.

The 104 faculty members—almost half of the College's total—are organized into thirteen academic departments, offering more than twenty Bachelor's degrees, six Master's degrees, and two Associate degrees. In addition, most of the Departments share in the offering of the programs leading to teaching certification.

But there is more to the School's offerings than simply degrees. The imagination of the Faculty has led to the addition of internships, applied programs within the specializations, and consultation and service efforts to the Twin Tiers. Under the College's flexible course offerings, close to half of the faculty have offered an innovative or experimental course. And a significant number are engaged in scholarly research, published in highly prestigious professional journals; most of the research findings have a direct impact on the individual's classroom activities.

Typical of the activities that the Faculty of Arts and Sciences have undertaken are the Planetarium and the Archives Project, both of which are mentioned elsewhere in this issue. Professor Richard Mason has brought to the Twin Tiers an exciting and popular series of programs in the Strait Planetarium. Some 9,000 people visited the Planetarium during the past year.

Dr. Robert Unger, with extensive support from his colleagues in the Department of History, has given leadership to the development of the College Archives. The first activity, supported by the Library, is to collect, catalog, and prepare a limited display of materials relating to the history of the College. It is hoped that this will be the first step towards the creation of a regional Archives Project.

Another exciting development in the past five years has been the growth of internship programs, called different names: Pre-Professional Experience, Field Experience, Internship, and Practicum. Students from the Arts and Sciences Departments have had such "hands-on" experiences in non-classroom locations, such as the business offices of The Robert Packer Hospital; the Elmira Psychiatric Clinic; numerous social work, welfare, and criminal justice agencies; regional planning offices; museums; public relations offices; and governmental offices in Harrisburg. These experiences allow the students to gain experience in and knowledge about the practice of a profession that cannot be gained in a classroom setting. Not surprisingly, many internships lead directly to employment opportunities.

Three degree programs typify the diverse and exciting new directions of the School of Arts and Sciences. In association with The Robert Packer Hospital of Sayre, Mansfield offers two Associate in Science degrees: X-Ray Technology and Respiratory Therapy. Instruction in the technical aspects is offered by the faculty and staff of the Hospital, in the Hospital's facilities. Instruction in the academic subjects—Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry, English, Psychology, Sociology—is offered by Mansfield's faculty, through the Division of Continuing Education, also at the Hospital. Thus, the needs of the Allied Health Professions for upgraded instructional programs have been met, but without the high cost of construction of new facilities. The Robert Packer Hospital has generously allowed the College the use of its fine instructional facilities for the extension of MSC's Continuing Education programs.

The self-designed major, instituted in 1973, allows students to combine advanced study in more than one field without a requisite number of credits in any single field. This program, named BA:GS (Bachelor of Arts: General Studies), enrolled some 50 majors in the Fall of 1976. Their specializations have been diverse: one student is preparing to become a golf course manager by combining the study of certain aspects of botany/biology, physical education, regional planning, and, of course, accounting and management; a graduate of 1975 combined work in speech, theater, English, and education to prepare herself for a career in media and public relations. Still another example—but this, too, may well be of interest in a future issue.

In short, Mansfield State College offers a wealth of areas of study, but not all of them offer a specific major program. The BA:GS program has brought about a flexibility that is, apparently, attractive to a highly motivated individual.

The strength of any college is in its faculty, but there is a small group of 13 Arts and Sciences faculty members that deserves special mention: the Department chairmen. Individually and collectively, they give vital leadership to the programs and the School. They also bear a painful burden of paperwork, so important to the effective functioning of any College. My appreciation, then, to my colleagues.

The School of Arts and Sciences continues to meet the "traditional" goals of a liberal education, but is also extensively involved in innovations, in the development of applied programs, and in the creation of a scholarly atmosphere on campus. As Dean, I feel the excitement and stimulation daily. I can say with great satisfaction: Here is one Faculty that is not content to guard the status quo, but continues to test the frontiers of knowledge in order to bring better instruction to the students of Mansfield State College.

Dean of Arts and Sciences*

INTERNSHIPS

STUDENT INTERNS GAIN PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE

Story and Photos by Rita Trainor

"I put everything I knew into the summer day care center," said Senior Intern Karen Gogniat.

For Miss Gogniat the internship was her greatest experience at Mansfield State. "It was a practical experience. I did it on my own."

Miss Gogniat, majoring in child services in the home economics department, directed and coordinated the summer day care center under the supervision of Ms. Beverly Briggs, assistant professor in the home economics department.

She helped write the proposal to get the day care program approved by the Department of Public Welfare in Scranton, Pa. Working with summer sessions director Dr. David Peltier, she hired a staff to work under her supervision. Prior to the start of summer school, she trained her staff and ordered all materials needed for the various activities planned for the children.

Through music, art, creative play and science experiments she sought to develop social and communication skills and new intellectual concepts within each child.

Ms. Briggs observed Miss Gogniat at work in the center and met with her to evaluate her work and progress. Commenting on the value of the internship for Miss Gogniat, Ms. Briggs said, "the internship experience was very beneficial to her. It gave her insight into running the operation yet it also gave her the security of a supervised experience. It was a chance to practice being a professional."

For Miss Gogniat the experience was "a time to relate to my professors as more of an equal. I was able to go out and do on my own what I had learned in class; it was a really good experience."

To see and experience government agencies at work, Phil Brennan and Carole Holly interned in federal and state programs.

Brennan, a junior mathematics major, worked for the Bureau of Census in the Department of Commerce in Washington, D.C.

His internship was part of a federal program offering positions in federal departments and agencies. Following a two-week training program at the Bureau of Census, he worked as a statistical programmer.

Highlighting Brennan's internship was an invitation to the welcoming ceremony for West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. The ceremony was held July 17 at the White House. As part of the internship program, various federal agencies and departments were represented by interns. Brennan saw President Ford for the first time. He said it "was very impressive to see people you read about in the newspapers."

Brennan, who plans to attend graduate school following graduation, believes the experience will be beneficial when he looks for a job. "It helped a lot," he said. "I know how people work in government. I saw the set-up; I was really impressed. It gave me a taste of government work. I can decide if I want to go into that field. The experience complimented what I learned in class."

Carole Holly, a senior English major, worked for the Right-to-Read office of the Department of Education in Harrisburg, Pa., as part of the state internship program.

Miss Holly worked on the Right-to-Read general information publication and on the publication Literacy: Springboard to Living. She also did routine correspondence for her supervisor.

She attended conferences throughout the state—a reading clinic at Temple University, the International Reading Association in Philadelphia and the Federal Program Coordinator's Conference in Lancaster. She was especially pleased to attend the National Right-to-Read Conference in Washington, D.C.

Miss Holly, who plans to work in public relations or do graduate work in reading, said the internship was a "great experience." It enabled her to apply her journalism experience as well as what she had learned in her previous five semesters at M.S.C.

Internships have become a means of enhancing and expanding the curriculum on campus. This innovative concept has been adopted by many of the academic departments.

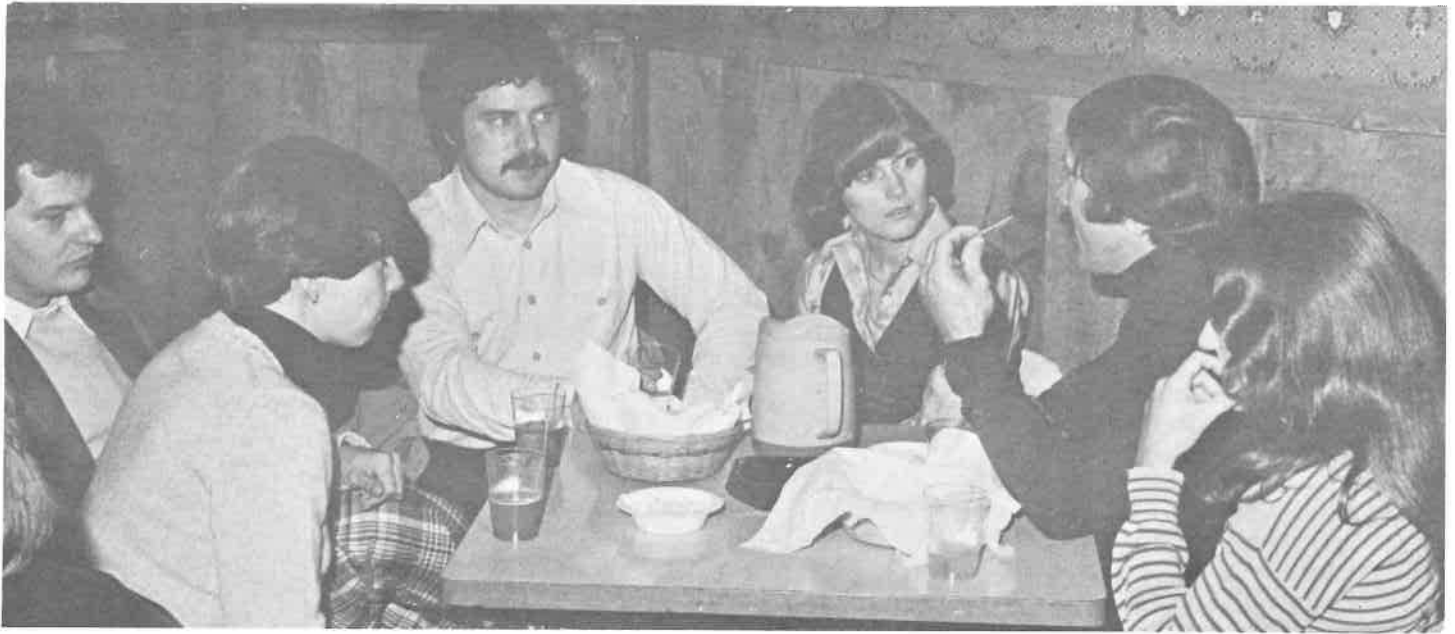

According to Mr. Frank Sheehan, a faculty member in the criminal justice department, the internship is the "meat of the criminal justice program." Student interns have resided on the site, worked shifts and weekends.

The Alcohol Rehabilitation Program at the North Penn Health Center, probation and parole departments, the Elmira Correctional Institute, state police departments—to name a few—offer students valuable working experience.

Dr. Roger Trindell, chairman of the department of geography and regional planning, said the internship program "prepares students for entry positions in the planning area."

Frequently student interns from this department are paid a stipend or are reimbursed for their expenses. Students have been placed with county and city planning agencies.

The newest internship programs are in history and mathematics. Student interns in history have worked in the Lumber Museum and the French Asylum. The internship program in the mathematics department, initiated this fall, will place students in business and industry, educational or research centers.

BEST LAID PLANS. . .

Homecoming 1976 could have been one of the most memorable events in recent years. It started out that way, and for some, it was still memorable.

The Buffalo Braves and Cleveland Cavaliers professional basketball teams kicked off (in this case, tipped off) the festivities with a return to Decker Gymnasium on Wednesday (Oct. 6). Mansfield native Tom McMillen chalked up 18 points in 23 minutes to lead the Braves in a 122-117 win over the Cavaliers.

In a repeat of their 1970 performance which christened the gymnasium complex, the two squads delighted Mansfield area fans with their stellar play.

A nearly capacity audience in Straughn Auditorium Thursday evening took advantage of the invitation to "stand up and boogie" at the Papa John Creech and David Bromberg concert. "Papa John's" blues and rock fiddle electrified the youthful audience, and the whole building vibrated happily in time to his music.

The extremely versatile Bromberg and his band added impetus to the musical vibes of Papa John. Playing everything from hard rock to rock and roll, blues and country & western music, Bromberg led one to believe that each member of the group had devoted more than his short (average 28 years) lifetime to that particular style of music.

Each number seemed unbelievably better than the one preceeding it. Richard Fegy played an incredible classical guitar solo, followed by a guitar duet with Bromberg.

As the concert neared its end, the audience, similar to followers of the big bands, was standing and dancing to the superb musicianship of Bromberg and his band.

Bands, floats and queen candidates were set for the annual Saturday parade but inclement weather forced cancellation of the parade--the first time in recent years.

COMING

The rain dampened everything but the spirit of Homecoming as the fourteen queen candidates and their escorts stood, sheltered by umbrellas, awaiting announcement of the 1976 Queen.

Tears of joy mingled with the rain-drops as junior art major Cathy Springer reacted to her selection as the new queen. Dr. Lawrence Park, president of the College, placed the crown as Mrs. Park bestowed the floral bouquet.

Several hundred loyal alumni and fans braved the elements to watch the gridiron clash between the two MSC's. The number dwindled; however, as the rain and cold penetrated and the Millersville Marauders exploded to top the Mounties 32-0. Mansfield's loss puts the all-time record between the rival schools at 17 wins each and two ties.

Corey Creek Country Club was the site for both a post-game get-together, sponsored by the Mountie Athletic Club, and an alumni party that evening.

As the Saturday morning rain beat heavily against the beautiful fall foliage, the best laid plans for Homecoming 1976 seemed to go awry. Still, the weekend was termed successful. Alumni returning to their alma mater, strengthened the bond between them and their school--giving the Alumni Association a boost and creating a promise for sunnier days next time.

CAMPUS NEWS

"MORE RATIONAL RESPONSE TOWARD CHANGE IS NEEDED" SAYS MANSFIELD STATE PHILOSOPHY PROFESSOR

The world needs to take a look at its response toward change as it approaches entrance into the twenty-first century, maintains Dr. George F. Sefler, professor and chairman of the department of philosophy at Mansfield.

Quoting Alvin Toffler's remarks in Future Shock, Dr. Sefler said, in discussing "Philosophy and the Future," that what is needed today is "a dramatically new, more rational response toward change."

"It is precisely this emphasis upon rationality which philosophy offers us," declares Dr. Sefler. "Philosophy opens to us an intellectual expanse wherein we can envisage possible alternative futures, and it provides the rational tools for choosing intelligibly among them."

Dr. Sefler points out that the twentieth century presents a rapidly changing social situation with issues requiring radically novel methods of solution. "Insight into our present human condition," he said, "would seem to require foresight into the developing status of mankind rather than hindsight into the enduring wisdom of Plato and Aristotle. After all, neither man discussed the full-blown problems of a technocratic society or of genetic control."

To think that answers to questions about our future in no way incorporate the decisions of the past, Dr. Sefler continued, is to misunderstand the human predicament and to misrepresent the "wisdom of the ages" with which philosophy concerns itself.

Dr. Sefler, a member of the Mansfield State College faculty since 1969, has recently returned from a summer of study with one of the nation's leading philosophers, Dr. Marjorie Grene. On a National Endowment for the Humanities grant, Dr. Sefler participated in a summer seminar at the University of California at Berkeley studying philosophers Martin Heidegger and Maurice Merleau-Ponty.

In 1966 Sefler graduated summa cum laude from DePaul University in Chicago, first in his class of more than 700. Four years later, at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., he received his Ph.D.

In addition to departmental duties, Dr. Sefler is the College's Danforth Foundation liaison officer, coordinator of the Philosophy Club, and handles philosophy library acquisitions. He is an accomplished magician and has more than a passing interest in music.

"As we approach entrance into the twenty-first century," Dr. Sefler points out, "more attention and concern is being directed toward the implications of today's problems and technological attainments for the future. Glowing images of a future are prophesied by some; disillusionment and degeneration by others."

Dr. Sefler sees the role of philosophy in the future as "not to give us specific answers to questions, but to prepare us at a more primordial level to develop those answers."

PLANETARIUM STARTS NEW SEASON

The George B. Strait Planetarium shows for the 1976-77 season have been announced by director Richard Mason.

Offered Thursday evening and repeated for a Sunday matinee performance, the shows are free and open to the public.

According to Mason, the November program is entitled, "The People," and was developed at the Hansen Planetarium in Salt Lake City, Utah.

"The People" is about American Indian concepts of the sky as seen through their remarkable myths and poetry. The myths retold in this program come from 16 different Indian nations, spread across the breadth of the continent. This program opens on November 11 at 8 p.m. and runs again on November 14 at 3 p.m.

"The Christmas Star Story" will be the feature show on December 9 and 12. This program will examine the evidence that indicates that something unusual did appear in the sky around Christmas.

Special performances are also available for high school classes through the Strait Planetarium director.

AMERICAN THEATRE JUDGE

Dr. John K. Tillinghast, chairman and professor of the department of speech communication and theatre, has been appointed a judge by the American Theatre Association for the 1976-77 American College Theatre Festival.

A member of the Mansfield faculty since 1970, Dr. Tillinghast will join other judges from Pennsylvania State University, Skidmore College, Fordham University, Hunter College, Seton Hall University and Rutgers University to determine the Northeast regional finalists February 11-12 at Cornell University.

Dr. Tillinghast, who is director of the Mansfield Players, is credited with having founded the highly successful Mansfield Festival Theatre, which just completed its sixth summer of outstanding theatre.

He earned the master's degree in fine arts from Yale University and the Ph.D. from Indiana University.

A member of the American Theatre Association, Dr. Tillinghast directed the Mansfield Players' production of "Tobacco Road," which last year was ranked among the four finalists in the competition for Northeast honors.

$80,000 STATE GRANT AWARDED MSC

Mansfield State College has been awarded its second grant in the last two years to continue "development of the State College and University Budget System" (SCUBS), Dr. Lawrence Park president of the College, announced.

The College, according to President Park, has been granted $80,000 as a continuation of the April 1975 award of $149,000 to develop and implement a planning, programming and budgeting system for the 14 state colleges and university. The project is being developed by Dr. George E. Miller, vice-president for administrative affairs at Mansfield State, and his staff.

"Under Dr. Miller's direction, Mansfield State has significantly improved the ability of both the system and the colleges to communicate budgetary and programming needs before the legislators, the Governor's office, the State Board and Department of Education," Dr. Park pointed out. The system has also been instrumental in providing information support for the state-wide Long Range Planning Commission.

The College's efforts to continue development of the system, as a result of the new funding, will be in three areas, Dr. Miller noted. "Our efforts will be directed toward several program modifications and documentation improvements in the salary projection model--to refine the program category summary, to report at the degree program level and to make recommendations for a program-level resource allocation system."

All three areas will significantly improve the College's ability to communicate the fiscal requirements of Mansfield State College, Dr. Miller asserted. "At the same time, the project will afford a wealth of institutional information that is highly valuable for internal resource management purposes."

So far, the development of the program has formalized salary projection procedures to support budgetary requests and establish a "common core" data base at each institution. Relationship comparisons between components of students, faculty and expenditure activities have been created through the use of computer software.

Dr. Miller, who has been in his present post as vice-president for administrative affairs at Mansfield State since 1970, heads up a state-wide task force for common accounting and has been working for several years to bring all parties together to promote standardized accounting and reporting techniques and common computer data bases.

CONCERT & PLAY SPONSORED BY FINE ARTS SERIES

The College's Fine Arts Series offered two outstanding performances recently on the Straughn Auditorium Stage.

The Pittsburgh Symphony Chamber Orchestra appeared on campus September 18 under the direction of the distinguished American conductor, Donald Johanos. The orchestra performed before a near-capacity crowd.

On October 2, patrons of the arts and Shakespearean lovers witnessed "a new understanding and appreciation of the Bard" when the New Shakespeare Company presented "The Tempest" at Mansfield.

The New Shakespeare Company, under the direction of Margrit Roma, hails from San Francisco. It is the largest Shakespearean touring company in North America.

MANSFIELD STATE IS 4th PA. SCHOOL WITH GRAD STUDY IN HOME EC. ED.

A new program leading to the Master of Science degree in Home Economics

Education has been approved for Mansfield State College, making Mansfield only the fourth Pennsylvania college to offer the graduate program in that field. In addition to Penn State, and now Mansfield, only Drexel University in Philadelphia, and Indiana University of Pennsylvania offer the graduate education program in home economics.

Dr. Janet McMullen, head of the Home Economics Department at MSC, said the program will begin this fall.

In announcing approval of the program, Secretary of Education John C. Pittenger wished the College success in the program adding, "I am certain that it will contribute toward the growing reputation of Mansfield State College."

Dr. Donald C. Darnton, vice president for academic affairs, stated that the program "compliments and enhances the human service mission of the College, serving Home Economics professionals and teachers in this region."

As the program proposal was being considered, Mansfield drew supporters from areas around the state. Initial support came from Intermediate Unit 17 and from Carolyn M. Kratz, senior program specialist for Home Economics education with the Pennsylvania Department of Education (PDE).

Admission to the new graduate program has the same requirements as admission to the College's Graduate Division, pointed out Dr. David Peltier, dean of graduate studies. Dr. Peltier explained that the program has two options. One program requiring 33 semester hours, is graduate work on a research problem while the other requires a master's thesis and has 30 hours of course work.

"Several national trends in education have implications for home economics which have demonstrated a need for this type of program," Dr. McMullen said. She added that an indication of need for the master's program in Home Economics education in the local region should add impetus to the new program.

"A growing thrust in occupational programs in the comprehensive high school and home economics programs in vocational school," Dr. McMullen continued, "reflect increased public concern for career education. Public awareness has also shown a need for nutrition and consumer education," she added.

"One of the biggest challenges," Dr. McMullen asserted, "is the changing roles of men and women in families and acceptance of multiple life patterns within our society. It presents a dynamic situation which challenges home economics teachers to strive to increase the relevancy of their teaching."

Dr. James Van Horn, chairman of the committee evaluating the program for PDE, praised Mansfield's faculty for their active involvement in state and national professional organizations, "Further commendation is rendered for the outstanding effort of the faculty for maintaining their professional competencies through continuing study."

MANSFIELD STATE AFFILIATES WITH U.S. ARMY PROJECT AHEAD

Mansfield State College has joined with the United States Army in a program which combines military service and a college education.

The College, President Lawrence Park announced, has affiliated with Project Ahead, a program sponsored by the U.S. Army and a large number of colleges throughout the country. The project is a means of combining military service and a college education. In spite of the assignment shifts and moves military personnel make from station to station, the student can maintain academic ties with a single college, giving continuity to plans to earn a college degree.

An enlisted person in the Army has an opportunity to apply for admission at Mansfield State College in Project Ahead. Such a student would have an adviser at the College who would help him consider both career and educational goals and develop plans. In working with the adviser, the student can obtain advice on courses to take wherever he may be stationed and know that those credits will be accepted in transfer to Mansfield State.

Mrs. Elaine DiBiase, assistant-vice-president for academic affairs, will coordinate the program at Mansfield, work with Project Ahead students in meeting general education requirements and arrange for a faculty adviser to help each student with his major field of study.

Project Ahead allows a student to have a "home" campus which serves as a course of advice as well as a central site for record keeping. The "home" campus exists wherever the student may be stationed and at whatever college he may be taking course work. Basically, this project allows a planned approach to meeting educational goals that is otherwise not available to highly mobile service personnel.

SPORTS

SHAW NAMED ATHLETIC DIRECTOR AT MANSFIELD

Henry A. (Hank) Shaw has been named director of athletics at Mansfield State College. His appointment effective August 9, 1976 was announced by Dr. Lawrence Park, the College's President.

Shaw, a member of the Mansfield State health and physical education faculty since 1966, returns to the College after a two-year leave of absence for advanced study in physical education administration at George Peabody College for Teachers in Nashville, Tenn. He will succeed Robert (Tut) Moore, who retired in January 1975, as the College's athletic director. Dr. Arthur P. DeGenaro, chairman of the department of health and physical education, has been serving as acting athletic director in the interim.

A native of Woodland, PA, Shaw received the B.S. degree from Lock Haven State College and the master's degree from Ithaca College. He is a doctoral candidate at George Peabody College. Prior to joining the Mansfield faculty 10 years ago, he taught in the Wellsville (N.Y.) Central Schools.

"I am pleased to make him (Shaw) the offer to fill the vacancy as the College's Athletic Director," President Park said, in making the announcement. "The Search committee had a difficult task because there was a large number of well-qualified applicants."

In addition to his doctoral studies at George Peabody, Shaw directed the intramural sports program and taught gymnastics and track for physical education majors. Prior to his sabbatical, he served as head wrestling coach, head athletic trainer and director of the College's swimming pool. Shaw has also directed and served as a clinician at several wrestling clinics.

He is married to the former Marylou Poling, who is an assistant professor of health and physical education at Mansfield State.

MSC TO HOST VOLLEYBALL TOURNAMENT

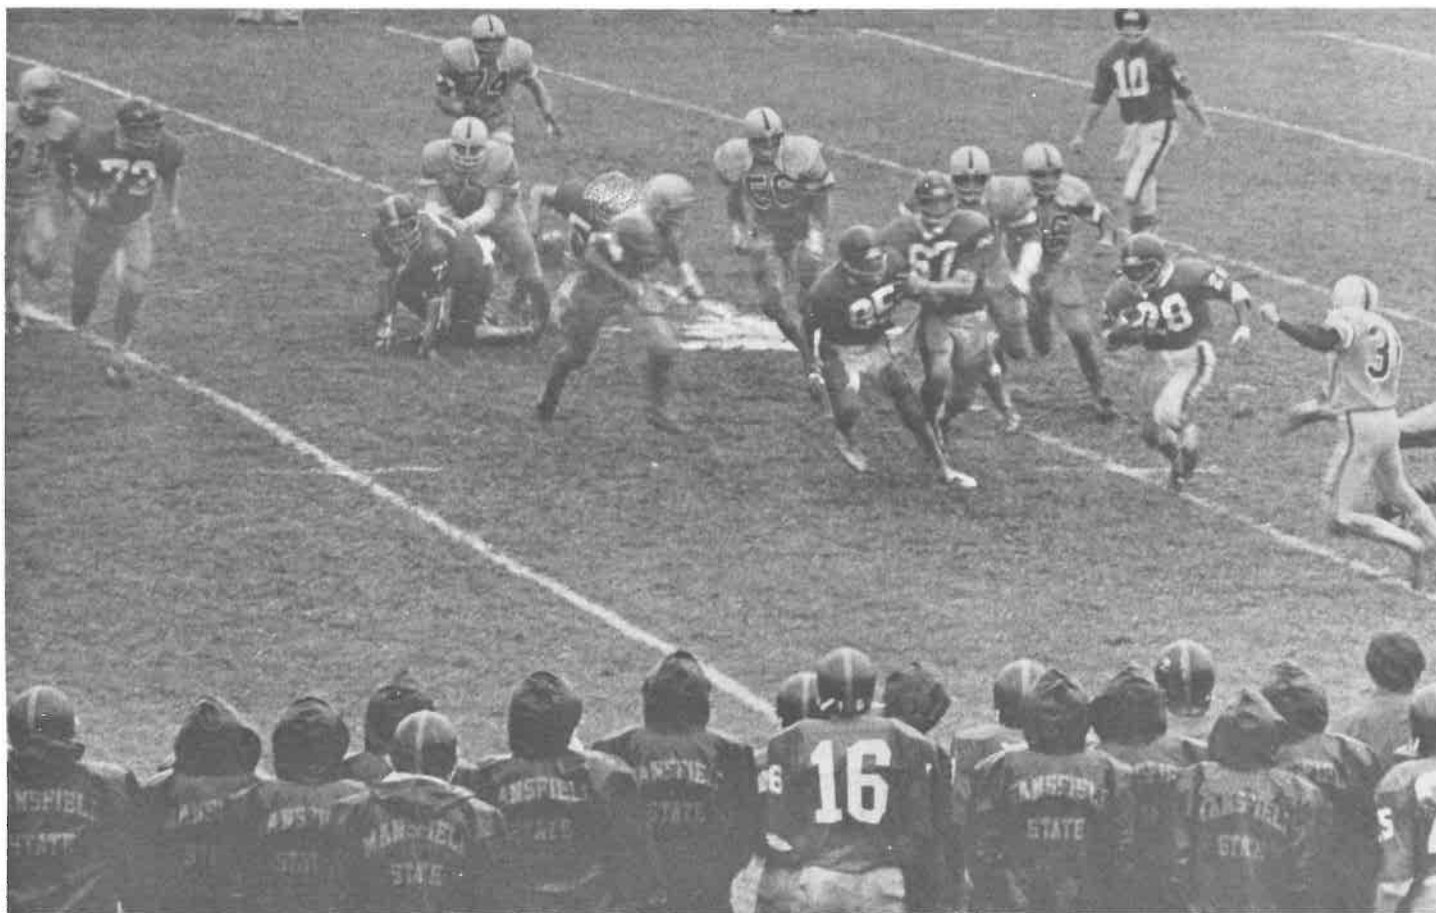

Mansfield State College will host the Eastern Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (EAIW) volleyball tournament, Region I, on Nov. 18-19 in Decker Gymnasium.

The Mansfield team, coached by Hugh Schintzius, receives an automatic berth in the tournament as the host college. Seven other teams will be selected at a later date by a committee of the EAIW. Mrs. Sharon Zegalia, instructor in the health and physical education department, is the tournament director.

Region I of the EAIW is composed of small colleges in the New England states, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey and Delaware. Regional winners will compete in December in the AIAW national tournament at Pepperdine College in Los Angeles, Cal.

INJURIES PLAGUE FOOTBALL TEAM

Plagued by injuries and loss of experienced personnel, the 1976 grid season is proving to be a tough year for the Mounties and head coach Bernie Sabol.

Coming off a 5-4 season last year, the Mounties are faced with the task of rebuilding and filling the gaps left by the loss of 13 vets, 10 of whom were starters. Key positions on the offensive line, and the defensive backfield are being filled by personnel with limited playing experience.

Despite these woes there are some bright spots. The offensive backfield returned in tact. Halfback Mike Kemp, leading rusher in the Pennsylvania Conference Eastern Division is a constant threat. Also figuring prominently in the Mountie attack are quarterback Fran Taglang and halfback Bruce Musselman.

For the first half of the season the Mounties have been unable to stay in the winning column. The team has a 1-4 record overall and a 0-3 conference slate. Mansfield took the opener against St. Francis but suffered losses to California, Bloomsburg, Cheyney and Millersville State.

After a clash with undefeated East Stroudsburg, last season's State champ, Coach Sabol is looking optimistically towards the second half of this season as the team matures in this rebuilding year.

MANSFIELD BASKETBALL MOUNTIES TO FACE TOUGH '76-77 SCHEDULE

Mansfield's basketball Mountaineers will play one of the toughest schedules in the school's basketball history this winter as it takes on 25 regular season opponents.

The 1976-77 cage slate released by Hank Shaw, the College's newly-appointed athletic director, includes home-and-away dates with two of the Mounties chief rivals—Pennsylvania State Conference champ and NCAA semi-finalists Cheyney State and perennially-powerful Bloomsburg State.

With virtually a new club, Ed Wilson's charges will play only eight of their 25 games in the friendly environs of Decker Gymnasium. Seventeen of those games, including three tournament appearances, will be on foreign courts.

Potsdam, N.Y. will be the site of the Mounties' opening game of the '76-77 season when they participate in the Potsdam Invitational Tournament, December 3 and 4. The Mounties lift the lid on the home season on December 11 against an improved Kutztown State team which is expected to provide defending champ Cheyney the toughest opposition in the P.S.C.A.C.

Mansfield will travel to Union, N.J. to compete in the Squire Classic at Kean College on December 20-21. The following week, they will appear in the "Best of Both Tournaments" at St. Vincent College in Latrobe, Pa. In their three tourney appearances, the Mountaineers will be competing against such teams as Potsdam, Hamilton, Eastern Connecticut, Oneonta, Westminster and Pitt.—Johnstown.

In Pennsylvania State College Conference scheduling, the Mounties will open at Shippensburg State, and have the unfortunate task of finishing at Cheyney and Bloomsburg.

Although the team is coming off a 17-7 season, it was decimated by graduation and will be a young and inexperienced squad when it opens the season in December.

WINROW APPOINTED TRACK AND FIELD COACH

Ed Winrow, newly-appointed track, field and cross country coach, plans hard work and quality recruiting in building a winning program for the Mansfield State track team.

Citing the fact that the program has come a long way since it was initiated twelve years ago under the late Bob Maxson, Winrow said, "You can see by the quality of kids here that Maxson worked hard and did a quality job in recruiting. His untimely death last year was a natural setback for these kids because they had a great deal of faith in him," said the Bronx, N.Y. native. "He (Maxson) built a fine program here in just a few years and I hope that I can only pick up where he left off."

Entering his seventh year in coaching, Winrow was an outstanding runner in his own right. As an interscholastic runner for Mt. Saint Michael Academy in New York, Winrow won the New York City Catholic high school mile championship in 1956, and during his collegiate days at Buffalo State, he was twice the MVP in track and field. He was also a three-time collegiate All-American selection in cross country and distance running. An active member in the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU), he won national AAU championships. On the international plain, Winrow participated in fourteen international races, including two victories in the San Blas Marathon in Puerto Rico.

In 1967, Winrow was the first alternate for the Pan-American Games in the marathon, and a year later, he was the third alternate in the marathon event for the American Olympic squad for the '68 Olympics.

Following his graduation from Buffalo State in 1963, Winrow taught industrial arts for four years in Irvington, N.Y. He received his master's in physical education from Ball State University in 1969, and a year later, he was the head track and cross country coach at Valparaiso University.

After four years at Valparaiso, Winrow moved on to SUNY Brockport and took over as head track and cross country coach. At Brockport, he developed the Eagles' into one of the top track and cross country powers in the New York conference.

It takes time to build a top-notch program, and participating in the Pennsylvania State College Conference makes things all the tougher, he added. "There are teams such as Edinboro that could compete in the Big Ten, it's really a tough conference." As an assistant camp director in the Poconos, Winrow says he gets the exposure to the kids; now he has to start recruiting them.

"I really feel Mansfield can have a fine track and cross country program, we've got the facilities here—an all-weather track and (smiling as he thinks of struggling opponent runners) a nice rugged cross country course," Winrow said.

IN MEMORIAM

ELIZABETH S. ALLEN

Elizabeth S. Allen, former professor of English at Mansfield State, died July 29 in Wellsboro, Pa. following a lengthy illness.

Miss Allen was a professor of English at Mansfield for 21 years, and served for several years as Assistant Dean of Women. She also taught drama and directed all of the College's plays for a number of years.

Born in Mansfield, Miss Allen graduated from high school in Wooster, Massachusetts. She worked as an executive secretary at the Hanover Trust Co. in New York prior to attending college.

A graduate of Mansfield State, Miss Allen earned her master's degree at Columbia University in New York City. She did additional graduate work at the University of Miami.

Following her tenure at Mansfield State, Miss Allen taught high school English for a year and served for five years as Editor of the Wellsboro Gazette.

Miss Allen was the granddaughter of Fordyce A. Allen who was principal of Mansfield State Normal School from 1864-69 and 1877-1880.

RICHARD G. LOWE

Long-time friend of the College, Richard G. Lowe, died August 11 in Wilmington, Del.

A former member of the Mansfield State College Board of Trustees, Lowe also served on the Executive Board of the General Alumni Association for over 30 years.

Formerly of Mansfield and Williamsport, Lowe lived at 1004 Overbrook Road in Wilmington. He grew up in Mansfield and graduated from Mansfield State in 1922 and later from Penn State University in 1926.

In June of this year, Lowe observed the 50th anniversary of his graduation from Penn State. President of his class, he was a member of Sigma Pi fraternity and was active in the national fraternity affairs for the remainder of his life.

At the time of his death, at age 74, he was associated with Elkins, Stroud, Suplee and Co., investment securities dealers in Philadelphia. Mr. Lowe also maintained an office in Williamsport.

In addition to memberships in the Ross Club, the Williamsport Country Club and the Eagles Mere Country Club, Mr. Lowe was a director of the Harry Plankenhorn Foundation in Williamsport, and the Polk Foundation in Millersburg. He was also a director of the Mid-Penn Telephone Corporation in Muncy.

In Wilmington, Mr. Lowe was a member of the Westminster Presbyterian Church. His daughter, Mrs. Arthur G. Diver, and four grandchildren reside in Wilmington. His wife, Ann B. Lowe '22, died last March.

INTELLIGENT CHOICES

In the words of an often quoted advertising campaign, there are no simple solutions — only intelligent choices for life's problems.

Throughout this issue of the Mansfieldian you will find a number of articles dealing with problems faced by most colleges today in terms of enrollment. Admissions personnel across the nation are forced by declining enrollments to cover more miles, meet with more people than ever before with probably fewer results.

The reasons for decline are discussed at length in this issue, but the important point is to realize the physical limitations of recruiting efforts by the Mansfield State College staff. Admissions personnel, athletic coaches, and many staff members are doing everything humanly possible to keep enrollment at an optimum level.

Their efforts are not in vain; but if current trends continue as predicted, it will soon require assistance from all of the college's constituents.

Students, and former students, are playing an increasingly important role for many colleges in their recruiting programs. Who better to tell the "Mansfield story" than one who has experienced the College?

Alumni actively recruit, not only at colleges and universities across the country, but among the Pennsylvania State Colleges as well. Mansfield alumni may do some recruiting but word rarely filters back to campus on who or why. A more active alumni association, the Mountie Athletic Club, and the Mansfield Foundation can be vehicles for building a strong alumni recruiting program for Mansfield State College.

Response to pleas for help in this column in the past have been most gratifying and we hope to utilize this space in the future to communicate on key issues. Again, we need your help. Many of you were asked once before to contact a prospective student in your area who had expressed interest in Mansfield. That program brought some results. Carried one step further, an active Alumni Recruiting Program, coupled with the College's recruiting efforts, could go a long way toward solving a potential "enrollment crunch." You are our raison d'être. Please help keep it that way.

THE COVER

Job market forecasts for the 1980's are emphasizing the importance of proper selection of career choices on today's high school students. Community colleges, vocational schools, public and private institutions of higher learning . . . the list goes on, all competing for that potential student. Colleges such as Mansfield State are but one of a multitude of career options, forcing schools into a highly competitive battle for students. (Story on page 10.)

MARCH OF DIMES HAS SPECIAL MEANING FOR MANSFIELD COEDS

The March of Dimes annual fund raising campaign to help thousands of handicapped youngsters in the United States, will have two very active participants at Mansfield this year.

Sophomores Denise Bell and Linda Zastavny, sorority sisters at Mansfield State, have increased their involvement with the March of Dimes program since Miss Zastavny's young brother Robbie was named as the March of Dimes National Poster Child for 1977.

Miss Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carvel Bell of R.D. 3, Box 42 in Wellsboro, and Miss Zastavny, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Al Zastavny of Morrestown, N.J., have been active volunteers in the March of Dimes program.

March of Dimes funds, which are raised primarily during a January campaign support research programs of prenatal and genetic medicine throughout the country. All are directed at the prevention of birth defects and any life-threatening problem in the newborn.

In November, Miss Bell represented the Susquehanna Valley Chapter of March of Dimes at a three-day convention in Washington, D.C. She met with regional volunteers from seven states to study ways of aiding the annual campaign.

"Our volunteer efforts complement the achievements of scientists and other professionals," Miss Bell said, "as we strive for the day when all children can be born free from the threat of birth defects."

Six-year-old Robbie Zastavny was born with an open spine and although the opening was closed by surgery, he is paralyzed from the waist down. He is able to walk with the aid of leg braces and crutches, however.

Like many youngsters, Robbie loves sports. He has mastered kicking a football and hitting a baseball, and is now in the process of perfecting his swimming strokes and miniature golf swing. For the past two years, he was the New Jersey March of Dimes poster child. This year he will become a familiar figure to millions of Americans during the national campaign.

Robbie's mother and father are both graduates of Mansfield State College. Al Zastavny ('53) is a self-employed distributor for Rain Water Soft Water Service, while Joan Johnson Zastavny ('52) tutors grade school students in reading. All have been active in March of Dimes programs.

Mrs. Zastavny has been Mothers March chairperson and a member of the March of Dimes Board in Burlington County (New Jersey). Mr. Zastavny is a member of the board of the Occupational Training Center in Mt. Holly and, for the past two years has been March of Dimes Walkathon chairman. Linda, Robbie's sister, who is a sophomore at Mansfield State, has served for two years as youth activities chairman in Burlington County.

Miss Bell, a special education major, is a member of the Council for Exceptional Children at Mansfield State. Last summer, she followed a course in art and recreation for the handicapped Child by remaining at the Easter Seal Camp Daddy Allen as a counselor for the summer.

After working as a teacher's aide in classes for trainable mentally retarded (TMR) children in Wellsboro, Miss Bell concentrated her studies at Mansfield to work with TMR children after graduation. Miss Bell was also a recipient of the Jonathan George March Scholarship in her freshman year at Mansfield. This scholarship was established in 1974 by Mr. James White ('49) through the Mansfield Foundation, Inc.

SWAMP STUDIED FOR AUDUBON SOCIETY

Paddling a canoe through the murky brown water made it easy to spot creatures of the swamp as they scurried about in their daily routines. The water was constantly flowing, more like a huge stream than one's preconceived ideas of a cyprus swamp.

The whiteness of an American Egret, a wading bird of the heron family, stood in sharp contrast to the water. Turtles lay in the sun, although the temperature in the swamp was cooler than the 90 degree heat of the surrounding area.

"It is so peaceful . . . so quiet," recalled Dr. Russell J. Hall, associate professor of biology at Mansfield State. Recounting a five-month stay where he spent his sabbatical leave, Dr. Hall described Four Holes Swamp near Charleston, South Carolina. A National Audubon Society sanctuary, the 4,000 acre swamp is the county's largest remaining stand of cyprus and tupelo.

Hall served as a visiting scientist studying various kinds of animal life. "I volunteered my services to the Audubon Society and they decided that was where they wanted me to go.

The swamp is a new sanctuary to be opened to the public, Hall continued. A visitor's center is planned at the sanctuary and 30,000 visitors are expected yearly.

Steve Winton, in an internship arranged by the college, worked under Norman Brunswig, manager of the sanctuary. Most of the time he was assigned to work with Dr. Hall. Winton, who graduated from the college in December is now assistant manager of the sanctuary.

Nearly every day Hall and Winton paddled through the swamp in canoes to observe, record and catch various species of cold-blooded animals — lizards, snakes, frogs, turtles, salamanders and alligators. They allowed a regular mile-long route, some days observing five kinds of turtles sitting on logs. The alligators — very shy — were elusive; Hall and Winton never got a good look at them.

Brown water snakes were hanging on branches of the trees overhead as they paddled through. Although the snakes are big and badtempered, Dr. Hall said they are harmless, but will bite.

To make their way through the narrow, shallow channels of the swamp, Hall and Winton had to pull on the "cyprus knees." Growths from the roots of the cyprus trees, the knees are on the shallow roots and anchor these huge trees in the lush and tangly swamp forest. Various kinds of lizards were running on the tree trunks.

"We were trying to catch everything we saw except the really dangerous things" — like the venomous cottonmouth, which is too dangerous to handle. The animals caught were marked or tagged "to estimate the size of the population" and the area the animal occupied, explained Dr. Hall. "Over 880 animals were handled" with 62 different species identified.

After paddling around, they would go on foot to the drier areas where they would turn logs and check traps — harmless to the animals — which were used to catch and identify the species.

"To study frogs, we went out at night," Dr. Hall recalled, "quite a different experience." Hall said it was an "impressive experience in pitch darkness with ear-splitting sounds of the frogs around."

When Winton returned to Mansfield, Hall's wife Peggy joined him at work in the swamp. There was "a lot to be learned by a layman," she said. Daily she went to help photograph the animals and catch frogs. "I can catch frogs as well as the next guy." The photography was time-consuming. Hiking in knee-high water, they carried the heavy equipment over long distances.

Knee-high rubber boots, long sleeves and long pants were the dress of the day no matter how hot it got. The Halls had to be well-protected. "I usually wore a couple of shirts," said Peggy, "so chiggers and ticks couldn't bite through."

Miles long and wide with no inroads from civilization, the thick forest of the swamp is covered with huge poison ivy plants, orchids and wild flowers. It is so green, Peggy says, "it fills your senses." The water, although flowing, seems still; there are no ripples. Reflections on the water make everything look double. One hundred-year-old cyprus and tupelo trees bend gracefully over this spectacular swamp.

Dr. Hall's research will be incorporated into a book on more than 60 species of amphibians and reptiles of the swamp for the Audubon Society. Reflecting on his research, Hall said, "I had three goals that paid off really well. I wanted to do some field work, particularly in a different area, to work on the front lines of the conservation movement . . . and to get a line on possible research projects."

'HAFT' HOUSES A LIFESTYLE — by GERALYN GRAF

Glenn Hart (66)

EDITOR'S NOTE: Glenn Hart studied at Mansfield graduating in 1966. After further study at Michigan and Kent State Mr. Hart returned to Mansfield in 1971 to assume a position as Assistant Professor of Geography and Regional Planning, a position he held until 1975. Mr. Hart continues to be associated with Mansfield by instructing in the Continuing Education Division.

When Glenn Hart bought a crumbling barn outside New Albany in 1957 he wasn't sure what he wanted to do with it. But he vowed that he would leave as soon as he saw more than five cars pass by a week.

Years have passed and the barn, now called the Haft, is a comfortable three story house. Not only do Hart and his wife Jean live there but Bruce and Joan Boydell and their children Amy and Mark, and Mike and JoAnn Carver and their son Michael, and Denise Draboski and dogs, Hester and Pepper, have joined them.

Now, more than five cars pass an hour and tractor trailers have discovered that the country road is the quickest route between New Albany and Dushore.

Hart has all but forgotten his vow. His first idea of converting the barn into a retirement cottage has changed considerably since that cold winter he and Jean lived in a tent pitched in the drafty barn. Hart decided to educate himself at Mansfield and Michigan State.

It wasn't until May 4, 1970, while he was doing doctoral studies at Kent State University, that he decided the barn would best serve as a Christian community and school.

"I was sitting in a prayer meeting on the Kent State campus on the morning of May 4," he says, "and there was a girl there who asked the Lord to help a friend of hers before he got hurt. The shots of the National Guard cut her words off. I was convinced then. I knew then that being a Christian was not sitting in a prayer meeting."

Hart left Kent State and returned to New Albany to set up what some call a commune. The Harts call it the Haft.

Since 1970, the Haft has received thousands of guests who seek peace and quite within the Christian life. It has housed 27 Vietnamese refugees. And those who are in trouble and need a place to find themselves again can always find shelter there.

Until 1975 the Haft was only a part-time operation. To support himself, Haft taught geography at Mansfield, living there during the week and traveling to New Albany on the weekends.

"One weekend we had a drug addict here who needed help. Come Sunday I had to go back to Mansfield because I had to teach on Monday. Because I was leaving, the fellow decided to leave too. All the way back to Mansfield I kept thinking that if I had stayed he would have stayed. The next day I resigned from Mansfield."

That was when Hart and his wife moved back to New Albany and began planning for the school.

The adults who live at the Haft all hold teaching certificates. The three children join 10 others who travel to the Haft four days a week for instruction. On the fifth day, the Haft residents go to the children's homes for a tutorial service.

Although life at the Haft is relaxing, compared to the business work, it is hard work, Hart says. The community is almost self sufficient, but to keep it that way each person must do his or her part of chopping down the wood, planting and harvesting the crops, fishing in the livestock pond, hunting in the woods and caring for the pigs and cows.

The couples have privacy by returning to their own living quarters, which are strictly off-limits to other members of the household. The common living areas hold no guarantee of privacy.

Hart says there are no set chores, but people are expected to do what they can.

Although breakfast and lunch are do-it-yourself affairs, dinner is the shared meal. The women are usually found in the kitchen beforehand doing the preparations.

"We are not forcing the women into that role," says Hart. "But they accept it just as we accept the fact that we will go outside and chop the wood. No one makes a big deal of it."

There is only one rule for those who live at the Haft, he says.

"That rule is that there are no rules," he says. "But even though there are no rules, there is a strict discipline here."

"We are not about to set up rules for people. That makes it too easy for them. And some people don't like that idea. They want us to tell them what to do to get their lives together again. But the discipline isn't worthwhile unless they set it up themselves."

The school operates under the same philosophy. None of the teachers are paid, says Hart. Everything that the teachers once owned now belongs to the Haft Corp., set up on a non-profit basis, he says.

Classes, held in the barn's dining room, are reminiscent of old one-room school houses. But, Hart points out that reading, writing and arithmetic are not the main thrust of education.

The one first grader in the school has been involved in designing an observatory on the top of the hills surrounding the barn. The third grader is engrossed in designing a turbine made of old pop cans. He hopes the turbine eventually will produce enough electricity to run the appliances. All the experimentation takes place during afternoon sessions. In the morning the three teachers take turns lecturing on geography and history, music, math and science and the humanities.

The students spend Wednesdays outdoors learning about conservation and tree farming in the woods. On Friday, parents arrive for dinner at 5 p.m. and the students present a special program after the meal.

"We insist on two things at the school," says Hart, "one is that the students have to want to come here. The second is that the parents get involved in the education."

"These people are not paying anything to send their kids here," he explains, "and we don't feel as if we are the only teachers. All of us must work together for the education."

Hart says he has refused to accept a parent's go-ahead to administer physical punishment.

"I tell them that if the need arises, I'm going to call them and I expect them to do something about it."

Although the school could easily be accredited as a church school, Hart is not satisfied with that. He wants it accredited as a private academic school.

"We don't teach religion," he says. "What we do preach and share is God-centered education."

To meet those standards, the Haft residents are drawing up plans for a new school building to be built behind the barn. At this point, Hart and his family have no idea how they will pay for the building, but that doesn't bother them. They have faith that something will work out.

When asked what keeps the commune together, Hart sits back in the chilly kitchen, and answers without any change in expression.

"It's Jesus Christ," he says.

He offers no other explanation. Hart refuses to defend his lifestyle or the philosophy of his home.

"There are some things you just can't explain," he says later. "Some people just don't understand a life where you don't have a good job and just aren't concerned about moving up the ladder of success. And I can't explain it to them."

"They can't understand that none of the teachers here get paid. But there's a certain satisfaction with getting to the point where you don't have to work for money."

CAMPUS NEWS

President Lawrence Park congratulates retiring employees of the College for "continuous service to the institution" on the occasion of their retirement.

Pictured with the President, from left to right, are Clarence W. Schultz, Leonard A. Worden, Bernard J. Hayes, and Mrs. Margaret A. Love. Missing from photo is Raymond Comfort.

The five retiring employees who worked with the College's buildings and grounds and campus security, have a combined total of more than 75 years of continuous service at Mansfield State College.

STATE SENATE CONFIRMS STUDENT TRUSTEE

John E. Heim

The Pennsylvania Senate has confirmed the appointment of Mansfield State College student John E. Heim of Harrisburg to the College's Board of Trustees. The confirmation was announced by Dr. Lawrence Park, president of the College.

Heim was nominated for the appointment by Pennsylvania Governor Milton J. Shapp on the recommendation of Secretary of Education John C. Pittenger. The appointment fulfills a state requirement which stipulates that one student serve as a voting member on the Board of Trustees of each of Pennsylvania's 14 state colleges and university.

Heim will serve in the capacity of student representative for three years or until his graduation. Heim assumes the position held by Keith Semmel until his graduation last spring.

Heim said that he applied for the appointment mainly because he was concerned about the lack of communication that exists between Mansfield students and the Board of Trustees. He pointed out that without the students there would be no need of a Board.

Heim feels that, as a student representative, he can play a major role in reestablishing communication between the students and the Board. He said, "I will be in the position of voicing the student opinion to the Board while, at the same time, encouraging the students to understand the Board's point of view."

Heim thinks that students should have some input into establishing the criteria used to evaluate Mansfield faculty. He said, "A fairer system for both students and professors needs to be developed."

Heim, who plans to pursue a law career after graduation, feels that the greatest asset that he brings to the Board is "letting people know where I stand." He explains, "I don't consider myself one to sit back and let others do the talking when I feel there is an injustice being done to other students or to myself."

Heim, a junior speech communication and theatre major, was the national quarter finalist in informative speaking at the Intercollegiate Speech Tournament Results National Sweepstakes in Forensics held in Los Angeles last spring. He is currently serving as president of the Mansfield chapter of Pi Kappa Delta, an honorary forensics fraternity.

Heim is vice-president of the College Student Government Association and is chairman of the finance committee. He is also on the Board of Directors of College Community Services and the Mansfield Foundation, Inc.

TUITION WAIVER CONTINUED FOR DEPENDENTS

The Board of Trustees at Mansfield State College voted to continue its present plan of waiver of tuition for dependents of its employees and rescinder a $5 drop/add fee which it approved last June.

Meeting on campus in regular session, the Board also approved several faculty and non-instructional personnel appointments and deferred approval of an increase in dormitory housing fees until further study.

After accepting a report of a special committee headed by Board member Dr. Harry B. Strickland of Scranton, the Board voted to continue its current tuition waiver policy with the provision that this policy be reviewed by the Board every two years.

The cancellation of the $5 drop/add fee which was recommended by President Lawrence Park was approved by the Board after some discussion. According to President Park, there were some unforeseen problems with assessing such a fee and there were a number of faculty and student concerns.

The trustees, in tabling the recommendation to increase the dormitory/housing fee, asked for more time and data to consider the proposed increase. The Board expressed a concern about the timing of such an increase and how the hike might affect both students and parents.

The recommendation called for an increase of $1 per week in dormitory fees for the spring 1977 semester to offset the mounting operating costs facing the College in the seven residence halls. The proposed hike would raise the rate from $234 to $252 per semester.

THIRTY-FIVE STUDENTS HONORED IN WHO'S WHO

Thirty-five students at Mansfield State College have been named to Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities.

"Who's Who" is an annual national publication which honors American students by a listing of their honors and activities in college. The Mansfield State student listing will be included in the 1976-77 volume, published in Tuscaloosa, Alabama.

According to Mrs. Jean Joyner, student services director for Who's Who, each student will receive a certificate of membership in association with the listing.

Named to the Who's Who list for their academic achievements and participation in campus and community activities were: Marian G. Adams, Pittsburgh; Caroleanne Barnhart, Camp Hill, Pa.; Roberta A. Beckley, Wilkes-Barre; Raymond W. Beisel, Mansfield; Susan L. Benkinney, Coopersburg; Ronald E. Blahusch, Pittsburgh; Judy D. Bluhm, Laceyville; Patricia A. Bonner, Shrewsbury; and Mary K. Cybulak of Sayre.

Also Douglas J. Doan, Osceola; Elizabeth Ann Dunbar, Haverford; Shelley Ann Eberhart, Beech Creek; Mary E. Finkbiner, Lebanon; Kathy J. Garis, Souderton; Pamela A. Geyer, New Milford; Julie A. Hartranft, Ephrata; Thomas M. Jones, Duryea; and Michael A. Josbena of Towanda.

Also Gretchen K. Kish, Natrona Heights; Debra A. Lakatosh, Walnutport; Mary Ann M. Lally, Hazelton; Pamela Lloyd, Hazelton; David T. Lukasewicz, Montoursville; Carol W. Myers, Wellsboro; Linwood E. Payne, Marion; Becky A. Rossbacher, Corry; and Faust A. Ruggiero of Roseto.

Also Patricia M. Ryan, Warren; Brenda L. Shirey, South Williamsport; Robert D. Shorb, Littlestown; Gary G. Sipes, St. Thomas; Linda L. Tough, Lehman; Linda M. Walker, Lanse; Lyn C. Watson, Turbotville; and Ruth A. Wenner of Wellsboro.

ENGLAND STUDY EXPANDED

A popular graduate program to teach and study in England, offered for the fourth consecutive year this summer, has been expanded to include secondary as well as elementary education.

Under the direction of Dr. John Heaps, the program gives graduate students an opportunity to get a close-up look at the way British teachers cope with the problems of teaching.

The program is divided into three week-long segments, Dr. Heaps pointed out. One week is spent working in the schools, and another is devoted to visiting various types of schools in the British education system. During the final week, participants have time for travel.

Dr. Heaps said tentative plans have been made for the group to visit Austria, Switzerland and Venice, Italy this year.

Those interested in learning about the program may contact Dr. John Heaps by writing the elementary education department or by calling 662-4371 during office hours or 662-3194 evenings.

SERINE NAMED TO FINANCIAL AID POST

Dr. Enrico A. Serine, an administrative staff officer at Mansfield State College since 1970, has been named the College's assistant director of financial aid.

His appointment to this post was announced by Dr. Lawrence Park, president of the College, following its approval by the Board of Trustees.

Dr. Serine, who was recently awarded his doctorate degree in education from the University of Arkansas, has been the assistant dean of admissions at Mansfield State since he joined the College's staff in 1970 after a four year stint teaching in the Shippensburg (Pa.) public schools.

"We are very fortunate to have a person on our staff of Dr. Serine's caliber," Dr. Robert Scott, vice president for student affairs, said, at the announcement of the promotion for Serine. "His experience in admissions and recruiting will be beneficial in helping the College to address itself to the financial needs of prospective students."

A native of Dunmore, Pa., Serine received his undergraduate degree from Bloomsburg State College and his master's degree in guidance and counseling from Shippensburg State College.

"One of the main concerns prospective students and their parents have relate to financial aid," Dr. Serine said. "As a result of having worked in admissions, I think I have a firm grasp of these needs as they affect our students." In my new capacity, I hope to be able to better utilize these experiences to advise our students about their financial needs."

Dr. Serine is a member of several professional organizations, including Phi Kelta Kappa, American Personnel and Guidance Association, Pennsylvania Association of Admissions Counselors, and the National Association of Admissions Counselors.

PROFESSOR AND STUDENT PUBLISH ARTICLE

"The Thermostat-Turn it Down," an article written by Dr. John Dowling, a professor of physics at Mansfield State College, and Phil Swartz, a graduate of Mansfield State, was published in the September issue of the American Journal of Physics.

The article, based on a physics lab which Dowling has used for his classes the past two years, demonstrates that energy can be saved by turning down the thermostat at night.

Dowling received his Ph.D. from Arizona State University and recently gave a colloquium there on "Great Physics Through Films." He was also invited to read a paper at the computer conference at Tucson entitled, "The Computer from the Instructor's Point of View."

JUDGE KEMP TALKS ABOUT JUSTICE SYSTEM WITH MANSFIELD STUDENTS

The Honorable Robert M. Kemp ('49), presiding judge of Tioga County, spoke recently with students from the Department of Criminal Justice Administration at Mansfield State College.

Meeting with about 150 criminal justice majors at the College, Judge Kemp discussed the justice system and the problems a judge faces with sentencing criminal offenders.

"There's not one answer to the multi-faceted problem of sentencing," Judge Kemp stated, and he encouraged the students to enter the field with an open mind. "Don't buy every new remedy that comes down the pike. The American people look for instant success and a panacea for problems," he explained. "While some of the solutions might work, often they are replaced by a new remedy before a proper evaluation can be made."

Honorable Robert M. Kemp

Among other problems he faces, Judge Kemp feels that "We lack the facilities and supportive service we need in the rehabilitation of people." Pointing out that he was not arguing over semantics, Judge Kemp maintained that the use of the word rehabilitation is actually a misnomer.

"If I broke my arm and went to a doctor to get it mended," he cited as an example, "I would be rehabilitated when it healed. When a youngster appears in court, what standards does one use for 'rehabilitation?' We, as society, should 'habilitate' that person to function again as part of society. We may never be able to return each offender to the level where their problems began and achieve 'rehabilitation.'"

A graduate of Mansfield State College and current president of the General Alumni Association, Judge Kemp graduated from Dickinson School of Law in 1952. He became District Attorney for Tioga County in 1960 and has been presiding judge since 1972.

One solution to the ever-present problem of crime offered by Judge Kemp at his meeting with the Mansfield State students, is a restructuring of attitudes to create a society in which every individual could be useful.

"There is a concept in this country that everyone is born equal under the law. The concept has been broadened to include a societal mean — standards for I.Q., occupations and others. For the average offender, there is no place in society where he may succeed. Society has created a self-image of failure for these persons."

Judge Kemp added that what is needed is not a radical restructuring but a change in mental attitude on the part of society. "A person with an I.Q. of 70 who is performing to the best of his ability should be respected just as much as a person with an I.Q. of 170 who is performing to the best of his ability."

The judge went on to say that society has dictated that a job such as sweeping city streets, for example, is demeaning and if an individual has not achieved a level higher than that he's a failure. "It will take a realization that some welfare monies must be diverted for these types of employment," he continued, "to reach a point where individuals can contribute positively in the eyes of society."

When asked by students if he felt that capital punishment was necessary, Judge Kemp responded affirmatively. Qualifying his statement, Judge Kemp favored a very limited application of capital punishment and questioned its use in domestic society.

"It is a fact that executions are carried out by persons who decide they are going to control society by execution. Organized crime and persons in prisons use the method for control. You can call them murders if you want," he said, "but they are deliberately decided by a group of persons and are in fact, executions. If we say that society cannot execute," Judge Kemp declared, "how are these persons to be controlled?"

Judge Kemp concluded that the death penalty does work and is a deterrent, but that capital punishment should be very limited in its use.

HUSBAND-WIFE TEAM GIVE NEW, INTERDISCIPLINARY LOOK AT CRIMINAL JUSTICE FIELD

Two Mansfield State College professors combined their expertise for a new and interdisciplinary look at the criminal justice field.

Dr. Robert B. Revere and Dr. Virginia L. Revere, a husband-wife team at Mansfield have taken a fresh look at Roscoe Pound's much publicized St. Paul Address of 1906 and have published an article in the Justice System Journal, a management review publication by the Institute for Court Management in Denver, Colorado. This article entitled, "Roscoe Pound, Pragmatist: An Essay in Psychistory," appeared in the Spring 1976 edition.

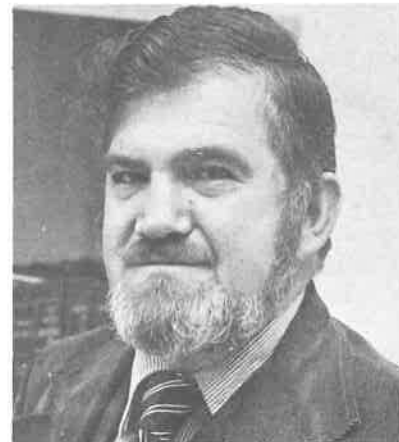

The anniversary of Pound's address to the American Bar Association on August 29, 1906 in St. Paul tended to get "lost this summer amid the ballyhoo attending the Bicentennial celebration," the Reveres said.

Professor Robert Revere pointed out that the speech was "important enough that the federal judiciary met in St. Paul in August to commemorate the 70th anniversary of the speech."

Justice Tom C. Clark in the 1964 Harvard Law Review, the Reveres' noted, said that "St. Paul set a minimum standard in judicial administration" while Dean John H. Wigmore, who was present at the historic meeting, called Pound's speech "the spark that kindled the white flame of progress."

Pound's speech has been extensively analyzed as a contribution to judicial administration, the Reveres pointed out in their article. Lacking in the multitude of analyses, however, has been any exploration of why the speech was able to produce such an impact on court reform.

The Reveres' article deals with how Pound fit into history and how he was part of the movement for change that was evident in the Progressive Era (1900-1920).

Dr. Robert Revere, probably the only certified court administrator in the Pennsylvania State College System, is a graduate of Roosevelt University in Chicago and the Asia Institute in New York. He was awarded his Ph.D. at New York University in 1970. After certification at the Institute for Court Management in Denver, Colorado, Dr. Revere was admitted to the Society of Fellows of the Institute in 1974.

He has authored numerous papers in the criminal justice field, including a case study presented to the Institute for Court Management as an internship study in Washington, D.C.

His wife, Dr. Virginia Revere, earned her degrees at the University of Chicago and has done additional graduate study at Bryn Mawr College, Temple University, and Cornell University. Prior to her appointment at Mansfield State, she was a staff psychologist at Trenton State Hospital in Trenton, New Jersey and at the Bucks County Psychiatric Center in Pottsville, Pa. Dr. Revere also did private consulting part-time in addition to her faculty duties at Mansfield.

Dr. Revere was also staff psychologist for the N.E. Mental Health Clinic in Philadelphia and psychotherapist at the Philadelphia Center for Neurology. She did casework in Ithaca, N.Y. and Camden, N.J., and was a social investigator for the New York Department of Welfare. Mrs. Revere has also written a book, Applied Psychology in Criminal Justice, to be published this year by Nelson Hall (Chicago).

Commenting on the latest Pound article, Dr. Robert Revere reflected, "We've been working on related areas for years, but this is the first time we sat down and formally tried to combine expertise.

MOUNTIE BAND DEVELOPS NEW STYLE

A jazzy new marching style developed this year by the Mountie Marching Band received a standing ovation at its first performance.

According to Richard Talbot, director of the band, the philosophy of marching bands is changing. "More and more schools are going to the drum corps style. I have wanted to do this for about three years," Talbot said. Previously, the latest trends for marching bands showed up in the Band's musical selections and arrangements. Don Kuhns and Dave Burkhart, graduate assistants in the music department, provided much needed help this year to implement the new style.

Field Formations were designed to enhance the quality of the sound of the music and create a visual effect. The precision marching style was formerly used to create a picture — to form a circle, diamond or other shape.

"With instruments turned in various directions, the quality of the sound was lost," Talbot said. "Under the new system instruments are turned in the same direction to improve the quality of the sound."

Countless hours have been put into getting the new style together. Talbot said the students "had to develop confidence in their own abilities." There were many frustrating moments at the beginning of the season. Changes were being made constantly — even up to the rehearsal for the final show.

The band tries to perform what appeals to the audience, making changes to suit what the audience will best respond to. Often subtle, such as rewriting the finale to a different key to bring out a better sound. The changes brought favorable reactions from audiences that made all the frustrations of rehearsal well worth the efforts.

Capping off the successful transition, the new marching style was presented to nearly 70,000 people at Shea Stadium in New York City during the half time of the New York Jets—Miami Dolphins game, Nov. 7. Talbot believes this appearance was good for promoting the college. "Where else are we going to be able to put Mansfield State College in front of 70,000 people?"

To "get away from the stereo-type band concert" and to thank the public for their support during the football season, the band presents "A Night With the Mounties" at the close of each grid season. Talbot calls it "free wheeling and a lot of fun" with the foot-tapping, hand-clapping music of the Mountie Marching Band.

Under the direction of Talbot, Junior Drum Major David Cross, Senior Drum Major Ron Blahausch and Field Captain Glen Brumbach, the band performed selections from "Around the World in the Bicentennial Year" and other selections ranging from "Granada" (featuring soloist Rob Byham) to "Americans We", "Stars and Stripes Forever", and "Two O'Clock Jump" one of the all-time favorites at Mansfield.

MANSFIELD RECRUITING HAS "PERSONAL TOUCH"

College recruiting has become a highly competitive and sophisticated business. Gone are the days when prospective students were beating down admissions offices' doors and three students waited in line for every one who left school.

Forced by declining enrollments, admissions officials have updated policies and procedures as well as attitudes to meet the strong competition for students.

The decline, brought on by lower birth rates, elimination of the "draft", and increasing college costs, has led colleges and universities across the country to bring in consulting firms and agencies to suggest improvements in admission policies and procedures. Through planning and photography, most schools have produced colorful, attractive and alluring brochures.

Mansfield's Dean of Admissions, David Stearns, stresses the importance of personal contact with prospective students. Each year admissions personnel travel more than 20,000 miles in an effort to give the College maximum exposure.

Clarence Crisp, assistant dean of admissions, frequently journeys to urban areas to recruit minority students in keeping with Mansfield's affirmative action and desegregation programs.

To Crisp, admissions work is "personality based." General procedures are followed but personal relationships must be developed to gain the trust of an interested student. "Success builds on this. The quality of follow-up is more important than initial contact" with an interested student. Crisp says small things are important — remembering qualities and interests of prospective students and relating these back to them.

In tune with some of the latest recruiting trends, programs to introduce the College to prospective students have increased in scope and number.

Dean David Stearns and students

Members of the Mansfield staff visit approximately 400 high schools throughout Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey. High school counselors, contacted by the admissions office, arrange to have interested students meet with the college representatives at the high schools. The staff speaks at assembly programs and an occasional small class gathering to present the college and its programs.

"I put in 2,300 miles last month — and am well on my way to at least 1,000 this month," says Crisp. Accounting for part of this mileage are joint recruitment programs for desegregation of state schools. Representatives from the 14 Pennsylvania state colleges travel to Philadelphia and Pittsburgh for these minority recruitment programs.

Mileage increases as staff members travel to College Day and College Fair programs. College Day attracts about 100 college representatives to a high school for one night enabling students to inquire about academic programs, new financial programs such as Project Ahead and any other facet of campus life. College Fair, similar in structure, is on a far larger scale. Mansfield is one of approximately 500 colleges attending such fairs in New York City and Washington, D.C.

In October, Mansfield sponsored College Career Day. Housed in the campus recreation center were representatives from various colleges (two-year and four-year colleges, a school of commerce, area community colleges); Army, Navy, and Marine Corps; forestry and environmental resources; banking and small business; and state police. This joint effort of the Admissions Office and Rod Kelchner, dean of students, enabled senior high school students from Potter, Bradford and Tioga counties to explore career opportunities and courses of study pertinent to career choices.

To acquaint prospective students with the Mansfield campus, three formal campus visitations are held during the year. All students expressing interest in Mansfield and their parents are invited to visit. Various campus literature is available to the students. For those desiring specific information concerning the wide-range of academic programs at Mansfield, faculty members are available to answer questions. A tour of the campus conducted by Mansfield students is also included.

According to Stearns, 5,000 invitations were sent to prospective students for the fall Campus Visitation Day held on Nov. 20. 500 students and their parents attended.

To further acquaint prospective students with Mansfield, advertisements are placed in College Today, a magazine sent to high schools in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and New York, and in Transfer Guide, a publication sent to community and junior college students.

Crisp feels that advertising is "getting the name of the College out on the street and becoming known." He said activities sponsored on campus draw attention to Mansfield, but "our best advertising is our people and how we treat the students here."

In addition, Mansfield distributes a general information package used to acquaint students with every facet of college life. Brochures spell out degree program requirements, student fees (tuition, financial aid), equal opportunity programs, housing, campus recreation and general information about the college, faculty, research facilities and student government. A color-view book offers visual contact of the entire campus through a series of color photographs, according to Stearns.

"Since 1970," said Stearns, "colleges have become sophisticated in the recruitment of students. We're attempting to take the positive aspects of our campus and put them into the view book. We feel we have a beautiful location with a fine academic program. We want to expound upon these ideas to prospective students and their parents."

For the second consecutive year, the Admissions Office has purchased from the College Board in Princeton, N.J., lists of prospective students. A form is sent to the office by College Board listing various characteristics of prospective students (information gathered when the college boards are administered to the students) — geographic areas, financial backgrounds as well as the college board scores. The admissions office then narrows the list to 3,000 students to be contacted.

The National Merit Association provides another source for obtaining the names of prospective students. The list of the Pennsylvania finalists is the only one selected because of the considerable number of finalists in the state, according to Stearns. In an attractive envelope with a photo from the color view book, a prospective student receives a color flyer (a condensed version of the color-view book), an application and financial aid information.

Consulting firms used throughout the country to beef-up recruiting and admission practices are good for improving the mechanics of the office; but, according to Crisp, this is not necessary at Mansfield. He explained that these firms do not have insight into the college. If we "go that route, then we're going to lose individuality." And individuality and personal contact are the crux of recruiting at Mansfield.

Thousands of face-to-face contacts are made by Mansfield State personnel each year as they chalk up more thousands of miles to achieve that personal touch so important to today's youth. Yet the ratio of contact to actual enrollment is very low. Each year college personnel across the nation improve their recruiting efforts in a seemingly never-ending battle for the prospective student.

The task is to find the dwindling number of soon-to-be college age high schoolers and convince them, and their parents, of the need for higher education in a highly competitive market.

Personal contact important to recruiting

LIFE-LONG LEARNING IS FOCAL POINT

Story and Photo by Reta Trainor

"The Continuing Education Program at Mansfield State College continues to be a program that brings the college and community together," says Mr. Richard Howe, president of First Citizens National Bank. Howe, an instructor for the continuing education division, sees the college as "the focal point of the community."

Dr. W. Biesel

Under the guiding hand of Dr. William Biesel, the division of Continuing Education has grown from 87 registered students in 1972 to the present figure of 2,260 student registrations. Facilities and resources at the college are utilized to meet the crucial needs of the region explains Dr. Biesel. "When I started this, I didn't have any raw material, but I've been building, building, building."

The scope of the division is vast including modular programs that offer comprehensive study in a particular field such as the Management of Small Businesses. Now in its second year, the non-credit business program stresses the practical aspects of management and operation. Dr. Biesel believes the enrollment increase over last year in this module exemplifies the need for providing such a service to the region.

Dennis Shattuck, a photographer and resident of Blossburg, completed the program last year. Shattuck who has an established business, participated in the program to confirm that his efforts in business were correct.

To Shattuck, "planning for success" is what the course is all about.

Every course offered was "vital to understanding the over-all picture of the operation of business," said Shattuck. Within the informal classroom structure the interaction of the businessmen (students) enhanced the quality of the course. Shattuck further explained that everyone has experiences to share to give better understanding to the complexities of business.

Increasingly popular, the "non-credit courses are more relaxive" related one student. These courses are touching the needs of a cross-section of people. The non-credit offerings have become a major emphasis of the continuing education division.

This fall, sign language was taught to grandparents, relatives and friends of deaf people. Arthur and Frances Gates Eld ('24) have a nine-year-old granddaughter who has been deaf since the age of four. They drove once a week from Coudersport, Pa. for this eleven week course "to be able to communicate with her a little better."

Sam Thomas, assistant professor in the art department at Mansfield, works at an Easter Seal camp for two weeks each year. "Some of the children have communication difficulties and many use sign language," he explained. "The course will help with camp work."

Dr. Robert Swinsick's class on School Law is another example of a heavily subscribed course. Dr. Swinsick, dean of secondary education, helped update teachers on various federal programs or latest court decisions on law pertaining to public schools. The course is one of several courses especially tailored to meet the needs of school districts in the region.

Dr. Biesel observed that Continuing Education is offering a "wide variety of off-campus courses for teachers in the surrounding area."

Branching out into another field of interest, the division takes a Fine Arts Festival Program to Sayre, Pa. each spring. Festival performers will include the Mansfieldians, concert choir, the College Players and the Symphony orchestra. Other requests for similar performances throughout Pennsylvania's Northern Tier continue to come.

The Quality of Life program, with emphasis on philosophical, biological and literary aspects of life, was offered originally as an experimental course, according to Dr. Biesel. It was expanded to include services to residents of Potter County to make them more aware of the environmental impact of the development of land-use policy.

To help area residents fully understand the need for such a policy, the humanistic side of the situation was explained through newspaper articles, radio programs and town meetings, by members of the Mansfield faculty. Others from the college helped with the technical aspects of planning.

In addition to housing many and varied course offerings, Dr. Biesel's office coordinates, develops and supports various conferences held on the Mansfield campus.

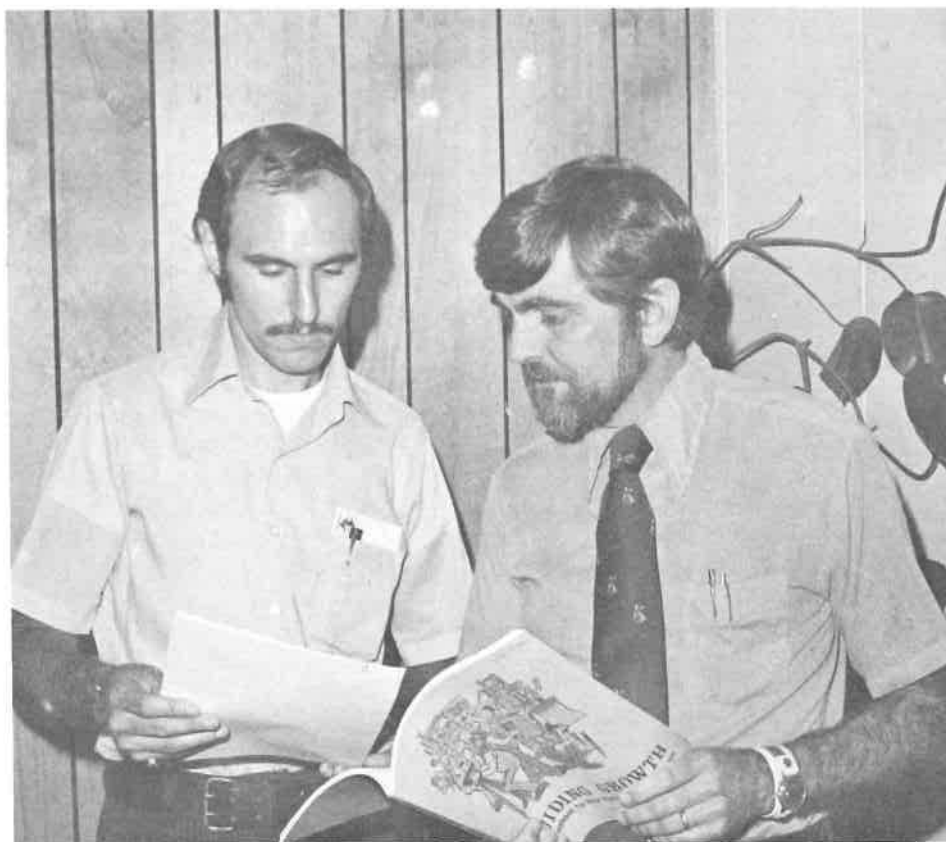

In September, a lobbying and legislative workshop was held to "give the people of Tioga County a better understanding of the Legislative process and the effect lobbying has on the passage or defeat of specific bills," Dr. Biesel commented. The speakers addressed such topics as the workings of the legislative process, problems and responsibilities of a legislator, responsibilities of a lobbyist as well as joint efforts of the legislator and lobbyist.

An Older American Legislative Conference sponsored in October by the Pennsylvania Association for Older Persons and the Northern Tier Agency on Aging Advisory Council was another effort coordinated by the division. The conference was designed to bring together older citizens from the Northern Tier with State Government officials "to discuss issues and legislation affecting older Pennsylvanians."

This fall the division offered an opportunity for adults in the northern tier to earn College credits while studying at home. The program, which is called Independent Group Study, is for the "serious student who can study in a non-classroom situation," according to Dr. Robert Wooley, professor of history at the College.

Dr. Wooley and Dr. Arthur Barlow, professor of English, meet periodically with students in the new learning situation. Dr. Barlow is offering "Reading's in Literature: The Novel" under the IGS program. Both professors communicate with participants so that "students receive as much individual attention as in a traditional class."

PLANNING DOCUMENT COMPLETED FOR POTTER COUNTY

Dr. Biddison added that the Mansfield team tried to give three geographically separated communities in the county "an increased awareness of the nature and limitations of the social, physical, and ethical framework in which they live." He pointed out that this awareness would help public officials in planning decisions for the county.

Others on the team included Dr. Stephen Bickham, an associate professor of philosophy, and the late Dr. Edward Gassner, an associate professor of biology, whose untimely death last May delayed slightly the progress of the report.

"Dr. Edward Gassner was not only our friend and respected colleague," Dr. Biddison and Bickham reflected, "he was the originator and motivating force behind our entire 'quality of life' endeavor. It was Ed who insisted that we, as teaching humanists, use our talents to help bring into focus the personal and community responsibility of maintaining a high quality of life on earth."

In brief, the final report notes that a sizeable majority of the people acquainted with the ramifications of planning versus non-planning favor careful planning to guide the future growth of Potter County. "In spite of our impression at the town meetings of vocal opposition to the idea of growth in the county," Dr. Bickham said, "the questionnaire reveals that 60% do NOT want a 'no growth' policy and that 52% would even encourage industrial development in the county."

The Mansfield State philosophy professor pointed to the most striking aspect of the survey figures as a near equality of "yes" and "no" answers instead of being clustered on either end. "Our analysis is that county planners cannot regard these figures as a mandate in either direction," Dr. Bickham said, yet officials responded appreciatively to the results of the project.

In the words of the Coudersport borough manager, Mary Doering DeWane, "I very much appreciate the opportunity to hear the opinions of others. It is difficult for public officials to have a chance to hear what the public wants. We get complaints, but their philosophy and feelings about the future are not as readily spoken."

Earlier this year, professors Biddison, Bickham and Gassner conducted a seminar on the quality of life in Wellsboro and last year presented a slightly different program in Sayre.

"We do not try to tell the people what is right or wrong or what they should plan for," the Mansfield State team concluded. "Instead we just try to help them formulate in their own ways how to make intelligent and effective choices. The interest we have seen in county and local officials and in the general public has been most gratifying. The residents of all three Potter County communities have pretty well laid to rest the old notion that people are apathetic."

A comprehensive planning document prepared by three Mansfield State College professors, has been completed for the Potter County Planning Commission.

The project, entitled "Growth, Change, and the Quality of Life," was conducted with weekly sessions divided among three communities in the Potter County area. A total of nine sessions with county residents were held in Coudersport, Galeton, and Ulysses over a period of several months.

The project which was supported by the Public Committee for the Humanities in Pennsylvania, an affiliate of the National Endowment for the Humanities, was jointly sponsored by Mansfield State College's Division of Continuing Education and the Potter County Planning Commission.

According to project director Dr. Larry Biddison, a professor of English at Mansfield State, a final evaluation session with citizens representing the three communities involved, convened in September at the Pennsylvania Lumber Museum to give shape to the final report. The remainder of the time was spent compiling and publishing data until the report was presented to Potter County officials on December 14.

"We saw a clear need to help citizens of Potter County initiate public discussions of their problems," Dr. Biddison stated; "and believed that their active involvement in the planning process would help them attain some measure of control over the direction of future change as well as minimize the adverse effects of inevitable change."

EMPLOYMENT OF MANSFIELD GRADS UP 3%

Mansfield State College graduates found employment easier in 1976 than one year ago, declares the College's Annual Placement Report released recently, with a considerable increase in those finding employment in their field.

Thomas Costello, director of career planning and placement, notes a total of 59% of 422 graduates from the class of 1976 reported employment, an increase of 3% over 1975. The report cited a 16% increase of those graduates obtaining employment closely related to their field or academic major. A total of 212 out of 422 returning the yearly survey said they were employed in their field for a 50% rate. Only 43% were employed in their field for 1975.

Of the 609-member class, 69% returned the placement office questionnaire. The report also noted an increase of 11.5% of no information obtained over the previous year, jumping from 18% in 1975 to 30.5% in 1976. No information was received from 187 graduating seniors this year compared to 130 the year before.

The percentage of those seeking employment declined sharply from 31% in 1975 to only 19.3% in 1976. Those in graduate school, military service, or not seeking employment increased from 5% to 8.9%.

"As the job market decreases in the northeast states," Costello reflected, "one would suspect that our graduates would seek employment outside of the state. Just as last year, this is not the case."

Of the 422 reporting seniors, the report said, 198 are currently employed in-state; 52 out-of-state, including 3 overseas; and 34 are attending graduate schools. The survey also indicated that 21 members of this class were not seeking employment during the survey period. Most of those who were employed (79%) found jobs in Pennsylvania, an increase of 2% over last year. However, those employed closely related to their field in Pennsylvania showed a decline of 4.5% from 37% in 1975 to 32.5% in 1976.

Costello said that surveys and telephone calls from out-of-state suggest that Mansfield students should be more flexible regarding geographic location for employment.

The class of 1976 is comprised of 369 students in teacher education, 46 students in professional programs, and 194 students in arts and sciences.

Percentages of students in each category varied only slightly from the previous year. There were 60.6% of the students enrolled in teacher education for 1976 compared to 62.3% from the year before; 7.5% in professional programs, up from 7.0% in 1975; and 31.8% in arts and sciences, up from 30.5% the previous year.

In 1974, Mansfield State graduated the largest class in the history of the College with a total of 893 persons receiving degrees from September 1, 1973 through August 30, 1974. For a similar period, the class of 1975 showed a sharp decline of 200 students with 693 degrees awarded. The class of 1976 included 609 degrees for the same period, a decline of 84 from one year ago.

Costello explained that survey returns for arts and science majors were only 77 of 194 or 39.3%, but still well above the return rate nationally for arts and science majors. "One of our problems in placement offices across the nation," Costello continued, "has been the failure of arts and sciences graduates to respond to placement surveys, which does leave colleges with less than totally reliable data on employment."

Many Mansfield seniors are not sure of their career direction and find relating their education to job opportunities confusing, Costello said.

"The problem of what one does after college is our problem as well as the students' and we must begin to explore the parameters of the problem and look toward reasonable solutions."

Placement Office personnel support intern programs offered at Mansfield as an aid toward solution of the problem. "The results of our survey clearly indicate that where arts and science majors participate in internship programs, employment for those graduates seems to rise," the report states. "Departments which offer intern programs, without any question, have the highest percent of employment or attendance at graduate school."

Today's current employment conditions dictate a real need for career planning, the report concluded. "It is clear that more attention by instructors to careers is needed in all courses which lend themselves to the world of work." To help avoid the confusion of a slow market, students are urged to develop employment options.

LIBRARY ADDS NEW SYSTEM

Two new staff members and improved technology are part of several changes in the library at Mansfield State. James Simonis, director of library services, said that Fred Batt and Gary Rossi, research librarians, have been added to the staff and a new cataloging system has been initiated in the main library.

Batt received a masters in library science from Indiana University in Bloomington, Penna., and a bachelor of arts in psychology from Rutgers University. Prior to joining the Mansfield library staff, he was employed as a reference bibliographer for education and psychology at the University of Cincinnati in Ohio.

Rossi received a masters in library science from the State University College at Geneseo, a masters of arts in French from Middlebury College in Vermont and a bachelor of arts in history and French from the State University of New York at Buffalo. Rossi has taught junior and senior high French in Orchard Park, N.Y.

Through a computer network, Mansfield can receive cataloging data from Ohio and purchase catalog cards printed to the library's specifications. Within four or five seconds, an entire entry for a book-title, author, call number, subject and book description is available.

Mansfield joined the Pennsylvania Area Library Network (PALINET) and installed a computer terminal to complete the new system this fall. The system makes use of the Ohio College Library Center, a national center for cataloging information.

This on-line system also enables Mansfield to determine who owns certain resources which may be shared through interlibrary loan.

Other changes occurred in the Retan library, which began as a working library for the library science program. It has become a "curriculum material center," according to Simonis, housing volumes on the history and philosophy of education and theories of teaching which were previously housed in the main library. Two reference librarians and two graduate assistants are now in Retan to provide more service.

The music library in Butler has added 20 cassette players for students listening assignments. According to Simonis, this system provides more flexibility than the dial-access system previously used.

SPORTS

MAISNER IS NEW ASSISTANT BASKETBALL COACH

There is a new "big man" on the campus of Mansfield State College this fall, and he owns the title despite the fact he mingles among the campuses' "big men." That man is the new assistant basketball coach, six-foot, six-inch Roger Maisner.

A Marshall, Michigan native, Maisner assumed the assistant coaching duties under Ed Wilson, replacing John Kochan who took over an assistant's post at Davidson (N.C.) College. A year ago, Maisner worked as an assistant coach at Michigan State. Prior to receiving his masters' degree, he studied at the graduate level at Ferris State (Mich.) and Central Michigan University.

Maisner will be in his fourth year of coaching basketball. He was the head coach and assistant principal at Tekonsha High School (Mich.) for two years, then went on to Michigan State last year.

Like Ed Wilson, the Mountie head coach, Maisner is a strong advocate of year-round basketball and says his basic coaching philosophy does not vary much from Wilson's concepts. "I'll obviously have to adapt to the system here, but it has not been hard because we both believe in a basic emphasis on fundamentals, defense, rebounding, and the fast break," Maisner said.

Queried further about his basketball philosophy, Maisner said he feels particularly strong about playing tough defense. "I know Coach Wilson has always been known for his strong defenses, but I think I put even more of an emphasis on it. The better your defense, the less you have to worry about scoring," he said. "The best offense is a good defense."

Maisner's strong defensive philosophy could come from his exposure to the rugged Big Ten Conference last year, and also from his three-year tenure as an assistant trainer for the Detroit Pistons of the National Basketball Association.

"It will definitely be a trying year for us," the new assistant coach pointed out. "We're so young and inexperienced, it's impossible to predict what will happen. But these can be the kind of years that are the most interesting," he added.

VOLLEYBALLERS MAKE NATIONAL TOURNEY

Capping off a successful season, the Mountie Lassies' volleyballers traveled to Malibu, California December 8-11 for the national finals of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (A.I.A.W.).

In its second season of intercollegiate play, the team, coached by Hugh Schintzius, compiled a 27-7 record for the regular season and placed second in the Eastern Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (E.A.I.A.W.) regional tournament hosted at Mansfield. The second place victory entitled the team to compete in the National Tournament.

The Lassies ran into tough competition from Florida Tech, the University of San Diego and St. Catherine's College and were eliminated from the 18-team small college tournament on the Pepperdine College campus.

Lisa Messing, one of the team's leading returnees, led the team in assists and was named Most Valuable Player at the Elmira College Women's Volleyball Tournament this year. A sophomore, Lisa is also the top guard on the women's basketball team.

A freshman, Barb Moresco was one of the team's most pleasant surprises. Barb, a walk-on among several highly-recruited freshmen players, developed into the team's most versatile performer. She and Messing were two key players in the Mounties offense.

Barb comes from quite an athletic background. Her father, Joe, was a three-time, three-letter winner at Mansfield State from 1948-50, and her brother, Tim, was an All-East football star at Syracuse this fall.

The team captain, Jean Nachtway, was one of the team's top all-around players, according to Schintzius. A letter-winner from last season's squad, Schintzius described Nachtway as one of the most improved players on the team and a big reason the team had such a successful season.

CHEYNEY FAVORED TO REPEAT DIVISION TITLE

There are likely to be some changes in the standings of the Pennsylvania State Colleges Conference's eastern division this season, but they are not likely to occur at the top. Once again, Cheyney, with virtually its entire squad from last year returning intact, is an odds-on favorite to repeat, not only as champions of the East, but as the PSCAC champions, too.

Kutztown and Bloomsburg, with veteran squads and deep in experience will be battling John Chaney's Wolves for the no. 1 position and each other, more than likely for the runnerup spot, with Millersville and its one-man arsenal, Phil Walker, not too far behind. There's little difference in the rest of the pack — Mansfield, Shippensburg, and East Stroudsburg — all flooring young clubs are in the throes of rebuilding programs.

Mountie Coach Ed Wilson, with only two players returning from last year's squad, is in the midst of a rebuilding year. Despite the return of Stan Mahan, Mansfield has its youngest, most inexperienced team in recent years. Mahan, a junior, teams up with two sophs — Billy Nasser and George Edwards (6-8) — one freshman (Loren Stoney, 6-5) and Junior College transfer (6-4 Duane Dodwell) as Wilson's shift from an inside, power offense to a fast break attack to take advantage of the speed and quickness among this year's inexperienced, but talented group.

CENTARIAN FINDS LIFE BEAUTIFUL

CLASS OF 1899

At the age of 104, life can be beautiful. With her radiant smile, her sharp mind and witty sense of humor, Effie Alleman, is living proof of this.

Mrs. Alleman, of Kemmerer, Wyoming, recently traveled over 2000 miles to visit her birthplace in West Nicholson, Pa. which had been called Bear Town when she was a girl.

Mrs. Alleman was born on July 22, 1872. At the age of 11, she and her family moved to Forkston. She taught a half year of school when she was 14 and received her teaching certificate at the age of 15. She continued her education at Mansfield State Normal School, graduating with a class of 107 in 1899.

She recalls other classmates who were prominent in Wyoming County. The late Percy Stark, Judge Edward B. Farr and John Morgan were among them.

She spoke of the late Dr. Walter Twewksbury, "knew him well and remember his great running ability."

In 1907, she, her husband George, their two children and her parents boarded a Union Pacific train and headed west. They all filed homesteads near Cokesville, Wyoming, a hamlet on the Wyoming-Idaho-Utah boarder.

She and her husband started a 180-acre ranch and had four more children, and she began to teach. There were no buses, of course, and nearby families sent their children to her ranch where she taught them in the kitchen. Eventually, a schoolhouse was built.

It wasn't easy, but, as she says, "It can be quite a life if you love life and meet problems with the Heavenly Father's help."

She took 10 years out from teaching to serve as clerk of the county court, but went back to teaching before running for school superintendent, a job she held until her 90's. Twice a year she'd make the 400-mile roundtrip to her school district. "I had a little Studebaker that could fly and used hardly any gas," she says.

She remembers working at all of the World Fairs in the early years. Also, she loved to hunt with a rifle, and shotgun. At the age of 90, she can remember hunting elk on horseback.

At the age of 95, she and her family flew to Alaska for a visit and a few years before that she went to Hawaii.

One of the finest tributes was made to her on her 100th birthday when the state proclaimed "Effie Alleman Day" and she rode in the parade.

This year she was given a full page coverage in the "Centennial" magazine.

local historical research. "It's an awful lot of work but it is rewarding and educational to many people of all ages.

CLASS OF 1933

Winifred Randolph has retired as a special education teacher at the Warren L. Miller Elementary School, in Mansfield, Pa. Mrs. Randolph was active in special education in the Mansfield schools for many years and began the first class in special education when the elementary school was on the campus of Mansfield State College. She was replaced by Linda Riseborough '73, her daughter.

CLASS OF 1954

The fourth grade students in Louise Pier Bement's class at Lansing Central School compiled the "Portland Point Memory Book", a 17 page publication describing an abandoned settlement once known as the hamlet of Portland

Point. During the school year the students collected pictures, compiled information, interviewed former residents and visited sites in the Lansing's abandoned settlement.

Curious about the old foundation relics she found while hiking along the east shore of Cayuga Lake, Mrs. Bement started the project and aroused the interest of the children by reading to them the story of an abandoned village.

During the course of the project, many former workers and residents of Portland Point gathered to swap tales, look at pictures of Portland Point and see the scale model of the area made and put together by the fourth graders.

Mrs. Bement says she will be applying for a "mini-grant" to do more marching unit in the parade from Pennsylvania.

As associate professor of music at Shippensburg, Dr. Truax holds degrees from Mansfield State College, Ithaca College and Pennsylvania State University. He taught instrumental and general music in the Wellsboro Area Schools from 1958 to 1968 and was coordinator and supervisor of the music department there. CLASS OF 1975

BARBARA FENSTERMACHER '75

In a pale yellow classroom with magazine pictures on the walls, 15 students from 17 to 60 years of age are studying food and nutrition under the supervision of Barbara Fenstermacher, a 1975 graduate of Mansfield State.

No ordinary adult education class, the sessions meet daily at the State Correctional Institution for Women in Muncy, Pa. The students are inmates — or "residents" as they prefer to be called — and they study various home-making skills under Miss Fenstermacher.

Mary (a pseudonym), who is studying child care and sewing, raves about her teacher. "She's great. She takes her time with people and is a good teacher." Miss Fenstermacher has inspired new confidence in Mary and helped her learn something "I never thought I could do. When I get out, the thing I'm going to do is buy a sewing machine . . . I really feel proud of myself."

Susan (a pseudonym) is in the food and nutrition and sewing classes. She proudly displays a dress she is making for her daughter — a size two pattern.

Employed by Intermediate Unit 18 of Luzerne County, Miss Fenstermacher's efforts are directed towards the vocational aspects of home economics . . . preparing the women in the institution for employment following release, and developing self sufficiency with each woman.

Enrollment in the vocational courses is voluntary. Each course is structured to channel interests, skills and knowledge into an employment opportunity. Homemaker services provide pretraining for a home-health-aide job. After release, Judy (a pseudonym) hopes to work with children and is studying child care to prepare for this. Through intermediate and advanced sewing, skills are developed for possible employment in the clothing industry — the students use home and industrial sewing machines. Upon completion of a course, each student receives a certificate which symbolizes the newly acquired knowledge.

Flexibility is crucial to her classes. Class attendance is often interrupted by changing work schedules, doctor's appointments, commissary calls, or detention in the behavioral adjustment unit — more commonly known as solitary confinement.

Course content changes to meet the needs of the women. Often they need someone to listen to their thoughts or to just discuss personal problems relating to the subject matter — understanding the developmental stages and emotional needs of their children. The course structure must be flexible to accommodate a diversified range of reading abilities — fourth grade to twelfth grade plus.

"I really enjoy my classes and can get close to the students." The classes are small giving Miss Fenstermacher a chance to really understand the women's problems and help them attain their personal goals. "These women are determined to do something with themselves." The growing friendship and encouragement coupled with increasing knowledge and skills are vital to improving the women's self-awareness and self-worth.

HELP US FIND THESE ALUMS!

In the November issue of the Mansfieldian an article was run entitled "Help Us Find These Alums." The response to this plea was so good, we have decided to continue this article. If you happen to know where any of these alumni are, drop us a line at the Development Office. Thank you.

IN MEMORIAM

CYNTHIA D. WHITE

Cynthia Daily White, age 47, wife for 29 years of James White ('50) of Carrier, Mississippi died at her Mississippi home following an illness of several months duration.

She was born on March 23, 1929 in Wellsboro, the daughter of Emily March and Edwin W. Dailey.

She attended the University of Texas and Mansfield State College before attaining her Bachelor of Arts Degree with a major in English at Corpus Christi College.

During the early years of their marriage, the Whites resided in Mansfield for a brief time while they both attended Mansfield State College. Mr. White attained his College degree during that time.

Cynthia (Ciddy) White was a devout member and an active worker in the Presbyterian Church. She took an active interest in the town's Garden Club and worked many hours in her own garden raising flowers and vegetables. Her ability as a craftsman enabled her to knit and sew with ease and artistically and tastefully decorate her own home. She was a scholar and as a student of the Great Classics, she undertook a job teaching an adult class on the Classics.

A memorial service was held at the Presbyterian Church in Metairie, Louisiana on Friday, December 31st.

DORIS MAE BOMGARDNER

Doris Mae Bomgardner, a retired Palmyra, Pa. school teacher and resident of 201 W. Penn Road, Lehigh Acres, Fla. died November 5 in the Lehigh Acres General Hospital. She was 74 and had been hospitalized for two weeks.

Prior to her retirement, she taught in the Palmyra schools for 30 years, mainly as a seventh grade English teacher.

Mrs. Bomgardner was the wife of former Palmyra mayor Roy L. Bomgardner.

A native of Blakely, Pa. Mrs. Bomgardner was a graduate of Blakely High School and Mansfield State Teachers College in 1921.

Mrs. Bomgardner was a life member of the Pennsylvania Retired Teachers Association and Palmyra Chapter 402, Order of Eastern Star.

She was a member of Christ United Methodist Church. Lehigh Acres, and the Women's Society of the church.

She also held membership in a number of organizations in Lehigh Acres. She was a past president of the Lehigh Acres Hospital Auxiliary and a past president of the Grandmother's Club. She was a secretary of the Lehigh Acres Republican Club and she held membership in the American Association of Retired People.

JUDGE JOHN J. SIROTNAK

Former Judge John J. Sirotnak ('21), 312 Dunmore St., Throop, Pa. died Friday night at Moses Taylor Hospital at the age of 75. His widow is the former Susan J. Muto ('23), who taught school and served as librarian of Throop School District.

Judge Sirotnak, who rose from the ranks of slate picker in a Midvalley mining operation, taught school, practiced law for 44 years and in 1960 was named Judge of the Orphans Court of Lackawanna County by Gov. David L. Lawrence. He was named as successor to the late Judge James F. Brady, and was elected to a full term in 1961. He retired at the expiration of the full term in January, 1972, and resumed the practice of law.

Judge Sirotnak at the age of 12 faced up to the realities and responsibilities of life and began work as a slate picker in the No. 1 Colliery of Pennsylvania Coal Co. He continued work in the coal mining industry, on and off, for several years while acquiring advanced education. At one time, he worked as a steeple jack and painter.

In 1919 he enrolled at Mansfield Normal School and began a teaching career in 1921, that continued for seven years in Throop where he served as acting principal of Jefferson School. In the meantime he was attending St. Thomas College, now the University of Scranton, and Pennsylvania State College, now Pennsylvania State University. In 1928 he enrolled in University of Illinois where he obtained a bachelor of science degree in education. He continued at University of Illinois and was awarded a bachelor of law degree in 1932. He was admitted to the Lackawanna County Bar in 1932; also the Federal District Court of the Middle District, and the Superior and Supreme Courts of Pennsylvania.

In his years of law practice he was solicitor of Throop, Dickson City, and for 22 years solicitor for the Lackawanna County Institution District.

Judge Sirotnak has many civic activities. He was president of Midvalley Community Chest and chairman of its board; a member of the board of Midvalley Council of Boy Scouts; a director of Mid-Valley Hospital, served the Hospital Council of Lackawanna County, and was a member of the Elks.

THE COVER

Celebrated journalist Alex Haley makes a point during a press briefing following his speech on campus. Making his first public appearance since the announcement that his book, Roots, was awarded a Pulitzer Prize, Haley's address kicked off the observance of Black Awareness Week at Mansfield State. Fielding questions from the audience, he announced that ABC is producing a 12-hour sequel to the program which captured the largest ever television viewing audience, entitled "Roots: The Second Hundred Years." Plans are also underway for a new book dealing with his search about "Roots." (See related interview and photo page 15.)

ANNUAL GIVING

The May issue of the Mansfieldian has been designated for the purpose of summarizing the results of the 1976 annual fund drive. The idea is not to bore one with financial data or to overplead the case for fund raising, but rather to present last year's results while also setting a direction for future campaigns.

In calendar year 1976 a total of over $32,000.00 was raised from alumni and friends in support of the college. Much of this money has been used to assist various activities and projects on campus during the year, (see related article, page 4). 1976 was the most successful year in annual giving in the history of Mansfield State College. Not only in the amount of money received, but also in the number of individuals who participated in this campaign. Over 1,000 people contributed in 1976, an increase of over 100% from last year. When compared with previous years when the college was receiving only between two and three thousand dollars a year, a very positive upward trend has been indicated.

It might do well at this point to note however, that even with this success, only 708 of Mansfield's more than 11,000 alumni contributed. I realize this is only the second year of annual giving at Mansfield, but I would have thought that this percentage might have been somewhat higher.

For 1977 a more ambitious goal of $50,000.00 has been set. Much has been said in the past and will be continued to be said in the future concerning the fiscal situation of the state-owned institutions. The financial situation of all colleges throughout the country is quite tenuous, and it is becoming increasingly important for all colleges to depend upon external support to compensate for the additional costs which have come about due to inflation. Costs are rising at a much faster rate than increases being received from donations and outside support. Coupled with the fact that enrollments are declining, it is becoming increasingly difficult each year to finance all the programs necessary to continue providing a quality education. It is for this purpose that the Foundation was started, and it is hoped that over the years the Foundation will be able to make a significant contribution in helping the college resolve these financial problems.

In closing, I would like to thank everyone who supported the 1976 Annual Fund Drive. To build a more active alumni association, to continue providing quality education for all students, and to present the best kinds of programs takes the support of all to be successful. I encourage each and everyone to assist the 1977 effort.

Dear Friends,

As I write this tonight it is the eve of our 1977/78 budget hearing before the House Appropriations Committee. Three days later we will appear before the Senate. President Wilson of Cheyney State has characterized this time of the year as the "annual rain dance." Others have spoken less kindly of the process and the product.

We will go before the legislature asking for $190,000,000 in state money. That request asks to hold the line on tuition, a terribly important factor for the large majority of our students. The Governor's budget request has identified 178 million dollars for the fourteen state-owned institutions. Our request is already a compromise with demonstrated need for $202,000,000 and so the Governor's figure will represent sheer disaster for the colleges if the appropriation stays at that level.

The above is not intended to be a criticism of the Governor; he is the one responsible for balancing the state budget and that surely is a difficult task considering the nature of state income and economic considerations generally.

But regardless of what is eventually allocated to Mansfield State College, our work must go forward. We have been doing the usual belt tightening and reassessing priorities for expenditures trying to maintain the quality of essential services. Frankly, there is precious little room for additional adjustments; we need your help.

First of all, we need a major effort to overcome the apathy toward higher education. Not enough is being said these days to emphasize the value (not always in dollars) of an educated citizenry. What did your education mean to you as you think of the quality of your life? When was the last time you bragged about Mansfield? I know how much it means to you because you tell me about it. But I am not the one who needs convincing!

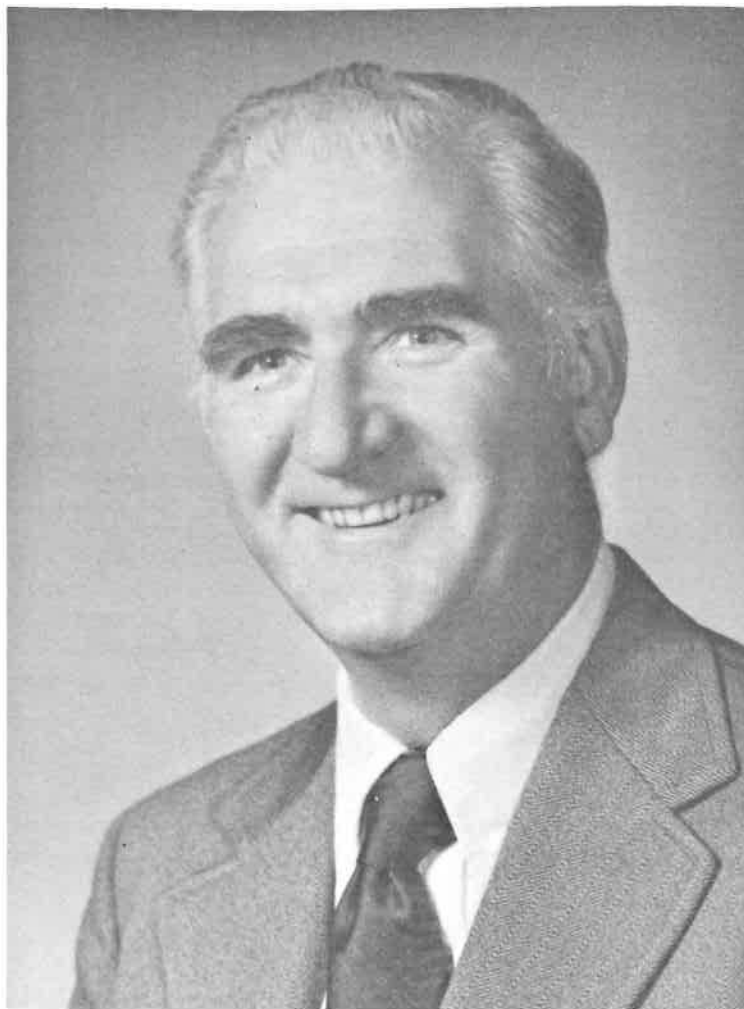

You have heard about declining college enrollments! It is happening here and elsewhere at a strange and unexpected rate — strange because the college age population isn't expected to drop until the early 1980's. Pennsylvania has traditionally had a lower percentage of high school graduates going on for post-secondary study than other large industrial states, but the percentage is dropping even lower. Did you know, for example, that of the Vietnam Vets only slightly more than 19% of Pennsylvania Vets have gone on for further education or about half the percentage of other states? I don't know why these facts are true but you as friends of Mansfield can help by talking about the value of education and encouraging young people to continue. Of course, Mansfield State College would be a good place for many of them.

Another thing you can do right now is to dig deep in your checkbook and support the annual giving program so well described elsewhere in this issue. Your contribution really can't overcome the kind of fiscal deficit I have described earlier, but it can make a sizeable difference in helping to make Mansfield a more attractive college to attend, by enriching so many of the excellent programs which characterize your college.

I am proud of the way alumni and other friends of Mansfield State have responded to Paul McMillen's leadership. We have in the Mansfield Foundation, under his directorship, an organization which has done really good things in a short span of time. But there is more to be done and now is the time to do it. Won't you please help by being as generous as your ability allows?

Sincerely,

LAWRENCE PARK
President

MANSFIELD FOUNDATION — STRONG AND GROWING

While Mansfield State College has a heritage that spans more than 100 years, the history of the Mansfield Foundation dates only from May of 1974. Understandably, the Foundation is still in its infancy but is growing like a teenager — thirteen going on twenty.

"We have to walk before we can run," declares J. Paul McMillen, executive director of the Foundation, commenting on the growth of an organization he helped to establish.

McMillen, a 1969 graduate of Mansfield State, came back to the college in February 1976 as Director of Development and has been largely responsible for the success of the tax-exempt, non-profit corporation. The Foundation was established exclusively to promote the interests and programs of Mansfield State College. Monies received are disbursed to ensure continuation or implementation of special programs and projects which might not otherwise be funded.

In only the second year of annual giving more than $30,000 was raised to support college programs and a goal of $50,000 has been set for this year. Assets of the Foundation have climbed in two short years to more than $150,000. If this rapid growth continues, the Foundation will soon be "going on twenty."

During the past year the Foundation supported numerous campus projects. Over $4,000 went in support of alumni activities such as Homecoming, Alumni Day, and the Mansfieldian; an equivalent amount went to assist The Mansfield Festival Theatre, a growing professional summer theatre program; more than $1,000 went to improve various academic programs; over $2,000 was awarded in scholarships; approximately $3,000 was used to help the Mountie Marching Band to perform at New York's Shea Stadium for the Jets-Dolphins football contest; $1,000 went to aid development of the college archives. Several other projects also received Foundation support.

"There are really two primary areas of the Foundation," McMillen outlined. "One deals with donations to the College through annual giving, while the second is concerned with the operational aspects of the Foundation."

Stressing an area of concern, McMillen pointed out that "not one cent of monies donated is used to meet the operational expenses of the Foundation. All monies received are used in direct support of programs at the college, either through unrestricted donations or for programs specifically designated by the donors. Operating costs are met through a number of programs run under the Foundation's auspices, and from interest income."

Citing examples, he singled out the grant program. Several grants from federal or state agencies support activities in the Fine Arts area of the college, while other grants may come in the form of a stipend from local organizations. One grant was used to sponsor a series of drug and alcohol abuse seminars, and another was given to implement a planning document for the Westfield Regional Planning Commission. The Foundation often receives a fee for the administration of these projects.

"Many times grants made to the college are not payable until expenses are actually incurred," McMillen continued, "so the Foundation has been assisting the college with loans to cover the expenses of the grants until the monies are finally available." The Foundation has helped numerous projects in this manner.

Dr. William Beisel, dean of continuing education, channels all of the non-credit course revenues from Continuing Education through the Foundation as well as funds for all conferences and workshops sponsored by the division.

The Foundation has provided the vehicle to conduct Mountie Athletic Club projects, except for social events, which directly benefit the college. Several pieces of athletic equipment were purchased during the past year by the Mountie Club through the Foundation.

According to Thomas R. Halloran, president of the Foundation's board of directors, a major goal of the organization is to establish a general scholarship fund which would enable scholarships to be perpetuated from the income earned by investment of its monies. An initial goal of $100,000 has been set to make the fund operable. "A strong scholarship program," asserted Halloran, who is president of Aqua-Flo Corporation in Charleston, West Virginia, "would attract a high quality of student to Mansfield. It would also have a tremendous impact on the college's recruitment efforts."

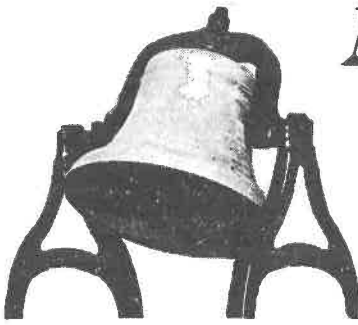

Along a similar line, McMillen talked about memorial gifts. Many persons have approached the Foundation to establish various memorial funds. "Individual memorials often do not generate enough funds to make awards ongoing," he explained. "Funds would either be frozen or would be depleted after only a few awards. One larger memorial fund would incorporate all such monies in an account which could sustain itself." The board of directors, at its spring meeting, took action to create such a memorial scholarship fund.

Additional growth of the Foundation will increase potential for direct benefit to the college's programs. During times of fiscal restraint, many fine programs might be adversely affected by budget cuts. A strong Foundation could step in with vital financial help.

Deferred giving, the inclusion of the Foundation in one's estate, is one area of potential growth. Such charitable donations have figured prominently in the growth of institutions across the country and could play a major role in the future at Mansfield State. "This form of contribution should be made to the Mansfield Foundation rather than directly to the college," McMillen cautioned. "If the college is named as a beneficiary, monies go into the state augmentation and can be used for any type of state program. They may or may not directly benefit Mansfield's programs."

Another area for future growth could be the formation of a permanent endowment fund which could provide a solid, noneroding financial base from which support could be drawn. A fund of this scope could be invaluable in the continued promotion of the interests and programs of Mansfield State College. McMillen added that the Foundation, although a young corporation, has taken significant steps in becoming a vital force in the future of Mansfield, but concluded that it depends on the support and assistance of all friends if the Foundation is to become a major force in the future financial planning of the college.

Children and students are partners in a special learning encounter at Mansfield State College's nursery school.

Housed in the department of home economics, the school provides excellent opportunities for area children, while acting as a living laboratory in which college students can observe early behavioral or developmental patterns.

Under the direction of Ms. Beverly Briggs, assistant professor of home economics, the children greatly enjoy the experience. Four year old Leslye Wooley says that it is so much fun that "one day my daddy came to get me early and I had to cry." Sandy Jo Williams, a three year old, explains that "we finger paint on the tables here. My mother wouldn't like it if I did that home."

According to Ms. Briggs, the school attempts "to offer the children opportunities for social enrichment and for activities not easily provided at home."

Besides finger painting, the children also sometimes use their toes for painting, and do other messy projects which require special equipment and lots of adult supervision. They can play at an indoor sand box, and can play outdoors every day. Having extra help available for putting on snowpants, boots, mufflers, mittens, hats, jackets, and rain gear makes that idea more practical at school than at home. All these advantages are dismissed by four year old Duane Mumma. He likes school because "there are fish here and we don't have any pets at home."

Parents too, have a high regard for the school. Beverly Jones '72 indicates that it was the "excellent reputation" of the school which encouraged her to enroll her four year old daughter Heidi. She is pleased with Heidi's experiences on campus. Bertie Whittaker enrolled her daughter Karen to encourage her independence and develop a sense of cooperation. She believes that a good pre-school experience "promotes readiness for school."

College students also benefit from this unique arrangement. "Observations of real behavior make learning the theories more interesting," one student remarked. "It is especially worthwhile to follow the progress of a specific child in socialization, speech development, and behavioral patterns over a semester or longer."

Citing additional benefits to the college participants, Ms. Briggs said, "For some of the students this participation is their first formal work with young children. They receive immediate feedback on their handling of specific problems and opportunities with the children." She went on to say that the school is an excellent introduction to youngsters and its promotes confidence in dealing with a variety of situations before the student participates with an agency outside the college. By the time a student is ready for the pre-professional semester there have been many opportunities for the interaction with children which builds competence.

Stephen Brown, an instructor for the child development and family relations options in home economics, points out that the experience gained at the nursery school is just one facet of a broad program. He places students as observers and participators with county boards of assistance, planned parenthood agencies, family courts, and similar groups after they have had some experience working at the nursery school.

Interaction between the college students and community children at the nursery school is profitable for all of the participants. By sharing in this progressive learning experience, they show that education can be fun.

PROFESSOR STUDIES ABROAD WITH MUSICAL GREAT

When does an established professor of music, knowledgeable church musician, and recitalist of note decide to take organ lessons?

Says Dr. Kent Hill, who teaches organ at Mansfield State, "He does when the wonderful opportunity to study with two of the great organists and interpreters of organ music of this century presents itself in the form of a sabbatical leave."

Dr. Kent Hill (left), Dr. Michael Schneider (right)

Dr. Hill and his wife, Janet, also an accomplished organist, moved to Cologne, West Germany last fall, and soon began intensive study with Dr. Michael Schneider at the Hochschule fur Musik.

Dr. Schneider, who has given recitals around the world for forty years, is highly respected among organists for his interpretations of the works of J.S. Bach. According to Dr. Hill, he premiered many of Paul Hindsmith's organ works and inherited from his teachers first-hand knowledge of performance styles of great German romantic composers, especially Max Reger.

"For me, as for other recipients, the sabbatical was extremely important," Dr. Hill reflected, "a valuable opportunity for growth and renewal."

Spending the better part of most days on his sabbatical practicing organ, Dr. Hill has had more time for concentrated practice than he had for ten years. "It was a unique opportunity to learn several large organ works that I never would have had time to learn while teaching."

Dr. Hill also had the opportunity to observe Dr. Schneider's teaching techniques as he worked with Mrs. Hill.

While in Europe, Dr. Hill gave three recitals which resulted in invitations for further performances in Germany, Denmark, and at Oxford University in England. He is presently planning an extended concert tour in Europe for the summer of 1978.

A week long "organ crawl" in North Germany and Holland proved very enriching for Dr. Hill, as he poked into many churches noted for their historic organs. "In gaining historical perspective," Dr. Hill maintains, "there is no substitute for playing and hearing similar, and in some cases, the same instruments that such composers as Sweelinck, Buxtehude, and Bach played and heard."

Just as study with Dr. Schneider brought new insights to the Bach organ works, as well as other German composers, the opportunity to play the renowned organ at St. Clotilde in Paris on which Cesar Franck played gave new historical perspective to the wonderful Franck organ works. Dr. Hill also had two sessions with Jean Langlais, a noted composer, organist and "grandstudent" of Franck.

Not all of the sabbatical was spent practicing. The Hills observed rehearsals and services sung by the New College Oxford Boys' Choir for two weeks, following the organ crawl. The choir is under the direction of Dr. David Lumsden, one of England's finest choral conductors.

In England, the Hills witnessed the Service of Lessons and Carols on Christmas Eve at King's College of Cambridge University. They also attended a performance of "Hamlet" at the newly opened National Theatre in London, and the ballet, "Romeo and Juliet," by Prokofiev, danced by the Royal Ballet at London's Convent Garden Opera House.

"I would like to reiterate my wholehearted support of the concept of the sabbatical year," Dr. Hill said in closing. "It is my hope that the work I am doing and plan to do here at Mansfield will reflect my entire sabbatical experience and will be of considerable benefit to the college."

UNUSUAL SUMMER COURSE OFFERS IMPORTANT INSIGHTS

The distinction between the classroom child and the total child is not simply a linguistic one. Mansfield State College students who participate in a summer school offering by art professor Sam Dee Thomas have an excellent opportunity to "begin to see children as individuals, rather than as a collection of educational statistics and norms", says Thomas.

Thomas teaches two courses "Art and Recreation for the Handicapped Child" and "Learning and Recreation for the Handicapped Child" in cooperation with the Easter Seal Society of Pennsylvania at its Camp Daddy Allen in White Haven, Pa.

Mansfield students live at the camp for the three week duration of the class. While receiving instruction from Easter Seal personnel and from Thomas, they actively participate in the camping program provided for the children.

Time is a critical ingredient in learning to appreciate another's point of view. Classroom situations necessarily limit one's understanding of the challenges faced by children, especially handicapped children. After sharing daily camping experiences with these children the college students begin to redefine their relationships with them. According to one student who participated in the course, Priscilla Roller, "You recognize the similarity of their goals and desires to your own. You start to work with them to find ways of fulfilling these goals despite their physical limitations."

Thomas has worked with the handicapped at such camps for twenty-five years. He feels that college students gain new insights into the nature of all children by working at the camp. They better understand what is important to young people and the strengths children have to pursue learning and fun after having worked with children for whom the process of pursuit is difficult.

"When you have worked for an extended period with a beautiful and intelligent young boy or girl who is trapped by a handicap, you may never again be dependent on a visual impression as the predominant feature in your initial judgement of others", declares Thomas.

While the courses offer specific skills for teaching handicapped children, Thomas points out that his classes are not just for potential teachers. Students reach a heightened understanding of the fact that every child has unique capabilities and that no child is simply part of a group.

Included in the course is a classroom session held on the Mansfield campus, on problems and goals for the camp portion of the class. At camp — in the midst of Hickory Run State Park in the Poconos — students receive additional orientation from the camp director and professional staff.

The camp, with its cabins, dining hall, dirt pathways, and recreational facilities offers a different learning situation from a more traditional classroom. Students live, learn, eat, and play with campers not just for a few classroom hours but for twenty-four hours each day.

Interested persons should contact Thomas at the Art Department or register for the classes through the Summer School Office by contacting Ms. Elaine DiBiase, director of summer sessions. The course is offered July 18-August 5.

SUNNY NEW LOOK FOR SUMMER SCHOOL

"Sunsession" which will be held from June 6 to August 5 offers an intriguing variety of stimulating programs to pursue this summer.

"We have changed the summer school schedule from three sessions to two this year," explained Ms. Elaine DiBiase, director of summer school. "More variations in scheduling are being offered in hopes of meeting student needs for flexibility."

Among the special courses offered are two art workshops taught by Lissa Hunter. One will explore functional, traditional, and aesthetic methods of basketry; the other will deal with methods of weaving, including macrame, knitting, crocheting, and rugmaking. Richard Mason's students will be meeting from 9 to 12 midnight to observe and identify the wonders of the night sky. High school music teachers can participate in a workshop by Thomas Norager which will deal with jazz and vocal literature.

Dr. Stanley Harrison will give a workshop entitled Theater Arts: From Script to Stage. His students will immerse themselves in a total dramatic experience. They will write, direct, act, and handle the technical aspects of

MS. K. KELLER NAMED TO SUCCEED DR. J. McMULLEN

Ms. Katherine Keller has been named acting chairperson of the department of home economics at Mansfield to replace the late Dr. Janet S. McMullen.

The announcement of Ms. Keller's appointment was made by Dr. Donald C. Darnton, vice-president for academic affairs at the College.

"We will greatly miss the leadership of Dr. McMullen who did such a remarkable job in directing her department," Dr. Darnton said, in making the announcement of Dr. McMullen's successor.

Dr. McMullen joined the Mansfield home economics faculty in 1965 and was appointed chairperson of the department in October, 1975. She is survived by two children, Jack, of Ft. Worth, Texas, and Mary Ellen, of Manchester, N.H.

Ms. Keller, who earlier served in an acting capacity as the department's chairperson during the spring semester of 1975, is a graduate of Pennsylvania State University where she received the bachelor's degree in home economics education and the master's in institution administration.

Dr. Robert E. Swinsick, dean of the School of Teacher Education, said of Dr. McMullen, "I will sorely miss her. She was one of the best chairpersons I had in the School of Education."

On the appointment of Ms. Keller to succeed Dr. McMullen, Dr. Swinsick said, "We think Ms. Keller will make an excellent replacement to finish out the year. She will carry out many of the department's plans formulated under Dr. McMullen's leadership."

a production. Tom Loomis of the art department is offering a class on vaporization casting and basic foundry practice.

Many traditional courses are also offered as part of the summer school program. One can study, among other things, Comedy, the Short Story, Earth Resources and Energy, General Psychology, Learning Disabilities, Spanish, Chemistry, Child Development, and Tennis.

Dr. Robert Swinsick, dean of the School of Education, will direct a Conference for School Administrators during the second session. Three prominent specialists in the legal aspects of administration will participate in discussions including timely topics such as teacher evaluation and dismissal, student rights and conduct, collective bargaining, and sex discrimination.

Ms. DiBiase points out that the college provides a free day care center for children of summer school students in hopes of making the summer session accessible to as many students as possible. Further information concerning the summer programs can be obtained by contacting Ms. DiBiase at the Summer School Office in Alumni Hall or by telephone at 717-662-4207.

MFT TO EMBARK ON SIXTH SEASON

If success can be measured by laughter, tears, rave reviews, and consistent audiences, then the Mansfield Festival Theater is surely successful.

Over 30,000 people have been attracted to the Mansfield State College campus by the quality stage productions and unique atmosphere of the "tent theater" since its first show in June 1972. Audiences enjoy the relaxed outdoor feeling of the theater and the spectacular scenery which surrounds it as much as they do the professional productions they see. Originally the plays were staged in a large tent on the campus. The canvas has been replaced with more substantial materials, but the atmosphere has been preserved to the delight of the theatergoers.

Expectations are that the 1977 season will surpass even the highly successful series last summer. As MFT embarks on its sixth season, productions look on the lighter side of life with only a partial exception.

Dr. Jack K. Tillinghast, successful producer of the Mansfield Festival Theatre, has scheduled Friday, Saturday and Sunday evening performances, commencing June 17 with Neil Simon's "The Gingerbread Lady."

Next on the MFT stage will be musical comedy Damn Yankees, which opens on July 1. In successive performances, such productions as The Rainmaker (July 17) and The Marriage-Go-Round (July 29), will run for consecutive weekends as the featured production. MFT will wrap up the '77 season with the joyous journey of the most famous ship in the annals of musical comedy, H.M.S. Pinafore (August 13).

"We believe we have put together a well-rounded season of plays that will delight everyone this summer," Dr. Tillinghast commented as he announced the 1977 MFT season. "I am particularly excited about some of the outstanding people who will be directing and acting in the MFT productions this summer."

Tillinghast revealed that Eric Poppick, director of the College Players at Mansfield State, will be the producer for the Festival Theatre this summer in Tillinghast's absence. Tillinghast is scheduled to be teaching theatre in Salzburg, Austria this summer.

Poppick points out that the fast pace of MFT requires "a high level of acting and technical proficiency usually achieved only with considerable experience". Since there is precious little time to learn lines, develop characters, stage moves, and create all the technical aids necessary for a smooth show, MFT employs professional actors and actresses. Professionals also afford the producer an important depth in age range from which actors are chosen.

"Students may actually benefit more from having the professionals here than from playing the roles themselves," Poppick stated. They have always participated as assistants and small role actors in the MFT Company. This year five students have been accepted as official apprentices to the Company.

Poppick said that the students learn a great deal from observing experienced people on stage, having the opportunity to discuss techniques with them, and receiving criticism from them about their own performances. He points out that they learn "new ways to move and to relate to the audience by watching the professionals on stage. It is direct learning which cannot be offered in the classroom. Imitation is an excellent first step toward creativity," he concluded.

The Gingerbread Lady, starring Mary Forrester, will be directed by William E. Kinzer, a drama professor from Indiana University at Bloomington. It is a hilarious comedy about a woman trying to establish a new life for herself as an actress. Later in the season Forrester, president of the Indiana Theater Association, will direct the well known musical H.M.S. Pinafore by Gilbert and Sullivan.

The story of the rise to fame of the Old Washington Senators, Damn Yankees, focuses on a loyal Senators' fan who sells his soul to the Devil on their behalf. Such familiar tunes as "Whatever Lola Wants, Lola Gets" and "You Gotta Have Heart" are from this musical.

The Rainmaker is a romantic comedy with dramatic overtones. It is a touching and humorous story about a family which meets a rainmaker during a drought.

Daytime television stars Patricia Bruder and Len Gochman, who delighted theatre goers last season in I Do!, I Do, return in another comedy about marriage — The Marriage-Go-Round. Miss Bruder plays Ellen Stuart in the series "As the World Turns" while Gochman is known for his former role in NBC's "Somerset" program as well as for being the voice of many national television commercials. Roseanne Weeks, a professional director from New York City and friend of Miss Bruder's, will be the guest director for MFT's third production of the season. This rollicking comedy concerns a professor who counsels couples with marital problems, and the marital problems he encounters when the lovely young daughter of a Scandinavian colleague wants to have his child.

Season tickets for MFT are now available at the discount rate of $15. Write to: MFT, Box 85 South Hall, Mansfield State College, Mansfield, Pennsylvania, 16933.

MASON TO ATTEND NASA LAUNCH

Richard F. Mason, director of the George B. Strait Planetarium at Mansfield, is one of 200 persons from all over the nation invited to witness the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) launching of the first High Energy Astronomy Observatory (HEAO-A) at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

The honor was extended to the 200 planetarium directors and lecturers whom NASA officials believe are most active in promoting space activities.

In a two-day session prior to the midnight blastoff, some of the nation's most knowledgeable speakers will give presentations on the HEAO mission and on high energy astronomy. Also included will be discussions of present and future NASA programs, and, of course, a special tour of the Kennedy Space Center facilities.

Mason, who maintains a library of science fiction books in his campus office, is admittedly excited about the HEAO launch. "Thirty-seven years after reading my first Buck Roger's story, I'm going to see an honest-to-God rocket take off," he exclaimed.

An associate professor of physics, Mason has been a member of the Mansfield State faculty since 1962. In addition to his teaching duties, Mason directs a highly successful planetarium program which is visited by thousands of school-age children for special programs each year, as well as by hundreds of adults for monthly programs on the stars.

According to a NASA spokesman, the orbiting observatory will contain instruments capable of detecting with high sensitivity and resolution the x-ray data emitted by stellar sources throughout the universe. "This will enable studies to be made of some of the intriguing mysteries of the universe," Mason said, "such as pulsars, black holes, neutron stars, quasars and supernovae."

"Since x-ray and ultra-violet radiation is shielded from the earth, scientists had to wait until the space age to study it in detail. It has been a borderline science," Mason continued. "Study of space radiation could unlock a wavelength of communication for interterrestrial races," Mason add. "It could also more accurately depict the size of the universe. This may sound far fetched, but it's not impossible," he declared.

MANSFIELD MOVES TOWARD C.B.E.

A School of Education program two years in development has been tailored to provide every potential teacher with a specific set of vital skills, or competencies, necessary for success in the classroom.

Called Competency Based Education or C.B.E., the program has conducted seventeen workshops during the past two years with faculty and administrators at both public school and college levels. "In the past year the major thrust has been to define what a teacher is," said Dr. Dennis Wydra, coordinator of an eight-member task force on C.B.E., "and the generic competencies that all beginning teachers should possess." A list of specific competencies for teachers in their areas of certification is being developed through consultation with classroom teachers.

Another member of the task force, Dr. Vern Jeffers, explained that subcommittees have been working on two related tasks. "The first is to develop a method of evaluating student teachers according to their proficiency in these well-defined areas of competency. The second is to develop a valid questionnaire which would serve as an instrument for gathering information from Mansfield graduates for a follow-up study of the program."

Dr. Jeffers pointed out that a pilot study conducted last fall failed to yield adequate data for analysis. "The "Space scientists are anxious to learn about stars for a number of reasons," Mason continued. "All of the information we now receive from the stars, took years getting to us. We don't know the shape of the universe, for example. We know what it looked like 10,000 or more years ago when the light we are now studying left respective stars, but we don't know the changes since then."

Mason pointed out that scientists don't understand how stars operate and therefore, are unable to make predictions about them. HEAO could change that.

The space observatory could provide data which would be relevant to daily life on Earth, Mason contends. "Our sun, which you will remember is a star, has been giving off energy for some 5 billions years now. HEAO could find the key that would enable us to harness solar energy."

intent of the questionnaire is not to evaluate the individual teacher," Dr. Jeffers continued, "but to provide the college with information on the quality of its teacher preparation program."

Additional surveys will be mailed to those who graduated in 1972, 1974, and 1976. The success of the program is heavily dependent upon alumni support as the task force hopes to identify areas of strength and weakness as well as determine if there are gaps in the program. "All alumni receiving these materials are urged to respond," Jeffers said.

According to task force member Dr. Mary Brace, the survey would be conducted annually for those in their first, third and fifth years of teaching. The questionnaire developed in conjunction with the consultant group uses 45 competencies to be utilized in a full-scale study this summer.

The task force, comprised of Dr. Wydra, Dr. Jeffers, Dr. Stephen Bencetic, Dr. Brace, Ms. Nora Mahoney, Mr. Edward Winrow, Ms. Joyce Zinchini, and Ms. Joyce Wunderlich, recently completed a two-year progress report for the Department of Education.

Results of the studies will enable Mansfield State to develop and implement a program of teacher education courses and field experiences in keeping with the skills or competencies identified.

"ROOTS" GIVES A FEEL FOR HISTORY

Ed. Note: Author Alex Haley presented a lecture on the Mansfield State campus April 21 in conjunction with the observance of Black Awareness Week. Dr. Robert Wooley, an assistant professor of history, offers some insight on Haley's best selling novel and record-breaking television production.

"It's one thing to read history and it's something quite different to feel it," commented Dr. Robert Wooley, reflecting on the impact of Alex Haley's powerful novel and recent television production.

Dr. Wooley, an assistant professor who teaches Black history at Mansfield State College, believes the television production "served a real purpose in that you got a 'feel' for the history. You can read about slavery but you don't come away with the same graphic, gripping emotion that you got with the performance."

Stating that there was nothing in the television show which surprised him, Wooley said, "I didn't learn new facts, but I did feel the story of slavery more than I have by reading standard Afro-American history books." Getting people to feel history is Wooley's approach to history as a subject.

Critics of Haley's work and the television show have said that ROOTS was too melodramatic, that it contained all the elements of a good soap opera, lots of sex and lots of violence and the suspense of threatened violence, and that upset many viewers. "It didn't upset me at all," declared Wooley, "because I think it's historically accurate. I think, rather, it points to the absence of historical knowledge by the viewers."

One aspect of the production which did upset Wooley, however, was the depiction of white slavers capturing Kunta Kinte, Haley's ancestor and a central character in the book. "More likely his capture was by greedy African chieftans," Wooley points out. "Carried over to 20th century perspectives this could also be misinterpreted," he said. It might be said that "one black brother sold another into slavery. That isn't valid, because the various tribes in Africa did not regard each other any more as brothers than the English regard the French as brothers, or the French regard the Germans as brothers."

"One also has to remember that the slavery which existed in Africa was not chattel; slaves were not owned as property. They held a status akin to servitude," declared Wooley.

Reactions to ROOTS have been interesting. Wooley notes that, "a good many Black young people became very angry at what they've seen in ROOTS. I think that's a temporary thing. I think in the long run the anger is being replaced by different feelings. Such anger," says Wooley, "points out the degree to which all of us have been brainwashed in racism. Some young people cannot see beyond the cruelty to their Black ancestors, which is a sub-theme of the story. The important thing is the nobility and the strength of a Black family. Many Blacks and Whites have a racist orientation and assume that because there is a white man in the film that the film must center on him. The white characters are peripheral," Wooley continued. "The actions of the whites are immoral and reprehensible, but if you view ROOTS just within the context of 'look what whites are doing to Blacks', you miss Haley's theme."

Dr. Wooley contends that for the first time many Black persons have come to an appreciation of older generations. There was a dangerous time in the 1960's when some Blacks regarded any Black over thirty as an "Uncle Tom". "I feel it was a great tragedy of the 60's that they didn't want to talk about slavery. ROOTS points out that there is heroism in the story of slavery just as in the story of Booker T. Washington or Malcolm X. Young Blacks gain through ROOTS a much greater appreciation for what those ancestors lived through and how well they lived through it. They lived in an inhuman institution and yet managed to keep their humanity. That's the remarkable aspect of the slavery story. In Faulknerian terms," Wooley asserted, "they not only endured, they not only kept their humanity, but they kept it with a great nobility. They were able to laugh and to cry and to make fun of themselves and to see those rare moments of humor in slavery relationships. They weren't broken by it."

When asked about the reaction of young whites to ROOTS Wooley expressed hope that they would feel an awareness of the commonality, the story of Blacks and Whites together. "Indeed you can't talk about black history without talking about white history."

"I think the realization has come that this is more than the story of a Black family," Dr. Wooley concluded. "It is first and foremost that; but it's also the story of the whole American experience and this is the reason why many whites were able to empathize with that Black family."

Wooley concurred wholeheartedly with Haley's premise that one doesn't really have a sense of identity until one knows his roots. "Because I have a sense of being from a place and descended from an identifiable people, there's an emotional well-being that you can't get in other ways. I think Haley is right. We're a root-less society. It is tragic that we cut ourselves off from our own family history, from older family members."

Dr. Wooley feels that families in the United States would be immeasurably strengthened if they followed Haley's advice presented through ROOTS. As a society we are too concerned with the present. Perhaps Haley's emphasis on family heritage through a particular Black family will change some of that.

MANSFIELD GRAD SELECTED FOR DANFORTH EVALUATION

Deborah Gale Woodyard of Harrisburg, a 1976 Mansfield graduate, was selected for the final stage of evaluation for the prestigious Danforth Fellowship.

Ms. Woodyard, who received her undergraduate degree in psychology from Mansfield State last May, was one of 670 persons invited to interview for the Danforth Fellowship out of a class of 2,925 applicants.

The selection of Ms. Woodyard for the final stage of the fellowship marks the fourth successive year that a Mansfield State College graduate has been chosen for the final stage of the evaluation. If selected, she would be the second Mansfield State graduate so honored. Mrs. Helen Hall, also a psychology major, was a 1974 Danforth Fellowship recipient.

LOCAL HISTORY SOURCE BOOK PRINTED

Historians in Bradford, Potter and Tioga Counties of northern Pennsylvania searching for sources of local history or geneology, have had their research made a bit easier through the recent publication of a source book produced by Mansfield State College.

Produced as a Bicentennial project under the sponsorship of the college libraries and the Mansfield Foundation, Inc., the Union Catalog of Available Sources contains nearly 500 listings in the three-county area on its 137 pages.

LesErik B. Achey, an assistant professor on the library staff at the College, compiled the data for the book. Copies of the book are on file at the three historical societies in the Bradford, Potter and Tioga Counties, as well as at more than 20 libraries in the same area, at the Pennsylvania State Library and the Library of Congress. Several copies are available on the Mansfield campus in the history department and in the libraries.

MASTER'S PROGRAM IN SOCIAL STUDIES APPROVED

Mansfield State College has been granted approval to offer the Master of Education degree in social studies as a part of the College's graduate program.

Beginning with the summer and fall terms, the new program will meet a greater need for all students by allowing them to pursue a broader range of courses.

The College was notified of its approval for the graduate program in social studies by Robert N. Hendershot, the acting Secretary of Education. The Master of Education degree program in social studies, however, will replace the current M.Ed. degree in history.

ENVIRONMENTAL STUDIES OPENED BY ARCHIVES

Mine maps and miscellaneous records of the Morris Run Coal Company, preserved for years in the archives at Mansfield State College, have opened the door for many studies in forest management and ecology.

Dr. Robert W. Unger, archivist and professor of history, sent the maps and related records to the Pennsylvania Geological Survey after the "lost" records were located on campus. According to Edwin F. Koppe, a consulting geologist for the state, significant maps are being routed first through the U.S. Bureau of Mines Map Repository for microfilm recording. Other maps are being incorporated in a new geological map of Pennsylvania.

Koppe explains, "the maps will be used to make sorely needed refinements in our records of the resources and remaining coal reserves of that area. At the repository, the maps will be preserved for use by geologists, mining engineers and surveyors."

Koppe also said that company reforestation records document very early watershed control in the United States. For example more than a quarter million trees were planned above Morris Run between 1919 and 1936.

"Records of these plantings open the door for new studies leading to advancements of knowledge in forest management and ecology. Many segments of the scientific and technologic community," Koppe concluded, "are indebted to Mansfield State College for saving these remarkable records."

READING AUTHORITY IS CONFERENCE SPEAKER

Dr. John Manning, an internationally recognized authority in reading education, was the featured speaker at the Eighth Annual Education Conference held April 23.

Dr. Manning, professor of education at the University of Minnesota, discussed "Disciplined Minds, Thoughtful Hearts, Effective Teachers."

In addition to his teaching position at Minnesota, Dr. Manning serves as a consultant to national agencies, state departments of education, major urban school systems as well as suburban and rural elementary schools with specific reading and language development problems.

A visiting professor and lecturer at over 125 major colleges and universities throughout the country, Dr. Manning has conducted significant research studies in reading and language acquisition for the United States Office of Education.

RURAL STUDIES CONSORTIUM SEMINAR

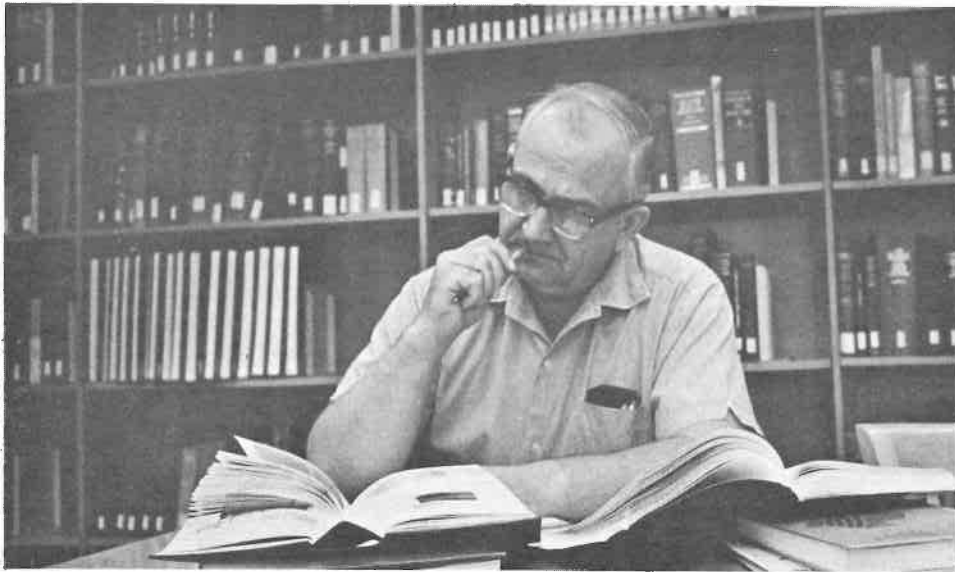

The fourth in a series of seminars entitled "Shaping Our Rural Communities" was conducted recently on the Mansfield State campus.

James Ridgeway, editor of The Elements, a natural resources journal published by the Institute for Policy Studies, spoke on "The Politics of Energy."

Ridgeway, formerly the editor of such publications as New Republic, Village Voice, and Ramparts has also published a number of books including Politics of Ecology and New Energy.

The seminars, under the direction of the Rural Studies Consortium, examine the characteristics of rural communities and the activities instrumental in bringing about the changes which shape our rural communities. Similar sessions have been conducted at Susquehanna and Bucknell Universities as well as Bloomsburg State College.

49 YEAR OLD FINDS NICHE AS A STUDENT

A 49 year old Towanda, Pa. resident has found a niche as a student at Mansfield State College.

Arthur W. Crandle, a former tractor-trailer driver and diesel mechanic, couldn't return to his job after a 1972 accident crushed his leg and ankle. About 75 pieces of bone have been put back in place and on most days Crandle can walk fairly well. On other days, however, his ankle is swollen and he walks with a limp.

To support his wife and four chil-

College archivist Dr. Robert Unger poses with an antique schoolmaster's desk which belonged to William C. Ripley, one of the founders of the institution. The cherry desk, dated in the 1850's, was given to the college from the estate of Eugene E. Crediford by his niece, Mrs. Michael Volechenisky, both Ripley descendants. Ripley also served on Mansfield's first Board of Trustees. The desk will be displayed in the archives at the college library.

dren, Crandle worked as a dispatcher for the Athens Police Department and accepted a position as a part-time corrections' officer at the Bradford County Prison in Towanda. He became interested in the rehabilitation of prisoners and juvenile delinquents and after consultation with the police chief, a warden and a judge, decided to further his education and to pursue a college degree in criminal justice administration.

Currently a sophomore in the criminal justice administration program at Mansfield State, Art Crandle more than fits in on the college campus. "At first students gave me a cool reception and I was referred to as 'Mr. Crandle,' but once they got used to seeing me around campus I soon became just another student."

At the insistence of his wife, Barbara, and their children, Crandle resides on campus to aid his studies. The hardest transition to make, he admits, was studying. Being a slow reader, Crandle says he spends numerous hours each day reading his textbooks.

Intensely interested in Mansfield and its young people, Crandle is deeply involved in campus activities and can often be found on campus surrounded by a group of students, just talking. He estimates that nearly half of the College's 3,000 population "call me Art, which I prefer, but I don't know all of them."

Dormitory life, Crandle adds, was more of an adjustment for other students than for him. A military veteran, Art compiled over 20 years of combined service in the U.S. Navy and N.Y. Army National Guard. "I've been used to barracks life in the service, so there was no real problem of adjustment for me."

Art is active in the Student Government Association, serving as a senator and a member of the Judicial Hearing Board. He is also on the food services committee. For College Community Services, Inc. (CCSI), he is a member of the Executive Committee and serves as treasurer. Crandle is also an active member of the dorm council and belongs to the Criminal Justice Administration Club.

"I can't possibly get involved in anything else," he added, "I don't have that much more time."

Crandle says students view him as a father image and come to him for advice on all sorts of things. "All of the students are very friendly and most have told me that if they were my age, they wouldn't have had the courage to come back to school."

Born in Blossburg and raised in Sylvania, Art Crandle graduated from Troy High School in 1949. Through the aid of a state vocational rehabilitation program, he is able to attend college full-time. Taking 18 credits each semester, Art has a goal of graduating in 1978 with a bachelor's degree in criminal justice administration.

Crandle is the son of Mrs. Mary B. Grantier of 215 Center St. in Horseheads, N.Y. His brother, James, 47, also resides in Horseheads.

Completely satisfied with his major and the other academic departments on campus, Art is very serious about his classes. "At first I figured it was dumb to ask questions," he concluded, "but now I figure I don't have time to fool around."

NEW YORK BRASS QUINTET AT MANSFIELD CHAMBER INSTITUTE

Members of the world famous New York Brass Quintet served as guest clinicians and soloists for the eighth annual Chamber Music Institute held recently on campus.

In addition to a concert performance, the quintet along with members of the Mansfield State music faculty worked with some 200 student musicians from junior and senior high schools throughout Pennsylvania and New York State. The quintet was sponsored in part by a $1,000 grant from the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts.

ED WILSON VOTED COACH-OF-THE-YEAR

Edward Wilson, who guided Mansfield State College's frosh-dominated basketball Mounties to a tie for the runnerup spot in the race for the league honors in the Pennsylvania Eastern Division, was named Coach-of-the-Year.

Rounding his 10th season at the Mounties' helm, Wilson was selected in a ballot of his fellow coaches in the Pennsylvania State College Athletic Conference (PSCAC).

Wilson piloted the Mansfield quintet to a surprising 15-8 overall mark and kept the Mounties in the thick of the race for the conference laurels before bowing to Cheyney, the eventual title winner, and finishing with a 9-3 PSCAC record.

The Mansfield mentor won the coveted Coach-of-the-Year honor in his maiden season at the Mountie helm in 1967, but has not, until this year, copped the honor since. Under his tutelage, Mansfield won both the league crown and the NCAA's Division III Mid-Atlantic Regional title in 1975. In his 10-year tenure, the Mounties have amassed a 143-90 mark.

KEENAN LEADS WOMEN CAGERS

Maureen Keenan, a freshman guard from Philadelphia, paced the Mountie attack for the women cagers this season with a 15.7 point per game average as Mansfield posted a 5-8 record in its second year of intercollegiate play.

Under the direction of Coach Sharon Zegalia, the Mounties compiled a 10-14 slate in two years. Hopes for an initial winning season were marred when, with a 5-4 overall record, the Mounties dropped the last four games of their season to powerful squads from Ithaca, Bucknell, Pitt.-Johnstown, and, in overtime, to Corning Community College.

Other top performers for Mansfield this season were Alicia Hamerla, a 6'0" center from King of Prussia who was second in scoring at a 9.8 point average, and playmaking guard Lisa Messing, a sophomore from Millerton. For the second consecutive year, Hamerla led the team in rebounds, pulling down 10 per game. Messing led the Mounties in assists and finished third in scoring with a 6.0 average.

SCHINTZIUS NAMED TO VOLLEYBALL POST

Hugh Schintzius, women's intercollegiate volleyball coach, has been named an assistant coach of the U.S.A. East women's volleyball team.

Schintzius, the first and only women's volleyball mentor at Mansfield since the sport went intercollegiate in 1975, guided the Mountie Ladies to an outstanding 27-4 record this past season and a berth in A.I.A.W. Nationals at Pomona, Calif.

His appointment was announced by Scott Mose, the well known assistant coach of the U.S. Olympics' Women's team in '76 and coach of the U.S.A. East squad. Schintzius, a graduate of the University of Buffalo and West Chester State College, will work with Mose during the training program for the U.S.A. East team.

A member of the Mansfield staff since 1972, Schintzius is director of recreation. He spent three years with the U.S. Peace Corps in Sierra Leona, Africa. Last summer, he served as a staff coach with the region II Olympic Development Volleyball Camp. Schintzius, a native of Buffalo, New York, is a certified Federation of Interational Volleyball Coach.

MAHAN JOINS 1,000 POINT CLUB

Stan "The Man" Mahan joined an elite group of prolific basketball scorers this season when he became the 11th cager in the school's history to surpass the 1,000 point barrier.

The 6' 2" junior guard from Pittsburgh moved into the number 7 spot on the list of all-time career scorers when he finished with a total of 1,137 points at the end of the current basketball season. Mahan is only the second Mountie athlete to eclipse the magic mark before his senior year.

Dave Russell, a two sport star from Donora, Pa., is the other cage great to pass 1,000 points in a three year career. Russell, ranked number 9 on the all-time list with 1,061 points, passed up his senior year of eligibility to sign a pro baseball contract.

Heading the list of scorers is Lee Felsburg with 1447, followed by Terry Crouthemal with 1407, Charlie Williams (1267), Dick DiBiao (1221), Joel Griffing (1206), and Dennis Lomax (1158). Others on the list are Bob Weinstein at number 8 with 1133, Russell, Joe Balascik (1004), and Walt Barkowski (1002).

MANSFIELD STATE COLLEGE ATHLETES HONORED IN FIRST ALL SPORTS BANQUET

The ever-entertaining Pete Carlesimo, home-grown NBA'er Tom McMillen, and Stanford University basketball coach Dick DiBiao highlighted the first annual All-Sports Banquet at Mansfield State College held Tuesday (April 19) to honor its athletes.

Carlesimo, currently athletic director at Fordham University and an accomplished after-dinner speaker, entertained the capacity crowd in Manser Hall on campus as the featured speaker for the Mountie Athletic Club sponsored event. Laughter erupted throughout the hall several times as Carlesimo, in his usual jovial manner, relayed stories about everything from athletics and airlines to his 26-year tenure in Scranton, Pa.

An audience of nearly 300 persons reacted as Carlesimo declared he was very proud of the fact that while he was a basketball coach at Scranton University, "no team of mine was ever shut out." Later, Carlesimo maintained that Dick DiBiao was going to become one of the greatest basketball coaches in the country, "not because he's Italian, ...but, because I am."

Master of ceremonies Rod C. Kelchner, president of the Mountie Club and dean of students at Mansfield, reminded everyone of the banquet's purpose right from the start. "Make no mistake as to why we are here. We're honoring the ladies and gentlemen who represent Mansfield State College in athletics."

The Mountie Club named Alicia Hamerla as the top female athlete of the year and football running back Mike Kemp as the male athlete of the year. Miss Former Mansfield State cage greets Dick DiBiao, Al Zyga, Dave Russell, and Ron Firestone enjoyed a happy reunion following the April 19 banquet. All were teammates on a squad that built a basketball dynasty at the College under Coach Gibson. Also on hand was John Rusinko, Gibson's assistant coach.

Hamerla, a sophomore from King of Prussia, stars on the College's field hockey and basketball teams. Kemp, a 1976 graduate of Mansfield, is a 5' 7" Reading native who holds the season and career rushing records at Mansfield State.

Seniors from the class of 1976 were cited by Athletic Director Hank Shaw as he presented the Marion "Spotts" Decker Award to the campus' outstanding athlete. For the first time this year, male and female winners were selected. Former field hockey co-captain Nancy Coulton, who is now teaching and coaching in Doylestown, Pennsylvania, was singled out for honors along with former Mountie baseball star Glenn Fisher. The standout shortstop is now playing with the Boston Red Sox minor league team in Winston-Salem, N.C.

Two additional awards initiated this year were presented in memory of former Mansfield coaches Bill Gibson (basketball) and Robert Maxson (track), who died in 1975.

Dr. John Heaps, head mentor of the baseball Mounties who served as an assistant to Coach Gibson in both baseball and basketball, presented the award to Dick DiBiao, an individual who has made a significant contribution to the school in the area of athletics. DiBiao, who had played for Gibson at Mansfield and assisted him as a coach later at Virginia, compared Gibson's influence on his life to that of his own father's in an emotional acceptance of the award.

"In no small measure I am who I am as a coach, and where I am as a coach because of Bill Gibson," declared DiBiao, now head basketball coach at Stanford University.

The Bob Maxson Award was presented to one of the late track coach's top performers, distance runner Ray Beisel of Mansfield. In presenting the award, Dr. Richard Finley noted Beisel's achievements both in academics and athletics.

Prior to the awards ceremony, Sharon Taylor, coach of women's athletics at Lock Haven State College, commented on how women's athletics have finally broken away from being relegated to the "auxiliary gym." DiBiao and Paul Manikowski, head basketball coach at Elmira College and a 1965 grad of Mansfield State, also spoke briefly. Both men reminisced about their undergraduate years at the College and praised Mansfield's sports programs.

Rhodes Scholar and New York Knickerbocker star Tom McMillen continued the humorous and sentimental tone already set at the banquet, joking about his 6'11" height and turning more seriously to his feelings of returning to his hometown and how athletics played such a key role in his life.

McMillen managed to steal a joke from Carlesimo and, while traveling en route to the banquet with the celebrated speaker, evoke a promise of "not to tell any stories he had heard me tell before" from the Fordham athletic official.

Hailed as a master speaker by DiBiao, McMillen, and then Kelchner, Carlesimo proceeded in his relaxed, humorous way to convince his audience that he was indeed no stranger to after-dinner speaking at sports banquets.

Concluding on a more serious note, Carlesimo said, "Ladies and gentlemen, one of the greatest expressions I ever heard was a very simple one that covers a lot of ground: It's nice to be nice."

He went on to cite examples of nice people such as administrators who support athletic programs; coaches who influence athletes "more than parents and clergy, they are that much of a factor;" organizations like the Mountie Club who sponsor activities to honor participants in athletic programs; cheerleaders who ignite a spark in teams.

"And the epitome of nice people to me -- Bill Gibson. I'm proud to say that he was my friend. It's nice to be nice. It's as simple as that."

"HELP US FIND THESE ALUMS!"

In the last two issues of the Mansfieldian an article was run entitled Help Us Find These Alums. The response to this plea has been so effective we have decided to continue running this article. To indicate the magnitude of the problem of trying to keep up with the addresses of over 11,000 alumni we have noted separately the names of Alums whose Mansfieldian has been returned to the Development Office in the last two months for the reason-moved left no forwarding address. You can imagine if we have lost this many alumni in the last couple of months, the magnitude of trying to keep up with all of our alumni. If you happen to know where any of these Alums are please drop us a line at the Development Office. Thank you.

ALUMNI DIRECTORY

The Office of Development is happy to announce that a comprehensive biographical reference volume of all Mansfield State College alumni will be available soon. The directory will list alumni alphabetically, geographically, and by class year. Listings will include full name, major, class year, occupation, business and home addresses, and business and home telephone numbers.

All alumni recently have received questionnaires, which we hope will be completed and returned to our Alumni Directory publisher. Before going to press, the publisher has agreed to contact by telephone all alumni to confirm the accuracy of the information.

The directory will be available in both a soft cover and a deluxe hard bound edition. Its concise, yet complete, sketches will tell you where your fellow alumni are and what they are doing. The directory will make it convenient for you to reach your friends by mail or phone. The geographical index will tell you which Mansfield State alumni live in your own town. When you are in a new area you'll be able to locate any classmates living there. Recalling the names of forgotten classmates will be made easy simply by thumbing through the class year index.

Copies of the new directory may be ordered by Mansfield State College alumni only. Orders will be taken by the University Press, 200 Park Avenue, Falls Church, Virginia 22046, during the telephone verification process. The college itself will not handle orders.

All alumni are urged to return the Alumni Questionnaire Form promptly. This will avoid our having to mail a second request. The more complete listings the directory contains, the more valuable it will be to all of us.

I hope University Press will hear from all of you soon.

Close-up of the hieroglyphics on the Rosetta Stone.
Found in 1799 at the mouth of the Nile in the town of Rosetta, this famous slab of black basalt commemorated the reign of Egypt's Ptolemy V (B.C. 196).
Discovery of this stone enabled scholars to decipher the Egyptian language. It is a symbol of communication. A replica of the stone now hangs in the Learning and Diagnostic Center on campus.

STICH IN ALASKA

the problem and write a prescription for the child's teacher. Not every school has a special education teacher, but they are all childcentered, dedicated, and vocal on behalf of the children."

After the child returns, with a prescription we would help monitor and evaluate his daily progress. Often we had to train teachers to supplement the prescription. Dr. Robert Morgan, Director of Special Education in Anchorage, said of Stich; "He developed and conducted courses in the area of learning disabilities that were light years ahead of most I have seen in effectiveness of approach and depth of materials. He was a catalyst and energizer throughout the whole process of education within this area."

The Mansfield-Alaska connection began in 1974 when Stich served as a consultant to the Fairbanks schools. Since then Stich has returned often; Dr. Richard Shick, Chairman of the MSC Department of Special Education, has worked in Alaska; and Joe Bielski '69, MSC graduate, now directs the special ed program in Fairbanks — "one of the best in the state," Stich says.

Stich's frequent sorties around Seward's Icebox exposed him to Alaskan wildlife, Indian and Eskimo culture, and the Alaskan pipeline.

"It's so vast, so utterly beautiful; yet people spend so much of their time coping with the cold, the flies, the inconveniences, the environment in general, that they don't seem to notice the beauty. We had difficulty sleeping on sunny summer nights. Like many Alaskans we put blankets over the windows. Winter darkness is hard to get used to and may contribute to the high rate of alcoholism. This past winter was mild in Anchorage. You had it worse in Tioga County."

Stich is an ardent fisherman, he caught over 200 fish weighing between 6 and 46 pounds, from Dolly Varden trout to King salmon — and brought back pictures of his catch to the anguish of his friends.

Speaking about life in the Eskimo and Indian villages, Stich commented, "Although they now have snowmobiles, rifles, and down jackets, life still follows many of the ancient patterns. Hunting the caribou, trapping, fishing, and creating hand crafts are the main pursuits. For the native they are a matter of survival, not recreation. Villages are communal, families are patri-

The state of Alaska recently borrowed Dr. Tom Stich, professor of special education at Mansfield State College, for the 1976-77 school year to help set up a program for handicapped children. Serving as a super-volunteer, Stich (pronounced Steek) spent his sabbatical year teaching at the University of Alaska and working in the Anchorage and Fairbanks school district with handicapped children and their teachers. He also flew into the back country a number of times to hold clinics in remote Eskimo and Indian villages.

Dr. Stich's expertise in programs for the handicapped was of special interest to Alaskan educators because Mansfield has developed a model rural delivery system through its Learning and Diagnostic Center housed in Retan Center. Alaska has developed the same type of program that Stich helped to create at Mansfield. "The parallels were beautiful," Stich said. "Our service to the handicapped in the Northern Tier is just the kind they have developed in Alaska — only Alaska is so vast — it's one fifth the size of the contiguous forty eight states — almost twice as big as Texas. I spent a lot of time in the air."

Urged on by a new federal law requiring diagnosis, prescription, instruction, and progress reporting of all handicapped children, the University of Alaska works with the schools providing these services in the cities as well as the outlying areas. Stich said; "It's the kind of continuing education and in-service training Mansfield has been providing for the Northern Tier. Professors often hop on a plane, fly 500 miles to the Kenai Peninsula or Kodiak Island to give a weekend clinic and examine village children.

"Although I made my biggest contribution in Fairbanks and Anchorage, I was able to fly into Indian and Eskimo villages in the interior, towns like Venetie, and Artic village. I went to Alaska because I knew I could be of some use. But I also went to test the theories I teach in the classroom. Would the behavior modification techniques I teach work in a different culture and on all handicapped children? I wanted to become a better teacher, to believe fully in what I was teaching. My Alaskan field work has greatly reinforced what I teach. Even in a vastly different culture the techniques work. The profoundly retarded, emotionally disturbed, the deaf, the mildly disabled all responded.

"Usually I would see the children at the University. There I would diagnose archial, learning takes place by emulation. The children are exposed to the skills and knowledge they need to survive in an almost casual way. It's a blend of Rousseau and Summerhill where children are stimulated but not pressured to learn. Village culture is rich in all kinds of folklore, including a rich oral tradition of legends, and a dazzling folk art. The natives associate aggressiveness with rudeness. Even looking a person in the eye is rude to them. This confuses new teachers who think they aren't reaching the kids."

Stich also attended the World Eskimo and Indian Olympics held in Fairbanks last summer, there he witnessed such unusual events as the knuckle walk, the two foot high kick, seal and muskrat skinning contests, and the famous blanket toss. "The blanket toss is amazing," Stich said. "They use a huge walrus hide with thick ropes around the edges. It's more of a snap, they all pull at the same time and woosh--the person goes rocketing up to the ceiling in the gym."

Although it has caused problems, the pipeline has given Alaska a great economic boost, Stich feels. State officials are eager for oil to flow this summer so the revenue can be used to improve the schools. Stich visited the North Slope in 1974, and he has watched the pipeline grow. Speaking on the ecological side he commented; "Barring a massive spill I do not see the pipeline as damaging to the environment. The scientists turned over every rock, inspected every stream where the pipe went. I have seen moose walking under it, and I have seen where they buried it so the caribou herds can follow their ancient migration routes.

They are now discussing two gas pipelines."

Summing up his Alaskan adventure, Stich said, "The methods we use in our clinic at Mansfield work well anywhere. That Alaskan educators see Mansfield in the forefront of education for the handicapped made me especially proud. I'm teaching a three week course at the University of Alaska again this summer. Most important, this sabbatical year has made me a better teacher."

"IF HE'S SO SMART WHY CAN'T HE READ?"

In October, 1975, Robbie, a third-grader, was asked to copy a sentence. It looked like this:

The hesoe the blon and he wated
a bold

Two months later his attempt at copying resulted in this:

Benjamin Branklin died on april 17 17 90
He had lived a long and rich life and above all a wsele life

What caused this dramatic improvement? A lot of hard work by Robbie; the tireless efforts of his classroom teacher, reading specialist, and principal; and the intervention by the diagnostic team of the Northern Tier Learning and Diagnostic Center, located in Retan Center on the college campus.

Robbie is one of the many students with learning disabilities who are evaluated each year at the center, under the direction of Dr. Thomas Stich. Jointly sponsored by Intermediate Unit #17 and Mansfield State College, the project services at no charge children and adults from the counties of Tioga, Bradford, Sullivan, and Lycoming.

Robbie had an IQ of 116, but few would believe it. "If he's so smart, why can't he read?" was a frequent refrain. Robbie was one of the approximately 10% of all students with a learning disability; although of normal intelligence, he was unable to progress in a standard classroom.

When Robbie's difficulties became apparent, his classroom teacher referred him to the school's reading specialist and psychologist. They in turn recommended an evaluation at the Diagnostic Center.

Most students spend three weeks "attending school" at the center, although their stays may vary. There they receive a battery of diagnostic tests, and various methods of instruction are attempted. With only 4 to 6 students present at one time, instruction is intense.

The center's diagnostic staff consists of Mrs. Barbara Beisel, Mr. Arthur Miller, and Mrs. Theresa Miller. This team's goal is to provide a "prescription" for each student to be carried back to and implemented in his regular classroom.

Before each child arrives at the center he or she is observed in his school by Mrs. Beisel. Following evaluation by the teaching team, she again returns to the school with the prescription, which she presents at a staff meeting of the student's teachers and principal. Others concerned, such as the parents and the school psychologist, may also be present. The group discusses how best to implement the prescription, and together they decide who will handle what. Mrs. Beisel will provide training in any special techniques required. Frequently a volunteer is needed to give the student individualized instruction. Follow-up is on an informal basis, with the center's staff standing by with any additional help requested.

While the Center's first responsibility is to help handicapped children, it does other important work. The staff has authored A Manual of Instructional Strategies for Children with Learning Problems — a book with national circulation. They created a slide-tape depicting the Center's services, along with a videotape, "I Can Read," showing remedial approaches to reading. The manual and videotape may be borrowed from the center. The staff has also conducted more than 75 in-service workshops for teachers.

These activities, however, are extras; the staff's first commitment is to the student. While not every child shows Robbie's dramatic improvement, his success illustrates what the center is striving toward.

"Consider the example of Nancy," recalls Mrs. Beisel. "She had never spoken a word in six years of school, although she was verbal elsewhere. We worked together in mini-steps, using behavior modification techniques. One of our center's nicest happenings was the day she first spoke."

MANSFIELD NOVELIST DISCOVERED

Edith Middaugh Gleckler was born in 1868 in Lawrenceville where the Tioga River flows into New York State. Later she attended the Mansfield Normal School, and earned her degree in 1897, and took a teaching job in an elementary school near Liberty, Pa. In the years that followed, this remarkable woman labored on a 65,000 word novel, The Rebirth of Jacob Winningstad, writing during the hours she could set aside from her duties as wife, mother, teacher, school board member, and mistress of a fifteen-room farmhouse.

For a frustrating half-decade between 1911 and 1916 she searched for a publisher, receiving only rejections. "Don't attempt to write," she told her daughter Marion. "It's too heart breaking when it's not accepted, and you never know what skill you have until it's too late to do much about it. Just let it go." Disheartened, she continued her public life as a member of the Liberty School Board, working tirelessly to upgrade the rural education system in the area.

When her farm duties became too strenuous for her, she moved in 1919 with her husband and daughter to Mansfield, relishing the educational and cultural activities there. She took her novel with her, making some careful revisions and having the manuscript typed. But she did not resubmit it for publication, and upon her death in 1927 it was put aside with her other papers in a bedroom in her home.

Fifty years later Edith Gleckler's daughter Marion is still living in Mansfield and, still in possession of the unpublished novel. She too had attended Mansfield and became a teacher, graduating in 1921. She mentioned the novel to Dr. Bernard Koloski, an English professor at Mansfield, and he became interested. She let him read the novel.

Dr. Koloski, who did his doctoral thesis on women novelists, found the novel exciting: "Passages in the novel were the equal of some of our better women writers." Dr. Koloski recently delivered a paper on The Rebirth of Jacob Winningstad at a conference in Baltimore. He said of the book:

While it is not a polished book it is a many faceted work of fiction: a regional novel, a local color novel, an expression of its author's natural optimism and natural enjoyment of people, as well as an educational reform document, a complaint about the rapid physical deterioration of farm women, a plea for emotional and spiritual regeneration, and, most importantly, a blueprint for a culture's continued survival.

The novel is the story of Jennie Winningstad's fight to stop the downward spiral of culture in Liberty by improving the local schools. She finds an ally and eventually a husband in her neighbor Walter Darmhurst, but her father, Jacob, the reactionary head of the school board, is the one most difficult to enlighten.

Gleckler was especially good at depicting the plight of women on the farm. Her voice became harsh and even bitter as she describes Jacob treating his wife with less consideration than he did his horses: "When I say with less consideration, I mean this: When his horses lost their appetite or flesh and seemed to lack ambition, he got conditioned powders and fed them, or changed their diet. But when any one of these symptoms appeared in his wife he did not notice it. Secondly, when his horses worked a reasonable day with a good noon hour, he refused to let them be driven nights, even when it would have given his family much pleasure. But the day was never so long . . . that his wife could not sit up all night with a sick child — their own or a neighbor's — and work the next day. Thirdly, while his horses pranced resplendent in silverplated harness, his wife wore a bonnet or coat as long as the things held together. She turned, colored, and made over her dresses, and of course looked shabby and old fashioned."

Through the joint efforts of Dr. Koloski, Marion Gleckler and the Mansfield Foundation, Inc., the possible publication of The Rebirth of Jacob Winningstad is now under discussion.

MARY ELLEN FUNK '73

Mary Ellen Funk is an adoption caseworker for Tressler-Lutheran Service Associates in Williamsport. Tressler is a home-finding agency for children with "special needs," bi-racial children, handicapped children, older children, sibling groups, and foreign children come under this category. Tressler, known as one of the nation's best adoption agencies, received much acclaim for its role in the 1975 Vietnamese Baby Lift. The association evacuated some 200 children from its Adhoc orphanage in Saigon and eventually found homes for them in central Pennsylvania.

As an adoption caseworker, Mary Ellen tries to place the right child with the right family. This means getting to know both the children and the prospective parents well. Preadoption visits and counseling accomplish this, however, her involvement does not end with placement. Mary Ellen works with adopted children and their new parents right up to the time they are legally adopted, often a year after placement.

Describing her work as "particularly challenging and ever changing," Mary Ellen says, "Our agency places children who desperately need homes. Many of our adoptive parents already have children and just want more; others decide not to make any of their own. Many couples who adopt a child through us end up coming back for a second, third, and even eighth child. People used to only consider adopting an infant of their own race. Today this is often impossible, the demand is so great. People have changed their attitudes, about adoption. They are much more flexible than they were."

Mary Ellen majored in elementary education while at Mansfield and had difficulty finding a teaching job when she graduated. Joining forces with Tressler a year ago, she found her education had indirectly prepared her for adoption work, particularly in the child development courses. Mary Ellen sums up her college days by saying, "I wouldn't trade my four years at Mansfield for anything."

CATHERINE ENGLISH WHARTENBY '41

Catherine English Whartenby belongs to a family tree which has grown for a long time in the forests of northern Pennsylvania. The tiny hamlet of English Center on Little Pine Creek attests to the early presence of the English family in the Black Forest. Descendents of these early pioneers attended Mansfield beginning with her father, Robert Deane English, who graduated in 1904 and was friendly with Dr. John Doan and Dr. Myron Webster. Her mother, Elizabeth P. Dwyer, and her uncle, James D. English, also attended the college. Her brother, James A. English, graduated in the 1950's, her nephew, Robert Edward English, graduated in 1975, keeping the Mansfield tradition alive.

Kay graduated in 1941. During a time when few women pursued law, she attended Golden Gate College Law School in San Francisco where she received her J. D. Shortly thereafter she joined the Connecticut General Life Insurance Company to begin a long and fruitful association which has lasted for 23 years.

Today she is a Regional Design manager for Connecticut General in San Mateo. Kay's job is to provide legal, marketing, and technical support for the company's 31 branch insurance offices. Specializing in estate and business insurance, Kay will often visit branch offices in Honolulu, Dallas, and as far east as the Mississippi. She also served on the Attorney General of California's Commission on Women's Rights.

Commenting on her career in the insurance business Kay said, "Traditionally, insurance people have mostly been men. It was therefore harder for a woman to get ahead, and I had to try harder. I met not so much with discrimination as with scepticism, but I could always dispel the doubts by doing a good job."

Each year Kay and her husband visit their family farm near Wellsboro. She enjoys gardening, hiking, reading, history, and traveling in Europe.

KEVIN AND KATHERINE HANLEY - '70 & '71

Kevin Hanley and Kathy Taylor were both outstanding students at Mansfield, Kevin majoring in history, Kathy in library science. But their paths might never have crossed had they not taken the same English course — Romantic Movement. The poems of Keats and Wordsworth still have special meaning to them because by the end of the course they were engaged. Whether limnology or macroeconomics would have worked the same magic one can only speculate.

The couple were married shortly before Kevin's graduation in 1970, and while Kathy completed her degree Kevin worked on campus as assistant director of the Upward Bound Program. The Hanley's moved to New York State in the fall of 1971. While Kevin completed a Masters in history at Fredonia, Kathy worked as school librarian in Dunkirk. In 1972 Kevin and Kathy returned to Pennsylvania to work as house parents for the Halfway House in Bradford.

Before long Kathy was again working as a librarian, this time at the Oswayo Valley High School. She has also served as a story teller librarian to the elementary school in Oswayo Valley for the past four years. Since the birth of their daughter Erin, Kathy has been spinning her tales only part time.

Kevin landed the job of Coordinator of Federal Programs for the Intermediate Unit #9 in Smethport in 1972 and is still at it. He plans, supervises, and evaluates federally funded programs in remedial reading and math in a four county area comprised of eleven school districts.

Natives of the northern highlands, the Hanley's keep close ties to the land. They have refurbished a farmhouse ten miles from the nearest town. Of Kevin it has been said that he hunts like an Indian, fishes like an otter, and runs like a deer. He was in fact an outstanding cross country runner at Mansfield. Last year after undergoing knee surgery he got back in training and ran in the grueling 26 mile marathon from Galetton to Coudersport. He ran the course in 3 hours and 17 minutes, and placed eleventh in his age group. Not bad for his first full marathon. And he keeps improving: in his most recent race at Cazenovia he ran ten miles in 53 minutes placing 29th overall in a field of 300 and 5th in his age division. Kathy is running three miles daily too.

Running, which has become a national craze, is a big part of the Hanley's dreams. They want to run their own business. They dream of opening a franchise store of Athletic Attic which specializes in running and track shoes and running apparel as well as tennis equipment.

DR. ANDREW MICHANOWICZ '51

Andy Michanowicz is professor and head of the graduate section of Endodontics at the University of Pittsburgh. He is the consulting Endodontist at Children's Hospital and staff member at Montefiore Hospital. Numerous textbooks throughout the field of dentistry contain his valuable contributions.

For the past year he has been president of the Pennsylvania Society of Dentistry for Children. This organization recently paid him a special tribute for his work as president.

Andy and Louise have two children, Andrew Michael and Lou Ann. In the summer they retire to "Michanowicz Villa," their retreat in Seven Springs where they cultivate rhododendron and breed waterfowl.

Dr. Andy Michanowicz and his wife Louise (Baer) both graduated from Mansfield in 1951. Louise taught home economics while Andy attended the University of Pittsburgh School of Dental Medicine. In 1955 he received his D.D.S. and joined his brother John, who is also a dentist and graduate of Mansfield, in dental practice. The brothers were the first in their area to specialize in Endodontics and today they are recognized nationally and internationally as leaders in their field.

Andy's other brother, Frank, was a classmate at Mansfield, graduating with a degree in education in 1952. In something of an understatement a professor recalls the two brothers. "They were both excellent students and they could sure liven up this campus." Today Frank is supervising principal of the Allied Schools in Livorno, Italy.

Andrew & Frank Michanowicz

573 GRADUATE

Mrs. Caryl M. Kline, newly named Secretary of Education for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, spoke at the 112th commencement exercises Saturday, May 14. Speaking without notes to an audience of 3,000, the dynamic Mrs. Kline praised Mansfield for its leadership in developing continuing education programs for the region. She referred to the college as the main cultural center for north central Pennsylvania.

President Lawrence Park presided over the ceremonies at Van Norman Field as 573 students received undergraduate and graduate degrees.

Among those graduating, several students were cited for outstanding contributions to the college and their discipline.

Ron Blanch, a music major and campus leader, received the Outstanding Senior Award. James Dean and Cynthia Smith were awarded Best Actor and Actress by the School of Fine and Applied Arts, while Heidi Winter and Sandra Willing received the Arts' top scholastic awards. The Music Department honored Thomas M. Jones as its outstanding senior.

ADMINISTRATOR ENDS CAREER

Following a public service career with the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania spanning more than twenty-five years, John Good stepped down from his post as director of administrative services April 1.

Good came to Mansfield in 1964 as director of facilities development to oversee the proposed 10-year campus-wide construction project. He coordinated the construction and completion of thirteen campus facilities and five recreation and athletic fields.

"I am not regretting retirement at all," Good declared. "As a matter of fact, I look forward to it. Now I will have time for working with my horses and just riding my Honda." He will continue to live in Mansfield with his wife Ann, who is secretary to college President Lawrence Park.

NORTHERN TIER WOMEN WIN SCHOLARSHIPS

Billie Sue Vroman of Austin, Pa., who will attend Mansfield this fall, has been named recipient of the annual Thomas R. Halloran Scholarship for the 1977-78 academic year. The scholarship, which carries an award of $1,000, is presented annually to a student from Potter County.

Initiated last year, the Halloran scholarship was established by Thomas R. Halloran, owner and president of Aqua-Flo Chemical Company. He is a 1955 graduate of Mansfield and a native of Coudersport. Last year Halloran was president of the Mansfield Foundation Board; in his collegiate days he was a member of Phi Sigma Pi and president of the student body.

Marsha Kennedy of Millerton, Pa., has won the Jonathan George March Scholarship, which is given annually to a deserving student from Tioga County. Miss Kennedy will study in the music education curriculum as a freshman this fall.

The March scholarship, in its fourth year, is given in memory of the late Jonathan George March, a prominent Tioga County educator. The scholarship was established by James M. White '50, who is president of PEMA Oil Company in New Orleans, La. White has been a member of the Board of Directors of the Mansfield Foundation since 1974.

Both scholarships are administered by the Foundation.

TEACHER TRADE

Peter W. Hill, an assistant professor of economics in the department of sociology and anthropology at Mansfield, and John Hugh Lloyd, senior lecturer in economics at the Ealing Institute, London, will switch positions for the 1977-78 academic year in an exchange sponsored jointly by the governments of the United States and Great Britain.

Lloyd, a specialist in public finance, will aid the college in its anticipated implementation of a business administration program. Hill's experience in American economics, in addition to his knowledge of sociology, will provide the Ealing Institute with special insight into American institutions.

THIRTY-EIGHT TO GRAD SCHOOL

Thirty-eight Mansfield State College graduates have been notified of their acceptance into various graduate programs at colleges and universities throughout the United States.

Daniel Knerr of Canton has been accepted into the Cooperstown (N.Y.) Graduate Program which is sponsored jointly by the New York Historical Society and S.U.N.Y. of Oneonta. The program trains historical museum directors.

Accepted at the Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine is Clarence Scott '76 of Troy.

Graduates admitted to law schools are John C. Mott of Mansfield and Keith Blank of Covington, both of whom will be attending Dickinson School of Law. Luke Patterson of Coudersport has been accepted at Western New England College, and Joseph Sadowski of Nanticoke at Southern Texas College of Law in Houston.

Winning graduate assistantships are Bruce King and Raymond Miller of Lawrenceville who will be attending Pennsylvania State University and West Virginia University respectively; Ruth A. Wenner of Wellsboro at the University of Massachusetts; Edward Mowery of Johnstown at Buffalo State College; and Michael Price of Corapolis at California (Pa.) State College.

Graduate school of music acceptances include Joseph Spena of Watkins Glen, N.Y., at Ithaca (N.Y.) College; Frank Stroble of South Williamsport and Jane Edwards of Columbia, both at Bowling Green (Ohio) University; Wendy Goode of Waverly, N.Y., at the Cleveland Institute of Music; Linda Jacobs of Hazleton at the University of Cincinnati; Florida State and West Texas State University; and Robert Ashmore of Tamaqua, at Mansfield.

Mary Donovan, Montrose, and Richard A. Coffey, Mansfield, have been accepted into graduate English programs at Boston University and Mansfield respectively. Other graduates in English continuing their studies are Leonora Koscielski of Wilkes Barre at Pennsylvania State University and Carol Myers of Wellsboro at the University of Iowa.

Psychology majors advancing to graduate programs are Michael Gagliardi, Wilkes Barre, at Wichita (Ka.) State University; Mark W. Margott, Monroeton, at Pennsylvania State University and UCLA; Tracy Mellor, Philadelphia, at Millersville State College; and Faust Ruggiero, Roseto, at Illinois State.

NEW YORK CITY EXECUTIVE HONORED AS DISTINGUISHED ALUMNUS

Dr. James Stacy Coles, president of the New York City-based Research Corporation, was honored as the outstanding alumnus at Mansfield State College during the institution's 109th annual Alumni Day activities here recently.

Dr. Coles was cited for "significant contributions to society and devoted service in assisting mankind to know a better life." Dr. Coles was presented the College's most coveted alumni honor, the Distinguished Alumni Award, by Dr. Robert Swinsick, dean of the School of Education and a 1957 graduate of the College.

In other alumni business, conducted by the Honorable Robert M. Kemp, president of the Mansfield Alumni Association, three directors were named to the Alumni Board and a representative to the Mansfield Foundation, Inc. was selected. Kemp, a 1949 graduate of the College, serves as presiding judge of Tioga County.

The directors, elected to a three-year term expiring in June 1980, were John Muto, Blossburg; Basil Harris, Galetton; and Leon Lunn, Mansfield.

Dr. Thomas Allis, a dentist from Collegeville, Pa., was elected as a representative of the Alumni Association to the Mansfield Foundation. Lunn and Mrs. Marcella Hyde of Canton, are already serving in that capacity.

Dr. Coles, a native of Mansfield, heads a multi-million dollar foundation which supports research in the natural sciences through grants to colleges, universities and scientific institutions.

He has been president of Research Corporation since 1968, and has been a director of Research-Cottrell Inc. — the parent organization of Research Corporation — since 1958.

After graduating from Mansfield State in 1934, Dr. Coles earned A.B., A.M., and Ph.D. degrees from Columbia University where he serves as trustee of Columbia Press. At Brown University in Providence, R.I., he was a professor of chemistry and acting Dean of the College during his last year at that institution. He left to become president of Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Maine, a position he held for fifteen years.

LOUISIANA OILMAN TO HEAD MANSFIELD FOUNDATION

James White of Louisiana has been elected to head the Mansfield Foundation, Inc. White, president of PEMA Oil Co. in New Orleans, will serve as president of the Foundation for a one-year term. A member of the Foundation Board previously, White was reappointed to that body for a two-year term. He succeeds Thomas R. Halloran of Charleston, West Virginia, who was also reappointed to the Board.

Named vice president of the Foundation was Mr. John Heim, the student representative to the Board, while Mrs. Ila Wiley of Nelson, Pa. was elected secretary. Mrs. Wiley also serves as chairman of the College's Board of Trustees. Dr. Stephen Bencetic, of the College's art faculty, was elected treasurer.

The executive committee of the Foundation named Scott Donaldson of Pine City, N.Y. to the board of directors, serving a two-year term which expires in 1979. Donaldson, a new appointee to the Board, is director of personnel and community relations for the Elmira Star-Gazette. He is a 1957 graduate of Mansfield State.

In other business, the board established a memorial scholarship fund by placing $15,000 in a trust fund. According to J. Paul McMillen, director of development and executive director of the Foundation, one scholarship per year will be presented from the trust income. The College's financial aid office will set criteria for the award.

The Foundation Board gave its okay to a $3,000 grant for the Mansfield Festival Theatre. A professional theatre, MFT is currently in its sixth successful season of summer productions.

"I think the Foundation is growing," Halloran commented after his year at the helm of the organizations' board. "I'm pleased with response from alumni, not only in terms of contributions but in coming back to Alumni Weekend activities."

Halloran noted a change from past years where alumni activities were focused on one day. "What has the most appeal for me is that the whole weekend is devoted to alumni rather than just one day. There really is something for everybody on a large scale."

SETTING UP

A. Hugh Schintzius has developed an imaginative and enormously popular intramural program at Mansfield in his six years as director of recreation. Schintzius' program comprises 48 separate league tournaments in a score of sports. He coaxes students into competing by offering sports they can play at just about any level of skill. For example, coed inner tube water polo — a sport anyone can play who can sit in an inner tube — has become so popular he can't accommodate all the teams. The nearly 1200 students who play an intramural sport give Mansfield one of the nation's highest rates of participation.

Nicknamed "Schintz" by the students, he has turned the college on to volleyball. Over 80 men's, women's, and coed teams play in the volleyball league. In his spare time he created the varsity women's volleyball team; he then coached them to the runner-up spot in the Eastern Collegiate Championships. This past winter the Mansfield women represented the East in the National Championships in California.

An amazingly organized administrator, Schintz still manages to stay in great shape by jogging and playing the sports he organizes. Recently, Jim Glimm cornered Schintz in his office long enough for this interview:

QUESTION: Hugh, how has the sports scene changed in the U.S. over the last 20 years?

SCHINTZIUS: Sports themselves haven't changed that much, but the kinds of people who play them have changed greatly. Organized sports used to be for the skilled athlete, now almost everybody plays some organized sport.

Q: What brought about this change?

A: Better facilities, more leisure time, greater variety of organized sports, and, perhaps more important, the chance for people to compete on their own level of skill. In our leagues at the college anyone can play.

Q: How have you brought the "sports for all" concept to Mansfield?

A: First, we have a great physical plant which we use to the maximum. Although we have to divide use of facilities between gym classes, varsity sports, intramural programs, and free play, we still manage to involve about 49% of the student body in some intramural sport. The national average is only 35%. We've gone from 37% to 49%.

Q: But how do you get the person who isn't a real natural athlete to compete?

A: Some call it imagination, some call it craziness, but our inner tube water polo is a good example: if you can sit in an inner tube you can play. The students wanted it coed. This year we had to turn teams away it was so popular. It was a social occasion too, a good way to meet people. In basketball we have some athletes who could be on the varsity team at another college. We used to have scores like 117 to 16, so we split up the leagues into A league and B league. The competition is even now in both leagues and a 15 point spread is about as much as you get.

Q: Does the person playing in the B league get as much out of the game as the A league player?

A: I believe he does, if the level of competition is the same, the enjoyment is there regardless of the level of skill.

Q: When I was in college a coed team was out of the question, now they are very popular.

A: Women have discovered that it's o.k. to be in there playing aggressively, with sweat dripping off their faces. The old stigma of the girl athlete just isn't there anymore. Women can be themselves now — no more sitting on the sidelines wishing — Wow I'd really like to play volleyball. Men now accept the women as athletes and respect them for their ability.

Q: Have women's athletic skills improved?

A: Definitely. High school programs now teach skills early. The women bring these skills to college. They aren't afraid to excel. Still, in my observations I don't see the women being as competitive as the men. Some are, but in general, they don't play for blood the way the men do.

Q: I wonder if American culture still prohibits in some way a total commitment on the part of a women to sports. I'm thinking of the U.S. women's swim team making fun of the East German star swimmer Kornelia Ender because she was so muscular — even though she was a gold medal winner.

A: You must remember that Soviet countries compete primarily for political reasons. They scientifically screen kids for physical potential in sports — X-raying bones, measuring muscle fibres, and they do this on very young children. They biologically screen their people. I see nothing very wrong with this in itself. It can be good for the athlete and good for the fans. However, finally the soviet athlete must realize he is part of a bigger political game. He is a pawn: When he realize this he has got to be hurt. We don't do that. When sports become totally politicized as they have become in the Olympics the athlete is hurt.

Q: Can you manufacture a champion by this process?

A: No you cannot. The champion has an inner quality, heart, courage, discipline, you can't induce these.

Q: What about Americans and physical conditioning?

A: We are, I'm sorry to say, a grossly overweight nation; our technological society has a lot to do with this, but if we all ate less and exercised more regularly we'd be more fit. I have to be an old man some day, but I don't have to be a fat old man.

Q: I know you practice what you preach, Hugh. What is your regimen?

A: My body wants to exercise. I run from 3 to 4 miles a day. It relaxes me, gives me more energy, and just makes me feel better. I often work 14 hour days, you have to to run an intramural program that goes until 11:00 at night. If I wasn't in shape I couldn't put in all that time.

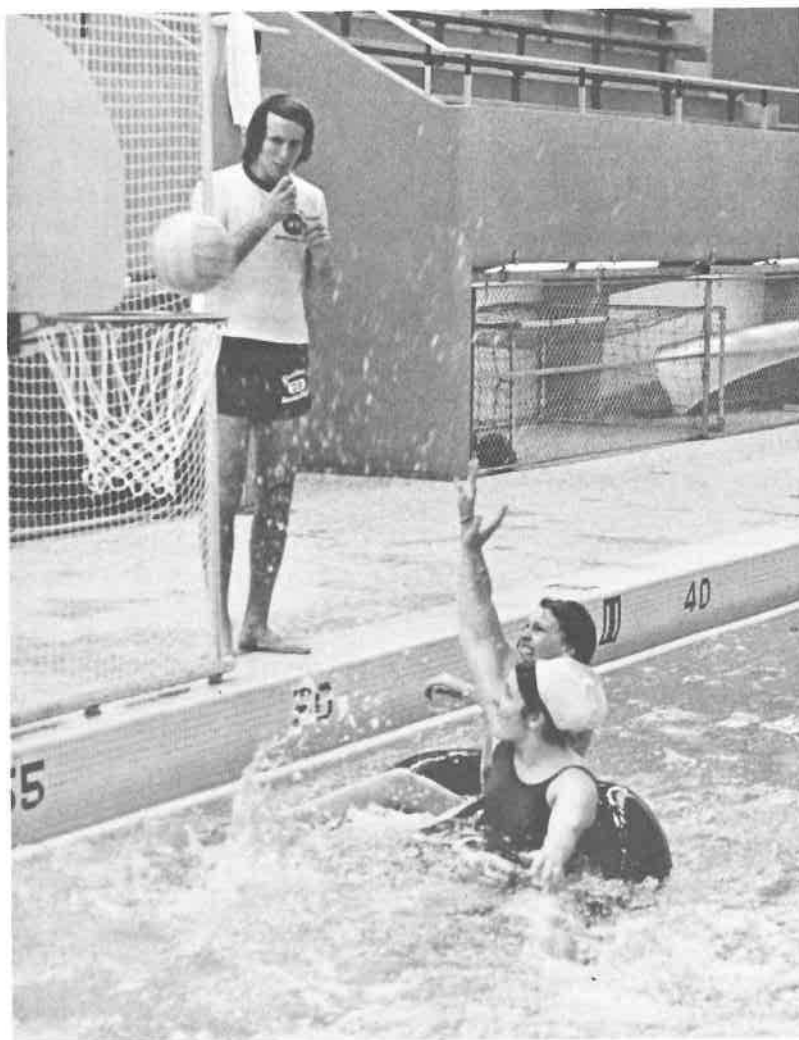

Q: Could you sum up your attitude towards intramural sports?

A: I wanted to run an intramural program since my second year at the University of Buffalo. I wanted to bring the marginal athlete into competition on his own level. I wanted to show the same interest in intramurals that the varsity coach shows to his sport and his players. The students at Mansfield have responded to this approach. I have seventy students working with me in our program. They officiate, schedule, keep score, and arbitrate. They deserve most of the credit. We award T shirts to the winning teams which say either Mansfield State College Champions or Runners Up. They're cheaper than trophies, the students like them, and they advertise the College across the state.

Q: You really seem to like what you do.

A: I enjoy seeing the person who is not a natural athlete out there having a good time making a layup or playing badminton. Some of the teams will lose nearly every game. One team called themselves "The Pushovers" and they were — losing 15 games — but they won 4 and had a ball. When they play their minds are on the game and off all the pressures of tests, studying, a troubled world, and getting a job. They are out there expressing themselves totally, mind, soul, and body — and they're enjoying it. It has meaning to them and that makes it meaningful for me.

MOUNTIE CLUB MEETS GOALS

It was April 1976, and the Mountie Club held its first meeting. Emerging from that session was a set of goals that those in attendance found acceptable. Generally, the club was founded to provide support for the athletic program at Mansfield State College. More specifically, fund raising, service, and morale-building were named targets for club projects.

It is August 1977, and the end of the club's initial year seems like an appropriate time for evaluation. In the area of fund raising, a membership of 120 contributed $5,000 to the athletic program. The largest single expenditure was for the mid-April athletic banquet. Two hundred student athletes enjoyed an excellent meal and interesting speakers. In addition, several athletes were cited for outstanding performances, and former Mansfield coaches Spotts Decker, Bill Gibson, and Bob Maxson were remembered by awards given in their honor.

Club funds have been utilized to satisfy other needs. Certificates and trophies were given to 80 athletes for outstanding individual performances during particular athletic events. The club helped with expenses incurred by athletic recruitment. Athletic equipment was purchased. The club paid the tuition for a course in injury prevention taken by the college's physical therapist.

Service to the athletic program was another goal of the club. Last fall, the club sponsored a professional basketball game on campus that brought over $1,000 to our treasury. All the tasks related to the sponsorship of an event of that magnitude were accomplished by Mountie Club members. In the spring, club members again served the college by providing the labor (from ticket-takers to crowd control) for the ECAC Regional Basketball Tournament. And, not to be overlooked, the club acted in many host-related capacities during the NCAA Regional Baseball Playoffs.

Some "morale-building" activities have already been described, since banquets, certificates, and trophies tend to produce good feelings. In addition, the club sponsored the Alumni Golf Tournament, held the Friday of Alumni Weekend, which created an abundance of good will. The post-game parties which followed several football games were lively, and the picnic to honor last year's championship baseball team was very successful.

The Mountie Club is off to a good start, but it's only the beginning. Several projects have been suggested for next year. We certainly want to have a 2nd Annual Athletic Banquet. Our weight training machine needs to be repaired. The ice-making machine used by all athletic teams should be replaced. The baseball field is without a scoreboard. These and other projects should be considered.

Mountie Club membership is open to anyone. Make your check (generous, we hope) payable to The Mansfield Foundation and designate it for the MOUNTIE CLUB.

In addition to supporting the athletic program, a bonus will be yours. Four athletic events will be designated as Mountie Club Nights. These will include a football game, a men's basketball game, a wrestling match, and a women's basketball/swimming double header. To each of these events, Mountie Club members will be admitted without charge.

EXPERIENCED GRID SQUAD RETURNS

Coach Bernie Sabol's 1977 football team promises to be one of the most exciting in recent years with the development of quarterback Rob Sollberger and several talented receivers. Although mainly a running team for the past several years, with the strong-armed Sollberger at the helm the Mountie offense should open up this season and be the most explosive since the Stew Casterline '70 days.

The 6' 3" sophomore's top targets will include a pair of fleet-footed sophomore ends, Larry Fountain and Stacey Woodyard, and all-purpose back, Keith Shanebrook. Running out of a pro set this season to open up passing lanes, Shanebrook, the only returnee from last season's starting backfield, will share the rushing responsibilities with junior Neil Evans, who is expected to sew up the starting fullback slot when pre-season drills begin Aug. 21.

All-Conference tackle Jim Boyd will anchor a veteran offensive line that will return virtually intact from last season.

The defense will be built around All-Conference junior linebacker, Bill Forsythe, who combined with returning senior Rich Carty for nearly a quarter of the Mounties' tackles a year ago. The line, although hurt by the graduation of stellar performer Steve Botchie, will be an experienced one led by Brian Grohowski and Don Savage.

The defensive backfield has been weakened by the graduation of Will Robinson, who intercepted seven passes in 1976, but the return of Earl Bundy, Dave Frisk, and Frank McMillan, along with promising recruit, Robert Vagonis, an All-Area performer from Willingsboro, NJ, should give the Mounties a strong and experienced corps of defensive backs.

Sabol expects about 110 players to report for pre-season drills Aug. 21 and has positive feelings about this season's prospects. "With 18 returning starters and 34 lettermen we have the most experience we've ever had. That added year or so of game experience means a lot to the players and makes things easier for me. There is a big difference between a predominately freshmen-sophomore team like we had last season and the sophomore-junior team we'll field this year."

For the second successive year, the Mounties will play a ten-game schedule with five home contests. Following the Parents' Day home opener against Bloomsburg Sept. 24, the Mounties will host Cheyney in the Homecoming Game Oct. 1. Also playing at Van Norman Field this season will be Kutztown, Brockport, and, for the first time, Canisius.

TWILIGHT TRACK

Everyone likes the Maxson track because its rubber and plastic "tartan" composition consistently produces fast times. With Palmer and Mudge working the clipboard and starter's gun, this fine facility is open to everyone, and the entire region benefits.

More than 300 athletes — male and female, young and old, local and out-of-town — gather four times each summer at the college's heralded Robert T. Maxson Track to participate in the All-Comers Twilight Track Meets.

Organized in 1973 by the late Bob Maxson, then MSC track coach and member of the physical education department, the meets are now planned and directed by Richard Palmer '68 and Terry Mudge '63. Both men coach track teams at Mansfield High School; Palmer also serves as guidance counselor, while Mudge teaches social studies.

Palmer and Mudge report that the meets, held this year in the early evenings of July 21 and 28 and August 4 and 11, have grown steadily in popularity, with many participants returning season after season.

Events, both field and running, are organized for men and women by age groups, from 6-and-under through 19-and-over, with a special "Masters Mile" for runners over age 30. Ribbons are awarded to the first three finishers in each division.

Meet records have been kept from the beginning, with times steadily decreasing as the caliber of competition has improved. Once attracting mainly Tioga Countians, the field now features athletes from southern New York and northern and central Pennsylvania, with many area coaches bringing their most promising tracksters.

The age groups between 7 and 16 provide the majority of the entries, and the meets have become real training grounds for future stars. Terri Pioli of Montoursville, who as a sophomore captured the 1977 state women's 440 championship, has been running in the Twilight meets since 1974. Other Twilight competitors, miler Tom Pobgee of Horseheads and leaper Israel Howard of Elmira, sport several of the best high school performances this year in the entire Twin Tiers. Locally, Joe Miller, Tom Staff, and Sherri Cady had outstanding seasons in Tioga County; all are Twilight record holders.

While competition is keen, the meets also have a delightful informal air, with entire families competing. Mother may run the 220 yd. dash, Dad may enter the Masters Mile, and the kids will usually try all the events. Parents and visiting coaches also help out as timers, field judges, and clipboard-toters.

Serving the region as a sports center, the college hosts many special track and field events in Van Norman Stadium. Mansfield High runs on the Maxson Track; Northern Tier High School Championship meets are held on the track, as are the Special Olympics for handicapped children.

"HELP US FIND THESE ALUMS!"

In the last several issues of the Mansfieldian an article was run entitled Help Us Find These Alums. The response to this plea has been so effective we have decided to continue this article. To indicate the magnitude of the problem of trying to keep up with the addresses of over 11,000 alumni we have noted separately in the boxed section of this page the names of alums whose Mansfieldian has been returned to the Development Office.

If you happen to know where any of these alums are please drop us a line at the Development Office. Thank you.

SPECIAL ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

John A. Holley, Director
Office of Public Relations

Mansfield State College is committed to assuring equal opportunity to all persons regardless of race, color, religion, national origin, ancestry, age, sex or handicap. This policy extends to employment within and admission to the College and is in compliance with all Federal Laws including Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972.

WE NEED YOUR SUPPORT

During the past year this office has attempted to explain the programs and the problems at Mansfield State College today. Our letters and publications endeavor to motivate interest among friends and alumni of the college. As another calendar year draws to a close, I must mention an area of particular concern to this office - the Annual Giving Campaign.

The annual giving campaign is run from January through December of each calendar year. This year the board of the Mansfield Foundation set a goal of $50,000.00. A goal high in comparison to campaigns run in the past, but realistic in comparison to programs at our sister state colleges. Over the year various appeals have been made to alumni and friends of the college in attempting to reach this goal. As this issue of the Mansfieldian goes to print we are still $20,000.00 away from our goal.

The success of an alumni program rests on the direct support it receives from its alumni. Over the past year and a half this office has endeavored to build a quality program for our alumni. The popular Mansfieldian has grown from one to four issues a year. The Alumni Day and Homecoming events have been expanded. But it takes money to run these kind of programs.

Mansfield State College is facing a severe budget crisis this year. The amount of direct support the college has received from the state has decreased, but operating expenses continue to rise. This means programs must be slashed, and services reduced.

I said in the beginning of the year that if each alumnus were to contribute as little as $5.00 we would have no trouble in reaching our goal. I also said that if we were to reach our goal we would be one of the most successful state colleges in Pa. as far as annual giving is concerned.

For this office to continue to provide the support it has in the past, we must have alumni support in reaching our goal. The good job we feel we have been doing can become better through your support. Thank you for your interest.

THE PARK YEARS — A DECADE OF CHANGE

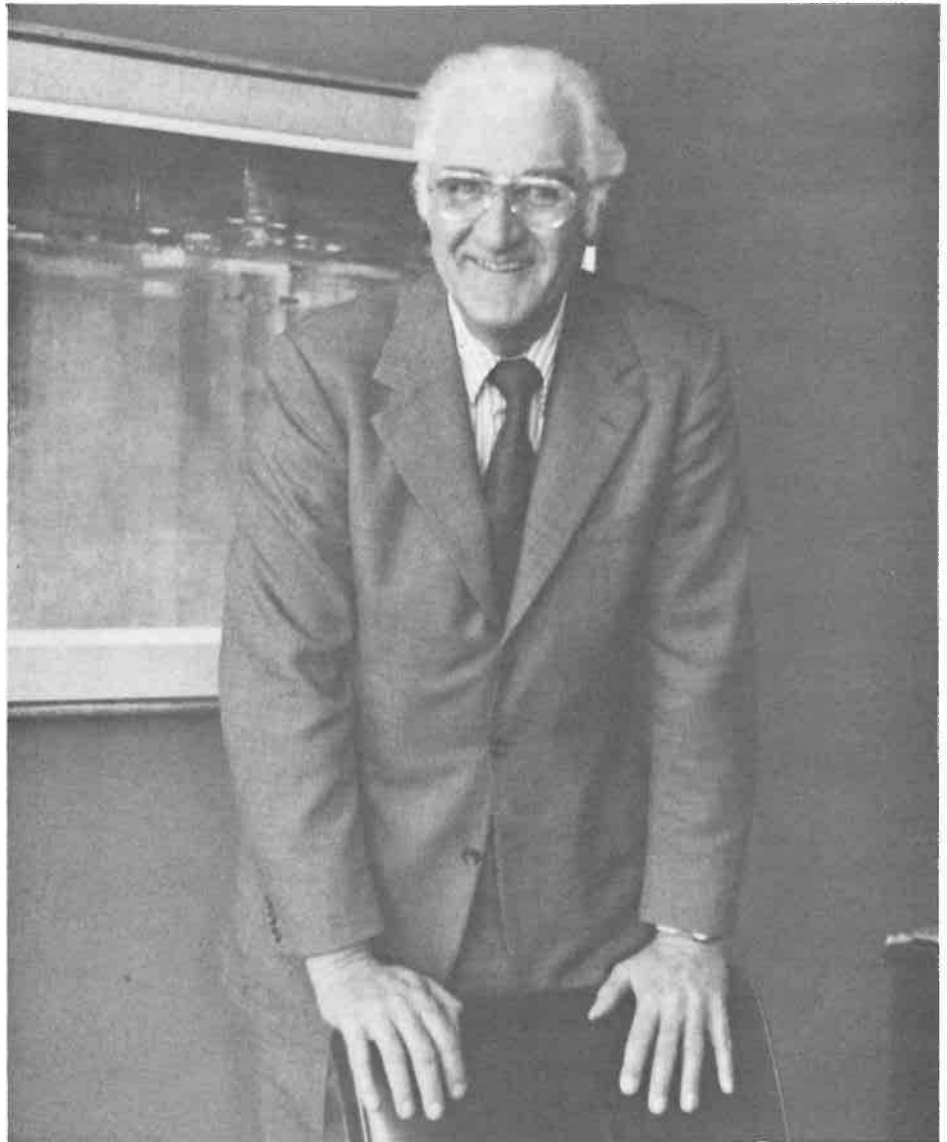

Mansfield's sister school Slippery Rock State College has been struggling for the past two years to stabilize its administration and locate a new president. In an attempt to resolve this crisis and to establish a "cooling off" period, Pennsylvania Governor Milton Shapp decided to appoint an interim president to Slippery Rock. His choice was Mansfield State College president Dr. Lawrence Park.

At the same time Shapp appointed Dr. Donald Darnton, then vice president of academic affairs at Mansfield, as the new interim president of Mansfield State College.

The governor told Park, "Your selection to lead Slippery Rock at this time is a real tribute to your record for nearly a decade as president of Mansfield." Park replied that he regretted leaving Mansfield on such short notice but that he was responding to a sense of loyalty to the state college system. He was confident that Mansfield's administrative transition would be a smooth one under Dr. Darnton's direction.

In the letter naming Darnton president of Mansfield, Governor Shapp wrote, "Your selection to lead Mansfield is a tribute to your substantial professional accomplishments. Your appointment as interim president may require two years of service, during which you should assist in the search for a permanent president of Mansfield."

President Darnton is highly respected by the Mansfield staff and students. Known as an astute and diligent administrator, Darnton has succeeded in developing new programs and raising academic standards in a time of reduced budgets. The college faculty regards Darnton as an administrator who knows the problems Mansfield must solve in the coming years and as a man with the courage and wisdom to make the right decisions. The president's office is not new to Darnton: during the Park sabbatical he served as acting president, and he has held top administrative posts at universities in Virginia, Utah, and Ohio. An acting college president implements the policy of the absent president; an interim president makes his own policy. While Darnton will follow many of the policies initiated under Park, he plans to develop new directions for the college as well.

Reflecting on his job as chief administrator, Darnton said, "I see ahead a period of consolidation and the need to keep the institution in a position of strength." Like most colleges today, Mansfield is struggling to reduce its operating expenses while maintaining a healthy enrollment. Yet President Darnton is more concerned with quality programs which attract top students than he is with numbers for number's sake. Darnton's four year push for academic excellence at Mansfield has won him faculty support and has also attracted a better student to the college. This fall, with college board scores declining nationally, Mansfield's incoming freshman class averaged 30 points higher on college boards than did 1976's freshmen.

Dr. John Baynes, Vice President.

Dr. John Baynes will be the new vice president of academic affairs. Baynes and his wife Audrey are both Mansfield graduates. To generations of Mansfieldians this man is known and beloved as classmate, professor, musician, and department chairman. John Baynes began teaching music at the college in 1947 and is now in his thirtieth year at Mansfield. He was chairman of the music department for nine years.

The nine years Larry Park served as president of Mansfield were some of the most turbulent and difficult in the history of higher education in the United States. Following the rapid growth and turmoil of the 1960's, small colleges suddenly faced enrollment problems and budget cuts in the early 1970's. Recession, job shortages, reduced state spending for education, faculty unionization, affirmative action, equal rights for women, and energy shortages made a college president's job a Herculean labor.

The Radical Years

While Fred Bryan was president of Mansfield between 1964 and 1968 the campus still retained much of the tranquility, even the complacency of the traditional state teachers college of the 1950's. Almost every student was majoring in education; student protests were unheard of; dorm mothers and hawk-eyed deans patrolled the dorms playing the roles of parents away from home. When Park arrived in the fall of 1968, however, unrest on other campuses was reaching Mansfield. He was not in office a month before students were marching and new faculty members were making demands. This was a sign of health, although to many it did not seem so at the time.

In those days Park found he could handle a confrontation or a crisis remarkably well. He never ran from trouble, and some said he even welcomed it. The Park style was open, gusty, and cool. Tall, handsome, statesmanlike, he could confront a boiling mob, could rap with faculty about grievances, and could keep his cool without seeming distant. To get his fingers on the inner rhythms on campus he started the "president's forum," where once a week he would meet with students, staff, anyone, and would field any question. This rapidly earned him the respect of the students and staff.

During the Kent State-Cambodian crisis Mansfield student radicals called a general strike. Park faced a mob of students in Straughn Auditorium. Flexible but tough, he outflanked the radicals by appealing to the moderate students: he would cancel classes and hold a day of teach-ins where students and faculty could hash out the troubles of a nation torn by a dirty war and a disrupted house.

Multi-Purpose

But the radical years, brief as they were at Mansfield, were trivial compared to the complexity of the problems which needed to be solved to make Mansfield a multi-purpose college. In 1968 Park saw that a long range plan was needed to lead

Mansfield from a single mission school to a well-rounded college offering a variety of degrees. The goal-oriented planning and budgeting which Park initiated enabled Mansfield steadily to create new programs and services without disrupting already existing programs. Park was the first state college president to develop a long range mission; the state liked the idea, and soon all the state colleges were required to follow the Mansfield model.

The move to offer a broad choice of educational opportunities to the people of north central Pennsylvania while maintaining excellence in teacher-training brought a phalanx of new teachers to the college: men and women with Ph.Ds. from Columbia, Michigan State, Louisiana State, the Universities of Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Massachusetts. By 1977 the college was offering 19 programs in teacher education and 32 in arts and sciences and fine arts. Mansfield graduates still became teachers, but they also became opera singers, actors, business men, doctors, lawyers, and jet pilots.

The now diverse faculty often clashed among themselves and with the new president, but the college's long-range plan was as much their work as the president's, and Park was always willing to listen to a problem or a new idea. When state college faculty unionized in 1972, their ability to make demands on Park increased. Park's ability to keep the best interests of the college foremost in everyone's mind, however, kept dealings open and amiable. One sensed that Park believed strongly in his people and in Mansfield.

Park also believed in continuing education, and his master plan called for expanded service to the region. The college has had close ties to the northern tier for 120 years, and Mansfield remains the only college in the state's Appalachian highlands. Park felt a continuing education program could bring college courses directly into rural communities. Bill Beisel, director of continuing education, says, "Larry Park was a prime mover of the life-long learning program at the state colleges; he pressured the other college presidents to get it accepted." Today the college is truly an outreach institution offering a host of evening courses from Sayre to Coudersport, reaching over 3,000 off-campus adults each semester.

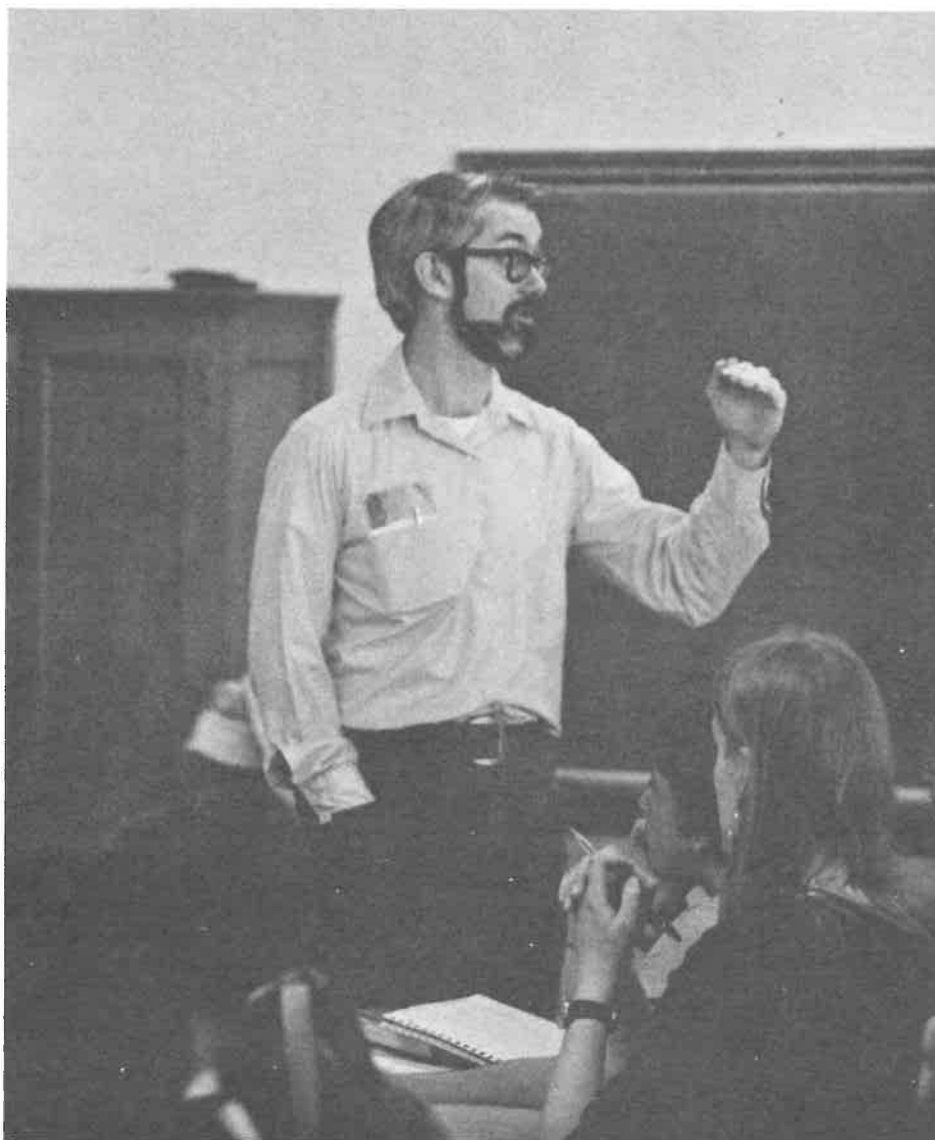

An Identity Crisis

The Commonwealth officially dropped the term "teachers' college" from state colleges in 1960. Mansfield then began a metamorphosis which is not yet complete, and an identity crisis from which it still suffers. New programs were instituted in liberal arts under President Bryan in 1965. The first programs added were in the traditional areas - Bachelor of Arts degrees were offered in English, psychology, theatre, music, history, political science, and the natural sciences. By 1972 the liberal arts program was rounded out with majors in philosophy and sociology. Yet few students sought these degrees; three out of four undergraduates were still enrolled in teacher training programs.

As long as teaching jobs were plentiful Mansfield remained basically a teacher training college. When the declining birth rates of the late fifties and sixties began to be felt in the public schools after 1973, the need for teachers took a sudden dip. This decreasing demand for teachers radically changed the nature of the college. Students attending state colleges in Pennsylvania usually are vocationally oriented, so when the number of education majors finding teaching jobs dropped from 80% in 1972 to only 55% in 1975 students began to explore other career alternatives. The college continued to provide quality programs in teacher training during those years. The school of education became more selective and intensive in order to prepare graduates for a buyer's market. Liberal arts departments were suddenly faced with more students with specific vocational needs.

Dr. Richard Wilson, former Dean of the School of Education.

Dr. Richard Walker, a faculty council president.

These were painful years for the college, but they were also exciting years. The shift from a single mission teacher training college to a multi-purpose college was a test to the imagination and flexibility of everyone on the staff. Recruiting and placement were once routine; now they were a challenge. Enrollment was declining and operating costs were skyrocketing. Critics of the Park administration claim that the college failed to develop new programs quickly enough to attract students outside the education field. Defenders say the problems were historical, mainly reflections of the birth rate, and that Mansfield responded better than most colleges. Between 1974 and 1977 the college declined in enrollment by 500 students - from 3150 to its present 2650.

A Changing Job Market

The school of education responded to a changing job market with expanded programs in special education, reading, social restoration, competency based education, and graduate work.

The need for college graduates in the social services rapidly increased after 1972, and the college quickly rallied with programs in criminal justice, psychology, political science, sociology, child development, nutrition, and special education - all of which could lead to careers outside teaching.

This flexibility demonstrated the vitality of Mansfield. During the last three years of the Park administration the college continued to cautiously add programs geared for specific job markets. Degrees in social restoration, medical technology (including two-year associate degree programs in x-ray technology and respiratory therapy), art history, studio art, and business administration now offer students an even wider choice of careers. And the college is now seeking approval for degrees in music therapy, social work and fish culture, and for a new pre-medical program in conjunction with the Hahnemann Medical School in Philadelphia.

The rapid evolution into a diverse and complex institution occurred during a period of slashed budgets, rising costs, and fluctuating enrollments. It was future shock for the once tranquil college. It was a time of higher education when colleges folded, when university presidents were fired, when faculty were re-trenched en masse. But these extremes never happened at Mansfield. Much of the credit for survival during the transition years goes to Park and the Mansfield faculty and staff. Park once said, "We were always on an austerity budget, and when the budget crunch hit we rolled with it without curtailment of programs or drastic reduction in staff."

Red Brick Buildings

Mansfield's physical plant, much of it a legacy from the Bryan era, grew rapidly over the last decade: a spacious dining hall, a modern recreation complex, a music center, a science building and planetarium, a student union, an addition to the library and administration building, a health center, and several new dorms. What these red brick buildings lacked in frills they made up for in function. They helped make the college the cultural and recreational center for a vast rural area, a place where local schools came together for band days, track meets, speech contests; where local citizens could gather for conferences, seminars, and concerts. North Hall, that Victorian cross between a mansion and a mill, grew more beloved as it became more unsafe. Condemned, its upper stories sealed off, it still stands, though freshmen girls no longer hurl panties at restless males storming its battlements on balmy spring nights.

The college staffed these new facilities with professionals in counselling, health care, career placement, financial aid, and housing. Wizard library director Jim Simonis turned the three college libraries into modern learning centers for the liberal arts, education, and music. With Mansfield graduate Dave Dave Russell, Director Special Programs.

Russell directing special programs, the college began to attract a greater diversity of students. Economically disadvantaged students, foreign students, and minority groups enrolled in programs designed for their special needs. Campus life was greatly enriched by black students who brought their language, life style, and urban culture to the rural college.

This mosaic of Mansfield's last nine years indicates that the college during the Park era has done far more than survive. It has flourished. By first defining and then accomplishing many of its goals the college has emerged as a sophisticated and efficient institution offering broad educational opportunities while continuing to maintain its traditional excellence in teacher training. No doubt, the Commonwealth felt the college well run enough to remove the captain without worrying about the ship. The mood on campus is one of confidence - both in Don Darnton and in the future of the college.

Sophistication and complexity have not changed the mood of Mansfield. It retains its warmth, its intimacy, its relaxed atmosphere of learning. Students still get as much personal attention from their teachers as they want; they still befriend the men and women who teach and guide them. Mansfield is still a place where you are remembered long after you graduate.

As Mansfield's twelfth president, Larry Park did much to mature the college, but he also managed to preserve its intimacy and charm. The achievement of that balance was no small task.

"WE LOVE TO TALK TO AETHEISTS"

Students don't remove their hats or dip their fingers in holy water when they enter 316 South Hall. The room looks like any other office on campus, but it isn't. It is the Campus Ministry office where Judy Wismer and Sister Margo Worfolk spend their days running the student volunteer services and talking to students about their spiritual lives. Here students can slough off the pressures of a secular society by helping organize a religious service on campus, find a meaningful volunteer activity, or talk to someone about God.

Serving Mansfield as links between the campus and the local congregations and clergy, Sister Margo and Judy help students make contact with the churches of their choice. They work with the Mansfield area Ministerium, an ecumenical group of local protestant and catholic clergymen. These local ministers and priests actively seek to engage the college students in the rituals and activities of their congregation.

For Jewish students at Mansfield, Mr. Fred Batt serves as faculty advisor and coordinates travel to the orthodox and reform synagogues in Elmira.

This year the Campus Ministry will expand its activities. In a house directly across the street from the college the Campus Ministry will be able to sponsor religious services, meetings, religious counseling, speakers, and religious education. The first religious education program begins in October with the dynamic and popular Reverend John Dromazos lecturing on the New Testament. Upcoming events include weekly communion services on Sunday evenings, and a folk mass in Manser Hall.

Of the Mansfield students and their religious life Judy Wismer says, "Our students tend to come from religious backgrounds; most of them have been brought up to believe in a religious faith. As they grow and become more sophisticated in their knowledge of the world they begin to change their values. Yet their spiritual lives and their moral beliefs often do not grow with them. A student's religious life is not addressed in the classroom at a secular college. So, many students experience a split or gap between their academic knowledge and their religious beliefs. They need to rethink and reevaluate many of the moral truths taught to them in Sunday School. This is where we come in."

As trained religious counselors, Sister Margo and Judy try to help students' spiritual growth keep apace of their academic and social growth. All too often when the secular beliefs and the religious beliefs do not mesh the student becomes anxious about the conflict. "We are there to listen, to sympathize, and to guide the student through this growth," says Judy. "We don't have the answers, but we can help students confront their doubts, conflicts and anxiety over religious beliefs. Hopefully we can help them get on the other side of their uneasiness. We teach them that questioning is healthy in one's spiritual life."

These two women say they enjoy talking to students who call themselves atheists because they usually find the student is merely rebelling against something he learned in Sunday School. Through religious counseling the student can learn to distinguish between minor disagreements he might have with his childhood religious instruction and his deep spiritual needs. Sister Margo and Judy believe people need to meet these deep spiritual needs in order to be whole.

The Campus Ministry office is a busy place because it also serves as a clearing house for student volunteer services on and off campus. Today's students want to do something active as part of their religious life, and over 100 of them serve as volunteers in the college and local communities. They work as "big brothers and sisters" in the Martha Lloyd Home for Retarded Women; they visit and entertain the elderly in nursing homes; they help tutor inmates in jails. Often a sorority or fraternity will ask the campus Ministry to suggest a worthwhile project to them.

The split between the sacred and the secular concerns of our society is wide. Everyday a college student is bombarded with stimuli from the realm of the visible, the mundane, the secular. Yet most students today are longing to be touched by something deeper, and they are searching for something ultimate. The two women in Campus Ministry are there to help them on their journey.

F. LEE BAILEY IN STRAUGHN SHOWING

When F. Lee Bailey was first invited to speak at Mansfield he had to cancel. He was busy defending Patricia Hurst. But this year, on a cold rainy Sunday, he made it and was welcomed by a large and receptive audience of students, local citizens, and twin tier attorneys. He was as entertaining and informative behind the podium as he is persuasive before the bench.

Although he loaded his lecture with humorous anecdotes on Indian treaties and murders in Potter County, the thesis of his talk was that our system of trial by jury in this country is badly flawed.

Accusing the American public of a low level of interest in due process by the courts, Bailey said most people see defense lawyers as Perry Masons who crack the case themselves and unmask the real criminal during the trial. But this rarely happens. Instead, the lawyers are too often men without formal training in courtroom procedures, tactics, and rhetoric. The juries are usually unsure of what exactly is going on and what they are supposed to do. "A person can very easily get a fair trial and still be convicted of a crime he didn't commit," said Bailey.

As an example, Bailey cited the case of an honest businessman accused of a minor crime. He could spend years and a fortune to prove his innocence, yet would be stigmatized by the public for his acquittal because Americans assume anyone in court has done something wrong. Or he could be found guilty even though innocent.

Bailey feels we need to change our system of trial by jury in several ways: first we need to train and license trial lawyers in courtroom procedures to guarantee equal representation for both prosecution and defense; second, we need to bring fewer cases to trial by careful pre-trial hearings done by no-nonsense lawyers who will get all the facts out; third, we need to revamp our jury system; and, fourth, we need to be willing to reconsider a case the moment new evidence presents itself.

Particularly hard on incompetent trial lawyers, Bailey said, "Chief Justice Berger recently said that in only 20% of the cases which come to trial do all the pertinent facts come out. You wouldn't want an inexperienced doctor or pilot using you for on-the-job training but that is exactly what happens every day in the courts. The experience of the lawyer in court probably affects the verdict more than the facts of the case." As a remedy, Bailey suggests the training and licensing of trial lawyers after law school. "In Britain only 3,000 barristers-court lawyers serve a population of fifty million, and they are all good because they have five or six years of practice in the courts before they handle a case on their own. Moreover, they prosecute as well as defend and are immune to public pressure."

Citing the British trial system as the best in the world, Bailey pointed out that trial by jury in Britain is seen as a means of last resort. Only when there is real doubt and a very complex case is the trial by jury set in motion. Most litigations are resolved in careful pre-trial hearings under the British system.

The ideal jury system, according to Bailey, is found in our own armed forces. The 1951 Uniform Code of Military Justice calls for a jury of from five to eleven officers. They are permitted to take notes and ask questions, which public juries are not. When two thirds of the jurors agree in a military trial then that is the verdict. Hung juries are common in public trials; in military courts they are rare. Moreover, Bailey feels the best potential jurors rarely make it to the box because the educated, the powerful, and the rich have ways of getting out of jury duty. Yet they are often the ones who would best comprehend the complexity of a difficult case. He said Patricia Hurst was fortunate in having a good jury for the Hibernia Bank robbery trial. They acquitted her, but usually the very wealthy are treated with little sympathy by the average jury. When a lawyer has a weak case he looks for the dumbest jurors he can find because he knows he can fool them.

Bailey went on to say that opposing public trial lawyers will often agree to suppress evidence which is vital to the case because it could backfire in either direction. This simply doesn't happen in British or military courts because the jury has the right to ask questions. "If I was guilty I would want a public trial in this country," Bailey said. "If I was innocent I would want a military trial."

The no-nonsense approach to trial by jury in Britain and the U.S. military appeals to the famous defense attorney because he has seen so many trials turn into circuses. Citing the Dr. Sam Shepherd murder case, Bailey claimed an innocent man was initially found guilty because a newspaper found it could sell papers by playing up the "doctor murders wife" angle. "Television is the best vehicle for covering a trial; newspapers make it a national sport," said Bailey.

In this country what happens during a public trial dominates the outcome, not the actual facts, Bailey feels. "Nonsense tactics of lawyers played to confused juries influence a case more than hard facts. We must eliminate this."

Bailey sees Watergate as a classic case of bad legal advice. "Dean was legally incompetent. If Nixon had expert legal advice the outcome would have been different. When they approached me I told the Nixon people I wouldn't touch it with a ten foot pole because they had mis-handled it so badly that by then it was too late."

In a message to undergraduates Bailey said the best preparation for a legal career is mastery of the English language. "Young people ask me what is the best major for admittance to law school: political science, history, sociology? I tell them learn to read, write, and speak your mother tongue - these are a lawyer's tools."

TITAN: SHINE ON, SATURN'S MOON

Star Wars is sweeping the country. The film's spectacular special effects have stimulated renewed speculation about outer space. Will the United States' current NASA endeavor, the Voyager mission, find "sandmen" or Oby-Ben-Kenoby on Saturn?

Few things are more unlikely, but professors George Mullen and Dick Mason of Mansfield's physics department are hopeful of other vital discoveries from the flights of Voyagers 1 and 2.

The Voyager crafts, launched within two weeks of each other in late summer, are advanced Mariner-class spaceships which will travel to Jupiter and Saturn, arriving at Jupiter more than sixteen months after lift-off and beaming back to earth the results of eleven separate experiments.

"An attempt to formulate a slow-motion film of the development of our solar system" is how Mullen describes the current space program. Each planet influences the others, and all are governed by the same star, our sun. The more we understand about other parts of our system, the closer we will come to an understanding of our own earth's evolution and future. These other worlds can provide clues to how we might manage our home planet more wisely in generations to come.

Mullen is keenly interested in atmospheric evolution. Scientists believe earth's unique envelope of oxygen and nitrogen has not always existed in its present form but has evolved through several stages. It is hoped that investigation of Jupiter and Saturn, both of which seem to be surrounded chiefly by hydrogen and helium, and of their satellites, will provide valuable data. Subject to special scrutiny will be Saturn's largest moon, Titan, only slightly smaller than Mars and the only satellite known to have a dense atmosphere. Its heavy concentration of methane, as well as its presumed solid surface, has given rise to speculation that complex organic molecules could be present, Titan is therefore the most likely site for such compounds, precursors of life.

Professor Mason, who is especially intent upon the project as he was among the scientists invited to view the Voyager 1 launch, is fascinated by the energy imbalance of these two huge planets. Ground-based observations have indicated that Jupiter radiates considerably more energy than it receives from the sun; this appears true to a lesser extent for Saturn also. Close-up studies of each planet's energy profile may determine the reasons for this.

Jupiter is so large that its gravitational attraction tugs at every other planet and changes the courses of comets. This massive power sometimes leads astronomers to regard Jupiter as a "second sun" and the solar system as a two-body group. In fact four of Jupiter's moons resemble the four inner-solar planets in size and distance relationships. Jupiter's energy output further reinforces this theory of a "mini-sun."

Mullen and Mason also emphasize the importance of the Voyager experiments measuring magnetic fields. A planet's magnetic field not only indicates conditions deep in the interior but also protects a planet from direct solar energy and is vital to radio communication. Radio bursts from Jupiter seem to emit as much energy as several atomic bombs. Jupiter's magnetic field appears to be more than ten times stronger than earth's, while saturn's field is only recently discovered and little known. Scientists are anxious to compare the two and to use them as models to further understand our own atmosphere's ability to protect us from harmful radiation.

If all goes well with the visits to Jupiter and Saturn, Voyager 2 will be redirected to fly on to Uranus. "Then we scientists can sleep for four years," jokes Mason, "for the spacecraft will not reach Uranus until 1986, more than four years after it leaves Saturn."

Finally, the Voyagers will be unable to respond to commands from Earth. They will drift out of our solar system and sail on forever - perhaps to that "galaxy far, far away" of Star Wars.

FOUR NEW FACULTY MEMBERS

The college welcomes four new teachers to its faculty for the 1977-78 academic year.

Dr. James Carlson, an assistant professor of business and economics, is a Mansfield graduate, Class of '65. He served for four years at Mansfield (1967-71) as assistant director of admissions and holds a master's degree in economics from Bucknell and a D.Ed. from Penn State. Ms. Daisy Herndon will join the department of health and physical recreation as an assistant professor. She holds a master's degree from Texas Woman's University and comes to Mansfield from Keene State College in Vermont. She will coach the women's volleyball team.

Mr. Stephen P. McEven enters that music department as an assistant professor with a master's degree in music from the Juilliard School of Music. He will also play trombone in the Mansfield Brass Quintet, a touring faculty-performing group. Ms. Miriam R. Aberg joins the home economics staff as an instructor in child development. She received her master's degree from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

FORENSICS TEAM 14th IN NATION

The Mansfield forensics team ranked 14th in the nation this past year among more than 300 competing colleges. Although the team placed 39th out of 149 top teams in the national championships last year, it still maintained its high standing because of an impressive cumulative score in the competition and a good season record.

WIND ENSEMBLE REUNION

The 1977-78 academic year marks the beginning of the 25th season for the Mansfield College Wind Ensemble. To celebrate this anniversary, a wind ensemble alumni weekend is being planned for April 29 and 30, 1978.

All former members are invited to participate in an alumni band which will perform both alone and with current wind ensemble players for a Sunday afternoon concert. Conductors will be Professor Emeritus Bertram Francis, who founded the ensemble in 1952, and associate professor Donald Stanley, who has directed the ensemble since Mr. Francis' retirement in 1971.

Those needing more information should contact Donald Stanley at the college.

According to Michael Leiboff, faculty director of the team, a recent California publication shows Mansfield has ranked in the top 15% of college forensics teams for the past three years. The only other Pennsylvania school in the top 25 is Clarion State in 25th place.

Returning for competition this year are five veterans who helped compile that record: John Heim, Paul Scovell, Doreen Vroman, Amy Kelchner, and Lyn Ect.

ARCHIVES GAINS BUTLER MEMORABILIA

Five boxes of materials belonging to the late Will George Butler, former member of the college faculty for whom the Butler Music Center on campus is named, have been donated to the archives of Mansfield State by Ward Austin of Mansfield.

Butler, a violinist and composer of international renown and an accomplished poet and painter, left a wealth of memorabilia which will be placed in a special display area in the archives.

According to Dr. Robert Unger, archivist, the donated items include poems, correspondence, teaching materials, concert programs, and several musical compositions in Butler's own hand.

COLLEGE OFFERS FREE READING CLINIC

This past summer Mansfield State sponsored a special reading clinic in which the reading ability of over 100 school students from the Mansfield and Troy schools was analyzed. The five-week clinic, an outgrowth of a graduate reading course taught by Dr. Robert Putt, enabled 29 reading teachers completing advanced study to diagnose and instruct students with all types of reading problems.

The program was particularly successful because it combined first-hand experience for the teachers under Putt's supervision with reading instruction for the students at no cost to the school districts.

Dr. Putt recently received his D.Ed. from the Pennsylvania State University and is the author of a book for public school teachers, "Working with the Student Teacher."

COED NAMED FIRST CHAIR BASSOONIST

Debra Heiney, a senior music education major from Orefield, Pa., has been selected as the first chair bassoonist for the National Intercollegiate Band in competition held recently at the University of California at Los Angeles.

MANSFIELD AWARDED $54,000 IN EDUCATION GRANTS

The college has been awarded two teacher training grants by the U.S. Office of Education for 1977-78 totalling $54,000. Both grants will be administered by the department of special education within the college's School of Education. One grant of $24,000 will help the department prepare teachers of mentally and physically handicapped children, while the second grant of $30,000 enables the School of Education to train elementary and secondary teachers to teach handicapped children in regular classes.

The recent passage of the Education for All Handicapped Children Act, to take effect by the 1978 school year, will require all handicapped students to be educated in as normal a setting as possible. Many such children will be "mainstreamed" into regular classes. Both new grants will enable Mansfield State to help Pennsylvania schools respond effectively to this mandate.

1-3-5 YEAR FOLLOW-UP STUDY UNDERWAY

The School of Education currently is conducting a 1-3-5 year follow-up study of its graduates. Survey forms were mailed late in September to '72, '74, and '76 graduates. Due to a delay in procuring address labels, the mailing was about two weeks late, and therefore the Oct. 5 deadline for returning the completed forms was unrealistic.

Any alumni who received this "performance appraisal instrument" are asked to complete and return it at their earliest convenience. If the study is to be meaningful, a high return is essential. If you discarded the material because of the deadline, please contact the Dean of the School of Education, and another form will be provided.

Also, if you are a Mansfield graduate, a member of the class of '72, '74, or '76, are teaching, and did not receive the study survey, please contact Dr. Robert Swinsick, Dean, School of Education, Mansfield State College, so that you may be included in the study.

KILTS, STICKS AND CORNERS

Women's field hockey boasts no Olympic medals, no national TV coverage, no professional contracts, yet in twelve years at Mansfield State the sport has risen from an informal club status to a full-fledged varsity sport, attracting a squad of thirty-five women and regularly producing winning seasons.

Miss Randy Mosher, the team's coach since its inception, has high hopes for the current campaign. Last year's women posted a 5-3 record, and only two of those starters graduated. In addition, Miss Mosher notes several promising freshmen. The nucleus of the team is a strong junior contingent led by Alicia Hamerla, a home economics major from King of Prussia who also stars in basketball. Alicia was named Outstanding Female Athlete of the Year at last spring's Mountie Club banquet, where she was also cited for the outstanding single performance in an athletic contest.

Operating on the usual limited budget and with no coaching assistance, Miss Mosher still feels the program is competitive. "While we cannot do any face-to-face recruiting," she says, "we do contact coaches and promising players throughout the state."

"Most of our women hail from the public schools of southeastern Pennsylvania, where field hockey is a serious varsity sport. Very few Northern Tier high schools offer field hockey, so we must look outside the immediate area. However, each year we do have several newcomers to the sport make the team; occasionally they even become starters."

The team practices on Spalding Field, located on campus directly above the varsity baseball diamond. Convenient to the dorms, the facility's only major drawback is its lack of a drinking fountain. The field drains well, and Miss Mosher praises the college's maintenance crew. "Many visiting coaches comment on the cooperativeness of our groundskeepers. They can't believe I don't have to line the field myself."

The Mansfield squad operates as an independent, scheduling Lycoming, Bucknell, Bloomsburg, Williamsport Community College, Ithaca, College Misericordia, Oneonta, University of Buffalo, SUNY Brockport, and the University of Scranton. The team is a member of the Eastern Regional Division of AIAW (Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women), which was established three years ago under a Title IX mandate.

Each member school's won-loss record determines its eligibility for regional and national AIAW hockey tournaments. Individual players may also be invited to try out for AIAW all-star status.

"Mansfield has not yet advanced to this level of competition," states Miss Mosher. "Eastern regional play is by far the toughest in the country. Field hockey is just catching on in the Far West and is played very little in the Midwest. In fact, the top four teams at Nationals last year were West Chester, the current champs, Ursinus, Lock Haven, and Maryland - all from the East."

Although there are not yet any professional field hockey teams, outstanding players may continue to compete after graduation in club hockey leagues which operate in many urban and suburban areas. These teams provide most of the members selected for national squads, such as the United States Touring Team which participated in the 1976 International Championships held in England.

While Mansfield has yet to produce its first field hockey All-American, Miss Mosher directs a competitive and satisfying program. From the six-week summer conditioning warm-up prescribed for each player to the final game of the season - a blood feud between male college administrators and the varsity squad - field hockey appears to be an important and continuing part of Mansfield's total athletic picture.

AUTUMN WRAP-UP

Perhaps the toughest opponent Mountie athletic teams have run into this fall has been the Mansfield weather. But the squads have managed to dodge some of the rain, and several teams are sloshing toward good seasons.

One of the most successful squads at Mansfield this fall has been the cross country team. Under second-year coach Ed Winrow, the Mounties won their first three meets, including an upset win over rival Bloomsburg State. Going into their final month of action, which includes the first-ever Mansfield Invitational Cross Country Meet, they own a 3-2 overall record. Seniors Welles Lobb and John Sinclair have led the Mounties across the countryside this fall in what appears to be one of the school's up-and-coming athletic teams.

On the tennis courts, where both the men's and women's teams are playing a split fall-spring schedule this year, the weather has hurt both teams. Under coach Art DeGenaro, the men's team topped Elmira in its first match before falling to Pennsylvania State College Conference toughies, Bloomsburg and Lock Haven, for a 1-2 record thus far. Craig Detweiler and Jim Coyle are playing in the number one and two spots for the Mounties.

The women, now under the tutelage of retired phys. ed. instructor Helen Lutes, have managed to get around the weather and split four matches. Area performers Barb Maynard of Wellsboro and Sherry DeGenaro of Mansfield are playing in the one and two spots.

On the baseball diamond, John Heaps' Mounties have beaten the elements as well as their opponents to take five of six games for a fine fall season. Twin-bill victories over SUNY Oneonta and Lehigh, and a split with Ithaca, were led by pitcher-first baseman Mike Tancredi and freshman shortstop Bryan Fuller.

Roger Maisner's golf squad, also hampered by the weather managed to complete only four times in the first six weeks of the season. The team split two matches with Elmira and participated in two tournaments. At the Elmira College Tournament the Mounties placed an impressive fourth out of 16 teams, then finished ninth out of 14 at the East Stroudsburg Tournament. Sophomore Ray Pikulski and freshman Mike Davis consistently have been among the Mountie's low scorers.

FOOTBALL

Things just aren't going the right way for the Mountie Football team this fall. Although statistics show that Mansfield has outplayed three of its four opponents, and played fairly even with the fourth, the team record stands at 1-3. "We're just not making the 'big play,'" coach Bernie Sabol said. "We can't seem to put together that big drive or important goal-line stand that gives a team its momentum."

Momentum is an "intangible" in athletics, but an important one, and one which the Mounties have had only once this season. In the opener against St. Francis College the Mountie offense drove for a touchdown on its first possession and went on to an easy 34-7 victory. A week later at California State (Pa.), the Mounties dominated play throughout the first three quarters but went into the final period behind 14-8. Down by only a touchdown, the Mounties failed to come up with the "big play," and California went on to a 35-16 win.

The following two weekends saw the Mounties shut out 24-0 by Bloomsburg, in a game which was much closer than the final score indicated, and then beaten 16-7 by a Cheyney squad which the Mounties handled until the final minutes of the game. Leading 7-3 at the six-minute mark in the fourth quarter, the Mounties allowed Cheyney two quick touchdowns on back-to-back turnovers for a heartbreaking loss.

Mansfield has been led by quarterback Rob Sollberger, who is the conference's second ranked passer, and fullback Neil Evans, who has had 100-yard games against St. Francis and Cheyney and is ranked third in the conference with an 87 yard per game average.

BASKETBALL PREVIEW

Despite the challenge of a very tough schedule which will include a pair of Division I powers, Memphis State and Mississippi State, among its 16 road games, prospects for the upcoming basketball season at Mansfield are among the best in recent years.

Coach Ed Wilson will have seven lettermen returning from last year's 17-8 squad which copped the E.C.A.C. Regional Division II title. Among those lettermen are two flashy New York City products, Duane Dodwell and Andre Stanley, who give the Mounties their most devastating forward combination since the days of Charlie Williams and Bob Weinstein ('68 - '70). The two 6'4" standouts were All-Tourney selections when Mansfield topped Division II powerhouse Morgan State in the E.C.A.C. Tournament finals last spring.

Another returning starter is point-guard Billy "The Bullet" Nasser. A hard-nosed, take-charge ballplayer known for his defensive abilities, Nasser directed the offense, often drew the toughest defensive assignment, and led the team in assists and steals a year ago.

Sophomore Dave Whitfield will man the center position following a strong freshman showing. The lanky and unorthodox freshman improved immensely throughout last season, and at 6'8" should establish himself as one of the conference's top pivot men this year.

Wilson anticipates a deep bench with returnees Willie Stroman, Mike Ward, and Loren Stoney, several sophomores off last year's J.V. team, and a couple of "blue-chip" freshmen prospects. The team's lack of height and its punishing schedule appear to be Wilson's biggest problems at this point, but, with the further development of Whitfield and the expected brilliance of transfer Joe Stallworth, the Mounties could surprise many of their Conference and Division III opponents this winter.

CLASS NEWS

1918

William L. Nicholls is the state director of the NRTN New Jersey. He resides with his wife in Highland Park, N.J.

1924

Elizabeth Geiss Duffy, in what must be something of a record, retired in 1976 after 51 years of teaching. She has worked in elementary schools in Scranton, Pa., Elizabeth, N.J., and Cranford, N.J. Mrs. Duffy has also traveled extensively throughout the United States and Europe. Her current address is 105 Grove St., Apt. 4, Elizabeth, N.J. 07202.

1926

Ellis D. Williams reports a long and varied career, which has included 16 years teaching at Clarks Summit, Pa., 10 years of college physics at Rutgers, Lafayette, and Trinity, 4 years teaching in North Plainfield, N.J., and finally 17 years teaching in South Plainfield, N.J., where he was chairman of the math-science department. A member of Kappa Delta Pi and the American Association of Aeronautics and Astronautics at Princeton University, Mr. Williams was named Science Teacher of the Year by Rutgers University in 1967.

1927

Gertrude Leonard Burns retired as a teacher from the Wilkes-Barre City School in 1970. She resides at 122 Spring St., Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Laura Covey retired from the Sullivan County, Pa., School District in 1968. Her 45 years of teaching encompassed schools in Bradford, Tioga, and Sullivan counties and every grade but kindergarten and 12th. The last 4 years Laura was a reading supervisor for elementary schools in Sullivan County. She resides in Mildred, Pa.

Susanna Harashic Smith retired in 1970 after 43 years of teaching. She resides at R. D. No. 1, White Haven, Pa. 18661.

Mildred F. Seal reports she retired in 1971 and is now enjoying life to the fullest! She taught 21 years in McKean County, Pa.; the first 11 in Bradford, and the last 20 as a remedial reading teacher in her hometown of New Milford.

1931

Alma Martin Cook is retired after teaching for several years in Pa., for 17 years at the Hopkins St. School, Elmira, and for 7 years at Broadway Jr. High School, Elmira. She resides at 606 Franklin St., Elmira, N.Y.

Gladys Verbeck Fragin retired in 1975 and resides at 114 Rosh Rd., Sayre, Pa. 18840.

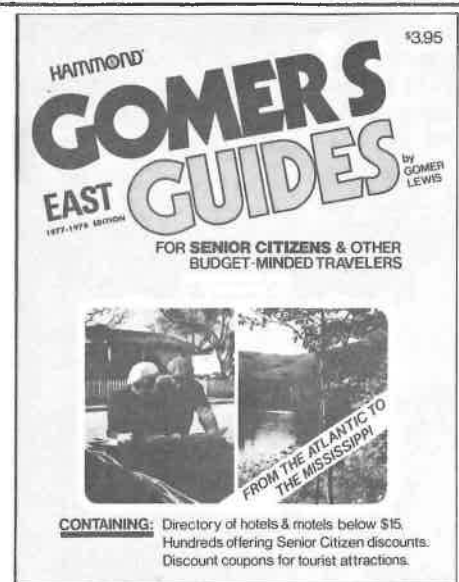

Ramona Rought Staffer has retired from teaching. She and her husband, Robert, recently celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary. They reside at R. D. No. 2, Benton, Pa. 17814.

A new guidebook for older people called "Gomer's Guides - East" has been published by Hammond, Inc., well known for its maps and travel guides. The author, Gomer Lewis '32, lists hotels and motels in 25 states east of the Mississippi that offer low rates or that extend discounts to persons 55 and over. A Western edition is also available.

Printed in easy-to-read large type, the guide is designed for any budget-minded traveler. Its purpose, explains Lewis, "is to bring to those senior citizens of limited financial means the realization that they can see this vast country comfortably and economically."

Lewis, a history teacher at Westfield, N.J., High School for 30 years until his retirement in 1971, says he and his wife Dorothy, co-editor of the guides, have traveled extensively and visited more than 1,000 of the hotels and motels he's listed. He wants all tourists to be aware that they "can spend a night and not a fortune while traveling coast to coast."

1935

Miss Thelma Simerson has retired after 38 years of teaching, the last 22 of them in Hammondsport, N.Y. Miss Simerson was the recipient of two master's degrees, one in Christian education from Bob Jones University and one in elementary education from Geneseo State University. She still gives piano and organ lessons and is her church's organist.

1937

Carrie Wilcox Olson retired in June, 1977, after 40 years of teaching, of which 36 years were spent in the Wellsboro Area School District. She resides in Covington, Pa.

1943

Ruth Pinnock Roberts has recently retired as a New York State music educator. She is very active in the Order of Amaranth, Inc., and currently is Deputy Supreme Royal Matron to Hong Kong.

He has earned a master's degree in guidance from Alfred University and is currently studying at St. Bonaventure University. Dean and his wife, the former Jessie Long '68, live in Penn Yan.

Mary York Pazahanick received her Master of Science degree in education from Elmira College in 1970 and has since completed 30 hours beyond her masters. She and her husband, Peter P. Pazahanick '49 are living in Elmira, N.Y.

1968

Lawrence A. Rowe has been principal of C. Fred Johnson Junior High School, Johnson City, N.Y., since 1975. He completed his M.S.Ed. in 1971 and his M.S. in administration in 1975, both from SUNY Cortland. Larry and his wife, the former Judith Pierson '68, have three young daughters.

GARY L. COOK '64

Ever since he was a small boy awed by the planes flying over his head, Gary L. Cook '64 wanted to be an airline pilot. In 1966, after four years at Mansfield as a math major and two years of teaching at the Booth School in Elmira, N.Y., Gary got his wish.

He began training with United Airlines and flew out of O'Hare Airport in Chicago. Now he is a Boeing 727 co-pilot, making cross-country runs from Baltimore and Washington airports and traveling as far as Hawaii and Vancouver.

Gary and his wife, the former Linda Crittenden, who worked in the college's revenue office from 1961 to 1964, have three children and live on a 10 acre farm in Lovettsville, Virginia. Gary works an additional 40 acres and raises beef cattle which provide his family and friends with a steady supply of meat.

1969

Mae D. Bleiler was recently promoted to associate extension agent on the cooperative extension service staff of Berks County, Pa. She has been a member of the staff since 1970. Mae has received a master's degree in continuing and vocational education from the University of Wisconsin and in 1969-70 took part in an International Youth Exchange Program sponsored by Penn State University in Argentina.

sic at Warrior Run High School and a lecturer at Susquehanna University. Tom resides with his wife, the former Judith Fetter '69, in Watsontown, Pa.

Karen Haney King was married in July to William King. She has done graduate work at Kutztown State College and is employed as a resource teacher by Colonial Northampton Intermediate Unit No. 20.

The Rev. Leon L. Love has been named rector of St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, Sunbury, Pa. Love taught at Horseheads, N.Y., High School for one year following graduation and then entered the Rochester, N.Y., Center for Theological Studies, from which he received his Master of Divinity degree. Since 1972 he has been associated with St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Williamsport.

Mark E. Richner has presented to the Mansfield State Library a copy of his bibliographic work, "A Student Guide to Research in Glacial Geology," which is dedicated to Professor Robert Farrell, who was a member and chairman of Mansfield's geography department until his death in 1972.

Richner is a unified science teacher with the Anne Arundel County, Md., School System. Previously he was a geography and earth science instructor at Bloomsburg State College.

Carol A. Sheldon is employed as a home economics teacher at Windsor Central School in Windsor, N.Y. She received the Master of Science degree in education from SUNY Oneonta in 1973.

J. ROBERT MADIGAN '59

When Bob Madigan attended Mansfield the college did not offer any courses in computer science, and he majored in mathematics. Today, thanks to his basic training at Mansfield and at Kent State University and especially to IBM's on-the-job training, he is senior programmer/manager of Command, Control, Communications and Avionics Software Development at IBM's Federal Systems Division facility in Owego, N.Y.

"In less technical terms," explains Madigan, "I work with computer programming systems designed for airways and communications industries. One of my special interests is sonar processing."

Madigan joined IBM in 1961 as a programmer and has progressed steadily ever since, working in Maryland, Virginia, and Norway as well as Owego. He lives in Sayre, Pa., with his wife and four children.

Robert J. Soprano has been named principal of the Wildwood Elementary School, Wildwood, N.J. Bob received his master's degree from Glassboro State College and last year was vice-principal of Wildwood High School. Prior to that he was a 5th grade teacher for five years and coached football and track. Bob and his wife Ann have an 18-month-old son and reside at 113 Davis Rd., Rio Grande, N.J. 08242.

Cindy Sprout Stratton has moved to Horizons East, Apt. 710, 505 N. Rock Rd., Wichita, Kansas 67206. Her husband Mike has accepted a position there with Boeing Computer Services.

Leonard J. Vender has been appointed principal of the Waverly Elementary and Newton-Ransom Elementary Schools, Abington Heights School District, Clarks Summit, Pa. He joined the district in 1969 as a fourth grade teacher. Leonard received his master's degree in education in 1974 from East Stroudsburg State College and his elementary principal's certificate from Lehigh University where he is presently enrolled in a pre-doctorate program. He resides in Clarks Green, Pa., with his wife Beverly and daughter Jo Ann.

William F. Whalen, a psychology teacher in the Easton, Pa., Area School District, has received a master's degree in educational administration from Lehigh University.

Connie Rowe Pawling reports a "mini-reunion" at the home of Tom and Judy Fetter Gallup ('69) near McEwensville, Pa., August 13. Also present were Janet Herrick Robinson ('71), Marilyn Storer Wertz ('71), Gail Boden ('69), Bob and Phyllis Blum Stock ('71), Mike ('70) and Donna Simpson Elser ('71), Luther and Joann Trufant ('71) Cromley, Bill and Joan Berresford ('69), Betty Bagley ('70), and Sally Bair ('73). The group attended Tom Gallup's production of "West Side Story" and rated it excellent.

1971

John Francis Delozier received a Master of Science degree from Pottsdam State University College. He is a member of the faculty of the Watertown, N.Y., Area School District and resides with his wife, the former Sandra Ducharme '71, and son in Watertown.

Donna Edgcomb married E. Douglas Kosa May 28, 1977. Both are teachers in the Northern Potter School District and reside in Ulysses, Pa.

Barbara Bomgardner Elliott and her husband John are the proud parents of Thomas Jordan Elliott, born September 11, 1977. Barbara is currently on leave from her job at A.M.P., Inc., in Harrisburg.

Joyce S. Hudak received her Master of Education degree in counselor education from Penn State in May, 1977, and is now a middle school counselor in the Selinsgrove, Pa., Area School District. Her new address is 735 Buffalo Road, No.A-9, Lewisburg, Pa. 17837.

Richard E. Moore, Jr., was recently appointed advertising manager of the Burlington County Herald, Mount Holly, N.J.

Mary L. Nettle is a developmental second grade teacher at the Haverling Central School, Bath, N.Y. She has received her Master of Education degree from Elmira College and also her reading specialist certification.

Susan Piscitelli is teaching third grade at Matamora Elementary School and living at Box 731, Milford, Pa. 18337.

Rebecca Ruth Rarig and George Franklin Blett II were married June 11 in Catawissa, Pa. Rebecca has received a master's degree from Bloomsburg State College and is a teacher in the Shikellamy School District.

1972

Gabriel Alessi was promoted in June to assistant cashier in the installment loan department of First Eastern Bank's Berwick office. Alessi resides in Bloomsburg, Pa., with his wife, the former Stephanie Werster '72.

Mansfield State College is committed to assuring equal opportunity to all persons regardless of race, color, religion, national origin, ancestry, age, sex or handicap. This policy extends to employment within and admission to the College and is in compliance with all Federal laws including Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972.

Cover—Susan Rush subscribes to the philosophy that without music and comedy, life would be a mistake. Since graduation from Mansfield State College in 1965 she has been busy supporting her theory (and herself) in a variety of musical comedy roles, on and off Broadway. THE STANLEY FILE

ASSIGNMENT: Find out how a professor who spends so much time with students can manage to be a scholar, an outstanding teacher, and a nationally acclaimed playwright.

REPORT: I observed Dr. Stanley Harrison on nine separate occasions over a period of several years.

OBSERVATIONS:

1. English Class 9 AM.

The playwright strolls into the classroom smoking a Camel. He is wearing yellow converse basketball sneakers, faded jeans, and a T-shirt with a gigantic hot dog on it saying Nathan's Famous of Coney Island. He proceeds to give a dazzling lecture on Nathaniel Hawthorne. "Any questions?" he asks. The hands go up. The students love him. Even the freshmen call him Stanley.

2. The college tennis courts on a summer afternoon Harrison crouches, awaiting the graduate assistant's deadly Chinese-spin serve. They get into a long, crazy rally lobbing to each other's backhand corner. But they hit only forehands because they have no backhands. They are playing for blood. Grad student beats playwright. Playwright cordially invites him back to his home for a cold drink and proceeds to trounce him at the pool table in a game of eight ball.

3. Committee meets to select Outstanding Teacher at Mansfield.

Reviewing the nominees, the committee discovers that Harrison has nominated himself. General amusement. Committee agrees that Harrison seems to spend much of his time playing stickball, basketball, and ping-pong with students. "He's always with them," someone says. They review his file: student evaluations of Harrison are unbelievable — they give him top ratings in everything. "But what has he published?" asks another. They find poems, stories, critical articles, a scholarly book, and of course, the plays. They discover that Harrison's play "Machiavelli and the Mandrake" was voted by Theater Americana in California the best play written in the nation in 1973. They notice that his plays have been performed all over the country by major companies. There is no choice. The maverick English professor is voted the outstanding teacher at Mansfield for 1975.

4. Harrisburg: Committee to select Outstanding Teachers at all state colleges.

Stanley Harrison is voted to one of only two Chairs for Distinguished Teachers. Back at Mansfield, Harrison accepts the award from the college president. Accepting the award he says to the assembled faculty, "I know I ought to thank all the people who made this possible, but I just can't think of anyone. I did it by myself." Laughter, wild applause.

5. At home in his study, late at night.

For a long time nobody believed Sir Walter Scott was a novelist because nobody ever saw him write anything. Harrison too writes in secret. Between tennis, teaching, and lifting weights (you'd never know it) he wrote a novel in 1976. He looks out the window at the rigs rolling by on Route 15. He racks up the balls on the pool table. He leaves the cue on the table and goes to his desk where he sits down and begins to write a poem.

6. Fourth of July in Smythe Park.

Playwright watches a troupe of professional actors now settled in Tioga County perform a dynamite vaudeville show before a thousand people. The cast members have become his friends. Like him, they are urbanites, showmen, and talented. He consents to write an original play for them. All summer he writes on the sly. Five, six, seven hours a day, secretly. His forehead goes to pot. The play is going to be about the last man alive, an actor, who is in many ways like all of us. He calls it "The Last Blue Whale."

7. November 1977: Opening night of "The Last Blue Whale."

As people file into the theater they see the actors are already on the stage — asleep on the flats and waiting for the play to begin. Naked and life-sized, store mannikins occupy some of the seats. "I don't think I'm going to like this," a nice lady says to her husband. The play is brilliant, a shocker. Harrison uses every trick in the book: slapstick, tape recordings, flashbacks, song and dance routines, and even a dueling scene. Yet a menacing existential gloom broods over the drama. Lead David Wright and actor-director Alan Beck are equal to all of it. The Whale blows the audience right out of their seats.

The playwright hands out the programs at the end of the play. "How did you like it?" he asks. "I'll let you know in a few days," the nice lady says.

8. Harrison addresses large crowd of students and parents at Parents Weekend. Here is an excerpt:

"Today, colleges have become white collar trade schools, places where students go to learn how to make a living. What society wants and what colleges want have become the same thing. This is bad. The real dynamism of a college lies in its conflict with the values of society. I think the primary purpose of a college is to teach people how to live. At Mansfield we are still concerned with teaching and conversing in dialogue with young people, attempting to answer the basic question, how should I live my life?"

9. Basketball in the gym.

June is a junior English major who can beat Stanley every time one on one. This irritates him. They play for quarters and this week he already owes her $4.75. He muscles her under the boards, but he can't stop her outside shot. He has no outside shot. Today a crowd of students watches, hooting and making side bets. For Harrison it is a kind of street theater. When the games are over he picks up his sweatshirt and a notebook.

A spectator asks, "What've you got there Stanley, a new play?" "No," the playwright answers, "I think it's going to be a novel, but keep it quiet."

CONCLUSION: I am unable to say with certainty just how the playwright manages to get so much done while having such a good time. He makes no distinction between his work and his play. Perhaps the students and the sports are the real source of his creativity. I just don't know. Anyway, he's actually going to talk to me today about existential choice...over a game of ping-pong of course.

MAKING A MODERN LIBRARY

Remember when the college library was located in North Hall? Few people on the Mansfield campus can today. The old library was adequate for a small state teacher's college and contained about 50,000 books and journals, mostly on education and music. But, as the college changed and grew, the library grew with it. Today, the Mansfield library has over a million holdings. In 1960 the library moved into its modern home in Alumni Hall. A large four story addition to Alumni was completed in 1971, and the new library doubled in size again.

The old library in North Hall contained no non-print media. The new library is a storehouse of information and learning resources. Today, microfilm, records, tapes, film, and slides comprise a substantial part of library holdings. Students can listen to any play by Shakespeare, and opera by Verdi, or read the 1945 New York Times on microfilm. They can borrow a kit (a large box replete with tapes, filmstrips, and books) on African folklore or the French Revolution. They can even borrow mathematical games to use in student teaching. Through the interlibrary loan system a person can borrow materials from any of the other main libraries in the Commonwealth. Few people, in fact, realize how varied and rich are the resources of a modern college library.

Mastermind of this metamorphosis has been Jim Simonis, library director for over a decade. Far from one's childhood stereotype of a librarian, Simonis is a slender redhead, a natty dresser, and a swimming enthusiast who logs many miles a week in the college pool. The man never hurries. He is organized and efficient and has as much time for a baffled freshman lost in the card catalog as he does for a top administrator planning his budget. The great changes Simonis has wrought have been done with such aplomb, such apparent ease, that to some he is a kind of magician.

Describing his twelve years at Mansfield, Simonis says, "When I first came here from the Brooklyn Public Library I found that 60% of the books here were so outdated they were useless. We had textbooks seventy years old. We simply had to throw them out. The college was changing faster than the library.

"Not only did we have to build an arts and science collection from scratch, we also had to reclassify every item in the library. We shifted from the Dewey Decimal System to the Library of Congress numbering system — an essential change for a research library. It was an enormous job. We also had to select, purchase, and classify hundreds of thousands of books and media. Between 1972 and 1975 we spent over a million dollars on acquisitions. Today we are a true research library."

A good library is the heart of a college. At Mansfield, professors and librarians work together to make research the center of students' intellectual lives. Librarians give classroom lectures on how to use the library, while professors hold classes in the reference section of the library. Students soon learn that the library is a vast resource of information as well as a tool they can use for the rest of their lives.

Every freshman must learn to use the library and must write a research paper; this research is a continuous process over the student's four years. Juniors and seniors delve deeply into their specialization, be it music, special education, or business. The fact-finding, the writing and the organizing involved in a library research paper teach skills which students will need in today's world of work.

Library director Jim Simonis

The Mansfield library is actually a complex, with branches all over the campus. The Butler Center music library houses an impressive collection of thousands of records, tapes, periodicals, musical scores, and books on music. In the listening laboratory thirty students can listen to thirty different pieces of music simultaneously. High-speed reproduction machines create duplicate tapes in seconds.

Education majors frequent the Retan Center Education Library where they find a fine selection of materials needed for teaching in the public schools. Children's literature, school textbooks, and extensive holdings in non-print media, plus a viewing and listening laboratory, are all within a few steps of the education majors' classrooms.

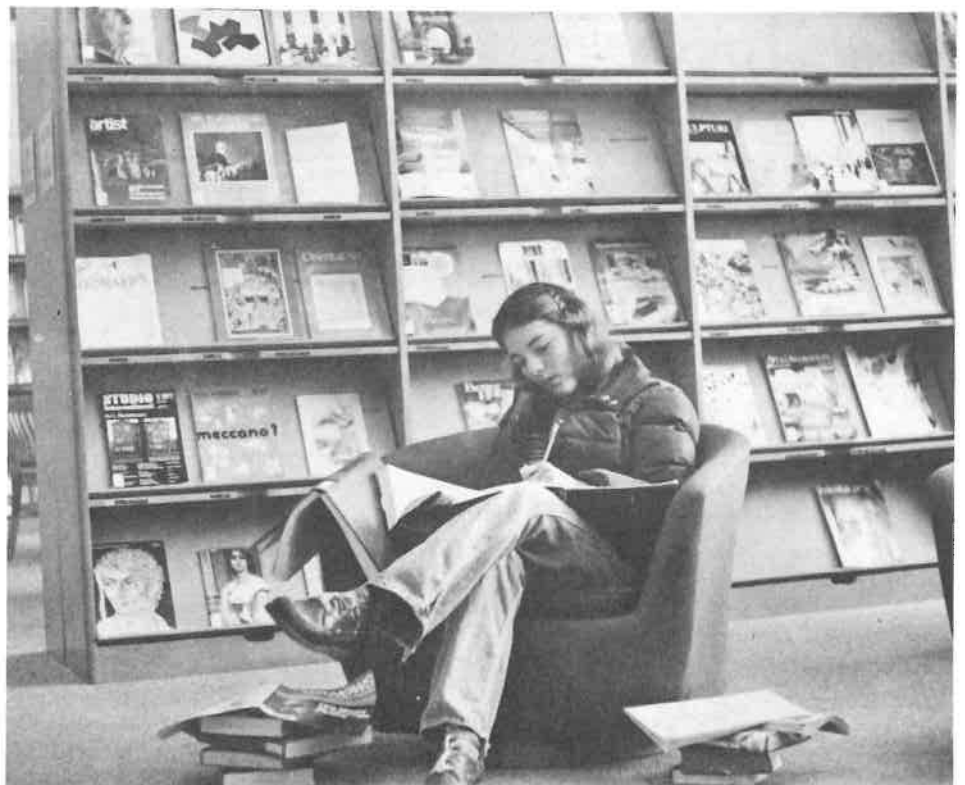

Though not directly a part of the library, the Audio-Visual Center offers a broad selection of films. Here students can borrow cameras, video-tape projectors, tape recorders, and movie projectors. They can even make their own films.

A career placement library in South Hall offers literature which will help the student plot his future.

This complex of learning centers which make up the total Mansfield State College library is indeed equal to the needs of the college and to the large rural region which it serves. Census information, local history, and national statistics are often sought by area residents. The library is open to and welcomes all the citizens of the Commonwealth.

The new main library is only a snow ball's throw away from the old North Hall library. But the difference between the two is almost a century.

EASY LIVIN' — LIFE IN A MODERN RESIDENCE HALL

Residence hall life, like so many other things, has changed considerably since many of our readers went to college. For example, today many dorms are coed—with men and women living on alternate floors of the same buildings, or sharing separate branches of a large complex. During visitation hours men and women move freely between the floors and wings of these buildings. The professionals in college residence hall life claim this mixing has a moderating effect on student behavior in the dorms and tends to foster better study habits. Many students, however, still chose to live in single-sex halls.

The housing of all freshmen men in one hall and all freshmen women in another hall is also a thing of the past. Upper and lower classmen now share the same dorms, thus enabling the first year students to benefit from the wisdom of the older students.

The new residence hall architecture has greatly changed student life. In contrast to the long echoing halls and small cubicles of dorms past, the new buildings strive for a cozier, homier climate. More private space and less institutional sterility characterize the new halls. They bend, twist and turn; halls are short and carpeted; recreation rooms, kitchens, laundry rooms, and TV lounges are a part of every floor.

Cedarcrest is a new residence hall at Mansfield which offers all these comforts and conveniences. A double high rise with connecting floors between men's and women's towers, Cedarcrest provides accommodations for 600 students. It is attractive, comfortable, and a good place to study.

A glance at the floor plan of a story in Cedarcrest reveals that every student has a fine view of the Mansfield countryside. Kitchen, lounge, and laundry room are only a few steps away. The carpeted halls and acoustic tiles make the halls warm and quiet. Students have their choice of double rooms or suites. In the suites the bedrooms are separated from the living room.

A student's room receives the personal touch of the one who lives there. Students decorate their rooms with posters, wall hangings, and their own paintings. They are even allowed to paint their own room their favorite color.

Between the two towers where students live are a series of public rooms for recreation, relaxation and conferences. The large recreation room is the setting for dances, concerts, meetings, and craft shows. Many smaller rooms are available for studying, projects, and small meetings.

Today the college student has a great deal of personal freedom. At first not every student is comfortable with all this freedom and the responsibility that must go with it if college is to be a valuable experience. The professional staff at Mansfield works closely with students helping them to become responsible adults.

A member of the professional residence hall staff lives in every dorm. These professionals serve the students as concerned adults trying to foster the best possible living situation in the residence halls. They are there to help and to support the students.

Working with the professional staff are the resident assistants. These are students selected for their maturity and leadership abilities. A resident assistant lives on every floor of every dorm cooperating with the other students to create a climate conducive to academic and social growth.

The rich social, cultural, and intellectual mix one finds in the residence halls at Mansfield today is, in part, a reflection of the society in which we live. Also the modern conveniences are patterned after the way we live in our own homes. For many of our readers who lived in North Hall when they went to Mansfield that venerable old building had its charm then too. Students of the 1970's will look back on Cedarcrest with the same nostalgia as Mansfield alumni who lived in North Hall. In fact, North Hall nostalgia is alive and well on campus today; students all agree that the ghost of North Hall past still wanders through the empty rooms at night and peers out the windows at the new buildings, her eyes wide with amazement.

A STUDENT'S VIEW;

by Dianne Leonard '79

As a resident assistant in Cedarcrest I have a double role: I am a student and one of the girls on the floor, but I also have a responsibility to the residence life staff to uphold college policy. My primary concern is to help create a positive living atmosphere. This means I have to be flexible and yet consistent. The professional staff encourages the resident assistants to use their own judgement. They have a lot of confidence in us, and we like it that way.

Academically college is difficult for nearly all students. They need a comfortable, relaxed atmosphere in the residence halls — a place to come home to. Too much stress in the halls, on top of the demands of course, would be intolerable. If a student can come back to a quiet, comfortable room at the end of a busy day it makes academic work go easier. I believe a good residence hall life enhances a good intellectual atmosphere.

A great deal of learning goes on in the dorms — not all of it academic. Rural and urban students learn to adjust to each other; shy and outgoing people intermingle; students with diverse majors share their viewpoints. For me it is reassuring to learn that everyone has problems that often our problems and their solutions are similar.

Although visitation begins at 12:00 noon, the guys don't really begin coming over to the girls' side of the hall until about nine in the evening. The girls on my floor care about their grades and are serious about studying. Many of the guys come over to study, but they also come over to listen to music and just to socialize. Students modify visitation themselves. It's like being in your own home with guests: it's nice to have company, but there comes a time when you want them to go home.

Saturday is a day when everyone relaxes — no academic responsibilities. Some complain that there isn't enough to do here on weekends. I'm not one of them. Actually, there are a number of activities: sports, movies, fraternity parties, and concerts from classical music to modern rock. Girls complain (justifiably) about the lack of shopping facilities. Mansfield just doesn't have the constant, random stimuli of a big city. For me this has a positive side. I don't want too many distractions off-campus. I'll probably spend the rest of my life in a large town or city, but I'll only be in college once. Therefore, I'd like to take advantage of everything Mansfield State College can offer me.

A professional on the residence hall staff, Rick Kincaid chats with students in his Cedarcrest apartment.

A student's room gets a personal touch.

(Computer Technician + Math Major) + Husband + Father = Richard Fulk

In ever increasing numbers, older men and women are enrolling in college. For the past eight years Rich Fulk has worked at the college as a computer technician maintaining and servicing the college's growing computer complex. He is employed by RCA and UNIVAC as a field technician — a job requiring frequent travel, much technical know-how, and a twenty-four-hour readiness. Somehow, starting from scratch, Rich also managed to complete a Bachelor of Arts degree in mathematics. As a husband, a father of four boys, a homeowner, a cub scout and church leader, Rich's many roles sometimes make him feel a little dizzy. He looks back on his college years with a sense of pride (and, we might add, with a sense of relief).

"My past eight years as a student at Mansfield State College have been very rewarding. But, as is usually the case with life experiences, the rewards have been directly proportionate to the difficulties surmounted.

"When my family and I first came to Mansfield in May of 1970 we were overwhelmed by the beautiful countryside and comforted by the easy-going lifestyle of the people. We had been busy suburbanites. It only took a couple of months for the family to settle into the house and community and for me to adjust to my new job. I was a computer technician. At that time the college computer center had a small scale computer which required only a part of my technical know-how. I soon found myself searching for new things to learn and do.

"At that time many new, young faculty members were joining the Mansfield State College staff. We were all looking for new friendships, and I soon found myself, a technician, making new acquaintances in an academic community. Being a computer technician made me a bit unique. Each social encounter became an exciting exchange of technical and academic knowledge. After many long talks with my wife, Joan, I decided that I should channel these exchanges toward a college degree in mathematics while continuing to work full-time as a technician in the computer center.

"That's when the fun began. As a first semester freshman I was filled with enthusiasm. I registered for a full load of 15 credit hours. I was giving spot lectures on computer technology in some of my classes. I also made the freshman basketball team. At about that time we had our fourth son. I was still earning a living as a field technician for RCA. Life was great. . . for a while.

"By December my enthusiasm had become exhaustion. While I did make the Dean's List that semester my aching limbs just couldn't take the grind of college basketball while putting in a 20 hour day. It was not uncommon for me to stay up half the night solving a computer problem and then have to face an eight o'clock math exam the next day.

"I had to adjust and I did. Though it wasn't easy. In the years that followed I learned about change. The college computer center rapidly evolved into a complex time-sharing operation, with on-going plans for greater sophistication. The demand for my technical expertise increased dramatically, and the computer center staff expanded. Moreover, the math courses I was taking were getting tougher.

"Added to these demands at work were the needs of my family at home. We had purchased a large home, and we settled in Wellsboro.

"Although it was rough I had a number of things to keep me going: most important, Joan and I and our children made many close and enduring friendships; we were healthy and happy in the community; I was receiving recognition from my company and from my teachers. In my many roles I had to interact with students, faculty and administration as a student, as a representative of a computer company, and as just myself. Yet this was my greatest challenge and my greatest joy. Paradoxically, my involvement with the college has been both intimate and detached.

"Yet when I imagine myself on the brink of retirement, I can see myself looking back at the people at Mansfield and saying, they gave me so much during those eight years.

"Looking at the immediate future I have already learned that my multiple roles have opened a wide range of very promising career opportunities."

Review of recital — Ann Weaver Schooley, Steadman Theatre, Jan. 28, 1978.

By William M. Goode, Professor of Music

Ann Weaver Schooley, who was a talented, very promising young singer when she graduated from MSC in 1964, returned to our campus on Saturday evening, January 28, in a program of songs and arias that showed her to have become a brilliant, mature (but still young!) vocal artist.

In complete command of her voice and the stage, Mrs. Schooley delighted her audience with works by Mozart, Handel, Schubert, Wolf and Canteloube. But of even more interest were two very special items. One was the song cycle, "From A Very Little Sphinx," which her husband, John Schooley '65, wrote for her from two poems by Millay. Perky, sad, questioning, and reflective in turn, the cycle seemed a perfect representation of the swiftly changing moods of a very young girl. Mr. Schooley spoke briefly about various aspects of the music and text as an introduction to his wife's brilliant performance of the cycle.

Another item of unusual interest was the aria, "Je Suis Titania," from the opera Mignon by Thomas. Here Mrs. Schooley's brilliant coloratura technique was called into play. While still displaying the beautiful tone and wealth of expression that she had shown elsewhere in the program, Mrs. Schooley in this aria dazzled her audience with a display of vocal fireworks that was both viscerally thrilling and musically satisfying.

Mrs. Schooley was accompanied throughout the program by Mrs. Helen Dunham, who teaches at Fairmont State College in West Virginia with Mr. and Mrs. Schooley. Mrs. Dunham provided excellent support throughout and really came into her own during the delightful "Ich hab in Penna einen Liebsten" by Wolf, where both she and Mrs. Schooley made something very special indeed of the witty postlude.

After completing the works on the printed program, Mrs. Schooley was joined on stage by two of her former teachers: Mr. Jack Wilcox, who was her voice teacher and director of the musicals in which she appeared here, and Dr. William M. Goode, who was her piano teacher and occasional accompanist. The presentation of the great Porgy and Bess duet, "Bess, You Is My Woman Now," was very well received by an audience that obviously enjoyed seeing the three old friends together on the stage. A brief folk song, "I Know Where I'm Going," concluded the program.

Many members of the audience were delighted to renew acquaintances with Ann and John and to see and hear that they are obviously fulfilling the promise they showed as students here. The Mansfield Foundation, Inc., is to be congratulated and very warmly thanked for making this program possible. Musically it was completely satisfying (as I'm sure all Mrs. Schooley's concerts are for her audiences in the Community Concerts Series and elsewhere). And it was a special thrill to know that this gifted, completely professional artist is still "one of our own."

MSC BEGINS SEARCH FOR NEW PRESIDENT

The search for a new president is underway at Mansfield State College.

In August of 1977 former college president, Dr. Lawrence Park, was named president of Slippery Rock State College. Dr. Donald C. Darnton was appointed interim president.

The procedure for selection of a new president began on January 28 when the search committee held an organizational meeting at Mansfield. A "search committee" is exactly what its name implies — a group of people, with the best interests of the college at heart, who will screen applicants in an attempt to find the person best fitted for the position. Ultimately the committee will make a recommendation to Mansfield's Board of

SCHOLARSHIP ESTABLISHED FOR LUZERNE COUNTY STUDENTS

A $1,000 scholarship in memory of Wilkes-Barre native Martin J. Conway has been established at Mansfield State College by his children to assist students from Luzerne County.

The award, announced by J. Paul McMillen, the College's director of development, will be presented annually in the form of two $500 grants. The scholarship has been set up under the auspices of the Mansfield Foundation, Inc., and will be administered by the financial aid office at Mansfield.

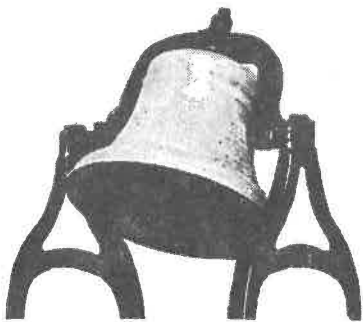

Establishing the Conway Scholarship in the name of their late father are Martin R. Conway, Jr., of Harpers Ferry, West Virginia; Mrs. Catherine Conway Halloran of Charleston, West Virginia; and Mrs. Mary Louise Conway Paolucci of Wilkes-Barre. According to the criteria set by the donors, the recipients of the awards are to be incoming freshmen at Mansfield State from Luzerne County.

The late Mr. Conway was a retired dispatcher for the Lehigh Valley Railroad and expressed a life-long interest in education. His widow, Mrs. Regina Conway, resides at 308 Provincial Towers, Main Street, Wilkes-Barre.

The scholarship, McMillen noted, is the third such award handled by the Foundation expressly for students from a particular area. The Jonathan George March Scholarship provides assistance for students from Tioga County, while the Thomas R. Halloran Scholarship aids those from Potter County. The Foundation also maintains a general scholarship fund for additional awards.

Trustees. Then, after action has been taken by the Board of State College and University Directors and by the Secretary of Education, the final decision will be made by the Governor of Pennsylvania.

The committee includes four members of the Mansfield Board of Trustees, Dr. Eugene Watkins (chairman), Mrs. Ila H. Wiley '25, Mr. Eugene Kelly and Mr. Thomas Phinney; three faculty members, Mr. Owen Clark, Dr. Richard Finley, and Dr. Edwin Zdzinski; and one administrator, Dr. William Beisel. Two alumni, Mrs. Judith O. Smith '65 and Mr. Basil Harris '43, were recently nominated by the Alumni Association to serve on the search committee, and two Mansfield students, Denita Banks and Susan Sipling, were also appointed.

SPRING PROSPECTS BRIGHT FOR BASEBALL, TRACK AND FIELD

"Baseball is 90 percent pitching."

The old saying is one of baseball coaches' Golden Rules, and when Mansfield State head coach John Heaps discusses the upcoming season, he can't help repeating the old adage, saying, "I think we've got a pretty solid club, but remember, baseball is 90. . ."

With a veteran line-up returning from last season's 18-12 squad, the Mounties' biggest question mark will be their pitching. Heaps will be looking for big years from right-handers Mike Tancredi and Gary Zedonak. Tancredi, who was 6-1 as a freshman, pitching the Mounties to the Conference and ECAC titles, is returning from an injury-ridden 1-1 mound performance last spring. Zedonak, a sophomore who started fast with two wins on the team's annual southern trip, failed to win a game after the team returned north. Senior hurlers Mike Haile, Tim Kelleher, and Fred Smith will also be called upon for front-line pitching.

Whatever the performance of the pitching staff, backing it up will be one of Heaps' finest teams. "I really think these eight players are as good as any I've coached, so if we can get some good pitching, we could have a real good year," Heaps said. All-Conference catcher Bob Hilinski, four-year starter Joe Nicosia at second base, and third baseman Charlie Phillips are all potent hitters as well as standout glovemen. Mike Tancredi, who blasted three homers in the Mounties win over Penn State last spring, will play first base when not pitching, and freshman sensation, Bryon Fuller, who led the team in hitting during the fall, will be at shortstop.

All-Conference designated-hitter, Tim June, will return at the tenth spot, while the Mountie outfield boasts three speedsters who give Heaps "possibly my best defensive outfield ever." The three veterans, Dave Mielnicki, Rich Senofonte, and Mark Major, are all offensive weapons as well as great "fly-chasers" because of their outstanding speed.

Marathon men John Sinclair and Welles Lobb run ten miles a day preparing for the spring season.

In his second year as head coach, Ed Winrow is slowly gaining on his self-imposed mission to build Mansfield State into a small college track and field powerhouse. With two National Meet participants and a host of school record-holders returning, Winrow can rightfully smile when he says he feels "optimistic" about the upcoming season.

Winrow already turned the cross country squad around, coaching them to a 7-1 season following a winless 1976 campaign, but he cautions track enthusiasts not to expect miracles. "We're still behind a number of top-quality teams because we have a lack of depth, but we do have a solid man at every spot. The days when teams like East Stroudsburg and Indiana University (PA) beat us by 80 points are definitely over."

Leading the team this spring will be a pair of underclassmen who ran their specialties at the NCAA Div. III Meet last

May. Fred Harris, a junior sprinter who has qualified for the Nationals in both of his first two seasons, has run a 9.8 100, a 21.9 220, and a 48.2 440. Versatile sophomore Barry Jordan, who ran a 14.8 in the 120 high hurdles at the Nationals, is also utilized in the 100, the 440, and the high jump.

Several other members who are expected to excel include: Noah Clark, who ran a 9.9 100 at the Conference Meet; John Elmore, who ran a 49.5 440; John Grant, who Winrow feels may be one of the Conference's premier half-milers; John Sinclair, who should qualify for the Nationals in the 3000-meter steeplechase; cross country star Welles Lobb, who already holds school records in the three and six-mile runs; and decathlete Mark Malinowski, who will be one of the Mounties' strong men in the field events.

ILLUSIONS, HELICOPTERS, BACKSCRATCHERS AND MULE KICKS:

Blair Booth '81 on Freestyling Skiing

Blair Booth grew up in the town of Mansfield, went to Mansfield High and is now a freshman at Mansfield State College. An all-state soccer player for two years in high school and holder of four Mansfield High track records, Blair was place kicker and punter for the Mountie varsity football team this fall. But his first love in sports is the difficult (to many, the impossible) art of freestyle skiing. Blair has attended ski camps and taught skiing; he has also entered several major freestyle competitions in the East at Killington, Stowe and Song Mountain. Blair is also active in the ski club, one of the biggest and most popular clubs on campus. He gives tips to freestyle enthusiasts at nearby Denton Hill on weekends. Here he explains some of this little-understood sport.

"Freestyle skiing has only been around for a few years, but already 25% of all skiers are in some way involved in it. Wayne Wong is considered the grandfather of freestyle, and he is only 30 years old. The United States is so far ahead of all other countries in freestyle skiing that they don't dare include it as an olympic event — no other country would stand a chance.

"Freestyle competition consists of three events: moguls, aerals, and ballet. In moguls the skier glides over a field of snow mounds demonstrating speed, good balance, good technique, and original style. In aerals the skier goes off a jump and attempts flips, twists, spins and reverses — all in the air. This is very dangerous, obviously. It's like diving with skis on and requires guts, plus great gymnastic and skiing ability. Third is ballet — the most expressive and beautiful part of freestyle. This is akin to figure skating and even borrows some terms like axels and lutz jumps from skating. Ballet is self-expression on skis. You choreograph your own routine to music of your choice. Every move must be practiced and perfected, and the whole routine has to blend, one move flowing into the other. Ballet skiers take dancing lessons. I've had sessions in modern dance in ski camps. There are several thousand possible ski ballet moves, and grace is crucial.

"Moves like the Taylor drag, the illusion, and the lutz jump are extremely hard to do, but when they are done right they are a marvel to behold. I saw a guy going downhill backwards in his ballet — suddenly he jumped off a mogul and spun around completely twice in the air — a 720° we call it — landed, and kept going backwards. The great ballet experts are all gymnasts. They train on trampolines and gym apparatus, and they dive. I dove on the board at the pool all year.

"Freestyle skis are different from regular downhill or Alpine skis. First, they are shorter for greater maneuverability. They have tips on both ends for backwards skiing. The bindings are set so the body weight is dead center on the ski — and they have no center groove for tracking.

"In freestyle meets the comradeship is tremendous. Even though the guy beside you could beat you out of hundreds of dollars you still cheer for him. We are all show-offs at heart and need a crowd. In downhill skiing it's "me against the mountain;" in freestyle it's more — "this move will knock 'em dead."

"We now have names for all the moves and tricks we do on skis. Like the illusion — an intricate ski reversal move, and the helicopter — a complete turn in the air. You can do a daffy, a backscratcher, a mule kick, a Taylor drag or an outrigger. You can also break your neck. To be a good freestyle skier you have to be a little nuts. It's expensive too. I hate to think of all the skis I've broken."

Myron E. Webster retired in 1958 after teaching for 44 years. He began his career in a one-room rural school in Rutland Township before returning to Mansfield Normal School to teach English grammar and arithmetic to the seniors. The next few years included a principalship at the Charleston (PA) High School and two years of service in World War I. In 1919 Professor Webster entered law school at Cornell University, and concerning this decision he says, "I had three options — music, physical education and law, and I finally decided to enter law school and eventually teach, with special preparation in the fields of political science and history." He completed work for an LL.B. degree in 1925.

During the next years he alternated teaching at Mansfield with graduate work at Cornell, and in 1933 he received a J.S.D. degree. After World War II, he became an instructor at Cornell for four years and then finally came back to Mansfield and for the next eight years, until his retirement, was a teacher and assistant principal at Liberty (PA) High School. Mrs. Webster, the former Jennie Dewey '11, died in 1975 and was also a teacher for many years. Of the seven teachers listed in his immediate family, Professor Webster says, "Jennie was the best teacher of us all."

Professor Webster was a member of the Delphic Fraternity at Mansfield Normal School, past president of the Retired Teachers of Tioga County and past president of the county Pennsylvania Teachers Association. He has held several posts in other local, county and state educational organizations. Two sons, Marshall (deceased) and Dewey, graduated from Mansfield in 1939 and 1941 respectively. There are four grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. Professor Webster plays the violin, is addicted to fishing and is an expert wildlife photographer.

B. B. Powell was managing editor of both the Scranton Tribune and the Scrantonian for 26 years prior to his retirement in 1964. He is married to the former Lillian Nauman '18, who taught art in the Bethlehem, PA, schools. Her works have been displayed in numerous exhibitions, and, now in her 80's, she Harold Strait, a Mansfield Normal School graduate, is one of the approximately 30 surviving members of the Delphic Fraternity which flourished at Mansfield in the early 1900's before being ordered to disband in 1914 by school authorities. Many illustrious Mansfield alumni are listed as Delta Chapter members.

The preface of the 1953 Delphic Roster contains a dedication to "Harold Strait of Mansfield, PA, who has kept the Delphic light shining through the years, warming the hearts of returning alumni and perpetuating the teachings of the Oracle." In the succeeding years he has been the promoter of the annual meetings of the fraternity on Alumni Day, and he expects to rally the members again in 1978.

After graduation, Mr. Strait enlisted in the U. S. Armed Forces and served one year in World War I. After his discharge he went into business with his father, George L. Strait, in the family hardware store established in 1891. After 52 years in the business he retired and sold the store in 1971.

In January of 1974 he married Dortha Escott Witmore, '30, a second marriage for each. Mrs. Strait received a three-year certificate from Mansfield in 1926 and a B.S. degree in 1930. She was the organizations editor for the first issue, Feb. 6, 1926, of the college student newspaper, the "Flashlight." She is a charter member of the Mansfield chapter of Kappa Delta Pi, established on campus in May of 1930, and was a teacher for 30 years, the last 25 years in the Wellsboro (PA) schools.

Mr. Strait has always been active in church and community affairs. He is a past president of the New York-Pennsylvania Tiers Association of the Chamber of Commerce, past president of the local Chamber of Commerce and past secretary of the Business Men's Association. He is also a charter member of the Austin-Cox Legion Post of Mansfield and, at one time, a commander and district commander in the Legion. He is a member of the Deaconate of the Baptist Church and a life member of the Mansfield Hose Company. Recently he was named chairman of the Tioga chapter of the Appalachian Thruway Association and a member of the board of the Memorial Education Fund of Mansfield. The Straits live in a lovely old home at 60 North Main St., in Mansfield.

Casper McClelland is an attorney in Washington, DC, where he and his wife, the former Matilda Jupenzl, '30, lived for 40 years. Recently they moved to a home in Mosherville, PA. Casper still maintains his Washington office as well as one in his present location and commutes periodically. He received an LL.B. degree in 1933, an A.B. degree in 1939 and an M.A. in 1940 — all from George Washington University. He was an attorney for the government for 25 years and since 1964 has been in private practice. Matilda taught in Elmira prior to marriage and eventually was a kindergarten teacher for 20 years in Montgomery County, MD. She is a dedicated gardener and is noted in the area for her beautiful flowers. The McClellands have two children, Ann, married and living in Washington, and John, a physicist in Ames, Iowa.

1928

Dr. George Crittenden has been a general practitioner since 1938 in North East, PA, and also serves as physician for Gannon College in Erie, PA. Dr. Crittenden received a master's in education, and an M.D. degree in 1938 from the University of Pittsburgh. The Crittendens live at 9 Pearl St., North East.

1929

Francis Kelly, former postmaster in Mansfield, retired in 1968. He and the former Lucille Palmer Kaley, '26, were married in 1956. Francis played professional baseball with Fort Wayne, IN; Dallas, TX; and Williamsport, PA. He was postmaster for 32 years, served on the borough council and the library board, and is a charter member of the Mansfield Lions Club.

1930

supervisor of the cafeterias in the Coudersport (PA) School System. After teaching for four years in Port Allegany, PA, she and her husband were the proprietors of the Old Hickory Tavern in Coudersport for several years. From 1955 to 1959 she served as the dietician at Mansfield State College and was a member of the college Alumni Board for several years. She is very active in community affairs and lives in Coudersport at 4 South East Street.

Helen Beach Walker was industrial nurse for 19 years at International Business Machines in Binghamton, prior to her retirement. She received her nurse's training at the University of Pennsylvania and after several years in New York City went to Honolulu, Hawaii, and was there when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor. The Walkers live on Laurel Lane Road, Brackney, PA.

Frank Simms is vice-president of Gaylord & Butler Co., Scranton, PA. After graduation from Mansfield he taught school for four years and continued further study at Duke University. Frank success as a cartoonist to Dr. Stephen Bencetic, professor of art at the college, who encouraged and helped him, and to a good friend, Bob Barnes, now deceased, a top man in his field whose "Better Half" panel is still going.

As an elementary art teacher in the Chili Central School, Rochester, NY, he says, "I have taught all levels, but the elementary level is where the action is. I like little kids, their honesty, their curiosity, their faithfulness, and, yes, their hellishness. My cartoon career has been nurtured by their actions, and my favorites are kid cartoons." Most of his ideas, he says, come from the school children and his family. He has been married for 20 years and has five children.

He is very positive concerning his allegiance to MSC and says, "Mansfield is my home town, and it is always wonderful to come back and see old friends and visit the school and remember all the teachers who have influenced my life and career — Manser, Swan, Allen, Drum, Royer among others. My years at the college were among the best and most inspiring of my life, and I am more than willing to help in any MSC endeavours."

"Sally complains about her college roommate. He keeps borrowing her hair curlers."

Bastian in June, 1973. Prior to her marriage she taught for 17 years in the Central Dauphin High School in Harrisburg, PA. She received her master's degree from Pennsylvania State University. Reba has received the Honorary Future Homemakers of America Membership Award and served one year as president of the Pennsylvania Home Economics Association. She and her husband live at 929 Prospect Ave., Williamsport, PA.

Luther Hoffman and Mary Ruth Squire Hoffman, '54, are residents of Bath, NY, where Luther is director of music in the Haverling Central School. Mary Ruth is department chairperson of the high school English department. Luther received his M.S. in music from Ithaca (NY) College, taught for two years in Savona, NY, and since 1955 has held his present position. He is noted in a wide area for his championship bands which have won the New York State Fair championship for four years and the State Field Band Conference title in 1976 and a runner-up position in 1977. His majorette corps has earned seven consecutive corps championships and he has had five champion drum-majors in 10 years. The band also holds 20 consecutive A ratings in grade-6 music in state competition. Luther is on the executive council of the Field Band Conference and is a certified New York state adjudicator. The Hoffmans visit Mansfield State College frequently for concerts and conferences. The couple has two children.

John A. Pearson is teaching music in Tarrytown, NY, and is still active as a professional musician. He has played with the Dorsey Band, Gene Krupa, and the Clem De Rosa Jazz Band among others. He and his wife reside at 5 High St. in Tarrytown, and he "sends his best regards to former classmates."

Diane Cheard Kinch teaches 4th grade in the H. Austin Snyder Elementary School in Sayre, PA. She received certification in elementary education from Elmira (NY) College and taught one year at Collingdale, PA, prior to the Sayre appointment. The Kinches live at 45 Oak Drive, R.D. 2, Sayre.

William R. Pierce is in his 11th year as principal of the Cumberland Valley High School in Mechanicsburg, PA, one of the largest educational complexes in a modernized rural setting in the state. In 1960 he received his master's degree from Pennsylvania State University and has accrued additional credits from Shippensburg State College. He taught three years in Towanda, PA, and eight years at the Riverdale Regional High School in Oradell, NJ, where he was also basketball coach. The Pierces live at R.D. 4, Mechanicsburg.

David Lapp will receive a master's degree this year from Geneseo State University, with full accreditation as a library media specialist. He originally taught science before becoming the librarian, in 1976, at Junior High West in Horseheads, NY. David and his wife, the former Geraldine Townsend, have three children. His daughter, Cynthia, recently presented him with his first grandchild, another in the line of descendants of Prof. Fordyce Allen, one of the founding fathers of Mansfield Normal School, forerunner of the present college. The Lapps live at 302 Westinghouse Road in Horseheads.

Merle Stilwell was recently appointed head coach of the Indiana University of Pennsylvania freshman football team. As a tutor for IUP athletes, in addition to his classroom responsibilities, he sees his new job as a natural result of his team involvement. Merle played football at MSC and coached the South Huntingdon, NY, team and the 150-pound team at Cornell while completing his doctorate. He and his wife, the former Eleanor Seely, '56, reside at 102 Shady Drive, Indiana, PA.

Julie Eddy Martine teaches 4th grade in the H. Austin Snyder Elementary School in Sayre, PA. She has a master's degree in elementary education from Elmira (NY) College.

Olynda Chaffee Smith teaches elementary vocal music in the Troy (PA) school system. The Smiths live at RD 3, Troy.

1958

Duane (Skip) Fiocca and Elizabeth Maloney Fiocca, '57, and their two children live at 3 Larchmont Road, Owego, NY, where Skip is the director of elementary education. He holds a master's degree in education from Cortland State College and has been involved in education for 19 years, the last 12 at Owego. He is a past member of the board of directors of the Montessori Day School in the area. Elizabeth teaches first grade at the Tioga Central School at Tioga Center, NY, and she reports that they are "busy but hope to get back to Mansfield for Alumni Day."

1959

William Snee of Blossburg, PA, is the superintendent of the Southern Tioga School System with administrative offices in Mansfield. He has accrued graduate credits from Bucknell University, Bloomsburg State College and the University of Scranton and has a master's degree in education from Pennsylvania State University. William is on the executive committee of the Pennsylvania Association of School Administrators. He is very definite about his association with Mansfield State College and says, "We have a wonderful working relationship with the college, and they have been exceedingly cooperative at all times."

1961

John Rusinko and his wife, the former Mary Erwin, '61, live at 313 Hendy Ave., Elmira, NY. John teaches at the Cohen Middle School in Elmira Heights and coaches varsity basketball at the Thomas Edison High School. Mary teaches in the Ernie Davis Junior High School. Each has received a master's degree from Elmira College.

1962

Richard Merritt of Athens, PA, was recently honored for the second time as Star-Gazette and Sunday Telegram Valley Coach of the Year. He has coached varsity wrestling at Athens for nine years. Dick has won one state championship, two regional, six district and 28 sectional championships plus six Northern Tier titles. He posted a 14-0 campaign in Athens in 1976-77 and has an overall record of 94-25-2. He has never competed in the sport which he coaches. This year he has left Athens to become coach at Smithfield-Ridgebury-Ulster High School.

Jim Stabile is Director of Music at the American Embassy School in New Delhi, India. His wife, the former Carole Cummings, '70, is the director of the Early Childhood Education Center in New Delhi. They have four children. "We love teaching overseas," they write. "The school has students from every embassy in the world, giving our children a chance to find out how small the world really is. Opportunities to learn Indian culture are endless."

1964

Ronald Boyanowski has been the principal of the Mansfield Senior-Junior High School for the last five years. He received his master's degree in educational administration from Temple University. Ronald taught in the Galeton, Bristol Township and Neshaminy school districts and was assistant principal at Abington Heights, Clarks Summit, PA. He is a past president of the Northern Tier Principals Association and a member of the Tioga County Vo-Tech Advisory Board. He and his wife, the former Beverly Webber, '66, reside at RD 2, Mansfield.

Helen Penno Herd was a budget analyst in the Pennsylvania Governor's office for five years after graduation. She is a charter member of the Capital Area Alumni Club and is also active in the Suburban Harrisburg Civic Club. Now a housewife and mother of two, she and her family live at 5620 Devonshire Rd. in Harrisburg.

Richard Miller was recently selected as one of the top 10 finalists for the Pennsylvania Teacher of the Year award. He teaches chemistry and qualitative analysis at the Lower Dauphin High School in Hummelstown, PA, where he also coaches basketball and tennis. Richard is the recipient of a master's degree in science and psychology from Elmira (NY) College, and has held teaching positions in Attica, NY, and at Mansfield High where he coached the basketball team to the state championship in 1969. He has held his present position for six years. During the summer months Rich runs three basketball camps, one in Delaware with pro Tom McMillen, one in Harrisburg and one in Quebec, which, he says, "gives a little international flavor." He reports that he is very active in the Hummelstown Optimist Club and that he expects to return this year for Alumni Day. The Millers have two children and live at 11 Fox Chase, Harrisburg.

When Susan Rush was a student at Mansfield State College she sang the role of Meg in "Brigadoon," an opera work-shop production. Her song stopped the show, and she decided, then and there, that she would become an actress, preferably in musical comedy.

After graduation in 1965 she taught school for two years in Rockway, NJ, and performed in non-equity stock during the summers. She then quit teaching entirely and became a full-time performer.

Susan played dinner theaters, stock, off-Broadway, and finally her first Broadway show. In "Knickerbocker Holiday" with Richard Kiley, she was one of four girls casted out of the 200 who applied for audition.

Her first role in an off-Broadway production was in "Julia," directed by Barry Manilow.

She has also worked with Leonard Nimoy, Dorothy Collins, Rita Moreno, and Carl Betz, among others, but one of her favorites is Van Johnson, of whom she says, "He is a genial man with a delightful sense of humor."

Susan augments her income by music copying and has completed two courses at a New York professional school for copiers.

She says, "The best thing about this business is that I meet such interesting, sensitive and witty people. I love New York, the people and the facilities, but I hate the crime and the dirt. I believe my favorite place in the city is the Brooklyn Botanic Gardens — quiet, serene, and so beautiful.

"I am lucky because I work steadily, and the future looks good. Once you are known as a dependable performer, it is easier to get jobs. My music background at Mansfield has been invaluable, as has my training in opera workshop with Jack Wilcox. I come back to Mansfield often to visit my family and the college. The five children in my mother's family, the Johns family, all attended Mansfield State College at various times so my ties with MSC are strong."

This spring Susan will appear in a dinner theater production of "Boeing Boeing" with Van Johnson in San Antonio, TX.

She and her sister live at 19 Prospect Place, Brooklyn, NY, in a brownstone which they recently bought.

CONCERT WIND ENSEMBLE ALUMNI REUNION

Saturday & Sunday — April 29, 30, 1978

All former members of the MSC Concert Wind Ensemble are invited to attend and participate in the 25th Anniversary celebration on Saturday and Sunday April 29 and 30, 1978. Mr. Bertram Francis, founder of the Wind Ensemble and professor emeritus of music, will be on hand along with other retired instrumental faculty members as well as present members of the music staff. An alumni band composed of former wind ensemble members and the current wind ensemble will perform separately and as a combined group with both Mr. Francis and Mr. Stanley conducting. The tentative schedule below indicates an ample amount of time for both music making and socializing with old friends on this reunion weekend. Plan now to attend and return the enclosed registration form to Donald Stanley. Additional details will be sent along with information on local motels and hotels.

Summer 1978

FIVE GENERATIONS ATTEND MANSFIELD STATE COLLEGE

— Art Barlow —

When Ann York enrolled at Mansfield State College this year, she became the fifth member of her family to do so. At least unofficially, the York family must have chalked up some sort of record. Perhaps they should contact the Guinness Book of Records.

The family tradition of enrollment at the college began in 1889 when Ann's great-great-grandfather, Ernest C. Snover, began his studies in general education. After finishing his college work, he stayed in the local area, taking on an assortment of jobs. He operated a carriage shop in Mansfield. He worked for a while as a glass blower in Covington, and he tended the farm he loved, "Foot of the Hill," located near Armenia. He had a varied life, and the members of his family who followed him to Mansfield had some interesting stories of their own to tell.

His daughter, Mabel Alena Snover, attended Mansfield State in 1908. After her graduation she taught music and drawing at three area schools, Blossburg, Covington and Mansfield, simultaneously! She was the circuit rider of the arts. On some harsh winter days, Mabel's horse would come home without Mabel. It was a creature that couldn't abide snow, so when the snow got too deep, it would just lie down. Apparently Mabel was a tenacious woman, because she would get out of the buggy and continue to class on foot. As soon as she was gone, the horse would get up and return home. Mabel Snover must have been gifted with awesome patience to keep that horse.

Next in the family line was Mabel's daughter (and Ann's grandmother), Lena Viola Rieppel, who received her sophomore certificate in primary education in 1937. She determinedly pursued a baccalaureate degree until August of 1971 when she earned her bachelor of science degree in elementary education and art. She is presently teaching at the Charlotte Lappia Elementary School in Wellsboro.

Mrs. Rieppel has seen the changes that have taken place at the college since the thirties. The school has grown she says, but not without some loss. Many old buildings are gone. But two that remain — North Hall, a huge brick building which until recently was a dormitory, and Straughn Auditorium, still the largest auditorium on the campus — bring back fond memories for Mrs. Rieppel. She especially remembers one old bulletin board, and the code names "Araminta" and "Isabella" that she and her best friend used for their private exchanges.

But the real alteration at the college has been in the academic and social climate, she says. In 1937, when she was art editor for the Diamond Jubilee Yearbook, there were strict rules: students had to be in the dorms by 10 o'clock on week nights (they had the luxury of staying out until midnight on the weekends). They also had to sign out to go home, or even to go to downtown Mansfield, and they had to specify their destinations. Moreover, for the girls, the dean of women had severe dress codes: blouses that had pockets couldn't be worn because they were too suggestive; sweaters were allowed, but not if they were tight.

The atmosphere back then may have been restrictive, but the students seem to have accepted it. In fact, the students felt a great sense of pride in their college of a thousand students, Mrs. Rieppel reports. Wrestling was the major sport, and to the best of her knowledge, the football team never won a game. But there were throngs of students at the games anyway. And whether it was out of loyalty or out of fear of the rules, no one ever criticized or jested about the professors. Decorum prevailed.

Ann's mother, Barbara Ann Rieppel, began her studies at Mansfield State in 1957, interrupting them in 1958 to marry Bird B. York. However, she is now back on campus studying elementary education — early childhood while her daughter, Ann, simultaneously studies information processing.

The York family traces its ancestry back to one Amos York, who settled and farmed in the Wyalusing area in 1775. Amos did not attend Mansfield State, but he had good reasons. For one thing, the college wasn't founded until 1857. For another, Amos had the misfortune to be captured by Indians during the Revolutionary War.

The alumni office has identified the following families which include three generations who attended Mansfield State College. If any reader is one of, or knows of any multiple-generation MSC families, please send the information to the alumni office.

MANSFIELD FOUNDATION REACHES 20% OF SCHOLARSHIP GOAL

J. Paul McMillen, Executive Director of the Mansfield Foundation, Inc. and Director of Development at MSC, reports that the Foundation has reached 20% of its $100,000 goal for scholarships. A total of $20,000 has accrued in the trust fund to date from gifts which have been designated for scholarships and received during the annual fund campaign.

The Mansfield Foundation is a tax-exempt, non-profit corporation designed to promote and enhance a variety of services that the college provides to the Northern Tier.

Since January, 1978, approximately $15,000 has been awarded to sponsor various outreach programs and projects, according to McMillen. The Mansfield Festival Theatre recently received a $5,000 grant for the 1978 Summer season.

Among others, the Foundation approved grants for a slide presentation on rural mental health, a workshop designed by Campus Ministry to develop a leadership program, writing and mathematics contests involving area high school students, a radio program and money to help sponsor a campus fine arts program.

Dr. Robert Unger, college archivist, received $1,000 to frame and display portraits of all MSC principals and presidents. The board has also increased its support of an emergency student loan fund.

McMillen says that the monies handled by the Foundation have surpassed $680,000 during the nine months of the current fiscal year.

DARNTON SUPPORTS KEYSTONE LEGISLATION

Interim president Donald C. Darnton of MSC has given his support to legislation currently before the Pennsylvania State Senate which would establish a Keystone University System. The legislation would change the status of state colleges by creating a state university system which would no longer be under the Pennsylvania Department of Education or other departments or agencies of the Commonwealth.

Pennsylvania Secretary of Education Caryl M. Kline says that "it is an historic bill, one which will strengthen immeasurably Pennsylvania's higher education community. It will permit a more effective and efficient administration of these institutions and establish a more desirable system of governance than we now have. The legislation is truly an idea whose time has come."

ARCHIVES PROJECT PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

Dr. Robert Unger, history professor at MSC, was appointed college archivist by President Darnton in 1977. Since his appointment the archives have grown from a miscellaneous collection of alumni materials stored in North Hall to an orderly assortment of memorabilia housed in several rooms in the MSC library.

Funds to carry on the work are provided by the library, under the direction of James Simonis, and by the Mansfield Foundation.

This year the Foundation supplied $1,000 to acquire and frame the photos of all the college principals and presidents. They are hung in the MSC library and were dedicated during the Alumni Weekend festivities.

To date, Dr. Unger has completed the presidential picture project and has accessioned the collections of Dr. Arthur Belknap, Mr. Karl VanNorman, Dr. Isaac Doughton, Professor Fordyce Allen, Mr. Benjamin Fleitz and Dr. Will George Butler.

He has also accessioned and cataloged the past Mansfield Quarterlies and sorted and started identification of MSC sports pictures and all existing Flashlights and other college publications. The minutes and record books of many organizations of the Mansfield alumni have been sorted and many photographs of graduates identified.

This next year the Flashlights will be microfilmed for future reference.

Dr. Unger and the Alumni Office would appreciate any Mansfield Normal School or Mansfield State College

572 RECEIVE DEGREES

Dr. Donald Darnton, interim president, conferred degrees on 572 graduates during the MSC 113th graduation ceremony.

Speech major, John Heim of Harrisburg, was named the college's Outstanding Senior. Heim served as student representative on the college Board of Trustees, has won 60 awards in speech contests and was chairman of the Student Government Association finance committee. He was also vice-president of the Mansfield Foundation, Inc.

Dr. Fred Bryan, former president of MSC, was the keynote speaker at the commencement program on May 20. He spoke on the "American Dream" which he stated has turned to cynicism, but said that the "dedication and hard work of the younger generation can reverse the trend and produce a more worthwhile tomorrow."

Dr. Bryan is Executive Secretary of the Pennsylvania Association of Colleges for Teacher Education and was president at MSC from 1964 to 1968.

'HELTER-SKELTER' AUTHOR AT MSC

Vincent Bugliosi, prosecutor of Charles Manson and author of "Helter-Skelter", the true story of the Manson murders, spoke on campus in March. He says, "The Manson murders were probably the most bizarre in the annals of American crime."

In a discussion of the case, he said that Manson used sexual perversion, drugs and daily sermons to gain mental control over his approximately 60 followers. Bugliosi said, "His family was completely subservient to him."

He decried the pleasant prison surroundings where some of the Manson family members are serving time and said it may be an indictment of the American judicial system that people can commit horrible crimes and yet wind up playing tennis.

In support of the United States Supreme Court Chief Justice's assertion that 50 percent of the lawyers in the United States are inept, Bugliosi said that the percentage of inept trial lawyers is even higher than that.

HELEN DIEFFENBACH LUTES HONORED BY MOUNTIE CLUB

On May 3rd Helen Dieffenbach Lutes received the Gibson Award at the Spring Athletic Banquet in Manser Hall.

The award is given to a person who has made a significant contribution to athletics at MSC, in memory of Bill Gibson, former MSC basketball coach who developed a program at the college that produced several conference championships.

Mrs. Lutes came to MSC in 1946 after four years in the WAVES, as the women's health and physical education teacher and for 16 years she directed all of the women's intramurals and athletic programs. In 1970 Mrs. Lutes attained full professorship and in 1974 she retired.

Helen Dieffenbach and Ferris Lutes, '33, were married in 1954. He retired in 1973 from the Dairymen's League.

Mrs. Lutes was twice president of the Mansfield Garden Club which she started in 1955 and is now the president of the Plus-55 Club. She and her husband are zealous gardeners, like to travel, are active in the country-western square dancing organization and spend much of their time at a Keuka Lake cottage.

HEALTH HAZARD WORKSHOP

Consumer health was the focus of an April workshop held at Mansfield State College in cooperation with the Food and Drug Administration.

Discussions include prescription and over-the-counter drugs, testing of drugs and the hazards involved in their use. Also covered were the subjects of estrogen therapy, safety of birth control pills, food additives, hair dye and X-ray treatments.

The workshop was sponsored by the MSC home economics department.

MANSFIELD FESTIVAL THEATRE PLANS SUMMER PRODUCTIONS

Mansfield Festival Theatre is planning its seventh summer season. Producer Eric Poppick, Assistant Professor of Theatre at MSC, has announced the program and the opening dates:

Never Too Late June 23
Carousel July 7
Harvey July 21
Man With a Load of Mischief August 4
Thomas Norager, Assistant Professor of Music, will be the theatre's musical director. Dr. John Tillinghast, Professor of Theatre, will direct one of the summer performances.

NEW APPOINTMENTS AT MSC

Joseph Bottiglieri, a former standout at Bloomsburg State College, has been named the football coach at MSC to succeed Bernie Sabol who resigned after the 1977 season.

Bottiglieri comes to MSC from Lafayette College in Easton, PA, where he was assistant football coach. Prior to that he coached at Wyomissing Area High School and at Schulte High School in Terre Haute.

He will serve as admissions counselor in addition to his coaching duties.

Keen W. Buss, former chief of fisheries in the Pennsylvania Fish Commission and one of the world's leading experts on fish culture, will begin development and implementation of the new fish culture programs at MSC. He will join the biology department in the fall of 1978.

Two appointments to teach business administration courses at MSC were recently approved by the Board of Trustees: Dr. Naunihal Singh, associate professor of management at Stockton (NJ) State College and a graduate of the University of Glasgow in Scotland and Richard J. Downen of the Internal Revenue Service currently working on a doctorate in economics at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

PUPPETEER CLASS THIS SUMMER AT MSC

Sam Dee Thomas, assistant professor of art, taught two puppetry courses this summer at MSC. The summer courses were three-week workshops, running June 12-30 and were culminated with informal puppetry demonstrations.

WALKERS RAISE $5,000

A walkathon sponsored by Delta Zeta Sorority of Mansfield State College, and the college radio station, WNTS, raised $5,000 in April for the March of Dimes. About 110 young people participated in the 25-kilometer walk.

MSC WIND ENSEMBLE 25th ANNIVERSARY CONCERT

The MSC Concert Wind Ensemble presented its 25th Anniversary Concert on April 30. Bertram Francis, founder of the Wind Ensemble in 1953, returned to the podium to conduct several selections. A band of former Wind Ensemble members performed separately and with the present group at the Sunday concert. 86 alumni were present and one charter member, George Yearick, (1957), Troy (PA) High School principal.

POP/JAZZ GROUP PERFORMS IN NEW YORK CITY

On April 14-16, the Mansfieldians, the Pop/Jazz Vocal Ensemble at MSC, performed in New York City in several localities, including the Broadway United Church of Christ. Thomas Norager is the director of the Mansfieldians.

BRITISH POET AT MSC

The MSC Department of English hosted the British poet and literary critic, Jon Stallworthy, at a reading and discussion in April at the Home Economics Center.

Now a visiting professor of English at Cornell University, Stallworthy was secretary to the Oxford University Press for several years.

He has published several books including six collections of poems.

MSC PROFESSOR CONFERS WITH ENGLISH PARLIAMENT MEMBERS

Edward Ryan, associate professor of criminal justice administration at Mansfield State College, was invited to the House of Commons, London, England, in June to discuss ways of finding solutions to the Northern Ireland conflicts. He was invited to participate by a Parliament member, Andrew Bowden, MP, MBD, in a previous visit to Mansfield arranged by Janice Mattigan Kennedy, '46, an officer in the Council for International Contact, and on the faculty at MSC.

ADOPT A GRANDCHILD, ADOPT A GRANDPARENT

A program of interaction between the young and the older citizens is sponsored by the Mansfield Campus Ministry. Interested students picked names of Sherwood Manor (home for the elderly) residents from a hat to find the names of their new grandparents.

The program is a reciprocal one, each receiving benefits from the other in a companionship involving the young and older folks.

POLICE OFFICERS TRAINING AT MSC

Ten police officers recently completed a 480-hour Municipal Police Officers Training class at MSC. Police chiefs from four counties were instrumental in establishing the program.

The college received certification for the project from the Pennsylvania Municipal Police Officers Education and Training Commission and Mansfield is the only police training school between Erie (PA) and Wyoming County to provide this service. The course is offered through the continuing education division of the college.

READY, SET: WRITE! CONTEST AT MSC

Mansfield State College hosted its third annual Ready Writing Contest on April 7. More than 120 students from 15 schools in Pennsylvania and New York competed in the two-hour contest.

In recent years there has been a nationally reported decline in students' ability to read and write. Contest coordinator, Dr. Larry Biddison of the MSC English Department, says the contest is in part an effort to combat the decline. "Our purpose is to help area teachers stimulate their students to write clear prose."

FLOAT-STOCKER AIDS IN FISH DISTRIBUTION

Thomas Hirsche, '77, and the float-stocker at work on upper Tioga River.

The United States population is expected to nearly double by the year 2000 and fishermen will increase about 2½ times. By the end of the century about 63 million ardent anglers will be trying to hook a whopper of a fish story.

One of the ways in which the fish population can be enhanced for sport fishing is by stocking streams and lakes. Dr. Vincent Smichowski, '55, of the biology department of Mansfield State College, along with some of his students, have tested and improved a device for float-stocking that was originally constructed by Jerry Stone, Sonny Stone and Mike Hudock of Wyoming County, PA.

Smichowski says, in an article in the February 1978 Pennsylvania Angler, "The concept of float-stocking has been increasing in favor in recent years. By releasing small numbers of stocked fish in favorable areas it is felt that mortality may be reduced, persistence of stocked fish in streams will be improved and the general quality of sport fishing in these areas will be increased. Better use is thus made of hatchery-reared fish without additional effort or expense to the agency producing and delivering them."

The float-stocker is a versatile device for distribution of the fish and he describes it — "It is built of 2-inch construction lumber, hardware cloth and styrofoam sheets of flotation. It is 36 inches in width, 72 inches in overall length, weighs approximately 50 pounds and is capable of conveniently holding 500 fish in the 12-inch to 14-inch range. The dimensions may be reduced without significantly altering the design. Steel runners have been placed on the rounded underside of the stocker to protect the wooden parts and to ease dragging the stocker over riffle areas of a stream bed."

The design and plans for constructing this float-stocker can be obtained free of charge by mailing a self-addressed, stamped envelope to:

MSC FORENSICS TEAM PLACES 20th

The MSC Forensics Team placed 20th in a field of 145 colleges at a recent national championship meet at Monmouth College in West Long Branch, NJ. The team ended the 1977-78 school year winning a total of 93 awards.

MSC DEVELOPS PUBLIC RELATIONS PROGRAM

A program in public relations recently developed at MSC will prepare students for a career in public relations. Dr. Vernon Lapp, chairman of Speech, Communication and Theatre, says the new program will enable students to receive a bachelor's degree in communication with an emphasis on public relations.

MSC SPONSORS COLLEGE DAY

On College Day, sponsored by Mansfield State College in April, high school students familiarized themselves with higher education possibilities. Information came from approximately 26 college representatives.

MEDICINE AND MORALITY MEETINGS

A $7,000 matching grant has been awarded to Mansfield State College and the Wellsboro, PA, Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Hospital by the Public Committee for the Humanities in Pennsylvania. The grant will be used to fund a series of public meetings in Wellsboro, Coudersport, (PA), and Sayre, (PA), on the topic of medicine and ethics.

Dr. Douglas Campbell of MSC, project director, said the project is an "attempt to give the people of the area access to experts on the morality of medical practice." The Karen Quinlan case, among others, has raised some serious questions, he says.

MSC PRESIDENTIAL SEARCH COMMITTEE AT WORK

Mansfield State College is searching for a new president. Dr. Donald Darnton has been interim president since August, 1977.

CLASS NEWS

Three generations of the Doane family have been associated with Mansfield State College as students, teachers and alumni for well over one hundred years.

Joseph Chapman Doane graduated from the Mansfield Normal School in 1868 and soon after became a professor of natural science and grammar. In 1880 he served as acting president.

His son, Dr. John Doane, '05, was a resident doctor in Mansfield and was also the college physician and health teacher. He and his wife Gertrude Allen Doane, '15, were the parents of three sons and a daughter. Dr. Doane died in Florida in 1967 and Mrs. Doane resides in Morganton, NC. She celebrated her 84th birthday in May.

Dr. Wilton (Bill) Doane, '41, of the Santa Barbara (CA) Medical Foundation Clinic, was recently voted President-Elect of the American Group Practice Association. A thoracic and general surgeon, Dr. Doane is a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons. He has also served as an AGPA delegate since 1960 and as a member of the AGPA Board of Trustees since 1974. During his tenure as president of the Santa Barbara Clinic, the board initiated the Foundation System accepted by the Mayo Clinic of Rochester, MN.

Dr. John (Jack) Doane, '41, is on the staff of the Health Clinic in Winston-Salem, NC, established by the Reynolds Company.

Dr. Joseph Doane is a Temple University graduate and a practicing urologist in Palm Beach and Sylvia Doane Milne is a designer and the mother of three children.

Helen M. Gardner is an 84-year-old retired educator who lives in a home converted from a one-room country school house in Montdale, PA, where she once taught school.

Painting is one of her hobbies and she recently was enrolled in a weekly Saturday morning art class of which she says, "It was a wonderful group, ranging in age from elementary students to senior citizens and I was the eldest. The experience gave me a new lease on life."

She drives her own car and has no fear of city traffic and makes frequent trips to Scranton. She goes to New York City to visit museums, never misses Washington at cherry blossom time and takes occasional jet flights to visit relatives.

Miss Gardner graduated from Mansfield Normal School where her father was a member of the class of 1879, and then began teaching in 1914 in a one-room country school located in the corner of her parents' 150-acre farm.

She eventually accepted a teaching position in Washington, DC, and also earned a bachelor's degree and a master's degree from George Washington University. Later she pursued graduate studies in school psychology and special education and attended the University of Vienna in Austria.

In 1927, Miss Gardner became a teacher of psychology and education at Kutztown State College where she stayed for 17 years.

She left Kutztown to become a supervisor of special education in various Pennsylvania counties until 1957 when she returned to Washington as a public school psychologist.

At the mandatory retirement age of 70 she came back home to Montdale to live after a 50-year career in education.

Mansfield State President Designates Official "Mountaineer"

Mansfield State College recently adopted a new conception of the college's long-standing mascot, when President Dr. Donald C. Darnton designated an image of the hardy pioneers who settled the mountains of Pennsylvania as the official "Mountaineer."

"Our previous symbol was the stereotyped hillbilly associated with the southern Appalachian Mountains," Dr. Darnton explained. "This new Mountaineer is not only historically representative of Pennsylvania, but the image is uniquely ours at Mansfield State College."

Serving as a model for the new Mountaineer, or "Mountie" as he is sometimes called, was Alden Smith, electrician foreman at the college. As a hobby, Smith participates in black powder shooting, complete with authentic replica equipment and a costume that looks as though he stepped out of the pages of a history book. He is a member of the Whispering Pines Cap and Flint Club, whose members frequently compete against other clubs for trophies.

When Interim President Donald C. Darnton spoke at the college convocation opening the school year on Sept. 7 he had some gloomy news about the college's operating budget for the coming year. But while the financial news was not good the academic news was very good indeed. Darnton revealed that freshmen enrolling at Mansfield are bucking the national trend by scoring higher on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) than previous freshmen. And Darnton reported that a teacher education program developed at the college has become the model for the entire state college system as well as for schools outside Pennsylvania.

Pointing to the rising SAT scores achieved by Mansfield State College (MSC) freshmen, Darnton said, "In the fall of 1977, our freshman class broke a long-term trend. Although a national trend of declining SAT scores continued, the SAT scores of MSC freshmen rose. This fall's class has even higher scores.

"That is one trend that it's nice to buck," he asserted.

The college has been a pioneer in developing competency-based teacher education, an improved approach to teacher preparation aimed at ensuring that students gain certain skills, or competencies, needed to become effective teachers. Darnton announced that Pennsylvania state colleges and schools outside the Commonwealth have adapted the Mansfield program to their own situations.

Referring to concerns expressed by black students last spring, Darnton said the college's Human Relations Action Committee has been restructured to help it address the remaining problems. "A start toward solutions was made in the spring," he said, "but there is still much to do."

Darnton expressed the hope that minority group members would be added to the college staff. "It is not easy to recruit minority staff to a small, rural community," he commented, adding that for this reason a concerted effort would be made to attract minority candidates for jobs which become available at the college.

Turning to other matters, Darnton called upon the faculty to redesign the college's general education program which is required of all students. He urged that some multi-discipline courses be included and that students be allowed less freedom of choice in the program. "Students come to college to learn," he said. "Faculty assist in the learning process. One way the faculty should help is by telling students what it is that they need to learn."

Darnton stressed his belief that the college should hold high standards for promotions and tenure since decisions in these areas affect the quality of the college "My standards," he said, "what I am looking for, are higher than what has been used in the past. I believe these standards are appropriate for Mansfield State College, and hope they will come to be generally adopted."

Mansfield State College is now operating with expanded health services under a contract with North Penn Comprehensive Health Center, Darnton reported. He also reported that the college's Act 101 equal educational opportunity program has been ranked #1 in the state.

Darnton concluded by stating that student response to the college's new programs in music therapy, social work, fish culture and business was enthusiastic.

College Enrollment Drops; Budget Deficit Grows

Enrollment at Mansfield State College has dropped by 140, according to President Donald C. Darnton. As a result, the college's budget shortfall for 1978-79 has risen to nearly $600,000.

Darnton reported that most of the other Pennsylvania state-owned colleges have also experienced enrollment drops. He spoke at a special meeting of faculty, staff and student leaders called to inform them of Mansfield's budget situation.

The college had previously expected an enrollment of nearly 2,600 in the two regular semesters, plus additional students in the summer.

Darnton said the college had foreseen a budget shortfall in excess of $600,000 earlier this year but had taken what he then termed drastic steps to trim the projected deficit approximately a quarter of a million dollars. These measures included abolishment of many vacant positions, cancellation of plans to order library books and films, and other economy moves.

"The savings that resulted from all of the cut-backs that were instituted in the late summer," he said, "have been wiped out by the decline in enrollment."

Darnton said he contacted Commissioner for Higher Education Warren Ringler as soon as he became aware of the enrollment situation. "Mr. Ringler immediately realized that Mansfield might not be atypical," Darnton said, "but that we simply might have been the first to have recognized the problem and its implications. He quickly sought information from all 14 state colleges and university: 11 reported an enrollment drop."

Commenting that there has been no decrease in the number of new students coming to Mansfield, Darnton said the enrollment decline was accounted for by students who did not return to the college this fall.

Darnton outlined several steps the college could take to reduce the number of students who leave. "There are plenty of reasons to be proud of Mansfield State College," he said, "and I touched on many of these at the Fall Convocation. We need to focus attention on positive characteristics and project an attitude of pride."

Good teaching and responsiveness to students' needs also are important, Darnton said. "It seems to me that students would want to go to college where everyone feels good about the institution, where faculty in the classroom are strong and alive, and where all of the staff are available and obviously interested in assisting students."

Darnton said the college could also increase its recruitment efforts, for example by increasing the number of fulltime recruiters in the Admissions Office. "Additional staff, probably through reassignment, is being considered," he said.

51 Senior Citizens Participate In Elderhostel Program

Elderhostel '78, a special program of low-cost courses for persons 60 years old and older, came to a successful conclusion recently at Mansfield State College, one of 16 Elderhostel sites in Pennsylvania.

In all, 51 elderly citizens participated in the Mansfield program of nine one-week courses. There was no homework and no grading. Admission was open to anyone over 60 — no high school diploma or college degree was necessary to participate. Arthur H. Barlow, director of the Mansfield Elderhostel, stated, "For the first year of a new program, I feel we've had a solid response. We've had hostellers from Vermont and Florida, New Hampshire and North Carolina, and we've also had students from Wellsboro, Blossburg, Covington and Mansfield."

According to Barlow, the senior citizens proved to be enthusiastic students. "Student evaluation of the courses points toward the quality of the courses," Barlow said, "and the professors praised the students." Dr. Robert Dilg, who taught a course about contemporary Latin American, commented enthusiastically: "This is the most positive experience I've had in my six years of teaching at Mansfield State."

The program was no vacation, Barlow said. Some students commuted from home while others lived as college students, waiting in cafeteria lines and sleeping in college dormitories. Barlow added, "It was a very active group exercising their student privileges by attending Mansfield Festival Theatre, using the campus swimming pool and joining in with orientation activities." Hostellers took advantage of the summer weather to tour the Northern Tier. On Wednesday evenings, the entire Elderhostel group, those living on campus as well as commuter, gathered for social activities.

"On paper, Elderhostel seems like a program the college extends to senior citizens," Barlow said, "but in practice the benefits are mutual."

Elderhostel: Summer of 1979

This Summer (1979) the Elderhostel program will be held during the last three weeks of July. Three different courses will be offered each week.

Alumni may purchase gift certificates for elderly friends and relatives. Or, if you are over 60, you may buy one for yourself. It's a great Christmas present for someone who has everything. For more information write Dr. Frederick Piellusch, 1979 Elderhostel Director.

Education Opportunity Program Ranked #1 in State

The Act 101 Program at Mansfield State College has received notification that it is the best of all 68 Act 101 equal education opportunity programs in Pennsylvania. The ranking was revealed by the Pennsylvania Department of Education when approving the grant application for 1978-79 made by the program at Mansfield State.

Established by the state law for which it is named, the Act 101 Program is designed to assist economically and academically disadvantaged students, giving them a fair chance to succeed in college.

Said David Russell, director of Act 101 at Mansfield, "We've worked hard to make the program what it is." Stressing the teamwork within the program and the support received from the college community, Russell gave special credit to Act 101 students for creating the program's success.

Act 101 programs are evaluated annually by representatives of the Bureau of Equal Opportunity, Department of Education. According to Russell, the evaluators look at everything—

Music Therapy Program Approved

The Pennsylvania Department of Education has approved a program in music therapy to be offered at Mansfield State College beginning this fall. The announcement was made recently by Dr. Donald Darnton, interim president of the college.

According to Dr. James Keene, chairman of the music department at Mansfield, "a career in music therapy offers challenges, opportunities and special rewards for individuals interested in working with the handicapped."

Dr. Keene explained that music is beneficial to both children and adults who suffer from behavioral, learning or physical disorders.

Upon the completion of a four-year program of study which includes coursework in music, special education, sociology-anthropology, psychology and biology, the music therapy student serves a six-month internship under the supervision of a registered music therapist. The program leads to the bachelor of music degree.

Music therapists are employed in mental hospitals, day care facilities, geriatric centers, community health centers and special service agencies. In addition, Dr. Keene said that public schools are beginning to hire music therapists as members of their special education staffs.

Other music therapists open their own studios where they work with children and adults who have been referred to them by psychiatrists or other health professionals.

recruitment efforts, tutorial services, counseling services, summer sessions, etc. Evaluators also interview both students and faculty in the programs.

The grant for the Mansfield State Act 101 Program totals approximately $69,000, according to Russell.

Social Work Program Approved

Pennsylvania Secretary of Education Caryl M. Kline has approved a new program in social work to be offered at Mansfield State College. The program has been in development for four years.

Offered by the newly renamed Department of Sociology and Social Work, the program is designed to train students to be professional social workers able to serve in a variety of human service agencies.

Secretary Kline's approval of the program marked the acceptance of all new degree programs recently proposed by Mansfield State College, according to Interim President Donald C. Darnton. In the last few months, the college has received approval for programs in music therapy and fish culture. Also approved have been a program in special education and graduate programs in education and art education.

According to Dr. Thomas Matthews, chairman of the Department of Sociology and Social Work, the new social work program combines broad liberal arts education with technical training in human services.

The program includes such areas as child and family welfare, youth services and corrections. There is also study of housing services, recreation, and employment rehabilitation services.

The program includes an internship — an opportunity for students to work in the field with human service organizations for a full semester or during a summer.

Laurance Miller is the newest member of the Department of Sociology and Social Work. Before coming to Mansfield, he was Coordinator of Services for the Tioga County (Pa.) Mental Health/Mental Retardation Program in Wellsboro. He has served as Executive Director of Wily House, a residential treatment center for emotionally disturbed children in Bethlehem, Pa. He has a Master of Social Work degree from the University of Pittsburgh.

According to Dr. Matthews, the social work program has already placed students in over 100 social service organizations.

BETWEEN CLASSES — Dr. William Beisel, dean of continuing education at Mansfield State College, left, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lehman of Florida, take time to chat between classes during the Elderhostel program at Mansfield State College. The week-long program offered nine courses to persons 60 years and older.

DR. GEORGE SEFLER

Dr. Sefler Wins State's Highest Teaching Award

Dr. George Sefler, Chairman of the Philosophy Department at Mansfield State College, has been awarded a Distinguished Teaching Chair by the Pennsylvania Department of Education. The Commonwealth selects 10 outstanding teachers from the 13 state-owned colleges and Indiana (Pa.) University every year. The State Teaching Chair is the highest honor Pennsylvania bestows for teaching. A cash prize of $3,500 is given with each Distinguished Teaching Chair.

Dr. Sefler entered the state-wide competition when he was named a Commonwealth Teaching Fellow and won a Certificate of Excellence in Teaching earlier this year.

Colleagues and students of Sefler's on the Mansfield State campus had said they expected the amiable philosopher to do well in the state-wide competition. He has made philosophy a popular subject on campus. While running the Philosophy Department, Dr. Sefler has also managed to write two books on philosophy and he has published a number of scholarly articles.

Success is not new to George Sefler. In 1966, when he graduated from DePaul University in Chicago, he was first in a class of 700. Four years later, at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., he received his Ph.D. His book, Language and The World was published by the Humanities Press in 1974.

The philosopher came to Mansfield State in 1969 to become a one-man department. The department soon added new staff and attracted more students. A philosophy major, a wide variety of courses and a philosophy club were all developed under Dr. Sefler's leadership.

Members of the state panel were impressed with students' opinions of Dr. Sefler. The way students rate a teacher is a critical part of the selection process for the Distinguished Teaching Chairs.

Panelists were most impressed with Dr. Sefler's inspiring teaching style. Dr. Sefler says, "The classroom must be a place of excitement and enthusiasm. Ideas must dance if they are to be significant and value-laden."

Dr. Sefler will give a free public lecture at the Robert Packer Hospital in Sayre 3 p.m. Oct. 4 in the Patterson Building, Room A. His topic will be "Loneliness, an Estranged Intimacy."

This is the third time a Mansfield State teacher has won a Distinguished Teaching Chair. In 1975 Dr. Stanley Harrison of the English Department was given the award. Dr. Thomas Stich of the Special Education Department won the award in 1976.

Food Shortage? Look Under Water

You've seen the television spot. A man stands at the head of a dining room table in the middle of a grain field. As he tells you about all the thousands of new human beings the earth has to feed every day, the camera pulls back to reveal that the table stretches seemingly without end across the field.

The earth's population is growing fast. Many social critics say we may face catastrophic world-wide starvation in the future. But Keen Buss, known internationally as "Mr. Fish Culture," thinks he has at least a partial solution. Put fish on the plates on that table.

Mr. What? Fish culture is the science of breeding and raising fish for food. Buss, newly appointed to the fish culture program at Mansfield State College, says fish culture did not change for thousands of years — until recently. But now it has developed to the point where it may revolutionize both food production and eating habits around the world.

Buss has been pivotal in the growth of fish culture. He is the inventor, for example, of the "silo," a huge vertical tank 17 feet high and 17 feet around with an upward flow of water. Buss found that rainbow trout thrive in crowded conditions, so the silo is a perfect environment for raising huge quantities of the fish.

Buss hopes some of his students in the Mansfield State program will find work in third world countries where fish culture holds great promise for the future. He also believes fish culture will become big business in the United States. He says he looks forward to the day when every town will have its own fish hatchery!

Trout have always been the foremost fish in Buss's mind. In fact, he is responsible for creation of the palomino trout, a cross between the golden trout and the rainbow trout. Buss believes trout will become a major food source in the United States where it is already accepted as a table food. For under-developed nations, however, he favors the carp and the tilapia. "For the poor nations," he says, "the carp is a natural fish to raise because it converts grass and carbohydrates into protein, while the trout required protein to produce protein."

Now that fish can be raised cheaply, Buss believes they will become increasingly important as a food for man. "When you compare the chicken and cow with fish," he says, "it is easy to see that fish can be raised faster and cheaper. Fish is a healthier food, too, because it is low in fats."

Buss has worked for the Pennsylvania Fish Commission — he was the head of fisheries for the entire state. It was under his guidance that Pennsylvania developed a scientific and sophisticated hatcheries system. He was in charge of the Benner Springs Fish Research Station at Bellefonte, Pa.

Teaching in the Mansfield program, Buss will be turning out the next generation of fish culture specialists. It will be one more contribution he has made to giving fish the place he thinks they deserve in our lives — on our dinner plates.

Denise Bell

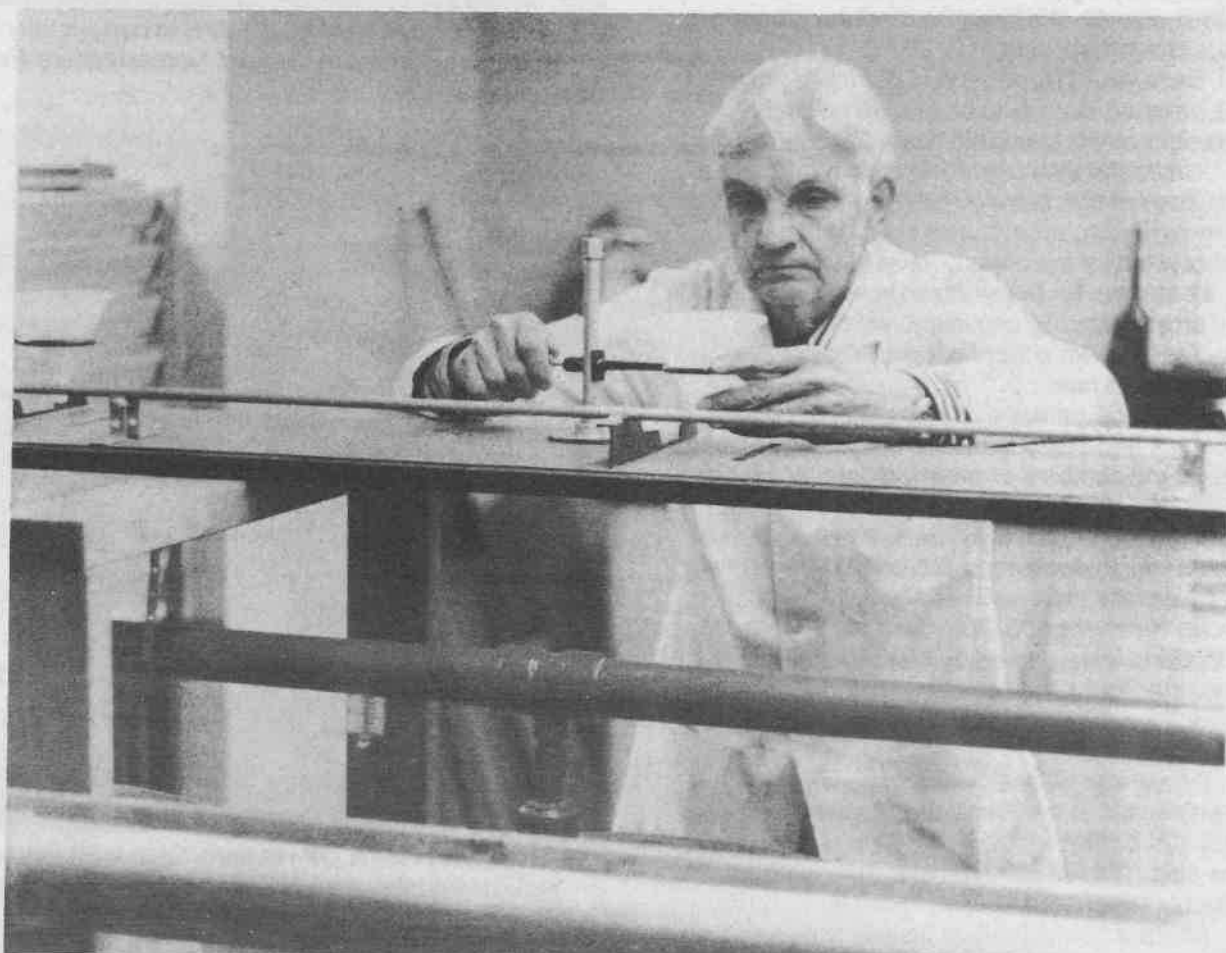

In the early spring of 1978, J. Paul McMillen, Director of Development/Alumni Affairs, received a letter from Frank Michanowicz, '52, who is principal of the Livorno American Elementary School in Italy. Mr. Michanowicz asked if there were any girls at MSC who would like to live with an Italian family with two children, who wanted some one to tutor the children and speak only English, and to live with them during the summer months in their summer villa at Lake Garda.

Denise Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carvel Bell of Wellsboro, and a senior at MSC, was finally selected by a board of college professors to represent the college in Italy.

She left the states on May 31st and returned home the latter part of August after what she says was a wonderful experience with a beautiful and breathtaking view of Italy and its people. She is definitely much in favor of the experiment in living and the benefits derived from it.

Denise wrote this summer, "I am glad I was chosen to represent MSC in Italy. I was greeted with open arms and the people have been great to me. I am really seeing how they live here."

The idea for the program was developed by Michanowicz and he is hoping to work out a similar program each summer which will allow several MSC students to go to Italy.

Homesteaders' Festival Success: Gets National T.V. Coverage

Scott Nearing, speaking at the First Annual Homesteaders Festival is encouraging Americans to return to the land.

Nearing, 95, and his wife, Helen, are the leading figures in the modern homesteading movement. The authors of many books, they were the honored guests at the Festival held at Mansfield State College July 26-30.

Nearing advocates a homesteading life-style in which people become as self-sufficient as possible, living simply and close to nature. On July 29, Norm Lee, Program Director of the First Homesteaders' Festival presented the Nearings with a plaque citing them as the inspirers and teachers of modern homesteaders and dedicating the Festival to them.

The Festival included workshops designed to teach homesteading skills including log cabin construction; four-season gardening and masonry. Also offered were workshops in such skills as cooking and preserving, beekeeping, heating with wood and plumbing, wiring and roofing.

About 200 people registered for Festival workshops conducted in pavilions at the periphery of the College's athletic field. Registrants came from 12 states but mainly from New York and all parts of Pennsylvania including Harrisburg and Philadelphia. One participant traveled 39 hours by bus from Oklahoma City to reach Mansfield for the Festival.

The idea for the Festival originated with Norm Lee, who is a homesteader.

Dr. William Beisel, Chairman of the Festival and Dean of Continuing Education at Mansfield State College, explained that he had been invited to discuss Mansfield's Continuing Education Program on a Corning, N.Y., radio station. "Norm, a resident of Addison, N.Y., heard the broadcast and wrote to me, sending me an article about homesteading he had written. I invited him to come to Mansfield to talk with me about putting on a homesteaders' program."

Beisel continued, "We discussed such a festival and I asked how long it would take him to arrange a program. He had the ideas back to me within a week. We began putting the program together in February.

"Because of Norm's interest, I invited him to be program director even though he isn't a member of the Mansfield State College faculty.

"I liked the idea of holding such a festival because I am interested in family togetherness and homesteading accentuates cooperation among family members," Beisel said.

Instructors for the workshops were screened by an interviewing committee which sought people who are either homesteaders or live close to the land.

Workshop participants included individuals, couples and entire families, most of whom set up tents and campers at a campground at the MSC campus.

In addition to the living-skill workshops, bluegrass music workshops and concerts were held.

Bluegrass stars such as Gary Mehalick, Doug Hutchens and Orrin Starr led workshops. Concerts were offered by Mehalick and Starr and the Phuzz Street Knucklebusters, the Outdoor Plumbing Company and the Shenandoah Cut-Ups.

Beisel was pleased with the number of participants at the Festival. "I figured that if we got 100 participants it would be a success," he said. "We've got 200 here, so I guess its doubly successful."

Another homesteaders festival is being planned for next year.

One of the workshop participants who thoroughly enjoyed herself was Beverly Snover of Liverpool, N.Y. "My husband and I would like to build a log cabin when he retires, and we need all the practical information we can get. He's involved in the plumbing, wiring workshop and I'm learning how to actually build a log cabin.

"Every night, we compare notes on our progress. I've learned how to properly handle a chain saw, how to peel bark from a log, and how to put the cabin together. We are going to purchase land in Georgia and settle down there."

When completed, according to instructors Dave Zwieber and Jack Kaplan of Ithaca, N.Y., the 10x16-foot log cabin would be used as a display model for the firm they work for. When complete, the cabin will feature 3 windows, a sliding glass door and a 4x9-foot porch.

The logs used in construction were red pine and for insulation a polyethylene strip was used between logs. The logs will also be calked with asphalt cement.

One of the participants in the cooking workshop noted that she was a bride to be and when married she and her future husband plan to become homesteaders. When asked why she said, "Because of the energy crisis and because I just love hard work!"

On Saturday, after their arrival, the Nearings walked around to the various workshops, stopping to chat with the participants and share some of their homesteading knowledge garnered during the last 40 years or so. The need for seaweed in gardening was discussed; the reason for making sure that you don't pick "the uglies," small, flat rocks compared to large round ones for constructing a stone house wall and the need for having the foundation 2 inches wider on each side of a wall.

Dr. Beisel, on Sunday, took the Nearings first to Smythe Park in Mansfield and then to Covington, on to Blossburg and finally to Morris Run. Scott Nearing is a native of Morris Run, and Helen, a native of Ridgewood, N.J.

"I talked to him at length about his early boyhood in Morris Run and his experience in and around Morris. He was born there in 1883," Beisel said, "at the height of the coal and lumber boom."

The Nearings are cordially invited back, but do not often travel during the gardening season. Perhaps, it is speculated, they came so Scott could visit his birthplace.

JOHN BATTISTA OF Hartford, Ohio is interviewed by Joan Snyder CBS-TV Reporter/Producer Saturday during the stone wall construction workshop. Battista will start homesteading in the Pacific northwest with his family and wants to build a stone home there. The camera crew was from New York City and stated that the film clip of the Festival would be shown during the Sunday evening news.

YOUR SCHOOL NEEDS YOUR HELP NOW! THIS IS A SPECIAL APPEAL

- MSC is in trouble.
- Unprecedented cutbacks in budget authorizations have created an acute emergency at Mansfield.
- The school's budget deficit was $30,000 last year. It is estimated at over $600,000 this year.
- There is money to provide the bare essentials in instructional and facility support.
- But that's all!
- As a graduate, you know there is much more to Mansfield State College than buildings and books.
- In addition there must be exposure in such areas as culture, recreation and research.
- A student demands such benefits as these in seeking an education that makes him or her a well-rounded, mature individual.
- For years the Alumni Association has worked with the college to help support such programs.
- More recently the Mansfield Foundation has been established to play a leadership role in college support.
- This year the college has been forced to throw the responsibility for these programs squarely in our laps—in your lap as well.
- Through no fault of its own, the college has been forced to cut its operations to the very minimum. Obviously, the Foundation and Alumni Association cannot fund every necessary supportive program at the school for the next year. But we feel we must do much more than ever before.
- The degree of success of these efforts depends on you.
- The budget crisis may pass in a year or so.
- But it will take YEARS to regain the ground lost by a reduction in services.
- Please help us avoid that tragedy.
- If you are a regular financial contributor, please ask yourself if you can increase your giving this year.
- If you haven't made a contribution, we appeal to you to help your school survive this crisis.
- The 1978 Annual Giving Campaign has been extended to June 30, 1979 to allow time for a vigorous second effort.
- Please send your contribution now to: The Mansfield Foundation, Inc.
P.O. Box 431
Mansfield, PA 16933

Your school needs your help!

Adopts New Mascot

Mansfield State College recently adopted a new slicked-up, photographic version of the long-standing college mascot — the unfurbished, scraggly but lovable old mountaineer. Interim president, Dr. Donald C. Darnton, designated the new logo (see story on page one) as the "official mountaineer" which will henceforth appear on sports brochures and other publications.

The history of the happy-go-lucky old hillbilly goes back to 1950 when the members of the "M" Club needed a logo for jacket patches. Don Mahon, '52, now a school principal in Corning, NY, and a member of the "M" Club at that time, tells it like this:

"In May of 1950 we were ordering 'M' Club jackets and wanted some kind of informal emblem or mascot to use on them. We asked Ford Button, '52, to come up with a sample drawing and thus the old mountaineer was born and we adopted him enthusiastically."

Anita Moore Sperry, '69, who was working in the college bookstore at the time, remembers a committee of "M" Club members discussing the selection with her just prior to their final choice of the Mountaineer as the college mascot.

In 1958, John Schamel, '62, who now teaches Labor Relations for Cornell University, was a basketball hopeful but due to injury was unable to play. Coach Bill Gibson designated him as the official team trainer, the first ever at Mansfield, and at home and on road trips, John dressed up in overalls and an old shirt, carried a musket and a powder horn, and portrayed the mountaineer. He even grew a beard for his masquerade but had to shave it off when he started student teaching. Beards weren't exactly standard equipment in those days.

In some places he went he borrowed a sheep from a local farmer and paraded with it, and the Mountie mountaineer became known far and wide. John is now a busy educator and a two-time candidate for the New York State Senate but he has a great affection for the old mountaineer and hates to see him displaced.

The Mansfield hillbilly would have been 29 years old in May of 1979, a respectable tenure as the widely-known and popular insignia of the college in the hills of Pennsylvania. He will be missed by many.

How the "Flashlight" Began

In 1926 the Emersonian Literary Society at Mansfield State Normal School was looking for a project to add lustre to its image and give the society greater consequence on campus. The Emersonians also felt that any school should include a student publication and that certainly Mansfield had the talent and the resources to put together such a publication. Thus, on Feb. 6, 1926, the number one issue of the Flashlight was circulated at the college for the first time.

The principal promoters of the project were Paul Jones, Andrew Campbell and Edson Haven and Campbell says it was his sister, Emily, who proposed the idea of the paper. Others soon joined in support and the Emersonian Literary Society became the approved official sponsor.

The Flashlight was printed by the Mansfield Advertiser whose editor, Edwin Coles, was most interested. It was a "shoestring venture" says Campbell, the first editor, "But it showed what could be done. Mr. Coles furnished cuts, did the printing on whatever money we could raise from area merchants and helped out in many ways."

Jairus Gavitt, assistant business manager, says that the "first staff was strictly a volunteer set-up and we took on any volunteer from the Society who was foolish enough to stick his neck out."

Edson Haven was editor and he writes, "The administration cooperated, the faculty approved, the students worked conscientiously and almost everyone was happy. It should be emphasized that the student paper was first put out without any school subsidy or grant."

The paper was named by Haven who recalls the occasion — "The name was suggested to me by a quotation of Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield, which I came across while browsing in the library. 'A university should be a place of light, of liberty and of learning.' The buzz word, flash, was often used in those days for a fast-breaking news story; hence, the not so unusual verbal invention, Flashlight. The word may be more appropriate than the tortured logic in arriving at it."

The Elmira Star-Gazette of Feb. 8, 1926, carried an article on the new Emersonian brain-child which concluded, "It is a bright, breezy little paper full of happenings of the school and the first copy is fresh from the press."

Paul Jones, business manager, says that the Board of Editors was elected for a term ending in June of 1926 and that most of the active board members graduated in that year.

The next year the Flashlight was reborn, and on Nov. 29, 1926, with yet another number one issue, the paper really established itself on a permanent basis and became a weekly publication but had to rely on subscriptions (about 500) and advertising to keep going.

The staff ran a contest for a name for this new edition and 50 names were submitted but the committee finally voted to honor the founders of the school periodical by retaining the original title. Runner-up names were The Tanager and Red and Black Flashes.

The Flashlight has been in continuous publication since that time, in fulfillment of the beliefs expressed by the first staff — "We sincerely believe that the interest aroused by this modest little publication will inspire a larger and better paper in the future."

Copies of the first eight issues of the Flashlight are in the MSC archives.

The family of George and Mary Campbell Shipman deserves a special page all its own in the history of Mansfield State College. Not only did five generations attend Mansfield State Normal School and Mansfield State College, four generations received graduation diplomas. Though George and Mary are not listed as graduates they did attend the school for some time and apparently passed the teaching exams which were required in those days, for both were teachers in a school near Mansfield. A family legend tells of the Shipmans taking their first child, Mabel, born in 1874, with them to school each day. Mabel later graduated from MSNS in 1893 and taught school at Mill Creek, PA. She died in 1972 at the age of 97.

A daughter, Helen, was a skilled musician who taught music in the area and played the background piano music for silent films at the Twain Theater in Mansfield.

The two sons of Lewis N. Wilson, '00, and Helen Shipman Wilson, '05, both graduated from MSC — Richard (deceased) in 1931 and George Robert in 1933.

Twin daughters of Richard, Patricia Wilson Booth, '67, and Shirley Wilson Tomlinson, '69, are the mothers of Brad Booth, '77, and Steve Tomlinson, '78.

Family pictures of the Shipmans and their descendants were lost in the flood of 1972.

CLASS OF 1906

Merle Cogswell Grant celebrated her 92nd birthday on April 29, 1978. In March of 1908 Merle was married to Herbert Grant, '05, and in 1915 the Grants moved to a faculty apartment at Mansfield State Normal School where Herbert became the head of the Science Department and she became supervisor of student teachers in the campus model school. Merle left Mansfield after the death of her husband in 1962 and now divides her time among her three children — Robert, '31, Phyllis Grant Meretta, '37, and Carolyn Grant Morey. The Grants seldom missed an Alumni Day through the years. Three occasions have been special for her. On Alumni Day of 1965, Merle and her children and grandchildren were present for the dedication of the Grant Science Center in honor of Herbert Grant. In 1967 she presented a memorial plaque to be placed on the building. In 1976 Merle Cogswell Grant was the only representative present of the seventy-year class of 1906. She is in good health and hopes to return again to Alumni Day festivities at Mansfield.

CLASS OF 1910

Mildred Rees Cutright of Stanton, CA, was inadvertently listed in the obit section of a recent Mansfieldian and writes that she cut out the "In Memoriam" section and posted it on the bulletin board at the Quaker Garden home where she lives, along with a request that there be no flowers. In recalling her days at Mansfield Normal School she says she remembers Sundays in particular. She writes, "We often used to return from church and find the elevator not running and that was good news for it meant ice cream for dinner. There was not sufficient power to operate both the elevator and the freezer." Mrs. Cutright taught school for 44 years, 33 of them in Los Angeles. During those years she wrote many stories based on her experiences teaching a one-room school and these were published in the city teachers' journal and other publications. Mrs. Cutright lives at Quaker Gardens, 12151 Dale St., Stanton, CA.

CLASS OF 1902 and 1915

Esther Davies Hughes graduated twice from MSC. After graduation in 1902 in the regular Normal course, she taught school in Pennsylvania and New York state. In 1915 she completed the home economics course at Mansfield after accruing summer credits at Pennsylvania State College. She was a home economics teacher in Pittsburgh, PA, for three years and then moved with her husband to Chicago. For the last 16 years she has lived in a Baptist retirement home in Maywood, IL, where she is involved in arts and crafts and has sold many of her oil paintings. She says she is happy to receive the Mansfieldian which refreshes her memory of her classmates. Esther is in good health and expects to celebrate her 97th birthday in November.

CLASS OF 1918

Eleanor Battenberg Welles of Scranton, PA, has been traveling extensively since retirement — to Europe, the Near East, Canada and South America. She reports that she is active in church affairs and women's organizations and belongs to four bridge clubs.

CLASS OF 1918

Esther Gere Robinson of New Milford, PA, writes that she was sorry to miss her 60th class reunion because of a recent hospitalization.

Ruth Jones Watkins of Sandy Hook, CT, taught school for seven years and then married and raised four boys and a girl. She is in the business of building finewire drawing machines and making magnetic wire, and the reconditioning of reels, with shops in Sandy Hook, New Milford, CT, and Guthrie, KY. Her hobby is traveling.

CLASS OF 1922

Alfred Sayre is a special alumnus of Mansfield State College. He left school after the seventh grade to work and became an accomplished athlete. He was brought to the attention of Dr. Straughn, college president, and found himself in Mansfield in 1918 to complete his high school education and earn a Normal School diploma in 1922.

He was a four-letter man, playing baseball, basketball, football and track and won many individual state and national prizes in track and on the legendary Mansfield football teams of 1919 and the early twenties.

Mr. Sayre became a professional cartoonist and in the late twenties moved to New York City where he became a cartoonist on "the Hobo News" and free-lanced for other magazines and newspapers.

In New York, Mr. Sayre and his wife, Vera Bell Sayre, '19, were active in the New York Area Mansfield Alumni Club which flourished in the thirties.

He ultimately went into the field of outdoor advertising and since retirement has been busy painting and traveling extensively.

On Alumni Day, 1976, Mr. Sayre presented an oil painting, "Galileo Explains the Lunar Mountains to the Prelates", to the college, inspired by a life-long interest in astronomy enhanced by his coach and astronomy teacher at MSC, Ronald Kichline.

The Sayres live at 1 Princeton Court, Wilkes-Barre, PA, and write that they expect to get back to Mansfield for a football game this fall.

CLASS OF 1923

Marie Rooney Obermeyer and her husband, William, celebrated their 48th wedding anniversary on June 25th by attending the 55th anniversary gathering of her 1923 MSC class. The Obermeyers are now residing in Lake Havasu City, in Arizona.

CLASS OF 1923

Katherine Russell Neiley is living on a farm near French Asylum in Bradford County, PA. She retired in 1965 after a teaching career of 30 years.

CLASS OF 1925

Irene Crone Russell and her husband, Cleveland, of Rome, PA, recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with an open house at their farm, the Russell Century Farm. Irene was once a teacher in the South Hill one-room school and later in the LeRaysville (PA) Elementary School. A daughter, Margie Russell Newton, '66, is a first grade teacher in the Wyalusing Elementary School. The Russells enjoy traveling and recently returned from Hawaii.

CLASS OF 1926

Henry S. Darrow and his wife, the former Mary Taylor, '25, of Sayre, PA, recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. Mr. Darrow retired from Ingersoll-Rand in 1969 and Mrs. Darrow left teaching in the same year. Since their retirement they have enjoyed traveling and recently returned from Hawaii in time to celebrate their golden anniversary.

Ivah Youmans Deane was a librarian for General Dynamics of Rochester, NY, for 20 years prior to retirement. After graduation from MSC Ivah taught school for three years and served as a librarian at the Wellsboro Green Free Library before eventually moving to Rochester. The Deanes are now living in Wellsboro at 71 Pearl Street and Ivah is active in the Art Club and the Tioga County Historical Society.

CLASS OF 1932

John Isele retired in 1973 after teaching in the Camp Curtin Junior High School in Harrisburg from 1936 until retirement. He received a master's degree in education from Pennsylvania State College in 1940. John has played in the Harrisburg Symphony for 28 years and has been choir director at St. John's Church since 1945 and is a board member of the Harrisburg Choral Society. He and his wife, the former Dorothy Gwinn, '33, live at 3413 North Fourth St. in Harrisburg and are the parents of two children. Dorothy was a teacher for a number of years in the Harrisburg schools and is now active in the Harrisburg Civic Club and sings with the choral society. Her father, Dr. Clyde Gwinn, was a former MSC professor.

CLASS OF 1933

George R. Wilson retired in 1968 after 29 years as a band and orchestra director in Rockville Centre, Long Island, NY. George was a member of the MSC dance band, the "Red and Black Serenaders" while still in high school in Mansfield, along with George Palmer, '29, Wendell Hallen, '28, George Miller (dec.), Stanley Allen, '28, Glen Hammer, and Willard Ehlers, (dec.) After they graduated, George who by then was also in college, carried on with the band and the name was changed to the "Red and Black Pennsylvanians". As to the origin of the dance band he writes that the original group started in the early 1920s with such notable musicians as Una Goodall, (dec.), Larry Woodin, '25, Ellsworth Edgerton, (dec.), Damon Holton, '26, Harry "Hack" Swain, '34, and others. The Wilsons live in Tucson, AZ, where George is the director of a band which plays for senior citizens' groups.

"It would be interesting to pursue the history of the Red and Black dance bands if anyone out there is willing to share their information with us.

Genevieve Wartens is a retired teacher who served eight years in New York State and 22 years in Mt. Holly, NJ. She now resides in Gillett, PA.

CLASS OF 1934

Esther Stiger Cady of Mansfield recently retired after 14 years of teaching at the R. B. Walter Elementary School in the Northern Tioga School District.

CLASS OF 1935

A. Donald Bartoo retired in 1970 as school superintendent of the Iroquois Central School in Buffalo, NY, after 25 years in the system. He received a master's degree in education from Alfred University and advanced credits from Syracuse University. He is a past-president of the Erie County (NY) School Administrators Association and was a Pennsylvania state auditor for 4 years and a senior accountant for a time at E. I. DuPont de Nemours in Wilmington, DE. The Bartoos recently sold their summer home near Wellsboro, PA, and will live permanently at 2362 Doud St., Sarasota, FL.

CLASS OF 1936

Eva Newcomb Hurd recently retired after 22 years in the Slippery Rock (PA) Area School District. A retirement dinner was held in May, 1978, in Harrisville, PA, attended by many friends, faculty and staff, many of whom participated in "This is Your Life, Eva Hurd", honoring her years in the district. The Hurds plan to spend much time at "Hurd's Happy Hut" camp on the Germania-Galeton (PA) road and would welcome visits from friends.

OUTSTANDING ALUMNA — Maryon Farrer Powell looks over her citation as Mansfield State College's outstanding alumna for 1978. Looking on is Thomas Wierbowski ('68) who made the presentation to Mrs. Powell during Alumni Weekend activities. Mrs. Powell, who lives at 154 S. Main Street in Mansfield, is a member of the class of 1918.

CLASS OF 1926

Ellis D. Williams retired in June of 1973 after nearly 50 years in the field of education. On June 19, 1978 the science laboratories of the South Plainfield (NJ) High School were officially dedicated to him and proclaimed as the Ellis Downing Williams Science Laboratories. Mr. Williams received a master's degree from Duke University in 1937 and accrued further credits at several other universities. Over the years he taught school at Lafayette College and Rutgers University among others, and for 16 years before retirement at the South Plainfield school. In 1968 he became the first recipient of the Elmer W. Engstrom Award from the American Institute of Aeronautics, for excellence in teaching science and mathematics. In 1970 he received the Rutgers University Engineering Society Award which recognizes those who show dedication to pupils entering the engineering profession. He has won other awards for his teaching excellence and has served as the first chairman of the mathematics and science department of the South Plainfield High School.

CLASS OF 1937

Marian Brink of Leraysville, PA, recently retired after 39 years as an elementary teacher. She began teaching in Leraysville and later joined the staff of the Northeast Bradford (PA) School District. A dinner in her honor was attended by over 90 co-workers and friends.

CLASS OF 1938

Nicholas "Nick" Kewitt is the president of Crystal Foods, Inc., in New Jersey. He taught school for several years before he started the dehydrated foods business and received a master's degree in administration from Columbia University. The Kewitts have four children and live at 816 Briarcliff Ave., Point Pleasant, NJ.

Mary Neal recently retired after a teaching career of 38 years. She began her teaching in a one-room school with 14 pupils in the Dry Brook Road School near Chemung, NY, where she says her salary for the first year was $1,000. Later she taught at Lawrence Corners, PA, in Washington, DC, in the Hoffman School in Elmira, NY. In 1976 she moved to the Booth School in Elmira. She has missed only 11 days of school in 38 years despite driving almost 480,000 miles round-trip from her Mansfield home to Elmira. She plans to indulge in her hobbies of gardening and traveling.

CLASS OF 1941

Catherine English Whartenby was recently promoted to the position of Director by the Connecticut Life Insurance Company. Catherine has a law degree from Golden Gate University, CA, and is a member of various bar organizations. She has been a regional design consultant and regional design manager in California.

Lucille Jones Sherman is building principal at the Stony Fork School in the Wellsboro Area School District where she also has been a teacher for 16 years.

Dr. Elmer S. Stevens received a master's degree in education in 1947 and his doctorate in school administration in 1956 both from the University of Pennsylvania. Since 1961 he has been superintendent of schools in the Hanover Public School District in York County, PA. Dr. Stevens previously served as supervising principal in the Northern Lehigh School District and the Mt. Jewett School District among others. He is active in church affairs, the Boy Scouts and is a past-president of the Rotary Club.

CLASS OF 1943

Ruth Pinnock was an honored guest this summer at the June session of the Grand Court of the Order of the Amaranth (an organization for Master Masons and women of Masonic families) of the state of Louisiana. She was presented an honorary membership in the Louisiana Grand Court.

Ruth is a former Bradford County, PA, music supervisor. She and her husband are now living in LaPlace, LA, in the deep South, in the parish, she says, where Louis Armstrong was born and where jazz began. They still maintain the Pinnock home in LeRaysville.

Ruth received a master's degree from Cornell University in 1957. She was a teacher in Pennsylvania and New York state schools where her musical groups won many prizes and citations.

Early in her career she was an engineering department coordinator for Bendix Aviation Company in New York but soon went back to teaching. She formally retired in 1977.

Ruth writes, composes, participates in jam sessions and cooks. One of her recipes represented her state at the National Beef Cook-Off in Oklahoma City in September.

Ruth was elected to Who's Who in Music in the forties and recently was included in Who's Who in American Women. She is active in the Business and Professional Women's Club, church work, the Rebeccas, and is much in demand as a speaker at writer seminars. She also serves as a volunteer plantation tour guide.

Ruth was in Mansfield for her 30th class reunion in 1973 and says she is anxious to hear from any of those who were present at this year's 35th reunion.

CLASS OF 1945

Charlotte R. Campbell of Erie, PA, has been a teacher in the Erie schools for 33 years — 14 years in grade one and 19 years in a hearing-impaired class.

CLASS OF 1948

John Kerrigan of Maplewood, NJ, has been employed in the South Orange-Maplewood school system for 25 years. During that time he has served as a social studies teacher, guidance director, junior high principal, high school principal, and Director of Special Education since 1975. The South Orange-Maplewood district received wide news coverage in September of 1975 when a student sued the school district for $1,000,000 because, he claimed, he had never learned to read. After a nine-weeks trial the jury found the defendants not guilty. John writes that he and his wife enjoyed Alumni Day this year and expect to be on campus for Homecoming Day.

CLASS OF 1951

Tom Hurley is a football coach and teacher at Southside High School in Elmira, NY. He has been in coaching for 25 years and has been head coach at Southside for 20 years. Tom received a master's degree in physical education in 1952 from George Peabody College, TN, and has accrued 33 hours of doctoral study in physical education and administration. Southside won its first football title and had its first unbeaten season under Hurley, and has six Sullivan Trail Conference title trophies in its showcase.

Ursula Koulik Hurley, '65, has a degree in public school nursing and has been a nurse-teacher for 14 years in the Elmira School District where she is chairperson of the district school nurses.

CLASS OF 1952

Don Mahon is the principal of the William Severn Elementary School in Corning, NY. He received a master's degree in elementary education in 1958 from the State University of New York. Don previously taught school in Campbell, NY, and was an elementary supervisor for 17 years in Corning before becoming principal. She has been a kindergarten teacher for the last eight years in the Corning Lindley-Presho Elementary School. The Mahons have two children and live at Painted Post, NY, on R.D. 2.

CLASS OF 1953

Dr. Samuel Woodard is a member of the International Transactional Analysis Association and president of Black Awareness/Transactional Analysis Associates of Silver Spring, MD. He is also Professor of Educational Administration at Howard University in Washington, DC, and listed in Who's Who Among Black Americans and Who's Who in Consulting.

Sam's interest and research area is centered on "invulnerable" black students — those who achieve academic success in spite of socioeconomic handicaps. He says his research shows that "the family is the key."

His clinical training in Gestalt therapy and transactional analysis was with Dr. Robert Goulding of California and through continuing education in several university workshops and seminars in various parts of the country.

He has received five grants, the latest for $300,000 from Lilly Endowment for a Creative Leadership Program.

He has lectured at Harvard University, written many articles for national magazines and has been featured in William Raspberry's nationally-syndicated column. A book which he edited, "Reducing Stress on Black Administrators", was published in July by Vantage Press of New York.

After graduation from Mansfield State College, Sam was a teacher in Buffalo, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Washington, and at Illinois State University and Temple University. He has appeared many times on educational TV in Buffalo, NY.

The list of Dr. Woodard's educational credentials, accomplishments, grants and honors is long. He has considerable experience as a consultant and his current research is of significant national interest. This last summer he was working with Indian high school students of the Lumbee tribe in North Carolina, conducting "Better Self-Image Laboratories."

Dr. Woodard and his wife, Ethel, a first grade teacher in Bethesda, MD, have three daughters. They recently purchased a tract of raw land called "Yorkwood" near Williamsburg, VA where they intend to build a home in the near future.

The Woodard family lives at 300 Beaumont Road in Silver Spring.

CLASS OF 1953

Laura Marvin Hitchcock was an accomplished author while still in college at MSC. In her senior year she was a finalist in the Mademoiselle Magazine College Board Contest, as runner-up to Sylvia Plath.

After graduation Laura entered New York University Radio-TV workshop and eventually worked at an off-Broadway theater festival with director Jose Quintero. Then came a stint with Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts, and in 1960 with Walter Cronkite and CBS news at the Olympic Games at Squaw Valley.

She then became an editor of technical publications for the United States government in Japan where she joined a theater group and performed in Kabuki and Noh theater, and traveled extensively through the Middle East and India.

Later, in Paris, Laura found a job at Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe, but she soon came back to the United States to work in San Francisco for the American-Orient Travel Corporation writing travel brochures and a film about Japanese tours.

After marriage and two children, she continued to work in little theaters, reviewed film and theater for two East Bay newspapers and began to write plays. On her 40th birthday she received notice that she had won the California Writers Club Contest. This play subsequently won the Arts Guild of Boston contest and was a finalist in the American Conservatory Theater's Playwrights Fellowship.

In 1973 she became interested in the human potential movement and became assistant to the president of the Esalen Institute. "I was sad," she says, "when Esalen closed its San Francisco office but my next job in the Public Relations Department of the American Conservatory Theater was wonderful for me as a writer. They encouraged me to finish a second script for their new Playwrights Workshop. I have had two plays on the radio and was on the staff of Rolling Stones magazine until they moved to New York. This last summer I began a new job for ICS, a travel corporation. I think travel is a good balance for a writer."

And then she adds, "If I had nine more lives I'd open a bookstore, live on a boat and do some graduate work at Mansfield where, nowadays, you can meet a playwright in the super market."

Laura is the daughter of MSC Professor Emeritus and Mrs. Kimball Marvin of Mansfield.

CLASS OF 1953

John MacLean has been practicing law in Phoenix, AZ, since 1964. He is also a National Basketball Association security representative particularly for the Phoenix Suns. In 1958 he received an LLB degree from Dickinson College Law School and in 1959 joined the FBI and subsequently was stationed in Washington, Virginia, Oklahoma City and Cleveland. William Strohecker has been a guidance counselor at Corning Free Academy Middle School since 1969. Previously he taught social studies and was a guidance counselor at Northside High School in Corning. William has a master's degree in education from Elmira (NY) College and guidance certification from Alfred University. For the last three summers he has been involved in an internist program sponsored by the Ingersoll-Rand Co. to gain first hand experience in the world of business. The participants make the rounds of various jobs and departments to gain the knowledge of what they are going to teach. He says that the internship "brought into focus the uses for the skills learned in school and has been a valuable tool in my counseling efforts." William is active in church and was involved for two years in the Open Worship program at MSC.

CLASS OF 1958

George R. Beyer has a more abiding interest in history than most people. While a student at Mansfield he wrote a special feature for the 1957 centennial edition of the Flashlight — the story of Alumni Hall with its famed clock tower — written as a tribute to the oldest building on the Mansfield campus at that time, and now only a memory. The Library and Administration Building occupies the site where Alumni Hall once stood for more than seventy years.

George received a master's degree in history from Cornell University and joined the Pennsylvania Historical Commission in 1961 where he is now an associate historian. And while he isn't likely to be involved in a great historical splash like the Boston Tea Party or a protest operation like Shay's Rebellion, he certainly is involved in commemorating memorable events, people and places in Pennsylvania history as the coordinator of the state historical marker program which makes recommendations for such recognition within the Commonwealth.

He also has a hand in the writing and editing of state historical brochures and publications, including the prestigious Pennsylvania Heritage magazine recently cited as one of the best of its kind.

George is the son of Prof. and Mrs. Leonard K. Beyer of Mansfield. Prior to retirement Prof. Beyer was an associate professor of biology at MSC.

George and his wife and two children live at 1134 Loop Drive, in Harrisburg where he is active in the Friends Meeting and the Harrisburg Toastmasters Club.

... We need your help and your support. You are one of our best resources for student recruitment.

President Darnton and J. Paul McMillen want you to know just how much you may be able to help. Although our admissions staff travels all over the Commonwealth to spread the good word about Mansfield State College we cannot know every area as well as you.

This is where we can use your help.

- Talk to friends, relatives, and business associates about the quality programs at Mansfield State.
- Write to our admissions office for college brochures and feel free to distribute them to interested parties.
- Talk to prospective students about Mansfield State.
- Support Your Mansfield Foundation.
- If each alumnus would refer one student to Mansfield our enrollment problems would be solved.

We need your help.

Placement Office Helps Put that Diploma to Work

"Effective planning and placement services are good for alumni and good for admissions," states Mr. Thomas Costello, Director of Career Planning and Placement.

The Career Planning and Placement Office, administered by Costello and Frank Kollar, Assistant Director, offers a wide range of supportive services at no charge to Mansfield students, alumni, and the surrounding communities. Each year, more than 800 people actively seek assistance through the Career Planning and Placement Office.

Two separate services are provided by the office. The first of these, career planning, helps a person integrate knowledge of himself and of the world of work to arrive at a general career choice.

This process begins for many students even before they arrive at MSC, through outreach sessions on career planning at high schools in the Northern Tier. Then at freshman orientation, time is devoted to discussing values clarification and careers with both students and parents.

Personal Career Planning, a two-credit course offered each semester, always attracts a full roster of about 40 students. They are assisted in narrowing their career preferences, and guidance is provided in planning a course of study to prepare them for their chosen field.

Counseling services are also available to alumni and area residents who are seeking a career change or returning to work after a period of absence from the work force. What is involved, according to Costello, is "getting them to understand where they are now in terms of work preferences." If additional education is indicated, they are referred to specific departments at the college, or to technical programs and community colleges.

The other service offered is placement assistance. This aspect of the office is actually a misnomer, says Costello. "Our function is not to find a job for someone, like an employment agency, but to develop a job hunting campaign." Placement services are explained in detail to students during the junior year, by means of seminars held in required courses.

In the senior year, the first step is helping the prospective applicant to compile a confidential folder which includes personal data, recommendations, and an unofficial transcript. The Placement Office distributes about 5,000 of these packets every year to prospective employers.

Small classes are held to teach letter writing and interview techniques and resume development. Applicants are urged to develop a time-table for their job search, and from resources in the Office's library, they can obtain names and addresses to target their information to the specific person who has the authority to hire them.

Overseas job assistance is available through a consortium with Edinboro State College. Interviews were held this year in February at Edinboro.

Reciprocity is exercised with other college placement offices for spouses of Mansfield graduates heading elsewhere for graduate studies. Placement offices at universities in Ohio, Hawaii, California, and Virginia have helped spouses of MSC alumni find employment in those locations.

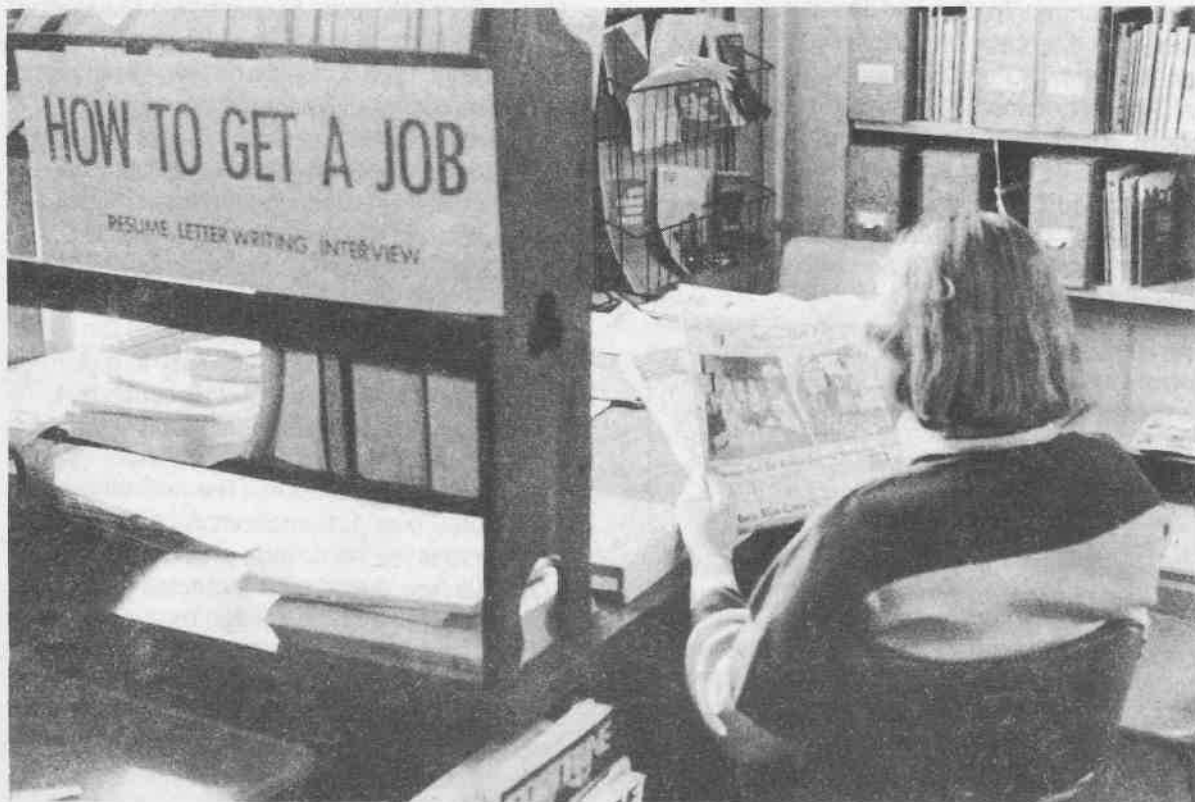

Currently about 90% of graduating education majors take advantage of placement services, but only 50% of arts and sciences majors choose to register.

Every two weeks, vacancy notices received by the office are sent to "active" applicants, which includes seniors and alumni from classes back to 1950. "Notification of job vacancies comes from all over the U.S. . . . but more input is needed," stresses Costello. As a result of tighter college budgets in recent years, money has not been available for the staff to go out and personally solicit notices of available jobs.

Alumni cooperation has been very helpful in the past in finding jobs for new graduates, but Costello emphasizes the need for more of an effort from alumni to inform the Placement Office of openings in their companies, agencies, and schools.

Mansfield's placement record is consistently well above average, but Costello isn't satisfied. He concludes, "I want to see improvement in job opportunities for our graduates, especially in arts and sciences and the professional programs."

The Composition Cowboy

Why can't Johnny read and write? We've all heard the question, but now it is being asked with increasing urgency. Some experts say as many as one in four Americans cannot read or write well enough to lead successful lives in the modern world. Today American schools and colleges are accelerating their efforts to find a solution.

Dr. Ira Hindman, chairman of the composition program at Mansfield leans back in his chair, clasps his hands over a belt buckle tooled with a picture of a horse's head, and crosses his ankles. He is wearing cowboy boots with pointed toes. His Western hat hangs on a hook behind him. The Composition Cowboy is ready to discuss his favorite subject: reading and writing.

In recent years, national surveys have shown that American youngsters are reading and writing less and less well. Experts have pointed to a number of reasons: "permissive" education, too much television, a general decline in culture. Hindman thinks all of these may have contributed to the problem, but his primary concern is finding a solution.

A professor in the English Department, Hindman spearheads an effort to improve the literacy level among college students. His efforts are paying off. He estimates that of 846 colleges and universities recently surveyed nationwide by the College English Association, Mansfield's program ranks high in the top 20 percent. Mansfield is one of only three colleges requiring a passing grade of at least a C in the final composition course a student takes.

Another unusual element of the program is that the final composition course comes in the junior year. Many colleges have writing courses only in the freshman year, Hindman says. The Mansfield approach is designed to assure that freshmen learn to read and write well enough to begin college and juniors learn to read and write well enough to complete college.

A horseman who is enthusiastic about all things having to do with horses, Hindman came to Mansfield in 1967. He now lives on a small farm with his wife Kathy (also an English Professor) and their children. The Hindmans raise and ride horses, and Dr. Hindman has even found a way to bring his love of horses into the classroom. In recent years has taught Cow Country, a literature course about the West.

Hindman has decorated his college office with prints of cowboy scenes. It's in this setting that he discusses his efforts to cure the problem of functional illiteracy. A great many kids graduate from high school without being literate enough to function in contemporary society, Hindman contends. Some can't read books with much understanding, and many can't write well. In a democracy that depends on well-informed voters, illiteracy presents a danger to the society as a whole, Hindman believes.

Freshmen at Mansfield who have special problems with reading and writing are required to take a remedial composition course designed to give them the skills they need just to survive in college. This course is followed by a regular college composition course in the freshman year and then the final composition course in the junior year. Highly qualified students can skip one or two of these courses, Hindman says, but he adds with a smile that every student at the college must take at least one composition course.

Hindman and Dr. Bernard Koloski, another English professor, recently participated in a conference on basic writing skills at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. The other conferees, Hindman says, "were astounded by our program. They didn't think they could ever get anything like it past their faculties. Our faculty must be pretty open-minded and far-sighted."

The problem of functional illiteracy is a serious one for America, Hindman believes. And he thinks a little old-fashioned discipline may go a long way toward solving the problem. "I don't believe in beating a person until he's got red welts across his back," he says, his blue eyes shining above his sandy beard, "but I think the person who does not acquire the habit of self-discipline is missing something valuable in life. Something that makes life pleasurable and fulfilling."

Honorary Fraternity Initiated

A chapter of Omicron Delta Kappa (ODK), a national honorary fraternity, was initiated recently at Mansfield.

Mansfield is the first college to be granted this honor in the Pennsylvania state college system. Twelve Mansfield students are members of ODK.

The honorary fraternity recognizes achievement in scholarship; athletics; social, service, and religious activities; campus government; journalism, speech, and the mass media; and creative and performing arts.

ODK is made up of distinguished students, faculty members and administrators. Membership qualifications are exemplary character, leadership, service to the campus, superior scholarship, fellowship, and high ideals.

Faculty secretary of Omicron Delta Kappa at Mansfield State College is Michael Leiboff, assistant professor in the Department of Speech, Communication and Theatre.

Students members are: Michelle Drenchko, Jean Nachtwey, Glenn Brumbach, Amy Kelchner, Dianne Leonard, Pat Cook, Sherry DeGenero, Kurt Henry, Lisa Messing, Cathy Flyte, Linda Dessalet, Bruce Benson.

Faculty and Administration members are: Dr. Donald C. Darnton, Michael Leiboff, Sandra Linck, Winifred Neff, Dr. Robert Swinsick, Richard Talbot.

MSC Presidential Candidates

Three candidates for the presidency of Mansfield State College were named by the college's Board of Trustees on Feb. 17.

The three are Dr. E. Alden Dunham, Dr. Michael Mendelsohn and Dr. Janet L. Travis. The Board did not rank the candidates in any order of preference.

The names of the candidates will be forwarded to Harrisburg, Pa., for consideration by the Board of State College and University Directors. The final choice of MSC's next president will be made by the Governor of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Dunham, 47, is program officer in higher education at both the Carnegie Corporation of New York and the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. He holds the A.B. degree from Princeton University, the M. A. T. degree from Harvard University, the Ed.D. degree from Columbia University, and the L.H.D. honorary degree from the California State University and College System.

From 1962 to 1966 he was director of admission at Princeton University where he overhauled that university's admission procedures. A resident of Princeton, N.J., he has a farm in Columbia Cross Roads, Pa. He has published two major reports and the book "Colleges of the Forgotten Americans — A Profile of State Colleges and Universities."

Dr. Mendelsohn, 48, is the provost — the senior officer next to the president — at the University of Tampa, in Florida. In that position, he has responsibility for academic programs, student affairs and athletics at the university. A resident of Tampa, he holds the B.A. degree from the University of Pittsburgh, the M.A. degree from Trinity University and the Ph.D. degree from the University of Colorado.

Dr. Mendelsohn joined the faculty at the United States Air Force Academy in 1962. In 1967 he became an assistant dean at the Academy and from 1969 to 1972 he was chairman of advanced courses in the Academy's Department of English. From 1972 to 1977 he was vice president for academic affairs and dean of faculties at the University of Tampa.

Dr. Travis, 43, is provost with responsibility for academic affairs at Northern Kentucky University where she is also a professor of philosophy. She holds the A.B. degree in geology, and both the M.A. degree and the Ph.D. degree in philosophy. She took all three degrees at Boston University.

In 1968 she joined the faculty at the University of Nevada, becoming an assistant professor in 1969 and an associate professor in 1972. From 1969 to 1974 she was department chairman at that university. From 1974 to 1977 she served on the philosophy faculty and she was dean of the College of Humanities and Fine Arts at the University of Northern Iowa. She is listed in the Directory of American Scholars. She currently resides in Lakeside Park, Ky.

The MSC Board of Trustees chose the three candidates from a field of five submitted by the college's presidential search committee. The committee included members of the Board of Trustees, MSC faculty members, students, alumni and administrators. The committee considered over 120 applications and nominations for the college presidency.

MSC's new president is expected to assume his or her duties at the college by July, 1979.

Dr. Donald C. Darnton has been interim president at MSC since August 1977 when President Lawrence Park was transferred to become interim president of Slippery Rock State College. Darnton had been vice president for academic affairs at MSC.

Rural Involvement Brings Results

The Mansfieldian, March, 1979 — 3

"Pennsylvania has more people living in rural areas than any other state," according to Dr. Peter Keller, chairman of the Psychology Department. "Life in the country is supposed to be idyllic. But rural areas have their own particular problems."

Mansfield's graduate program in Rural Community Psychology was designed to help address some of these problems. The objective of the program is to train mental health practitioners with a sensitivity to the unique characteristics and needs of rural areas. Interest in the program, in terms of requests for applications, has doubled each year since its inception in 1975.

The course of study came about because of faculty involvement with mental health services in the area surrounding Mansfield. Keller and other faculty members identified the need for a program to produce psychologists with broadly based training.

The curriculum involves courses in clinical techniques as well as community evaluation, and includes a four month internship. Emphasis is placed on the special demands related to practicing in rural surroundings.

"Professionals work in comparative isolation in rural areas. They don't have the feedback, support, and specialized services that urban work surroundings can offer," Keller explains, "and program requirements are different. We must think more in terms of small, mobile programs to get the services to a widely dispersed population."

Mansfield has been attracting students from as far away as Illinois and South Dakota. Even though rural areas have been experiencing a population increase since 1970, there are only four other graduate psychology programs in the U.S. with a rural emphasis.

Graduates have found a great variety of positions in mental health administration, court psychology, private practice, and psychiatric outreach projects.

Providing support for people already working in rural social services is as important as training new rural specialists, according to Mr. Laurance Miller of the Department of Sociology and Social Work. Miller and Keller have been instrumental in forming the Association for Rural Human Services Providers.

Before joining the MSC faculty in 1978, Miller was director of a mental health clinic in Wellsboro. He became frustrated with regulations intended for high density city neighborhoods and decided to find out if other social service workers were having the same problems.

Miller offers as examples: "Because our transportation costs to reach clients were high, my regional office instructed me to have my employees use public transit. It never occurred to them that there was no public transit here . . . Government medical assistance will only pay for group therapy if there are six people in the group. I never had more than four in one place . . . We receive the same amount of funding per person as a clinic in downtown Pittsburgh. However, it costs us much more to see people because of the distances involved."

Keller and Miller worked together on the idea, and they received a grant from the Pennsylvania Educational Services Trust Fund to continue the project. In November 1978, a meeting of sixty representatives from a broad range of social service agencies in the Northern Tier was held at MSC. The gathering resulted in creation of the Association for Rural Human Services Providers.

The purpose of the organization is to try to effect a change in legislation to consider the needs of rural areas, and to provide workshops and training relevant to rural areas.

At a January meeting, the scope of the organization was expanded to include other rural areas of the state. Other state colleges have been asked by the Association to host regional meetings.

Annual Giving Extended

The Annual Giving Campaign for this year has been extended through June 30, 1979. In the past, Annual Giving ran from January to December, but the extension will put the campaign on a fiscal year schedule. This will be an advantage to the College, which receives the Annual Giving Funds, because support from the campaign can now be tied more closely to the College budget.

The Mansfield Foundation will be dispensing the contributions received in this drive beginning July 1, 1979. Annual Giving Funds support programs which would otherwise not exist, because the college budget has been cut by the state to a "bare bones" condition.

Annual Giving does make a difference in the quality of education at MSC. Any amount of money is appreciated and can be put to work as of July 1, 1979.

If you already gave last year, this extension gives you the opportunity to move up to the next club level. For example, if you have already contributed $50, another gift of that same amount before June 30 will move you from the Benefactor's Club to the Founder's Club.

If the latest request for Annual Giving support has not yet found its way to your mailbox, it should arrive soon. Please keep in mind that the flexible funds available to MSC on a recurring basis through Annual Giving are crucial to the continued success of Mansfield State College.

In order that present and future students may have the same advantages offered to past generations, please send your contribution now to: The Mansfield Foundation, P.O. Box 431, Mansfield, Pa. 16933.

Debbie East Meets Debbie West

Whoever said "East is East and West is West and never the twain shall meet" obviously hadn't heard about Debbie Eastman and Debbie Westin.

The two college coeds come from opposite ends of Pennsylvania. Yes, Debbie Eastman comes from the east and Debbie Westin comes from the west. But geography has not kept the twain apart. In fact, far from being opposites, the girls are close friends who have more similarities than differences.

The strongest proof that east and west have finally met is that the girls now live in the same place — in fact, in the same room. They are college roommates at Mansfield.

But that's just the beginning of their similarities. The girls have the same first name. They even have the same middle name (Debbie E. spells it "Anne" while Debbie W. spells it "Ann"). Both girls are juniors and both are home economics students.

Both Debbies work at the college radio station. Debbie E. is a disc jockey, Debbie W. does a news show. When they work at the station, it is only natural for them to wear special T-shirts, one with "East" printed on the back, one with "West" on the back.

The girls have their dorm room arranged so that all of Debbie Eastman's things are on the east side and all of Debbie Westin's things are on the west side. They say that their names, written on a card on their door, make people break out laughing.

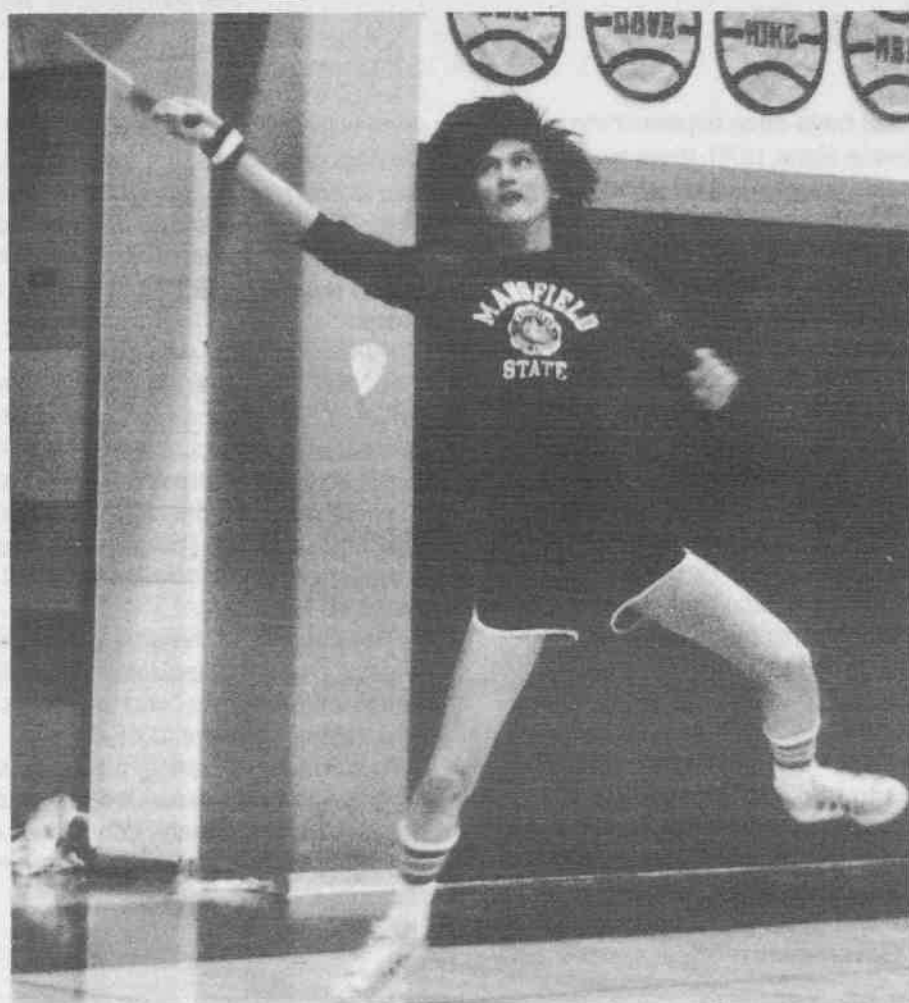

Finally, the Debbies say that — purely by coincidence, of course — when they recently got ready for a dance they were both going to, they discovered they had bought identical dress patterns.

And what about the future? Debbie Westin, who comes from Pittsburgh in western Pennsylvania, says she wants to be a family counselor, perhaps on the East Coast. Debbie Eastman, who comes from Catasauqua, 20 miles from Pennsylvania's eastern border, says she wants to teach, but not nearby. "I'd like to go West," she says, "somewhere beyond the Mississippi."

DEBBIE WESTIN, left, and DEBBIE EASTMAN point out their home towns on a map of Pennsylvania.

Badminton ace DAVID TAN, a student at Mansfield.

David Tan — Badminton Wizard

You're the best in your sport in the region. Maybe you are one of the best college players in the country.

So you're a big sports star. Right?

Not if you're David Tan, a Mansfield student and outstanding badminton player from Malaysia.

Badminton? It's one of the major sports of Malaysia. "To us, it's like football," Tan says, "something that everyone plays." But in the United States, badminton doesn't attract quite as much attention as, say, the Super Bowl.

Tan doesn't let this get him down, however. And he finds that between making American friends and studying for his courses, he still has time to play a little of his astonishing brand of badminton.

The kind of badminton Tan plays bears no resemblance to the dainty game Americans play in their backyards or at family picnics. His smash is so fast, you can't even see the shuttlecock for the first few feet. He ranges the court with amazingly quick reflexes. He presses forward, constantly on the attack.

"I think a lot when I play badminton," Tan says. "Each time I serve, I think of what I'm going to do. I think about my placement. I try to get my opponent off balance. I try to control him. Badminton is a game of control, of quickness."

"He blows his opponents off the court," says David Darby, a professor of Geography at MSC. Also a badminton player, Darby says he is awed by Tan's abilities. "No one in this area can hold a candle to him," Darby says, adding that he hopes Tan will be able to compete in many regional and even national tournaments while he's in the United States. In fact, Darby is so enthusiastic that he personally transported Tan to some recent tournaments.

Still, badminton hasn't made Tan a big sports celebrity — not yet, anyway.

Tan, whose Chinese name is Heng Lye, says he is looking forward to competing with the best American college players. Maybe that will come a year from now when he finishes his studies at Mansfield and goes on to engineering school.

In the meantime, Tan prowls the badminton court across from Dave Darby, Sterling Salter, (a counselor at MSC who is another one of his badminton victims), and a few other brave souls in the area. "He has simply great potential," Darby says. "Now if there were only some way for him to use it."

Mansfield Athletic Club Draws Runners Together

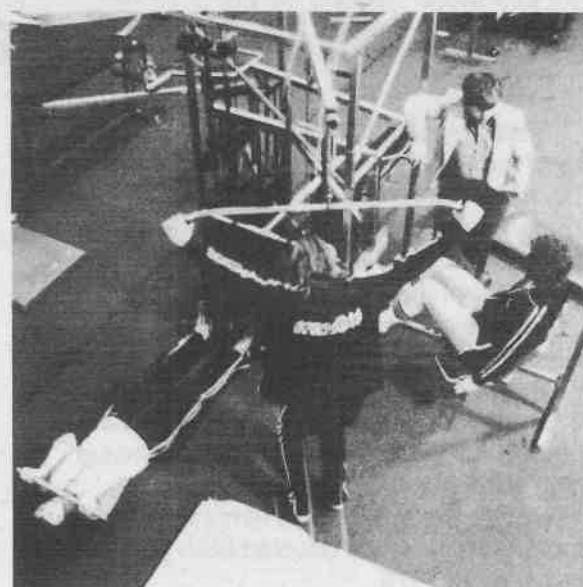

Running is a solitary experience for many enthusiasts, by circumstance rather than choice. But running is a little less lonely in the hills around Mansfield since the formation of the Mansfield Athletic Club.

The Club was organized by MSC Track Coach Ed Winrow and two area high school coaches "to promote cross country, track and field, and road race events involving amateur athletes of all ages." The MAC received Amateur Athletic Union approval in February 1978, and currently has 15 members plus several student athletes who represent the club.

"Sanction by the AAU is an important benefit for members because high school and collegiate athletic association memberships stop when a person leaves school," notes Winrow. "AAU status allows athletes to compete in district and national events from which they would usually be barred."

The MAC is in the Middle Atlantic District, which covers Pennsylvania east of Pittsburgh, and includes Philadelphia and part of New Jersey. Participating members can live anywhere in the district and represent Mansfield.

Winrow, a runner and coach whose fame extends far beyond Mansfield, was a third alternate in the marathon event for the American Olympic squad in 1968. He always makes himself available to runners who need help establishing a training program or improving their technique. As Secretary-Treasurer of the Club, he feels that the MAC had a successful first year. Members are receiving more in-

Coeds Use the Weights, Too

When people think of weight lifting, they usually think of men with tremendous biceps — huge men who pump iron to get into shape for football clashes or body building competitions. This is part of the weight lifting scene, but it isn't the whole story. Women are working out with the weights, too.

At Mansfield, women athletes are using the weight room as part of their athletic training.

Daisy Herndon coaches the varsity women's volleyball team. Body conditioning is an essential part of the training program she has devised for her team.

The Mansfield women players do a number of leg exercises to improve their jumping ability. Getting high up in the air is crucial for a volleyball player. Upper body and arm strength is also important for spiking and blocking shots, according to coach Herndon.

"The correct use of weights does not have to swell or distend your muscles," says Herndon. "Today, girls can get in top physical condition without looking like Amazons with bulging biceps."

According to Herndon, the presence of women has changed the atmosphere of the conditioning room. "The weight room of years past was a macho stronghold where spitting, strong language and slamming down the weights were the order of the day. Those guys were often doing more damage to their bodies than good," says Herndon.

"Today," she adds, "the men accept women in the conditioning room. The guys admire the woman who is willing to spend the time and put up with the pain needed to get good results."

formation on local and national events, and cooperative planning cuts down on travel expenses for members, especially to distant events.

MAC members were also instrumental in planning the ten-mile "Beautiful Race" and two-mile "Fun Run" which were popular events at last year's State Laurel Festival in Wellsboro. The Laurel Festival Committee will sponsor the races again this year.

The MAC's greatest benefit for its members is summarized in Winrow's "voice of experience" as an athlete: "When you need support, you need a group to draw on . . . If you run a race and get a personal best time, but don't know a soul at the finish line, there's no one to share it with. When you finish any endeavor, the only ones who understand your achievement are the ones who have worked with you."

Summer Programs

Two Sessions And Some Lower Rates

With the price of almost everything soaring these days, MSC has some welcome news for non-Pennsylvanians.

A reduction in tuition for out-of-state students is the highlight of the 1979 Summer Sessions. The out-of-state rate will be the same as that charged to Pennsylvania residents. All summer school students will now pay $39 per undergraduate credit, and $51 for graduate credit.

The graduate rate reduction will be permanent, with all graduate students paying $51 per credit year round.

This policy change will go into effect at all 14 state colleges, for the purpose of attracting more students from other states. Mansfield is expected to benefit more than many of the other campuses because of its proximity to the state border.

Two summer sessions will again be held this year. The first will run for three weeks, from June 11 to 29. The six week session will run from July 2 to August 10. For a while it had appeared that budget considerations would eliminate one of the summer sessions, but by dropping some of the smaller courses, expenses have been minimized.

In addition to a full slate of regular course offerings, two off-campus courses are scheduled. The Study Tour in England for graduate education students will observe the British open education movement. For undergraduates, Camp Daddy Allen will provide an opportunity to work with handicapped children for three weeks at an Easter Seal camp.

Workshops to be offered in Art include: Drawing, Vaporization Casting, Stained Glass, and Teaching Methods in Art.

Music workshops will be: The Kodaly Method, taught by Aden Lewis; teaching music at middle school and junior high levels, taught by Michael Bennett; and a national Percussion Symposium featuring four workshops.

Health and Physical Education workshops will be held in First Aid and Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR); and Women in Sports—Requirements of Title 9.

All of the above workshops will carry academic credit.

Summer school students can again take advantage of free day care for their children between the ages of 3 and 10 while the parent attends class.

A non-credit band camp for high school students in grades nine through twelve is scheduled for July 8 to 22.

For more information about summer sessions, contact the Summer Sessions Office in Alumni Hall.

Homesteaders Festival: Country Living Skills

This year's Homesteaders Festival, scheduled for July 18 to 21 at Mansfield, will highlight three families representing different types of "back to the earth" lifestyles. Modern homesteading in the U. S. is a flexible concept, a fact which will be emphasized by the featured homesteaders who run the gamut from a young couple trying to establish themselves outside of the mainstream of society, to a fully self-sufficient community composed of several families.

The Festival provides a "hands on" learning experience for people of any age who would like to learn the necessary skills to live more self-sufficiently. Last summer's four-day event attracted participants from twelve states.

Extensive formal instruction will be available in areas of food production and preserving, building construction, and energy alternatives.

Homesteading is not without it's financial concerns, and many types of home businesses will be presented as ways of earning necessary income.

After a long day of learning, aspiring homesteaders will be able to spend the evening square dancing, watching films, or visiting local gardens and homesteads, among other leisurely pursuits.

Honors Program Offers a Challenge

Sitting at a crowded and somewhat disorganized desk, the professor exults, "The sign of life is growth! For anything to stay alive, it must grow!" Dr. George Sefler, Chairman of the Philosophy Department, makes no attempt to disguise his enthusiasm for the Honors Program begun recently at Mansfield. "It is something new, dynamic, and alive for the students."

Sefler, along with Dr. Robertson Dilg of the History Department, taught the first section of Honors Humanities during the fall semester. Fourteen other members of the college faculty also participated, lecturing in their specialties.

The six credit course took an interdisciplinary approach to literature, philosophy, history, art, and music, covering a time span from Greek civilization to the Renaissance. "The interdisciplinary approach emphasizes that the human experience does not come pre-packaged," explains Sefler, "and it gives the students exposure to the expertise of many faculty members in one course."

Professors for the spring semester, which runs from Hamlet to Stravinsky, are Dr. Larry Uffelman of the English Department and Dr. Raymond Paskvan from History.

The program had its origins in a proposal circulated by Dr. David Peltier, Dean of Graduate Studies, more than two years ago. The Faculty Council acted on the proposal and elected an Honors Advisory Council, which formulated the structure of the program.

Last summer, a letter of invitation was sent to forty entering freshmen selected because of their academic achievement in high school and scores on college entrance exams. Ten of those ultimately accepted, and became the first Honors Humanities students.

The Humanities course is taken instead of some of the "General Education" courses required of all freshmen.

On the drawing board for next fall is a Social Sciences Honors course, following a similar format to Humanities. An Honors Natural Sciences course and a Senior Seminar in Contemporary Problems are also possibilities for sometime in the future.

Why is an honors program important to Mansfield? Dr. Peltier feels that it will benefit the college in several ways. "Recruiting very talented students will be easier if we can offer programs that have traditionally existed only in private schools. In an era of shrinking college populations, Mansfield needs identification as an institution that is interested in quality students. And an honors program could serve to revitalize the entire academic program here, because the new ideas and teaching approaches that tend to come out of an honors program will filter down to the institution as a whole," he enumerates.

Mansfield recently hosted consultants from honors programs at Temple University, Villanova University, and Morgan State College in Maryland. The college also hopes to send a representative to the Northeast Regional Honors Convention in Syracuse on March 30.

The New York Times recently detailed the popularity of honors programs in public institutions around the country. "But to my knowledge, ours is the first honors program in the state college system in Pennsylvania," states Sefler.

Program coordinators for the event are Dr. William Beisel, Dean of Continuing Education, and Dr. Robert Johnson and Mr. Kenneth Musselman of the MSC faculty.

Beisel encourages family participation at the Homesteaders Festival. Many families were numbered among the participants last year.

Inquiries have been received from all over the U. S. about the Festival. The Homesteaders drew national attention to Mansfield in 1978, when CBS News covered the event.

For complete information on the Homesteaders Festival, contact Beisel in Continuing Education.

Elderhostel Invites Senior Citizens

A low cost, educational summer program for people over 60, Elderhostel promises to be an intellectual adventure at Mansfield this summer.

Three separate one week sessions will be held: July 8-14, July 15-21, and July 22-28. Each week, three non-credit courses, taught by regular college faculty, will be offered. There are no exams, no grades, and no homework. "We assume that the students know nothing about the subject," affirms Mr. Fred Piellusch, Elderhostel coordinator at Mansfield, "so no formal education is necessary. Just come with an interest in learning."

Participants in Elderhostel at Mansfield will be able to choose from such offerings as "Joy of Singing", "India Today", or "Literature: 1950's to 1970's". They can take one, two or all three courses offered during the weekly session.

Total cost for one week, including course fees, dormitory room, and all meals is only $75. This low rate is possible because a grant from the Pa. Department of Education and the Pa. Office of the Aging underwrites part of the Elderhostel expenses.

Piellusch urges older alumni, as well as the general public, to take part in this educational experience. People under 60 can, of course, give their parents a "scholarship" for a week of Elderhosteling. A husband and wife are both eligible as long as one of them is 60 or over.

Elderhostel is new in Pennsylvania, but has been operating in many other states for several years. Last summer was the first time Elderhostel was offered at Mansfield, with more than 50 people attending.

To get started on this adventure, contact Piellusch in the Geography Department for details on Mansfield's program.

MSC Graduate Still Clowning Around

WILLIAM "RED" WALTERS

William "Red" Walters is still up to his old tricks — making people laugh — just as he did when attending Mansfield State College from 1953 to 1957.

"I like to make people happy," he says, and he laughs as he adds, "That's what life is really about; and, believe me, laughter is a great common denominator."

Walters, who lives in Danville, CA., is western regional manager for the Oneida Silver Company. But, after hours, he paints his face, adds a big red nose, dons the tattered rags and out-sized shoes of a tramp clown and entertains audiences as a member of the Ahmes Temple clown unit.

There is more to being a clown than just a red bulbous nose and a few tricks. Each clown tries to develop his own unique costume and character. And Walters explains that his "Rags" creation is a tramp clown with a frown, who is very, very sad — so sad that people laugh, and laugh.

A clown for only the last three and a half years, Walters won first prize in the 1977 clown competition in Reno, NV, hosted by the Western Shrine Association. In 1978, in Hawaii, he came in second in the tramp competition but took first in the individual competition against all other categories.

He was once given a chance to turn professional when American Shows offered him a circus job. He turned it down because, he says, if he were a professional it would become just a job and not be fun anymore.

"I perform in hospitals, in parades and at Shrine circuses and I often do skits with other clowns. You really have to work at it and think fast. It is not all that easy to make people laugh."

Walters joined the navy in 1949 and spent four years in Korea before he entered Mansfield. After graduation he taught school in Troy, PA, for several years before becoming affiliated with the Oneida Company. He has lived in Pennsylvania, Florida, Ohio and for the last nine years in California.

Walters is having a rare good time in his role as "Rags". He says he agrees completely with the philosophy of Will Rogers who said, "I am only here for a spell so I aim to get all the good laughs that I can."

And, he does.

Band Day at Mansfield State College

Band Day at Mansfield State College, on October 28th, was the biggest ever at the college. Nineteen high school bands from New York and Pennsylvania came to compete in the college's Homecoming Parade.

The bands also participated in a "massed bands" exhibition at halftime of the Homecoming football game. Directed by Richard Talbot, the Mansfield State College Mountie Marching Band and the high school students joined in a stirring performance.

Nearly 1600 high school students participated. Over 1200 were musicians and 400 were majorettes, pompom girls and members of colorguards, rifle drill teams and flag drill teams.

Talbot started Band Day at the college in 1971 and has been organizing the now-traditional event ever since. Talbot says, "Our Band Day is the only place in the region where the smaller bands can compete with bands their own size. The event gets bigger every year."

Talbot was pleased to see eight Mansfield State College alumni with degrees in music return to the college leading their own bands. These alumni included Brian S. Story, '78, of Prattsburg Central High School, John A. Buchanan, '72, of Elkland High School, Barry Peters, '79, of Hammondsport Central High School, Lynn J.

Sheldon, '65, of Dundee High School, Bill Berresford, '69, of Mansfield High School, Theron D. Cooley, '74, of Sayre High School, Theodore Bown, '74, of Canton High School, and David W. Cross, '78, of Millville High School.

In the competition, the Hammondsport Band, directed by Peters, received first place for bands of over 60 members. The Canton High School Band, directed by Ted Bown, was awarded first place for bands of 60 members or under.

FIFTY-ONE MILES TO RUSSIA

Ellsworth McCarthy, '38, was riding home from his work in Anchorage, AL, on a March evening, with snow transforming a goodly portion of the country's 600,000 square miles of landscape into a post-card winter scene.

Suddenly, buildings crumbled, streets cracked open with fissures measuring 6' by 100' and the 1964 Alaskan earthquake shook the land along a 500-mile "volcanic arc".

McCarthy says it was "quite an experience" to be in the midst of the most powerful quake ever recorded in North America, and that the tremors lasted for two weeks and it took the city a month to get underway again. Today Anchorage is the fastest-growing major city in America.

In 1946 McCarthy became a classroom teacher in Fairbanks, AL, and served as a school principal from 1947 until 1961 when he went to the central office of the Fairbanks School District as Director of Personnel. Meantime he received a master's degree in administration from Pennsylvania State University in 1954, coming back in the summers for graduate work.

In 1963 he went with the state department as an area supervisor of schools in North-western Alaska where Anchorage was the district office. In 1964 he was appointed Administrative Assistant and Director of Personnel for all Alaskan rural schools and in 1970 was involved in the "transition native program" which he says involved bringing kids into the cities and boarding them to prepare them for high school and for living in urban areas.

McCarthy retired to Fairbanks in 1971 but when the famous Alaska pipeline and the population influx came along, he was asked to come back as coordinator of construction in the school district and he helped plan, build and equip four schools in the ensuing two and one half years.

In 1975 McCarthy finally retired, but only from the educational field. In 1973 he had purchased an old river boat, built in 1932, 237 feet long, named the "Nenana" - a stern-wheeler that had plied the Yukon River with freight and passengers. He moored it in a moat in a Fairbanks park and turned it into a restaurant and a night-club with a dining area seating 150 people. This he plans to sell in the near future to spend more time traveling. This is his 34th year in Alaska but part of each year has been spent in travel.

McCarthy has become a true Alaskan citizen, and he is a member of the prestigious "Pioneers of Alaska", an organization which requires 30 years of residency for membership. He is also president of the Fairbanks Lions Club for the second year, president of the North Star Council on Aging and steward at the Elks Club.

In 1958 McCarthy was named Alaska's outstanding principal by Encyclopedia Britannica after a state-wide poll. He is the only Alaskan so honored to date. In 1959 he was the commencement speaker at Mansfield State College and he has also served as president of the college alumni association.

"Alaska," he says, "is an unusual place, only 51 miles from Russia, a great land mass with three time-belts from east to west." Distances are great and it can be extremely cold. To visit the rural schools he used small chartered planes. The coldest temperature he experienced was 70 degrees below zero in Fairbanks in 1961.

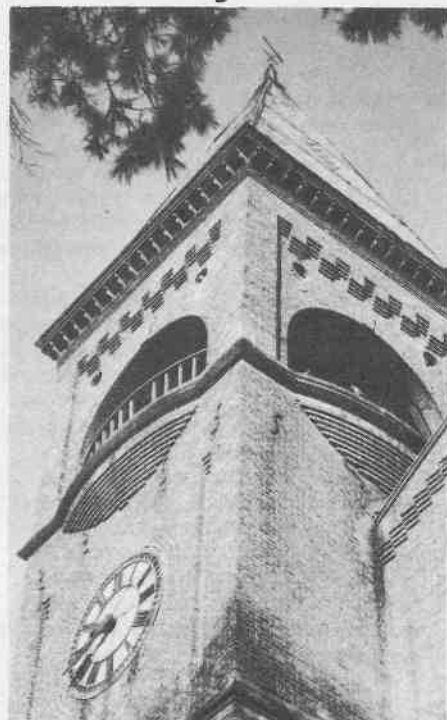

One of the greatest problems living in such a climate is the ice-fog when particles of moisture freeze and literally hang in the air and obscure vision. It is difficult to move a car in such temperatures for tires freeze and there is no traction.

Prices in Alaska, he says, are one third higher than in the other states but salaries are commensurate with prices. Apartments in Fairbanks, for instance, rent for around $400 per month. He also mentions that Fairbanks has the northernmost international airport on the continent and that the famous Alaska Highway (formerly called Alcan) extends from Dawson Creek in British Columbia to Fairbanks, a distance of 1,523 miles. McCarthy has driven the Alaska Highway 47 times since its opening.

"Alaska is a great place," states McCarthy. "I was fortunate to be there at the right time in its history for such interesting educational experiences. At two cents per acre in 1867, it was a whale of a good investment for the United States."

The Way it Was

Alumni Hall with its landmark tower was completed in 1886. The clock was installed in 1907.

The campus model school was started in 1863 and was located in South Hall, then the only building on campus. The campus Junior High School closed in 1959 and the Elementary School in 1966.

The old clock in the tower of Alumni Hall was financed by the school and the alumni and struck its first note on March 15, 1907, at exactly 4 p.m. The total cost — $800.

It is believed that Harry Peterson who graduated from the college in 1896 was the first black person to graduate from Mansfield. According to people who knew him, he later went to Salamanca, NY, and then to New Jersey where he worked as a mail clerk on trains. He returned for Alumni Day for the last time about 1939.

A familiar scene in the reception room of North Hall. Will someone please identify the individuals pictured?

One of the best sources of the history of MSC since 1926 is the collection of Flashlights now in the college archives. They are due to be microfilmed in the near future to further preserve the material. However, there are numerous missing issues in the years from 1926-1945, and especially in the years 1927-28-29.

If any alumni have such items and would care to donate them to the archives their contributions would be greatly appreciated.

Recent donors of material to the archives include:

Alumni Association Needs Help

Tom Allis, '57, is president of the Philadelphia Alumni Club, one of Mansfield's most active clubs. As a dentist in suburban Philadelphia, Allis has as little free time as any of MSC's 14,000 alumni. But he has a very positive reason for devoting some of that scarce time to helping his Alma Mater: "I couldn't have become what I am today without the education that I received at Mansfield. I owe MSC a debt of gratitude, so I do what I can to help."

Many alumni have expressed an interest in helping the college through the Alumni Association. Alumni support in fund raising and recruitment of new students is of major importance to every college. Time and money donated by alumni help to maintain high educational standards and reasonable tuition fees.

MSC is now in the process of expanding and strengthening its Alumni Association, which dates back to 1871. Over the past few years, the Alumni Affairs Office has been compiling a computerized record of all Mansfield alumni. An Alumni Directory was published in 1978 from the information gathered, but the current whereabouts of almost one-third of the alumni are still unknown. Better alumni communication would benefit both the graduates and the college. But keeping track of 14,000 people and regularly supplying them with information about Alumni Association efforts is no simple task.

Since 1976, the Alumni Association has been working to set up a system to organize alumni efforts and solve the communications problems. Alumni Clubs and Class Agents are the answer.

One alumnus from each class is needed to serve as a Class Agent. Responsibilities would include corresponding with classmates to maintain accurate address records. Class agents could also organize the Annual Giving Campaign for the class, and take charge of disseminating information on reunions, Alumni Day, and Homecoming.

Alumni Clubs give graduates the chance to enjoy social contacts with other alumni in their area, and at the same time provide necessary support for MSC on a regional basis. Alumni can recruit in their area by representing the college at high school career nights, and by talking to prospective students and their parents about opportunities at Mansfield. Clubs can also conduct telethons in their region for information, lobbying and fund raising purposes.

The Alumni Affairs Office can provide computerized lists of alumni living in a region to start or expand an Alumni Club. Help in organizing a club will also be provided if necessary.

Alumni living in Philadelphia, Harrisburg, or Southern Tier of New York can join existing clubs by contacting the following people:

Philadelphia—Tom Allis, 1753 Hamilton Dr., Valley Forge, Pa. 19481 or Mrs. Elsie Burk ('15), 107 E. Greenwood Ave., Lansdowne, Pa. 19050.

Harrisburg—Joel ('69) and Ardith Bridges ('69) Griffing, 408 Golf Club Ave., Dillsburg, Pa. 17019.

Southern Tier—Ron ('62) and Jane Thomas ('64) Good, 3454 Baldwin Rd., Wellsville, N.Y. 14895 or J. Michael ('66) and Linda Rhodes ('67) Brace, R.D. #1, Whitney Valley Heights, Almond, N.Y. 14804.

Alumni in other areas who want to start a club can get information and address lists from J. Paul McMillen at the Development/Alumni Affairs Office.

The annual meeting of the Philadelphia Club is open to all alumni, and could be an excellent resource for MSC graduates hoping to start clubs in other regions. It will be held Friday, April 20, at Stouffer's Valley Forge Hotel. Rod Kelchner, Dean of Students at MSC, will be the featured speaker at the dinner-and-dancing affair. Dr. Donald Damton, Interim President, and J. Paul McMillen, Director of Development, will also represent the college.

Alumni Clubs and Class Agents operate under the direction of the Board of the Alumni Association, which is the policy-making body. At this time, the Board has a particular need for more input from graduates. Alumni interested in serving on the Board should contact J. Paul McMillen for further information.

An active Alumni Association which is responsive to the needs of the college and of its members can only be built through increased participation by alumni. Input is needed from as many constituencies as possible to make the Alumni Association representative of the wide range of Mansfield graduates.

CLASS OF 1909

Lillian Heyler Dutter of Wilmington, DE, celebrated her 90th birthday on February 4th with a party held in her honor by her family. She also received mementoes and a congratulatory message from the Alumni Office in recognition of her status as one of the oldest living alumni of the college. Her daughter writes that Mrs. Dutter is very proud of being an alumna of Mansfield and is very much interested in the progress and growth of her alma mater.

CLASS OF 1928

Bernice Lamb Hargan retired from teaching in 1969 after 22 years in the Westfield (PA) school system and then renewed her career by teaching five more years in a Troupsburg, NY, elementary school. She is active in church affairs and is a talented ceramist. Bernice is the granddaughter of Fred Lamb, an early Tioga County settler in Lamb's Creek, PA, a town now entirely displaced by the new Tioga-Hammond Dam. A relative recently informed the alumni office that in November Bernice suffered a stroke but is recovering rapidly. Her address is 131 High Street, Westfield, PA.

Jarius Gavitt was on the Board of Editors of the first Flashlight published at Mansfield State College in 1926. He taught school in Sullivan County, PA, for 13 years, most of them as supervising principal of the consolidated system at Lopez, PA. Jarius served in the army for four years and attained the rank of colonel. In 1947 he acquired an interest in a real estate business and was vice-president until he sold his interest and retired in 1975. He writes that his family has a home on the beautiful Cheat River in West Virginia, where he gardens, fishes and enjoys nature. The Gavitts live on Rte. 1 in Rowlesburg, WV.

Catherine Challenger Blehl of Lemont, PA has retired after a teaching career of 15 years. She spent three years in the WAVES (now Lt. USNR Ret.), went back to school on the GI bill and received a master's degree from Pennsylvania State University. Catherine writes that she is active in volunteer work and gardening and enjoys reading and traveling.

CLASS OF 1929

Howard Burr retired in 1977 as a field engineer for the United States government after having spent 40 years in heavy construction and engineering. After graduating Howard worked in various places in Pennsylvania for the Pennsylvania Highway Department and in 1946 went to Arizona, accrued enough credits to pass the Colorado State Board of Registration for Professional Engineers and went to work for the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation. As an engineer and supervisor of construction, he worked on various projects, one of them the Upper Colorado River Storage Project, and also supervised electrical lines and substations.

He says his hobbies, now that he has time for them, are photography and woodworking. Mary Hinman Burr, '30 worked for some time for the Veteran's Administration but since becoming a resident of Colorado calls herself a "homemaker". The Burrs live at 3223 W. Redfield Road, Phoenix, AZ.

CLASS OF 1931

Merrill Brodrick retired in 1971 from his position in the Pennsylvania State Department of Agriculture as an assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture from 1963 to 1971. Previously he ran the family purebred live-stock farm, served as an auctioneer and sold real estate. Merrill is a past member of the Mansfield State College Board of Trustees where he served for several years in the early 1950s. Two of the four children in the Brodrick family, Kathryn Brodrick Knowles, '69 and Marjorie Brodrick Rex, '58 are Mansfield graduates.

CLASS OF 1932

Louise Jerald Bush is retired and living at 3875 Tuskegee Drive in Lantana, FL. Previously Louise was a 20-year resident of New Jersey and taught school there for a period of five years. She writes that her hobby is "reading — menus, recipes and cook books."

CLASS OF 1933

Theodore Besanceney was the Mansfield High School principal from 1957 until his retirement in 1973. He received a master's degree from Bucknell University. Before coming to Mansfield in 1946 as a teacher and coach, he taught school in Sullivan Township and at Camptown, PA., and was school principal at Genesee, PA. Ted is currently an elected supervisor of Richmond Township, a director of the Tioga County Fair Board, a member of the Tioga County Sanitation Committee and the chairman of the Tioga County Conservation District. Erdene Incho Besanceney, '37, was a teacher for 12 years in the Wellsboro (PA) Junior High School, and she also retired in 1973. In 1966 the Besanceneys built a home on the scenic West Gate Road near Mansfield where they pursue their hobbies of gardening and antiques. Each summer they attend a basketball camp in Delaware operated by Tom McMillen and Richard Miller '64, where Ted is a staff member.

CLASS OF 1940

Richard W. Marvin, retired superintendent of the Athens (PA) School District, has announced his candidacy for Bradford County (PA) Commissioner. He was superintendent at Athens from 1957 to 1977 and during that time watched the enrollment grow from 1850 to 3900 in peak years. He is a member of several educational organizations and of the Sayre Sportsmen's Club and has always been active in sports as a coach and as a participant, having been a pitcher in the minor leagues for the St. Louis Browns and the Chicago Cubs. Richard and his family reside in Sayre, PA, R.D. 2, Box 49.

Robert C. Smith is the director of testing at Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton, FL. Mary E. Harris Smith, '40, is a librarian in the Palm Cove Beach school at Pompano Beach. The Smiths live at 905 S.E. 11th St. in Deerfield Beach, FL.

CLASS OF 1942

John W. Pyle received a master's degree in music education from Ithaca College in 1952. After teaching in Mt. Jewett for four years, he moved to the Stroudsburg School District where he is now head of the music department. He is planning on retiring in June of 1979. Doris Eichelberger Pyle '43, has been a kindergarten teacher for 30 years, in Mt. Jewett and Stroudsburg and John writes that he often sees Wendell Hallen '28, a fellow musician and also a Stroudsburg resident.

CLASS OF 1947

Willard Moyle has lived in Rochester, for the last 20 years where he is self-employed and involved in radio-TV advertising and radio programming. He is a jazz producer for radio programs by Count Baise, Woody Herman, Stan Kenton and other notables. These are audio-taped and syndicated primarily for use in colleges and public radio. Willard came to Mansfield in 1939, was Mansfield's first draftee in World War II and later returned to the campus to graduate in 1947. In 1941 he wrote a song "One Red Rose" which was accepted by Tommy Dorsey and played on a national broadcast. Willard says that the song was written for his wife, Martha Danneker Moyle, '41, who is presently a home economist and decorator for Monroe Cherry House in Rochester. The Moyles have four children and live at 159 Hampshire Drive.

CLASS OF 1948

Patrick J. Cunningham of Springfield, VA, was the recipient in 1975 of a rather unusual honor when the Woodson High School football field was named the Pat Cunningham Stadium. Pat has been associated with the Fairfax (VA) schools for 27 years as a physical education teacher, athletic coach and director of student activities and from 1976 to the present as Human Relations Specialist. He received a master's degree in 1949 from George Peabody College, TN. He has been active in local, state and regional athletic affairs and has won many awards for service and his contribution to Virginia athletic programs. Constance Nares Cunningham is a 1947 graduate. The Cunninghams have four children and live at 6811 Darby Lane in Springfield.

CLASS OF 1952

Dr. Robert Mitstifer is the Executive Director of Blast, Intermediate Unit #17. He received a master's degree and doctorate, both in educational administration in 1956 and 1971 respectively, from Pennsylvania

State University. Previous to his present appointment he served as a teacher, a high school principal and as assistant county superintendent in various Pennsylvania schools and was Assistant Executive Director of Blast, Unit #17, from 1971-78 when he became director. Dr. Mitstifer's educational experience includes local and state conferences, laboratory institutes, and learning programs. He is a member of several educational organizations and has served on an evaluation team for the Middle States Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. Dr. Dorothy Irwin Mitstifer, '54, is National Executive Secretary of Kappa Omicron Phi, national home economics honorary society and has been involved in implementing and developing leadership workshops across the nation. During the past year she also served as consultant to the Pennsylvania Bureau of Vocational Education. Dr. Dorothy Mitstifer received a master's and a doctor's degree in Home Economics Education from Pennsylvania State University in 1972 and 1976 respectively. Her teaching experience includes sessions at MSC as well as at many other colleges and workshops. She has served as consultant, leader, development specialist and facilitator in many places in the United States. She is a member of several home economics and vocational associations. The Mitstifers have two sons and live at 1411 Lafayette Parkway in Williamsport, PA.

Frank M. Michanowicz is the principal of the Livorno (Italy) American Elementary School and lives in Pisa, Italy, where the famous Leaning Tower was the scene of some of Galileo's experiments. Frank is employed by DODDSEUR, the Department of Defense Dependents School Europe, which last year included 211 schools and well over 100,000 students. Frank received a master's degree in 1955 from George Peabody College and since has served in DODDSEUR schools in Paris, France; in Ansbach and Nuernberg, Germany; in Vicenza, Italy; and now in Livorno. He says that his 23 years abroad have been most rewarding with many opportunities for travel. Frank recently received a special certificate from the Defense Department in recognition of his outstanding performance rating for the school year of 1977-78. He has also been a member of a recruiting team with the Defense Department, recruiting teachers for overseas schools, and has developed a "Snow Class" program which is designed for interchange of cultures between American and Italian youngsters. Frank was also instrumental in arranging for Denise Bell, an MSC senior, to live with an Italian family last summer and teach English to two children. He hopes to extend that program to include more students this next summer.

Emily Borck Schwab is in her ninth year of teaching for the Rochester City School District. She received a master's degree in elementary education in 1970 from SUNY, Brockport, NY. Dr. Janet L. Travis Assumes Presidency

"I believe that the resources exist to move Mansfield State College and the region forward into a very bright future," says Dr. Janet L. Travis, who became the President of Mansfield State College on July 1, 1979. Dr. Travis is Mansfield's 21st president, and the first woman president in the history of the Pennsylvania system of state-owned colleges.

Prior to her appointment by Governor Richard Thornburgh, Dr. Travis was provost at the University of Northern Kentucky. From 1974 to 1977, she was dean of the College of Humanities and Fine Arts at the University of Northern Iowa. Dr. Travis also served as chairperson of the philosophy department at the University of Nevada.

Mansfield's new president earned her bachelor's degree in geology, and she earned both a master of arts degree and the Ph.D. in philosophy, all at Boston University. She has published scholarly papers in such journals as the prestigious "Philosophy of Science."

Dr. Travis says she is interested in continuing to do research in her specialty which is the philosophy of biological sciences. Horticulture is another of her interests, and a greenhouse has recently been constructed behind the President's House for her use in raising orchids.

Chosen from among 120 applicants for the presidency, Dr. Travis succeeds Dr. Donald C. Darnton, who served as interim president for two years. He is now president of Missouri Southern State College in Joplin, Missouri.

Dr. Travis is optimistic about taking over the helm at Mansfield during a difficult time in the college's history. She says Mansfield will take immediate action to increase its enrollment and to eliminate its budget deficit. "We need to analyze the situation carefully and make the right decisions," she emphasizes.

Saying that some reductions in both faculty and non-faculty personnel may be necessary, Dr. Travis adds, "But we don't want to cut our resources in the wrong places. We're looking for ways to better utilize the resources we have. I'm also exploring the possibility of stepping up the grants program and the acquisition of funds from sources other than the state. We're not actualizing the possibilities which definitely do exist," she says.

On the subject of enrollment, the new president is developing a plan for making Mansfield State College better known among a wide variety of students throughout Pennsylvania and the surrounding states. She has already increased the staff in the admissions office and established a more aggressive stance toward recruitment. "I don't think the present enrollment pattern represents our real potential," she explains.

Dr. Travis views the college as an integral part of the community and she favors strengthening its role as a community resource. To have Mansfield help meet the manpower needs of the area, she would like to see the development of programs which utilize the resources of the region, for example, programs in small business methods, wildlife and resource management, and glass design. She would also like to see the introduction of a rural emphasis into some existing programs.

The college should lend its expertise to help local communities conduct research and seek grants to support community or joint college-community projects, she adds. Dr. Travis also mentions the possibility of using the college's exceptional computer capacity to meet regional needs.

Noting the lack of a television station, daily newspaper, or educational radio station in the Northern Tier, Dr. Travis feels that the college could also take part in developing these media for the region.

While Mansfield's curriculum has many strong areas now, Dr. Travis says it may be necessary to adjust some programs to appeal to the interests of contemporary students. Some examples of this are expanding the business and computer science programs, applying for federal grants for cooperative education (combined work experience and college study), or obtaining funding for a small business institute.

Dr. Travis also intends to maintain the emphasis on a liberal arts background for all students. "You can't have a first-rate education without a basis in the liberal arts," she explains. "We want our graduates to be trained in a technical sense, but we also want them to be educated, to have the theoretical framework which comes from knowledge of the liberal arts."

"I think that Mansfield will also be able to expand educational services to meet the needs of a wide range of people, not only college-age students," says Dr. Travis. "We want to provide useful programs for people in all walks of life." As an example, she said that the college could offer educational programs to help people get ahead in their careers or train for new ones. "It is important to recognize that the term 'college education' has a much broader meaning than it did in the past."

Alumni have a very important role in the future development of Mansfield State College, says Dr. Travis. "I want alumni to know that we need ideas from them—ways that we can help them or ways to have them help us. We are hoping to get the alumni more involved in the college, particularly in the area of recruiting. Our graduates are one of our greatest assets."

Dr. Travis has outlined some ambitious goals for the college. Within five years, she hopes to boost the enrollment substantially from the current level. She wants the college to strive for a distinctive reputation by developing educational programs that are unique in Pennsylvania. "And I want Mansfield State College to have a visible regional profile as an institution providing a first-rate education in a broad variety of fields—liberal arts and professional programs as well as teacher education."

To achieve these goals, support for the college must come from Harrisburg, and Dr. Travis regards Governor Thornburgh as one of Mansfield's most valuable friends. "The Governor has a commitment to quality education and he has a strong interest in seeing Mansfield State College regain stability and then grow. He has expressed his readiness to assist us in this enterprise," she says.

The upcoming decade promises to be a challenging period for all colleges. Dr. Travis is ready for the problems as well as the rewards of her new post. "I am confident that we will be able to move forward," she says.

Campus Size Shows Growth of College

Mansfield State Normal School, 1919: Courses were offered in 27 subjects including elocution and penmanship. Dr. William R. Straughn was principal, and the graduating class totalled 114 students. The campus was comprised of 4 buildings: North Hall, South Hall, the Student Center, and Alumni Hall.

Mansfield State College, 1979: Students can choose from 51 undergraduate programs and 16 graduate programs. Dr. Janet Travis assumed the presidency, and 592 degrees were conferred upon graduates. The campus, extending across 170 acres, includes 46 buildings.

While the changes in the academic and social atmosphere at Mansfield over the past 60 years have been extensive, the growth of the physical plant offers a more visible contrast.

Of the four buildings which made up the Normal School in 1919, only one still stands. North Hall, built in 1892, houses the college post office and print shop, and the audio-visual facilities. Because of structural problems, only the bottom floor is in use; the last dormitory sections of the building were closed in 1976.

The original Alumni Hall was last used as a dormitory for GI's before it was removed to make way for new Alumni Hall. That building, erected on the same spot, was completed in 1958, and another section was added in 1970. It now houses the main library, administrative offices, and the computer center.

South Hall was also replaced by a new structure of the same name. The old building spent its last years as a men's dormitory. New South Hall, constructed as a dorm in 1953, is now the home of several academic departments, the placement office, the financial aid office, two deans' offices, and the college radio station.

The Student Center survived until the late 60's, when it was torn down to provide space for Manser Hall. Completed in 1968, Manser holds the cafeteria, lounge areas for students, and the bookstore. Also removed to make way for Manser was that social center of the 50's and 60's, the Hut, which was originally the YMCA hut. A new Hut was dedicated in 1967. It was located further up the hill from the old structure, and has since been converted into an art center. The Hut is now located on the main floor of Manser Hall.

Though the last section of North Hall was not completed until 1908, the first completely new building added to the physical plant after the turn of the century was Belknap Hall, which was constructed in 1914 as a model elementary school. The junior high school was housed in Allen Hall, which opened in 1926.

The President's House was built in 1920, and the same year a small building was constructed behind North Hall to house the infirmary. It now serves as a psychology lab.

In 1930, Straughn Auditorium was completed. It remained the only building on campus able to hold large audiences until 1970 when Steadman Theatre, with its excellent acoustics and sophisticated technical facilities, was opened.

Over the next 3 decades, many buildings were added to meet the expanding academic, administrative, and recreational needs of the growing college. (Mansfield State Normal School had become Mansfield State Teachers College in 1926.)

In 1939, the elementary school moved to the newly-finished Retan Center, and Belknap Hall became college classrooms. That year also saw the completion of the Recreation Center, which was the main college gymnasium until 1971, and the Arts Building, which now houses the Home Economics Department.

Grant Science Center was constructed in 1952. New South Hall opened as a men's dorm one year later. The Library finally gained a building of its own when Alumni Hall was completed in 1958.

During the 60's, Mansfield experienced the beginning of the post-war baby boom heading for college. This dramatic increase in enrollment led to a frenzy of construction to accommodate the students.

Dorm facilities were in great demand, and the college began to expand beyond its traditional boundaries. Pinecrest, the first new dorm, was opened in 1964 to 200 residents. The next year, Hemlock housed 200 more students. The combined capacity of Laurel "A" and Maple "A" was 500, and they were completed in 1967. Laurel "B" and Maple "B" were added in 1969, which brought the total capacity in the new dorm buildings to 1400. North Hall was used as a dorm until 1974, when the 600-resident Cedarcrest dorm was opened.

In 1962, four buildings were used for classrooms — Allen Hall, the Arts Building (Home Economics), Belknap Hall, and Grant Science building. Retan Center was converted from an elementary school to classrooms in 1966. A new music department building, Butler Center, was opened in 1968. In 1971 an addition to Grant Science, which included a planetarium, was completed.

A new student union was built in 1970. Memorial Hall contains recreational equipment, student activities rooms, a large meeting hall, and student affairs and administrative offices.

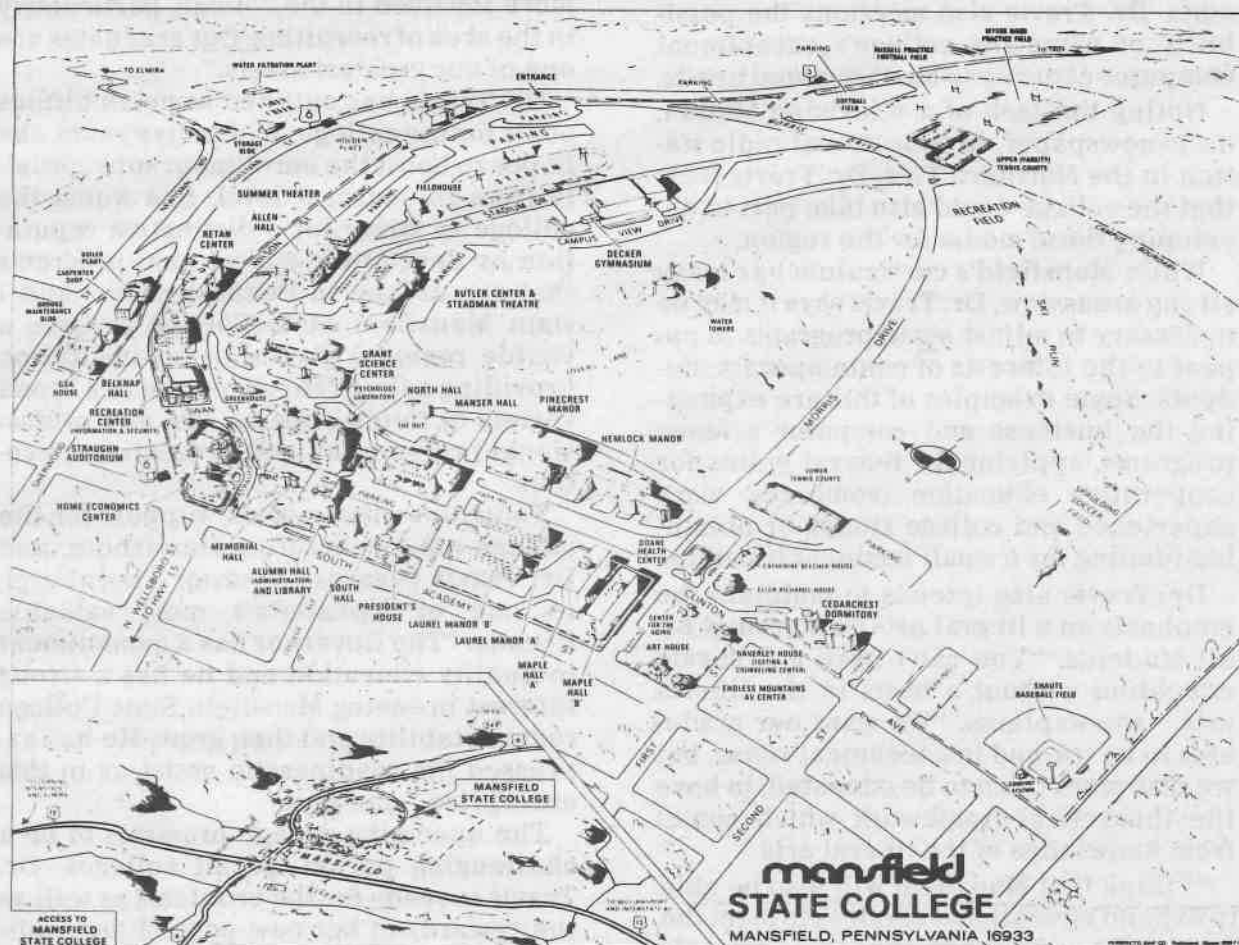

That same year saw an addition to Alumni Hall, allowing more room for the library and more administrative offices.

Athletic facilities were also expanded. Van Norman Field House, the track, and the football field were completed in 1967. Decker Gymnasium, with an olympic size swimming pool, a large gym, weight-lifting equipment, facilities for the varsity and intramural sports teams and offices of the Physical Education Department, opened in 1971.

A modern maintenance building was constructed in 1972. Doane Health Center, the campus infirmary, opened in 1968.

With a total of 32 major buildings and 14 minor ones, the college property now covers 170 acres, and includes 10.2 acres of parking space and 4.5 miles of roads. The floor space of the buildings alone is over 1.2 million square feet.

In 1895, the value of the college property was $305,000. By 1962, it had climbed to $11,592,000. The current figure is $66,469,000.

The Tioga Hammond Lakes: An Asset to the Region

What is almost two miles long, more than 120 feet high, weighs over 20 million tons, and took 38 years to complete?

The Tioga Hammond Dams, located just south of the borough of Tioga, within 12 miles of Mansfield State College. The two dams—one on the Tioga River, the other on Crooked Creek—will form two lakes covering a total area of 1165 acres, with a combined shoreline of more than 22 miles.

If all of these numbers sound overwhelming, a first-hand look at the Tioga Hammond Lakes Project (its official name) confirms this impression.

According to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers who designed and built the project, it promises to have a marked impact on Tioga County in the areas of recreation, flood control, and industrial development.

"Recreation is now a year-round business in the Northern Tier of Pennsylvania," says Richard Koepfel, Mansfield State College alumnus ('67) and Resource Manager of the project for the Corps of Engineers. "Almost any type of family-oriented recreation will be available at the Lakes and in the surrounding area," adds Koepfel. Already there are 153 campsites open year-round, including 25 primitive sites, and 100 more campsites on the drawing board. Boat launches are located on both lakes, with power boating restricted to Tioga Lake. The Pennsylvania Fish Commission plans to stock a variety of game fish in Hammond Lake. Picnic areas are available in four locations, including one area in Hammond Lake accessible only by boat. Hammond Lake has a swimming area with a bathhouse and food concession; another beach is planned for Tioga Lake. A hiking and bicycling trail extends for 3.2 miles from Mansfield to the Lambs Creek Recreation Area; a self-guided trail for hiking and nature study runs along the trout stream at Stephenhouse Run (near the main recreation area at Hammond Lake) and more such trails are being developed.

Winter activities will include ice fishing, hunting and trapping, cross-country skiing, snowshoeing, ice skating, and snowmobiling.

"We feel that the recreational facilities will prove to be a great asset to the area, and make recreation the number one industry in Tioga County," says Koepfel. The Corps predicts that within three years, the Tioga Hammond Lakes will draw

This artist's rendering of the Tioga Hammond Lakes Project shows the Tioga Dam (left) and the lake formed by the Tioga River. New Route 15 is on the hill to the left of the lake. On the right side of the drawing is the Hammond Dam, with Hammond Lake formed by impounding the waters of Crooked Creek. 500,000 visitors annually; this means that an extra $5 million per year will be spent in the area. Based on the Corps' past experience at comparable projects around the U.S., this estimate should prove reasonably accurate.

"A prime consideration for making this area successful is the location—just off Route 15, and near other major highways such as Route 17 in New York and Route 6 in Pennsylvania," notes Koepfel.

The Corps also expects to see many new businesses developed in the area to satisfy the need for additional accommodations, meals, and recreational supplies.

And recreation is only one side of the coin . . .

The purpose of the dam is, after all, flood control. As early as 1941, studies indicated the need for a reservoir on Crooked Creek to control flooding in the Chemung River Basin and along the North Branch of the Susquehanna River in New York and Pennsylvania. In 1954, another report recommended an additional site on the Tioga River, and a connecting channel was designed to join the two projects to increase flood storage potential. The project was authorized in 1958, and finally funds were appropriated in 1968 to begin the project.

Real estate acquisition began, and contracts were let to relocate railroads, highways, and utility lines. While construction was still in the early stages, Tropical Storm Agnes ravaged the area in June 1972, and reemphasized the need for flood protection. (The Corps estimates that $217.2 million in damage would have been prevented if the two dams had been completed in 1972.)

The Tioga Hammond Dams became operational for flood control purposes in November 1978, and in this regard they have already proven their worth. From March 4 through 8, 1979, heavy rains and melting snow in the 400 square mile drainage area controlled by the dams created flooding conditions. Though the project was still several months from completion, the dams held back the water and prevented damages estimated at almost $12 million along the Tioga, Chemung and Susquehanna Rivers.

On the average, the project is expected to avert $10.5 million annually in flood damage. "A project like this never completely prevents flooding," says Lloyd Caldwell, Corps Area Engineer for the Tioga Hammond Dams. "An Agnes-type flood would be reduced so flooding would not occur in Tioga, Lawrenceville, Corning and Elmira. The water level of the Susquehanna River in Wilkes Barre would be 1½ feet lower because of the dams. But the floodplain still exists, and there would be some flooding where there are no levees to protect against it," he explains.

The Corps also projects that because of the increased flood protection, the area downstream from the dam will become more attractive to industries looking for a place to locate. This benefit will develop, however, over a number of years.

The dedication of the Tioga Hammond Lakes took place on June 22, 1979—exactly seven years after the disaster of Tropical Storm Agnes. Though the major facilities of the project are completed and many are already in use, construction will continue for almost two more years, mostly in two of the recreation areas which are not yet done. Filling of the lakes is progressing, and they will be completely full and ready for use by the beginning of the summer of 1980.

Mountie Club Supports Mansfield Athletics

The Mountie Club is about to begin its first full-fledged fund raising campaign, according to Joe Maresco, Director of Residence Life, who is the coordinator of the fund-raiser. The campaign will be held in conjunction with the Mansfield Foundation's 1979-80 Annual Giving drive.

Founded in 1976 to offer support to the varsity athletic program at Mansfield, the Mountie Club now contributes funds to thirteen intercollegiate teams including: football, baseball, men's and women's tennis, cross country, track, wrestling, women's softball, men's and women's basketball, field hockey, swimming, and volleyball.

The Mountie Club funds "special needs not able to be met through the regular budget," says Maresco. The majority of budget support for varsity sports comes from student activity fees; this year's allocation of $39,800 falls about $10,000 short of the minimum budgets submitted by team coaches.

Baseball Team Third In National Standings

The 1978-79 Mansfield State College Mountaineers varsity baseball team completed the most successful season in the history of the college by finishing third in the nation in NCAA Division III.

Posting a 26-10 overall slate, Mansfield won 24 of their last 28 games. Only the Nittany Lions of Penn State — in a 16-15, bottom-of-the-ninth cliffhanger — and number one ranked Marietta College of Ohio kept the Mounties from stringing 25 straight victories. The Lions halted an 8-game win streak and Mansfield put another 12 together before bowing 9-3 to Marietta.

The team also placed seven players on the All-Pennsylvania Conference teams for the year. Three players were named to the First Team All-Conference, while four players earned a berth on the Second Team.

Coach John Heaps outlined the two key ingredients crucial to the team's success as solid hitting and outstanding pitching depth. With playoff statistics included, eight players batted over .300; a bullpen of seven hurlers pitched with almost equal effectiveness over a 36-game season. Also contributing to the year's outstanding record was team depth and a steady defense.

Dr. Heaps took over baseball coaching duties in 1966 after the team struggled to a 2-5 record the previous season. By 1970, the record had improved to a 26-6 season coupled with a Pennsylvania Conference and NAIA district championship. Four times in this decade the team has had a 20-win season. Two conference titles, two Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference championships and an unbroken string of playoff invitations have won respect for the squad throughout the East.

Dr. Heaps' record with the baseball team makes him the winningest coach in Mansfield sports history. Commenting on his current total of 222 victories in a varsity sport, he quipped, "As my buddies at the office would tell you, that's more a result of longevity than skill."

And this is where Mountie Club support steps in. "The financial situation in the past few years has become critical," notes Maresco, "because the dropping enrollment means less money in the student activities fund. Inflation is, of course, a big factor. And Mansfield has added new teams in the past few years because of the growing interest in sports."

The Mountie Club also sponsors two social events each year. The Club's largest annual project is the Mountie Awards Banquet, held at the end of each school year to honor outstanding male and female athletes at Mansfield. Awards are given in memory of several of the most prominent personalities in the history of athletics at the College. The Bill Gibson Award commemorating Mansfield's outstanding basketball coach, goes to a person who has brought recognition to the College by his/her contribution to athletics. For the student athlete with the highest grade point average, there is the Bob Maxson Award, in honor of the alumnus and track coach. In memory of Kim Marvin, faculty member and coach of the College's first state championship basketball team, an award is presented to a Mansfield graduate who has excelled in coaching.

Additional awards include the Spots Decker awards which go to the outstanding male and female athletes of the most recent graduating class. They are given in memory of the highly regarded coach and athletic director.

The Mountie Club also honors the outstanding male and female athletes of the present school year with an award.

Sheila Young, World and Olympic Speed Skating champion, was the featured speaker at last year's Banquet.

The second event sponsored each year by the Club is the Mountie Club Golf Tournament, which coincides with Alumni Weekend in June. Full credit for organizing the Tournament goes to Dick Finley and Les Evans, faculty members in the secondary education department.

Over the past few years, the Mountie Club has also contributed in other ways to the athletic program at Mansfield. The most recent example is the impromptu picnic held in June for the championship baseball team. On only 24 hours notice, the Club organized a picnic which turned out to be a great success, according to Rod Kelchner, Mountie Club president.

Financial support was one of the original goals of the Club, but the upcoming fund-raiser is the first concentrated effort of this kind. The Mountie Club needs $10,000 to fill the gap between budget funding for athletics and the projected needs of the teams.

"We're appealing to individuals who have a special interest in athletics, to those who feel that a successful athletic program contributes to the image of the College and adds to the total college experience," says Maresco.

The Mountie fund raising campaign is part of the 1979-80 Mansfield Foundation Annual Giving campaign. "Our goal is to expand to the group of people who regularly contribute to Annual Giving in support of the College," explains Maresco. During the one-month effort which begins in September, the Mountie Club will contact a target list of people who have an identified interest in athletics and who are not currently Annual Giving supporters. "There is no minimum donation for this campaign," he stressed. "Any amount will help us reach our goal."

Maresco concludes, "If the athletic program is going to continue to be a quality program, we need more active participation in terms of financial support."

Football Season Starts September 15

Head football coach Joe Bottiglieri is looking forward to the 1979 football season. "The team will be exciting this year," he says, "because we have some outstanding players returning and a lot of talent coming in."

Last year's 2-8 record is not indicative of the team's real ability, Bottiglieri believes. Playing against formidable opponents, they lost three of their games by a total of 9 points. Injuries contributed to the lack of a consistent offense, which Bottiglieri cites as last year's greatest problem.

September, however, will bring more skill and more speed to the Mounties as a result of the sixty new players recruited for the team. Hailing from Pennsylvania, New York, and New Jersey, most of the freshmen were All-Conference players in high school.

"It may take them a while to come into their own on the college level," says Bottiglieri. "How many games we can win depends on how quickly they adjust to college football."

Returning players will provide the experience around which to rebuild the team. Heading this list are two All-Conference players, junior Bob Vagonis (5-11, 185) a strong safety who led the team in interceptions for the past 2 seasons, and senior Ron Clarke (5-9, 210), a linebacker who was last season's leading tackler.

Team depth, which was another problem last year according to Bottiglieri, should also show improvement. About 110 players are expected at camp this year, up from the previous year's total of 73.

"It's going to be a better team, but a young one," he summarizes.

In addition to Bottiglieri, the coaching staff is comprised of Carmen Bianco, a graduate student and Assistant Director of Residence Life; John Horning, a track coach at Mansfield High School; David Lintal, a teacher and former football coach in the Wellsboro School District; Russ Manney, an MSC graduate; and Michael Silicchia, a recent MSC graduate and former football player.

The 1979 football schedule is as follows: September 15, at Lock Haven; September 22, at St. Lawrence University; September 29, Bloomsburg State College (home); October 6, Cheyney State College (Homecoming); October 13, at Millersville State College; October 20, at E. Stroudsburg State College; October 27, at Brockport State (NY); November 3, Alfred University (home); November 10, Kutztown State College (Parents' Day).

MSC Graduates Around the World

Named for Sir Benjamin Hall, "Big Ben," a clock with a 13-ton bell, is housed in the tower of the Houses of Parliament in London, England.

ENGLAND

Donald R. Hazel Jr., '76, has been promoted to senior airman in the U.S. Air Force and is serving as a security specialist at Upper Heyford RAF Station in England. Airman Hazel joined the air force after graduation and was sent to England in 1977, and he and his wife, Karen Shaver Hazel, '76, make their home at Banbury, of "Ride a Cock Horse to Banbury Cross" fame.

The Hazels write that they enjoy their tour in England but miss many of the American amenities — good TV, cheese steaks and subs, driving on the right side of the road, current movies and warm summer weather.

Life in England differs greatly from that in the United States. Cars are small, freezer storage is uncommon, the difference in monetary exchange causes problems and housewives shop each day for the main evening meal.

The Hazels have traveled extensively in the British Isles and comment on the beauty of the countryside though the weather is unpredictable.

Donald says, "Americans and Englishmen supposedly speak the same language but you could sure fool me. When I am in England I put petrol in the lorry instead of gas in the truck and I eat crisps and chips instead of potato chips and French fries."

This summer the Hazel family, including son Chris, born in March, will be returning to the states where Hazel will be stationed at the Plattsburg AFB, N.Y., and they are "looking forward to the good ole USA for as the old saying says, there is no place like home."

ALASKA

Edward Priest, '63, is teaching in a one-room school, with nine pupils, grades one through eight, in the settlement of Birch Creek, Alaska, which has 35 residents. It is a fishing and trapping village about 200 miles from Fairbanks.

A former supervisor of all Alaskan rural schools, Ellsworth McCarthy, '38, says that Edward previously taught school in Cordova, Alaska, and has been at Birch Creek about ten years. He says that Ed is a snowmobile enthusiast in a place where gasoline is $1.50 per gallon, which is not so high considering that all supplies are flown in.

Ed's former A-frame home burned some time ago and the natives are now building him a new log home.

Gayle at her home in Aegaleo, a suburb of Athens.

GREECE

Gayle M. Browning, '73, is a teacher in the Athens Elementary School for dependents of the U.S. Air Force personnel in Greece. She was in the states in the summer of 1978 when she returned to Mansfield to complete work on her master's degree.

Gayle says that life in Greece is fascinating but there are frustrations — cultural differences, lack of conveniences (it takes five years to get a telephone), the high cost of living (a Coke is 66 cents), and that driving in Greece is hazardous (operators have manic driving habits and pedestrians walk in the streets.)

The Greek people are very hospitable, she says, and enjoy a simple way of life, working long hours for a small salary. They are excellent cooks and Gayle says she loves Greek food though meat is not a daily item and the "eating schedule runs into the evening hours, often as late as 10 o'clock for supper."

She has toured Bulgaria, Romania and Egypt where she took her first camel ride and reports that, as in the olden days, caravans still travel from Sudan to Egypt. This summer she will travel in 15 European countries with guests from the states, including Shalane McCarthy, a 1979 MSC graduate.

Gayle attends Greek language classes in order to better communicate with the Greek people and she ends her letter with a traditional Greek phrase, "kalee orexi."

Marjorie Baker, with the King of the Kodak Hula Show.

HAWAII

Marjorie Baker, '39, is a resident of Honolulu, Hawaii, and has been retired from the Civil Service since 1971 when she was employed by the Armed Services Police office.

After graduation from MSC, Marjorie taught school in Ohio for five years and from 1944-1964 she served in the Women's Army Corps. Ten years out of the 20 were spent in Japan, Germany and France, enabling her to travel in 63 countries.

Three months after her retirement, she went to Hawaii to live because of the climate which has a record low of 51 degrees and a high of 92 degrees. This was the realization of her recurring dreams, to live in Hawaii permanently.

She says that Hawaii is a beautiful place with a diversity of ethnic groups and that the people are very friendly. There are many places to visit and things to do, many of them free. For instance, the Ala Moana Center stands as a blend of the past of old Hawaii and the culture of the present and many activities are scheduled for visitors, even a Keiki's (children) hula show. In spite of high prices it is a mecca for the tourists of the world and a most "enchanted and satisfying place to live."

CANADA

Helen Brown, '36, worked at a variety of jobs after graduation, as teaching jobs were scarce. In 1940 she entered the Philadelphia College of the Bible, graduated in 1944 and remained on the Home Staff of the Unevangelical Fields Mission in Philadelphia.

In 1964, Helen was transferred to the Toronto headquarters and remained there until retirement in 1976. She writes that she is extremely busy with church work, hobbies and correspondence.

Helen is a resident of Toronto and lives at 2360 Dundee St., W # 1607.

A Legacy Sweater 1911-1979

Often seen around the Mansfield campus this year is a 68-year old sweater — an ivory-colored, roll-collared affair — once called an award sweater. It is worn these days by Bebe Sheard, '80, who inherited the venerable knitwear from an ancestral cousin, Harriet Eleanor Paine, who graduated from Mansfield State Normal School in 1913.

The sweater is all-wool, rather scarce in this polyester society, and is in perfect condition after all these years. If sweaters could talk this one would probably express wonderment at the alterations that have taken place on the college campus during the last 66 years.

Harriet Paine was a direct descendant (as is Bebe) of Robert Treat Paine, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence and of Governor William Bradford who came to America aboard the Mayflower in 1620 and helped establish the Plymouth colony.

Miss Paine died in 1948 at the age of 55 after a career as a music teacher in several private schools. Her sweater is a tangible reminder of the progression of years and the inevitable changes that occur, and a symbol of the link between the past and the present.

The Mansfield Foundation

Annual Report 1978-79

Letter From the Executive Director

Mansfield Foundation

Dear Friends,

I am pleased to present on behalf of the Board of the Mansfield Foundation, Inc. a report detailing the 1978/79 Annual Giving campaign and a recap of donations received and awards made during the first five years of the Foundation. This report is intended to represent only donations received and does not detail the total income of the Foundation.

We are quite pleased with the growth the Foundation has experienced since 1974. When one considers the total of awards made, endowments created and usage fees paid, the Foundation has been able to provide over a quarter of a million dollars in support to Mansfield State College.

The first five years were growing years, years in which the Foundation worked to become established. We look for the next five years to be ones in which the Foundation will become a major force within the College. The biggest area we are going to have to address is that of alumni giving. Still only 8% of alumni are supporting Annual Giving and we must find a way to increase this percentage.

A big step was taken this year in the creation of three endowments. As these endowments are funded the Foundation will have a base from which ongoing and continued support will be given.

I do hope you enjoy reading this report and if you have any questions concerning any of the information that is being presented, please don't hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely,

J. Paul McMillen
Executive Director

The Mansfield Foundation Annual Giving Campaign runs from July 1 through June 30. Please notify the Mansfield Foundation, Inc. at Mansfield State College, 81 Clinton Street, Mansfield, Pa. 16933 of any errors in reporting.

This report is only for Annual Giving and is not intended to reflect the total financial condition of the Mansfield Foundation, Inc. An audited financial statement of the Mansfield Foundation is available upon request.

The Mansfield Foundation, Inc.

In recognition of the need for increased support of Mansfield State College from private sources, the Mansfield Foundation was chartered as a tax-exempt, non-profit corporation in May 1974.

The Foundation serves as a vehicle through which alumni and friends can support the College. Because of inadequate funding over the past several years, the College has been forced to streamline its budget. As a result, opportunities which provide students at Mansfield State College with a first-rate educational experience have been cut. Since Mansfield State College is a part of the state system, donations made payable to the College become the property of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. However, a gift to the Mansfield Foundation is used totally for the benefit of the College, with the Foundation determining how the funds can best be used. A gift to the Mansfield Foundation insures support for those programs which maintain the margin of excellence at Mansfield State College. In addition, a gift to the Mansfield Foundation is tax-deductible.

Money received by the Foundation is used to support special projects and programs of the College, and to award scholarships to deserving students. The Foundation also supports College-sponsored programs which introduce high school students to Mansfield State College, and projects which offer College-affiliated services to the community.

The Foundation is governed by a Board of Directors consisting of sixteen members who volunteer their individual expertise to help Mansfield State College through the Foundation. Currently, eleven members of the Board are alumni of the College.

Two Roles of the Foundation

To support Mansfield State College, the Foundation works in two ways: 1) it conducts a Giving program to obtain donations from alumni and friends of the College, and 2) it serves as a fiscal agent for several departments and programs of the College.

The Giving program is divided into an Annual Giving campaign, which is conducted each year from July 1 to June 30 (a fiscal year system), and a newly-developed Deferred Giving program, which encourages bequests to the Foundation.

Donors to both Giving programs can either designate that their contribution be used for a specific purpose — referred to as "restricted" giving — or leave their contribution unrestricted. The Foundation is attempting to increase giving on an unrestricted basis so that the funds can be used for projects where the need is greatest. More unrestricted gifts would allow the Foundation greater flexibility in meeting particular program needs of the College as they arise. If, for example, most contributors were to restrict their gifts to the library, other programs needed by the College might not be funded.

Money donated to the Foundation during Annual Giving is held in a campaign account until the end of the fiscal year. At the finish of each Annual Giving campaign, operational expenses of the Foundation are paid. From the balance of the account, money is allocated to ongoing projects and programs, and to new projects; the remainder of the campaign donations goes into an endowment account to build a reserve of funds.

Deferred Giving refers to an arrangement by which a contributor legally declares his/her intention of transferring assets to the Foundation at some time in the future. While these gifts are often in the form of bequests which pass to the Foundation upon the death of the contributor, deferred gifts can also occur during one's lifetime. Since these gifts are usually larger than donations received under Annual Giving, deferred gifts are expected to form the basis of the Foundation's endowment program.

Money received by the Foundation is used to support special projects and programs of the College, and to award scholarships to deserving students.

The second way in which the Foundation works for the College is by managing accounts for several departments and projects. This service offers two advantages to the College: 1) programs operated through the Foundation have more flexibility than is possible under state procedure, and 2) the Foundation saves the College the expense of secretarial and book-keeping services for these projects. In addition, the Mansfield Foundation arranges consulting services for clients outside the College, and earns a management fee for this. The fees earned in this manner offset operating expenses of the Foundation.

Endowments Formed

One of the original aims of the Foundation was to establish a continuous financial reserve for Mansfield State College. Since the College was founded in 1857, it has relied on tuition and appropriations from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania — both of which were virtually consumed annually — for its total financial support. The College has no reserve funds to generate income to supplement state appropriations, which have been insufficient to cover expenses for the past several years.

Through a restructuring of the Mansfield Foundation which took place earlier in 1979, endowments have been established which will provide on-going support for the College.

An endowment is created when money is placed in trust and invested; only the income is used to fund the objective of the endowment. The principal remains invested to continue producing income.

The Foundation has established three endowments, conceived for separate purposes and managed by advisory committees.

The first of these is the Alumni Memorial Scholarship Endowment, which provides funds to award scholarships to students of superior academic achievement. This fund was created from the joint support of the Alumni Association and donations which were designated for scholarships over the past five years. The Foundation is attempting to increase this endowment from the present level of $74,000 to $100,000. Assuming an annual interest rate of 8% on the invested principal, approximately $8,000 would then be available every year for scholarships. The Alumni Association sets the policy of the Scholarship Endowment, and recipients are selected by a committee which includes alumni, faculty, and student representatives.

The second of the three endowments is the General Academic Support Endowment. The income from this fund is used to provide awards for new or continuing programs and projects in the academic areas of the College. Examples of projects which have been supported in the past include books for the library, equipment for scientific research, departmental projects, band trips, and Mansfield Festival Theatre. Awards given for achievement in various contests and programs sponsored by the College — such as Ready Writing, International Science Fair, and the Math Contest — would also be funded from this endowment. The governing body of the General Academic Support Endowment is an advisory committee comprised of faculty members, students, management, and members of the Foundation Board.

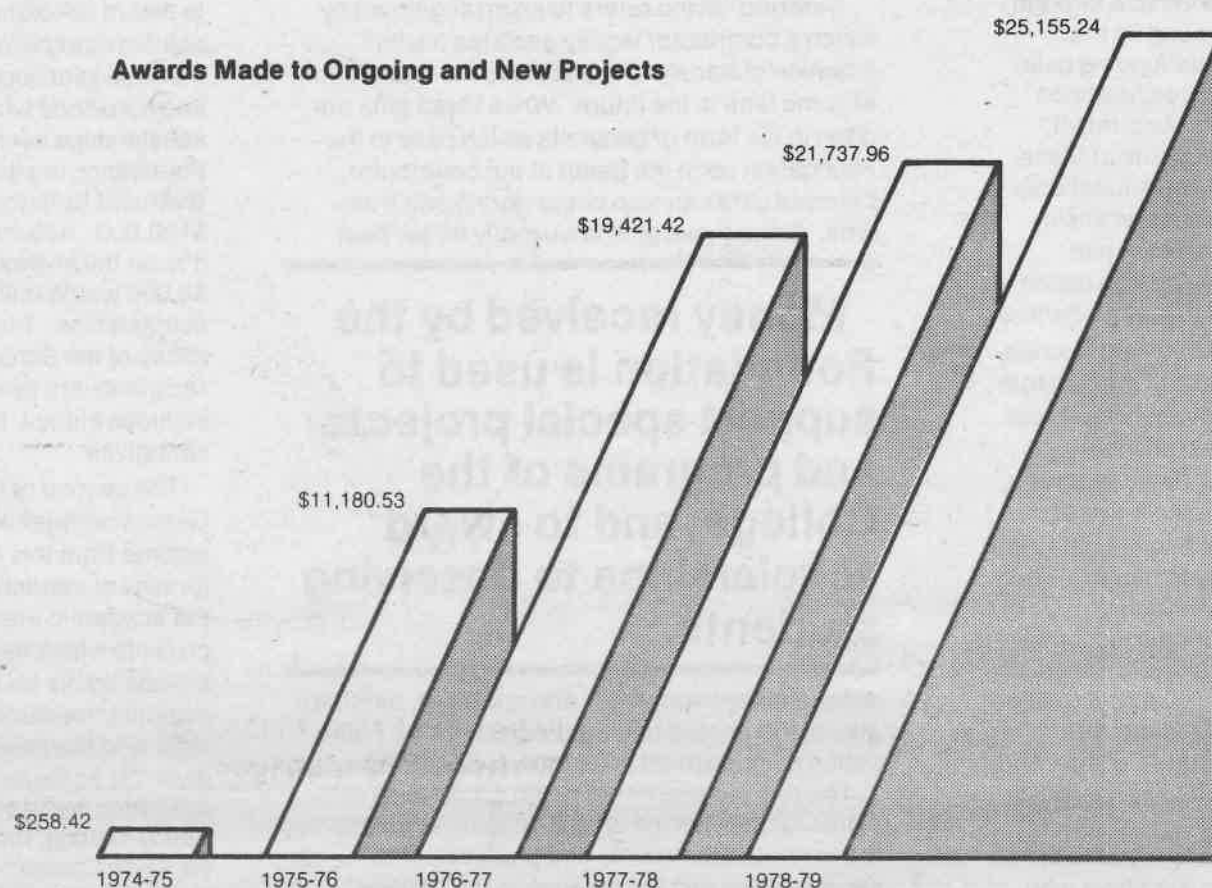

The Administrative Support Endowment is the third of the new funds. It is designed to provide income to meet the operational costs of the Foundation. The Board of Directors of the Foundation is its governing body.

Money to establish the endowments came from Annual Giving donations and several deferred gifts received by the Foundation. Since the majority of Annual Giving funds are used for current projects, the success of the Foundation's endowment program will depend on deferred gifts.

With the creation of the Mansfield Foundation in 1974, Mansfield State College progressed toward its long-term goal of insuring the financial strength of the College. The endowments are a crucial step in that process. Through them, the Foundation has laid the groundwork for a financially sound future for the College. But only the support of the alumni and friends of Mansfield State College can make it work.

Is the Mansfield Foundation in your will?

This is a blunt question, but deferred gifts — including bequests — will be the major resource in creating substantial endowment funds for Mansfield State College through the Mansfield Foundation, Inc.

Deferred gifts are those which will be given to the Foundation at a specified time in the future. The contributor, when making the deferred gift, identifies the gift and outlines the conditions for turning it over to the Foundation.

The most common type of deferred gift is a bequest: the contributor wills certain assets to the Mansfield Foundation upon his/her death. Bequests are usually in the form of cash, securities, annuities, real estate, or other property. Gifts of life insurance can be established in the policy itself by naming the Mansfield Foundation a beneficiary.

Deferred gifts can also be set up to pass to the Foundation during the lifetime of the contributor. For example, a parent or grandparent might place money in trust for a child, specifying that the child will receive the income from the trust until the age of 21, and then the principal will go to the Foundation. Your lawyer, banker, or trust officer, along with the Mansfield Foundation, can offer advice about many options available for establishing a deferred gift during your lifetime.

The Foundation is encouraging donors to make their gifts on an unrestricted basis, because they can then be applied to the fund which has the most pressing need. Restricted gifts, however, should be designated for one of the three endowment funds recently established by the Foundation: the Alumni Memorial Scholarship Endowment, the General Academic Support Endowment, or the Administrative Support Endowment.

Alumni and friends of the College can benefit from deferred giving in two ways. Money set aside now as a bequest would guarantee a substantial gift that one might never be able to make within one's lifetime. Additionally, all donations to the Foundation are exempt from federal income, gift, and estate taxes within certain conditions described in the Internal Revenue Code.

The only way the Foundation can establish a long-term financial base for Mansfield State College is through endowments. Since experience at other institutions has shown that endowment programs are sustained largely by deferred gifts, this program is critically important to the future of Mansfield State College.

For more information about Deferred Giving, contact the Mansfield Foundation, Mansfield State College, 81 Clinton St., Mansfield, Pa. 16933 or call (717) 662-4294.

1979-80 Annual Giving Schedule Announced

The major fundraising effort for the 1979-80 Annual Giving campaign will be concentrated into three months, announced J. Paul McMillen, Executive Director of the Mansfield Foundation. The Foundation conducts the Annual Giving drive for the benefit of Mansfield State College.

Under the plan, mailings will be sent approximately every two weeks during September, October, and November. The stepped-up effort will eliminate the numerous reminders previously sent to supporters over the course of the entire year. The Foundation also aims to increase alumni participation in Annual Giving from the current 8% level by means of the more intense campaign.

The Annual Giving campaign was recently switched from a calendar year to a fiscal year system to put the Foundation and the College on the same budget schedule. As a result, Foundation support for College programs can be more closely tied to the College budget. To complete the change-over, the 1978 Annual Giving drive was extended from 12 to 18 months; it ended June 30, 1979.

"Since College alumni and friends received reminders earlier this year for the previous campaign, it is important that they understand that the fund-raising effort in the fall will be for a new campaign," explains McMillen. "We apologize for having to ask for support for two separate drives in the same year, but once our new schedule is firmly established, this situation will not occur again."

Carol Aronson, a professional painter, displayed her works on campus as part of the Artist-in-Residence series at Mansfield State College. She also conducted workshops for students.

The Mansfield Foundation assisted the College with the Artist-in-Residence program by successfully writing a grant application for funds from the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts, and by providing Foundation support to supplement the grant.

Bottom

The Mansfield Festival Theatre is well-known throughout the area for its excellent summer productions. Along with providing an opportunity for Mansfield State College students and local residents to work with theatre professionals, it serves as an entertainment resource for the community. Since 1974, the Mansfield Foundation has:

- donated $19,500 to Mansfield Festival Theatre
- successfully applied for an additional $7,000 in grants for MFT from the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts
- managed the funds for MFT
- provided secretarial and bookkeeping services for MFT

— CLASS NEWS —

CLASS OF 1913

Leo Bailey and his wife, Margaret, of Prebble, N.Y., recently celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary at St. Margaret's Church in Homer, N.Y. Leo was a vocational agriculture teacher before retirement and also taught science and mathematics.

CLASS OF 1920

Marian C. Taylor of 17 Lawton Ave., Binghamton, N.Y., retired this year after 42 years in education. She writes that she began teaching at a salary of $1,015 for a seven months term and ended her service with a ten-month annual salary of $8,100. She says that she has always been interested in MSC and has much respect for the training she received here.

CLASS OF 1925

Rachel Matthews Evans is a resident of West Palm Beach, Florida, but spends her summers at her vacation home on an island in a lake in Ontario, Canada. Rachel writes of the time when "the MSC president threatened to expel any girl so bold as to cut her hair. So, on a Sunday afternoon all the girls in the dorm sheared their locks. Needless to say, we didn't get expelled as in those days there were about six girls to every boy enrolled." She hopes to return to MSC next year for her 55th reunion.

CLASS OF 1926

Phyllis S. Eastman of Rome, Pa., was recently honored by the Orwell (Pa.) Grange when she received a 50-year pin for membership.

CLASS OF 1930

Mary French Kemble writes that the gas shortage prevented her attendance at Alumni Weekend but she expects to be in Mansfield to attend her 50th reunion next year. The Kembles are moving to Florida and after September their address will be 61 Silver Place, Silver Springs Shores, Ocala, Fla.

J. Franklin Whitmer taught school and coached athletes for six years after graduation. He worked for Studebaker in the Buffalo branch, served in the Pacific Theatre in World War II, and eventually invested in a motel in Prescott, Arizona, and later in a motel in Corning, California. Due to health reasons he retired and is presently living in Red Bluff, California.

CLASS OF 1931

Ruth Tozer Bixby was married in April to Dr. Ivan Bixby of Athens, Pa. Ruth received a master's degree from Pennsylvania State University in 1936 and until her retirement taught science and mathematics in the Sayre Area High School.

CLASS OF 1932

Gladys Brion Repard of Liberty, Pa., retired in 1972 after teaching for 21½ years in various Pennsylvania schools. She is involved in PTA work and is a past president of the Tioga County PTA. She enjoys traveling and plans to attend the Passion Play, at Oberammergau in the Bavarian Alps, in 1980. Gladys has four children, 14 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

F. Errol Wydman recently retired after teaching in New York State for 37 years. He received a master's degree from Cornell University in 1939. Errol was president of Corning (N.Y.) Babe Ruth Baseball for four years and was the city athletic director for several years. The Wydmans are planning winter residence in Arizona and will spend the summers at East Lake Road, 735 Park, Penn Yan, N.Y.

CLASS OF 1933

Russell Brown is the owner of Brown Hill Farms and Brown's Electric in Tioga, Pa. He was a teacher for a number of years, a World War II veteran and winner of the Bronze Star Medal. Russell has owned Brown's Electric for 30 years. Nine years of that time he was maintenance manager for the Northern Tioga School District. He is a vice president of the Pennsylvania-Delaware Baptist Men, a charter member of the Tioga Lions Club, and a member of the Grange. The Browns live in Middlebury (Pa.) Township.

Janet Morgan Sutton and her husband, John Sutton, '30, of 311 N. Main St., Towanda, Pa., recently celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary at a party in Waverly, N.Y., hosted by the Sutton children. Janet is retired from the Towanda Area School System where she taught for 16 years. John, also retired, was a former Penelec employee for 32 years.

CLASS OF 1934

Dr. James S. Coles has been honored by Bowdoin College where he served as the college's ninth president from 1952 to 1967. The tallest building on campus, which serves as a dormitory and cafeteria, has been named Coles Tower. Dr. Coles left Bowdoin to become president of Research Corporation, a New York foundation for the advancement of science. Dr. Coles also serves on the Board of the Mansfield Foundation, Inc.

CLASS OF 1936

Irma Barnes recently retired after a teaching career of 27 years in Rome and Wysox, in Pennsylvania.

Doris Barnes Lewis received a master's degree in social science from Elmira College in 1967. She recently retired from the Wysox (Pa.) Elementary School after 39 years of teaching. She reports the following MSC graduates in her family - her mother, Gertrude Pickering Barnes, in 1905; her sister, Gertrude Barnes Haley in 1932, and her son, Richard Lewis, in 1967.

Katherine Jones Lunn is the composer of a song about Pennsylvania, "Keystone of the Free," which was recently entered in the Pennsylvania State Song Contest. The song was performed by 19 members of the Mansfield Men's Chorus on May 18, at Hershey, Pa., and was judged first runner-up in the contest. Oliver Sexton, '63, is director of the chorus and Miriam Dickerson, '43, is accompanist.

CLASS OF 1938

Mary Greiner Wheeler is married to a mining engineer and in 1978 the family moved to New Mexico. During her previous years in Lebanon and Lehigh Counties (Pa.), she was active in church, politics and patriotic organizations. In New Mexico she continues her activities and is state registrar of the Huguenot Society of New Mexico. The Wheelers are the parents of five children, all college graduates, and live at Monzano View Estates, Box 1376, Los Lunas, NM.

CLASS OF 1939

Robert E. Lupton recently retired after 32 years of teaching. Emma Neiswender Lupton, '37, has been a teacher in the St. Marys (Pa.) Area School for the last 20 years. The Luptons have three children.

Robert Norris is currently Professor of Educational Administration at the University of Connecticut. He previously served as a teacher at Lehigh University, as a school principal in Doylestown, Pa., and as superintendent of Freehold Regional in New Jersey. He became Dean of Continuing Education in Connecticut in 1960 but left administration in 1972 for professorship. Robert writes that he will retire in 1980 "to weave and make weaving looms in a large house in Storrs, Connecticut, which welcomes guests."

Jane Vollmer Strous of 420 Lowe St. South Williamsport, Pa., recently retired after 26 years of teaching.

CLASS OF 1940

Thomas Manley of 8 Shore Circle in Carmel, Indiana, has a real estate broker's license from the state of Indiana and has set up two Century 21 real estate offices in the suburban Indianapolis area. Thomas was a teacher in Pennsylvania and New Jersey for four years and in the U.S. Navy for four years during World War II. He was a district sales manager for the GHF Corporation in New York City and St. Louis previous to his present enterprise. Dorothy Chapman Manley, '39, taught school for 25 years in New York and Indiana parochial schools and is now retired. The Manleys are active in church and community affairs and enjoy swimming and golfing.

Dr. John Baynes receives the 1979 Outstanding Alumni Award from Mr. Thomas Wierbowski, '68, chairman of the Alumni Citation Committee.

Dr. John Baynes retired in June from his position as the academic vice president of Mansfield State College. He was at the college for over 32 years as a teacher, chairman of the music department and since 1977 as vice president. Dr. Baynes was the recipient of the 1979 Outstanding Alumni Award just prior to his retirement. He is a veteran of World War II, a retired major in the U.S. Air Force Reserve and received a master's degree from the University of Michigan and a doctorate in the musical arts from Boston University in 1963. He and his wife, Audrey Griffiths Baynes, '42, will continue to reside in Mansfield and plan to do a lot of traveling.

CLASS OF 1942

Alice B. Fraser, a long-time coordinator of the MEDIHC (Military Experience Directed Into Health Careers) program, was honored in May in a White House Ceremony for Vietnam Era veterans who have made outstanding contributions to civilian life. She has directed MEDIHC since it was founded in 1970 and has received several commendation medals and awards. This summer Alice retires from the Public Health Service and plans to return to live in her home town of Elmira, N.Y.

CLASS OF 1943

Dr. Norejane Hendrickson has recently been named head of the Department of Home and Family Life at Florida State University. Dr. Hendrickson received a master's degree from Michigan State University and a doctorate from Ohio State University. She is internationally known for her teaching, research and writing in the fields of child development and parent education.

CLASS OF 1944

Atty. Michael Casale and his wife, Mary Brecher Casale, '42, and their two children, live in Williamsport, Pa., where Michael has been a practicing attorney since establishing his own law firm in 1953. He served with the Marine Corps during World War II for three years and during the Korean War. He received a doctor of law degree in 1951 from John Stenson Law School in Deland, Florida. He was county solicitor for several years and is now Williamsport City Solicitor. Michael is a member of several professional organizations and of the Mansfield Foundation Board. MSC Develops Plan for Long-Term Growth

Under the leadership of President Janet L. Travis, the administration at Mansfield State College is preparing plans for the long-range growth and development of the college.

"Our immediate goal is to put the college on a firm financial footing," says Dr. Travis. The college needs to economize, she feels, because projections indicate MSC faces a budget deficit. The college implemented several economy measures last year, including cancellation of plans to buy library books and other supplies, but still ended the year with a deficit of approximately $90,000.

The two-year economy plan which has already gone into effect at the College includes reducing the amount of faculty members in departments which have a large number of faculty in comparison with their student enrollments, reducing staff in other areas of the college, reorganizing the administration, and cutting the operating budget for the second year in a row. This is coupled with stepped up efforts to increase college revenues by intensifying the student recruitment programs, applying for grants, and intensifying the college development program.

Faculty reduction is being implemented under the guidelines issued in January by the Pennsylvania Commissioner for Higher Education, Warren Ringler. The guidelines also affect several of the other state colleges and universities in Pennsylvania.

A total of 25 MSC faculty positions will be eliminated as of September 1980, according to the plan. Of these, 19.5 will be eliminated through retrenchment, and 5.5 will be eliminated by not renewing some temporary appointments, leaving some vacant positions unfilled, and not filling a position now held by a faculty member who intends to retire. Retrenchment involves cutting positions now held by faculty members; it is no reflection on the performance of the individuals who fill these positions. Calling retrenchment "a tremendously traumatic experience," Dr. Travis has emphasized that the college will make every effort to help the people affected by this move find new positions. Since the collective bargaining agreement with the faculty union requires that faculty be given a year's notice before their positions are cut, the retrenchment letters were sent at the beginning of September. These faculty members will continue at the college until May.

Eleven non-faculty employees will also be furloughed this year, reflecting a consolidation of some college operations.

Administrative reorganization has also brought about significant changes in the college structure. Many administrative positions have been eliminated and their duties reassigned to three newly-created positions: Dean of Administration, Dean of Finance and Planning, and Dean of Development and External Relations.

The new Dean of Administration is John Gribble, formerly the Business Manager at MSC. Gribble acts as overseer for the business office, all accounting functions, and buildings and grounds. He is also responsible for student accounts, budget control, financial aid, word processing, print shop, the mail room and stores.

Harold Schwartz has been appointed Dean of Finance and Planning by President Travis. In this position, he is responsible for assisting the college president in preparing MSC's budget and formulating long-range plans for the college. He reports directly to the president on the college's financial situation and the financial impact of college decisions. Before his appointment to this position, Schwartz had been MSC's director of fiscal and administrative services.

Rod Kelchner, who was Dean of Students, is now Dean of Development and External Relations. He reports to the president on alumni affairs, grants and contracts, labor relations and athletics; he will continue to be in charge of freshman orientation.

One administrative position which had been empty for several months was filled as of October 1. On that date, Dr. Dennis M. Travis assumed his duties as Vice President for Academic Affairs. The appointment was made by President Janet L. Travis (no relation). As vice president, Dr. Dennis Travis will oversee all of MSC's academic programs.

Formerly the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Millikin University in Illinois, Dr. Travis holds a Ph.D. in botany from Miami University (Ohio). He also earned master of education and bachelor of science degrees at Edinboro State College. He is a native of Erie, Pennsylvania.

Prior to becoming dean at Milliken University, Dr. Travis was assistant dean of arts and sciences at Miami University (Ohio); he was also an assistant professor of botany there. He has published a number of scholarly papers in his field of specialization, which is genetics and molecular biology.

According to President Travis, these changes in the faculty and administration at MSC are part of the long-term plans for the growth of the college in the coming decade. "It is essential for the college to practice fiscal responsibility. MSC is adjusting for the future and laying a foundation for future growth," she says.

In addition to the two-year economy plan, Dr. Travis is also developing long-range goals for the college. "We need to look for the answers to such questions as what kind of college we want to be in the 1980's, what types of new programs we will want to develop, and what new services we will provide," she explains. The president and her cabinet, consisting of several MSC administrators, have begun by reviewing the college's mission statement. This statement describes MSC's purposes and major goals; Dr. Travis and the cabinet will consider possible changes and additions for the statement.

The next step will be taken by the college's long-range planning committee, Dr. Travis says. Consisting of faculty, students, administrators, alumni and citizens of local communities, the committee held its first meeting at the end of November.

According to Dr. Travis, the entire college will participate in the planning process. She adds that part of the process will be to assess the manpower needs of the region and to see how MSC can best serve the region.

"What we intend to do," she says, "is to draw up plans for four years at a time. We will make firm plans for the first two years and more general plans for the two-year period following that. The long-range planning committee will work with us to continue planning on an on-going basis so that we will always be headed in a clear direction, making the best possible use of our resources to serve our students and the region."

After MSC has developed its long-range goals, Dr. Travis adds, the college will devise specific plans to help reach those goals.

"We will decide where we want to go," she says, "and then we will decide how to get there. By following this kind of careful planning procedure, we will be able to decide whether or not to develop a new program or project by deciding whether it will help us to reach our goals."

Expressing strong confidence in the college's future, Dr. Travis says she believes the planning process being instituted will help MSC avoid the types of financial problems it has faced in the last two years. She says she is also confident that the college's enrollment will rise above its current level of approximately 2500 students.

One step in this direction was the hiring of two new admissions counselors. From a field of over 150 applicants, the search committee chose John Abplanalp and Kathleen Thompson, both MSC graduates. The counselors spent nearly three out of four weeks this semester on the road recruiting for the college.

Noting that enrollment has declined throughout the Pennsylvania state college system in recent years, Dr. Travis says, "The colleges have not responded well enough to changing student interests. We do plan to correct this at MSC by encouraging innovations in the college's curriculum."

Dr. Travis points to insufficient funding from the Pennsylvania government as the reason for many of the present budget problems. Appropriations for the 14 state colleges this year are $20 million lower than the colleges requested. Dr. Travis adds that a deficit of $6.6 million is being projected for the system as a whole this year.

"We're making every effort to balance the budget at MSC," she says. "I have confidence that the current problems will be solved and Mansfield State College will be able to prosper in the near future," concludes Dr. Travis.

Business and Computer Science Offer New Opportunities at MSC

"The business of America is business," said Calvin Coolidge in 1925, and the changes in the way we live in the United States in the past 55 years have emphasized the truth in this statement. Throughout those years, Mansfield State College has been sending its graduates into many segments of the economy through its programs in education, liberal arts, and the sciences. And now Mansfield is beginning to make its mark on business as well, through the majors offered in the Department of Business, Economics, and Computer Science.

The Bachelor of Science degree in Information Processing has been offered since May, 1976; added later was the program leading to the Bachelor of Science degree in Business Administration which graduated its first major in December 1978. "Currently, there are 252 majors in these two programs," says Mr. Richard Krantz, acting chairman of the department, "and the enrollment grows every year. We have 80% more freshmen this year than we did in 1978."

"Students choose one of the majors within the department, but the real strength of this program is in the combination of business and computer instruction," notes Krantz. "We're not trying to compete with other programs or duplicate things already available in the state college system," he adds. In setting up programs, faculty and administration planners surveyed the available literature within the disciplines, looked at what experts in the field were saying, and listened to what potential employers were identifying as their needs. "All the indicators point to a need to train people in both areas—computers and business. Computers are rapidly becoming an integral part of the business operation," Krantz says.

The material in both programs is broad in scope. The Business Administration major provides a general education in business and management, emphasizing common underlying concepts, without undue specialization in any one field. However, there is sufficient flexibility to allow those students who so desire to obtain a concentration in an area of their choice by selecting certain electives in their own or other departments. Examples of some of these areas are accounting, advertising, economics, information processing, information systems management, marketing, and quantitative methods. A double major in business and computer science or information processing is also possible.

The Computer and Information Sciences course offerings are designed to prepare students to work with the information systems in business organizations, but the needs of government agencies, health services, social welfare organizations and other organizations are also treated. Enough electives are available to acquire a concentration in management, accounting, economics or other areas. A double major is also possible for the superior student.

On the drawing board is a proposal which would lead to the development of two different emphases within the current Computer and Information Systems major. The present program would become an Information Systems emphasis, while the new program would be a Computer Science emphasis. This change is slated to begin in September 1980.

Internships are also available for students who wish to gain work experience before graduation. Up to fifteen credits are granted to students who spend a semester working in an approved setting in business, industry, or a government agency.

"We have a strong, well-structured program," says Krantz. "Students really have to perform to get through." Employment opportunities for graduates are seen as excellent. "I know that all the 1979 graduates in the Information Processing program are employed in their field, and I've also heard from several of the Business Administration graduates, too. It's encouraging that they are getting jobs in Pennsylvania and New York so they don't have to relocate long distances," Krantz reports.

It is apparent that the students majoring in Business Administration or Computer Science are not the only ones utilizing the department. Last year, 41% of the students in courses offered by the Department of Business, Economics, and Computer Science were not majors. While many of those were Math majors taking computer science courses, Krantz reports that the other non-majors came from almost every department in the college. One course which is open to anyone with an interest in the subject is "Computers in Society". This course deals with the significance of computers in modern society and the potential consequences of their use. "It combines the technology with the social aspects," says Krantz.

The faculty of the department currently consists of six people with diverse backgrounds and a great variety of experience. Some began in other disciplines such as philosophy or engineering. They have worked in business, industry, and government (here and abroad), and taught at other colleges. In addition to the regular faculty, this year the department boasts a Visiting Lecturer from Trent Polytechnic Institute in England, Dr. Richard Zugarek. He is here on an exchange program; Mr. Theodore Slabey, the department chairman, is teaching at Trent for the 1979-80 school year.

The department is hoping to have two new positions authorized for next year so additional courses can be offered in such subjects as accounting, finance, marketing, and management.

The development of the department has positive implications for recruiting, not only for new business majors but for transfer students and students in other majors as well. "Every organization needs management talent, and a background in computer science is an advantage for many jobs outside the business area," says Krantz. "The Department of Business, Economics, and Computer Science can serve as a resource for students in other disciplines to improve their marketability in their own fields."

Krantz points out that at least one course is offered in the evening each semester, so people who work during the day can still have the opportunity to broaden their own knowledge or work toward a degree. This semester, Accounting I meets in the evening; next semester, Accounting II is set for Monday evenings.

As Mansfield State College develops plans for the coming decade, Krantz feels that the further development of the department will be included. "It will enhance the possibilities for the future growth of the college to be able to offer a strong business and computer science program. This is a valuable addition to the range of opportunities available to students of the college and people who live in the region," he concludes.

Mr. Theodore Slabey discusses new computer with Mrs. Barbara Medina, Director of the Computer Educational Center.

WNTE to Increase Broadcasting Power

The student-operated radio station at Mansfield State College is in the process of boosting its broadcasting power from 10 watts to 150 watts, according to Stuart J. Weiss, General Manager of WNTE-FM. The change-over will be completed before the beginning of next semester.

A Federal Communications Commission regulation which will take effect at the beginning of 1981 stipulates that radio stations must operate with at least 100 watts. This will increase considerably the area in which WNTE can be heard. At 150 watts, WNTE's broadcast radius will be approximately 20 miles; the station is presently heard only in the immediate vicinity of the MSC campus.

Weiss is enthusiastic about the increase in power because the station could gain several thousand listeners. "We have much to offer to the listener as an entertainment medium. WNTE came to the area as a music source, but we also offer many programs not available on other stations. We try to appeal to a wide range of people by offering a variety of music, news, educational features, weather, and public service announcements, among other programs."

WNTE is on the air 24 hours per day, which makes it the number one station in the state college system in terms of broadcast hours. The only time the station is off the air is from 2 a.m. to 6 a.m. Monday, to allow the equipment to cool off. Since there are not enough students to man WNTE during school vacations, the station is off from May to September and during holiday breaks.

About 65 students make up the staff of WNTE. Of these, 44 have third class radio licenses issued by the Federal Communications Commission and can qualify as "deejays." WNTE screens on-the-air personnel by means of a written test and performance evaluation to insure that every person who makes it to the airwaves knows the rules and regulations under which the station operates. "One slip could cost us $10,000 in fines and possible loss of our license," emphasizes Weiss. "It has happened to other stations, so we're cautious."

WNTE is unique among college radio stations in that it is totally student run. The station's advisor is Dean of Arts and Sciences Michael Pincus. "But all the decisions are made by students," Weiss says.

The deejays enjoy a considerable amount of freedom in choosing what music will be played on their programs. The station has a "top 40 album-oriented rock format," according to Weiss. There is a definite top 40 rotation which deejays follow, but otherwise the music selection is theirs. "We try to match the personalities to the time slots where they will be in keeping with the mood we're trying to create," says Weiss. Starting at 6 a.m., the music is soft rock and easy listening to wake listeners up and get them started. As the day goes on, the mood becomes livelier, winding down again around supper time. From the early evening hours into the late night, the music becomes more intense, peaking somewhere in the early morning hours, Weiss reports.

In addition to deejays, the staff also includes newscasters, office workers, and people to staff the music library. "Students spend anywhere from one hour per week up to 40 or 50 hours at the station," says Weiss. He figures that for every hour that WNTE is on the air, four hours of manpower go into planning, keeping logs, fixing equipment, recording announcements, and other necessary activities.

The students who keep WNTE alive come from almost every department at the College. Broadcasting majors are the largest group, says Weiss, but Home Economics is the next most represented department on the staff at this time.

Many MSC graduates who got their starts at MSC have gone on to careers in radio in Chicago, Pittsburgh, Williamsport, Schenectady, Scranton, and other locales.

"WNTE offers students a hands-on media experience which covers all areas of radio except for advertising," notes Weiss. For the majority of students who do not go on in radio, WNTE has different advantages. Richard Bylina, senior English major and past General Manager of WNTE explains it this way. "The students running WNTE are learning where they fit in a working society. Running the station is not an easy hobby, it's a hard job, and students are learning where their limits lie. And when something goes wrong, there is no one else to blame — the students themselves must ultimately find the solution to the problem. It's a learning process, which is what education is all about."

WNTE which broadcasts at 89.5 on the FM dial, has been on the air since 1968 and has undergone many changes in those 11 years. "But we keep wanting to grow and expand and do more," concludes Weiss, adding, "there is no such word as apathy here."

Faculty Members Receive Awards

Two members of the Mansfield State College Faculty were recognized recently for distinguished teaching and academic service.

Dr. Larry Uffelman, associate professor of English, was awarded a Certificate of Excellence in Teaching after an extensive selection process including ratings by his students. Also honored with a Certificate of Excellence in Teaching was Sandra T. Linck, assistant professor of home economics. Mrs. Linck is a graduate of Northwest Missouri State College; she earned her M.S. in home economics from the University of Kansas. She joined the Mansfield faculty in 1971 as a specialist in consumer economics.

Dr. Uffelman was also honored as a Commonwealth Teaching Fellow by a committee including MSC students and teachers from other institutions. This award qualified him to compete at the state level, where he was chosen to receive a Distinguished Teaching Chair by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. This award, given to no more than ten teachers in the state college system each year, is intended to encourage quality teaching and scholarship. Uffelman was chosen on the basis of his work on Victorian novelist Charles Kingsley; his specialty is nineteenth century English literature.

A graduate of Illinois Wesleyan University and the University of Illinois, Dr. Uffelman obtained his Ph.D. at Kansas State University. He taught business and report writing at U.S. Steel and was an instructor of English at Valparaiso University and at Kansas State before joining the faculty at Mansfield in 1969.

Dr. Larry Uffelman, left, and Mrs. Sandra Linck, right, receiving the Distinguished Teaching Award from President Janet L. Travis.

WE NEED YOU!

... to help, so we can tell more college-bound students about Mansfield State College. We will tell them about our 53 undergraduate programs, our quality faculty and facilities, and the excellent environment Mansfield offers its students.

... to reach those high school students who would be interested in Mansfield State College but do not know about us because we cannot visit high schools in your area due to limitations of time and resources. We will introduce them to a college small enough to care about them as individuals but large enough to offer a rich experience educationally, culturally and socially.

... to meet the enrollment needs of the college in the years ahead and to insure that the quality institution which you attended will continue to prepare graduates for meaningful and productive careers. We will share our experience and success in career development by assisting young people to prepare for the challenges of the future.

... to refer the name of a prospective college student by completing the referral form below and sending it to the Admissions Office. We will send the student a pack of information, a series of letters, and a monthly newsletter describing your Alma Mater. (If you would like more referral forms, please contact the Admissions Office.) Thank you!

Annual Giving Drive is Almost Halfway

The 1979-80 Annual Giving campaign is almost to the half-way mark in terms of both time and contributions, according to J. Paul McMillen, Executive Director of the Mansfield Foundation. The Foundation conducts the Annual Giving campaign for the benefit of Mansfield State College.

"We have received approximately $22,000 at this point," said McMillen, "and we're hoping to reach $25,000 by December 31, which will be the halfway mark in the present campaign." The goal for the 1979-80 drive which ends June 30, 1980 is $50,000.

To make it to the halfway point by New Year's Day, the Foundation is depending on the spirit of holiday giving among alumni and friends of Mansfield State College. This is the perfect time of year for giving a contribution to the Mansfield Foundation in your own behalf or in the name of a friend or relative. It's a gift which keeps on working 365 days a year to maintain the exceptional educational opportunities available at MSC. Your gift is greatly needed, and any amount — even $5 or $10 — can be put to use.

There are other advantages to a year end gift to the Mansfield Foundation, as your favorite Internal Revenue Service agent can cheerfully explain. All gifts to the Mansfield Foundation are deductible for federal income tax purposes. But you must send your contribution by December 31 to be able to count it on your 1979 tax return.

This holiday season, please share your good fortune by adding the Mansfield Foundation to your gift list. Contributions can either be left unrestricted so the Foundation can use the funds for programs where the need is greatest, or earmarked for a specific purpose.

Send your check to the Mansfield Foundation, Inc., P.O. Box 431, Mansfield, Pennsylvania 16933.

20-26 Payroll Members Give to Foundation

One group of people who contribute to the Mansfield Foundation were inadvertently overlooked in the preparation of the Annual Report which was included in the August 1979 Mansfieldian. We owe apologies to all the Mansfield State College faculty members who participate in the 20-26 Payroll for not adding their names to the list of contributors.

The 20-26 Payroll is an optional service offered to the faculty, who customarily receive their salaries in 20 bi-weekly paychecks. (Faculty are not usually paid in the summer.) This service distributes the salaries over 26 bi-weekly pay periods, so the faculty members can receive a regular year-round income.

Here is how it works: on scheduled pay days, one-twentieth of a participating faculty member's yearly salary is forwarded by the college to the Mansfield Foundation. From this, the Foundation pays the faculty member one-twenty-sixth of his/her yearly income, and holds the excess on deposit. The "extra" money from each of the 20 scheduled pays is distributed in six pay checks over the summer.

The faculty member's contribution to the Foundation is the interest which the Foundation earns on the money held on deposit. Last year this amounted to $3,100.01 in income for the Foundation from funds held for the 26 participating faculty members. Those who participated last year were:

Arthur Barlow

MSC Band Day Features 13 High School Bands

Marching bands from thirteen Pennsylvania and New York high schools converged on Mansfield State College October 6 for the annual Homecoming Band Day.

The bands joined with queen candidates and floats in the Homecoming parade. They also performed in a mass-band half-time concert at the MSC vs. Cheyney football game.

A team of judges chose six bands to receive trophies for best performances in the parade.

For bands with more than sixty members, first place was awarded to the Hammondsport (N.Y.) Central School Band, Barry Peters, '70, director. Second place went to the Blue Ridge High School Band, New Milford, (Pa.) directed by John Manchester, '73.

The Middlebury (Pa.) High School Band, Ronald R. Renshaw, director, received third.

In the smaller band category, the first place winner was the Canton (Pa.) High School Marching Warriors, under the direction of Ted Bown, '74.

The Mansfield (Pa.) High School Band directed by William Berresford, '69, received second, and third was awarded to the Hughesville (Pa.) High School Band, Gary R. Morgan, '77, director.

An additional award for Outstanding Drum Major was presented by Kappa Kappa Psi band fraternity to the Newark Valley (N.Y.) Central School Band, directed by Frank Schmidt, '70.

Other participating bands were the Dundee (N.Y.) Central School Scotsman Marching Band, John A. Buchanan, '72, director, and the Cameron County High School Marching Band, Emporium (Pa.), directed by Craig Wert, '79.

Also performing were the Sayre (Pa.) Area High School Redskin Band, Theron Cooley, '74, director; the Williamson High School Band, Tioga (Pa.), Margaret T. Glenwright, '47, director; and the Millville (Pa.) Area High School Band, Loy Piazza, '79, director.

This year's Band Day was also homecoming for most of the participating band directors. Eleven were graduates of MSC.

Richard Talbot, director of the MSC Mountie Band, instituted the first band day at MSC, in 1971.

MSC Graduates Around the World

Capt. Bernadine Rettger and her mother at the gate of a castle on the Rhine.

The tower of Heidelberg Castle in Germany.

GERMANY

Captain Bernadine Rettger, '68, joined the Air Force in 1968 and eventually, after basic training, was sent to Tyndall AFB, Fla., to train as a weapons controller, a position which before 1973 was reserved for men only.

The job of a controller is to watch the skies and report any intruders and send planes up to intercept the strangers. Controllers work at air defense units throughout the world.

After an assignment at Homestead AFB in Florida, she was sent to Neubrueke Army Installation in Germany, which she says has been one of the best assignments of her career.

"Germany," she writes, "is a beautiful, prosperous country where slums are non-existent. Castles abound — some 2,000 of them. The autobahns are a dream and with no speed limit, though 80 MPH is recommended.

"I live in a small town which is scrupulously clean. Every inch of the sidewalk is swept every Friday. I have a part of a large house called 'The Villa' which has been made into apartments with 12-foot ceilings and etched glass doors and lovely balconies."

Her work, she explains, is in an underground bunker in the Hunsruck Forest. In the dark room there are never fewer than three radar scopes watching the skies. Her specific job is to identify all aircraft coming into and going out of southern Germany.

Bernadine says one can get excellent food in Germany in any one of thousands of small, family-owned gasthouses and at reasonable prices. She lives only 10 miles from the Siegfried Line which the Germans installed on the French border before World War II, and is only eight hours away from Munich and six from Paris.

The dollar devaluation has curbed expenditures, and bread at $1.50 a loaf, is about the only thing she buys on the German economy, because "it is fresh and tasty and worth the money."

Capt. Rettger will soon be transferred and dislikes leaving Germany with its easy access to famous landmarks and cities. She is hoping for an assignment in Japan, England or Italy.

NEW MEXICO

In 1971, Carl Levi, '70, was working in New York as a motion picture camera technician on such features as Kluge and The Godfather I, and says he became disenchanted with the film industry and New York City and decided to move on.

He entered Indiana University and earned a master's degree in 1973 and eventually helped to start an alternative high school in Bloomington, Indiana, where he remained for several years.

Carl had a few innovative ideas of his own and heard that the Navajo Indian Tribe was starting an alternative high school for dropouts. He applied for the job and got it, at Shiprock, New Mexico.

Five months later in June of 1976, the contract for the school was signed between the Navajo Tribe and the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The school has grown to 100 students and is now staffed by 36 people. The program includes a regular academic program, a child development day care center, and its own food service and transportation. The day care center at the Shiprock school was the first such legally licensed center on the extensive Navajo reservation in northwestern New Mexico and adjoining four-corner states.

Carl says life is never dull. He has done everything from butchering hogs to disarming drunks, from powwows to being a patient for medicine man rites. He was a guest at a recent honor powwow given for his contributions to the school and at which he received many beautiful gifts, most of them made by the students.

"I have come to respect the Navajo people," Carl says, "even when I am frustrated beyond belief by the problems. Theirs is such a rich and beautiful culture and is quickly being lost."

"As for recreation," he writes, "I go skydiving, white water canoeing and backpacking. I am reminded of a Navajo friend whom I helped get started in skydiving. He did beautifully on his first jump, particularly for someone who is totally blind."

Dale Witherow, of the Art Department at MSC, and three of his students — Marcia Chadwick, '79, Kirk Duncan, '79, and Kathy Pavlo, '79, ran an art workshop in the summer of 1978, for the Shiprock students, which Carl says was a very successful project.

Marilyn Flail Ludi, '60, and Claude Ludi.

FRANCE

She is American and talks English with a French accent. Her husband is a Swiss, living in France, and talks English with no accent at all. The two daughters in the family speak French, German and rather imperfect English, and they all live at 63-65 Ave., Parmentier, Paris II, France.

Marilyn Flail Ludi, class of 1960, has lived in France since 1961, where her husband, Claude, owns the Damac Chemical Company and where her two daughters are growing up in the shade of the Eiffel Tower.

The girls attend school from 8:30 A.M. to 5:00 P.M., five days a week, with two hours of homework every day. Like American teenagers they enjoy American music, pizza, McDonald's and Kentucky fried chicken along with "frites" (the inevitable french fries) and their mother's gourmet cooking.

Marilyn says she shops nearly every day at nearby farmers' markets for delicacies such as white asparagus (bleached), celery roots (very good) and what else, truffles. "Cheeses and yogurt are very good here," she adds, "and wines, which are excellent in France, are served with nearly every meal. The dinner hour is usually 8:00 P.M. In fact most restaurants do not serve before that time."

All TV in France is government owned and directed, gas is $2.60 per gallon. The speed limit on major highways is a breezy 80 miles an hour.

The Ludis enjoy their summer home which is 250 miles south of Paris and they come to the states about every three years. They enjoy photography and traveling and entertaining American visitors, many of them from Mansfield and the college.

Robert English, '75

Joyce McCracken English, '76

AUSTRALIA

Robert English, '75, and his wife, Joyce McCracken English, '76, have been living for three years in a country which has some of the world's most unusual animal life — wombats, koala bears, kangaroos, dingoes, wallabies, platypuses and the giant earthworm (sometimes 10 feet long).

They have been teaching in Australia since graduation in 1976 and were part of a group of 420 U.S. teachers who went to that country.

Robert and Joyce were assigned to Melbourne where Joyce taught instrumental music and music theory and Robert taught science and mathematics and from then on, as they both say, "We simply fell in love with Australia."

Melbourne is comprised of many ethnic groups with the largest Greek population of any city except Athens. The climate is arid to subtropical with 30 degrees being the coldest they experienced in that city, and the hottest — over 100 degrees in the summer.

Teacher salaries start at $9200 (tax free), health care is exceptional (also free) and there is a money bonus for each child born to an Australian.

The school year starts February 1st. In May there is a two-week holiday and then school again until August and a second two-week holiday. In December and January school is suspended for six weeks. School uniforms are mandatory in most schools.

They both like the social and political atmosphere in Australia — very little crime, not many drug problems and a very positive attitude toward children. The unions are extremely powerful and can shut down the whole country in a short time.

But like many American young people overseas, they say they miss hamburgers and milk shakes — American style. Their recreational activities include rowing, karate, mountain climbing, surfing and scuba diving.

After their child was born, Joyce and Robert came home for several months but this last fall returned to Australia where Joyce is once again teaching and Robert is working for a landscaping concern.

They have traveled to many places of interest in Australia, have collected art and native handicrafts and have a slide collection of unusual beauty and variety as a record of their years on the other side of the world.

ALASKA

Dr. Robert Harcharek, '65, is the Director of Post-Secondary Education and Coordinator of the North Slope Borough Management Program at Inupiat University of the Arctic, at Barrow, Alaska.

Inupiat University is the farthest north university in the world, on the shores of the Arctic Ocean, and is operated by the Inupiat Council for Secondary Education. It includes representatives from the villages of the North Slope and is normally entirely Eskimo.

The first academic quarter began in February of 1975. Central to the program of the university is the premise of the value of the life and the traditions of the Inupiat Eskimos of the Arctic Slope and it was founded by Inupiat leaders to meet the educational demands of the residents of that area where, until 1973, there was no education provided beyond the eighth grade.

After the Alaska Claims Act of 1971 Eskimo leadership resulted in the founding of the only first class, home rule borough in the state of Alaska. The North Slope Borough was incorporated in July of 1972. Now, the university which has been established is progressing along a variety of fronts to achieve the purpose for which it was planned.

Robert received a master's degree from Syracuse University and a Ph.D. in 1977 from the University of Dr. Robert Harcharek, '65, in Barrow, Alaska.

Pittsburgh. Previously he served as consultant, lecturer, workshop director and in a variety of capacities for several universities and school districts.

In 1967-69 he was a Peace Corps volunteer in Thailand. In 1969-70, he was a Fulbright-Hays consultant in education at Khonkaen University in Thailand. He has received several honors and fellowships including an NDEA Fellowship in International and Development Education from the University of Pittsburgh. He speaks both the Thais and Lao languages.

Robert has been in Alaska since 1975 and he says that life is harsh in that northern environment. "It is frontier life, with an informality in relationships, clothing and life styles, and an easy acceptance of others at face value. Water costs 14 cents a gallon. There is one large general store which sells everything from guns to vegetables, and two smaller stores. Milk is $3.00 per half gallon and eggs are $2.69 a dozen. There are months of darkness and months of sunlight, so life does not revolve around man-made clocks and time pieces. But, I really enjoy the work here. It is a real and rare challenge."

Dr. Harcharek's address is P.O. Box 429, Barrow, Alaska.

THE PHILIPPINES

William Bucholtz, '58, is one of the few, if not the only MSC graduate to have walked on the top of the Great Wall of China, which once stretched 3,100 miles across Northern China.

In 1978, he spent 13 days with a group visiting the Peoples Republic of China and saw firsthand many facets of the "New China" — where they teach English in the high schools, practice acupuncture, run athletic programs in the streets at 6 A.M., serve visitors with excellent food, and dutifully pay their respects to the glass coffin of Chairman Mao.

"Foreign visitors," says Bill, "receive much attention and certainly get preferential treatment. There was even iced watermelon served in our hotel rooms. It was a super experience with no objections raised to the 40 rolls of film I took and certainly no obvious strictures as to where we could go and what we could see. The Forbidden City in Peking is now open to the public and the Peking Zoo with its much publicized pandas is a beautiful place."

Bill received a master's degree from California State University and has been a teacher in the Pasadena Unified Schools since 1959. Two years, 1967-69, were spent as a Peace Corps volunteer in the Philippines where he was a division supervisor teacher, stationed in the town of Binmaley. He was in charge of the elementary science program for eight school districts and wrote three science guides which eventually came into use in all Philippine schools. He traveled through his district by bicycle, bus and boat, and sometimes by horse and buggy. And in the summer he taught classes at Immaculate Conception College in Mindanao.

Bill has traveled in all the states in the union, to all of the Hawaiian Islands, all of the Asian countries and to Australia and New Zealand.

He is presently teaching in Altadena, Calif., and in September, 1979, was selected as an outstanding teacher by the Public Schools Committee, in recognition of his many years of service to public education in Altadena.

Bill lives at 2449 Mohawk St. 7, Pasadena, Calif.

On the Great Wall of China

The First Student Union at MSC

The first student union at Mansfield State College made its debut in October of 1955, just four months too late for the members of the class of 1955 to enjoy the fruits of their labor.

Thomas Halloran, '55, Student Council president, was the prime advocate of the project and with the help of many others, his dream finally became reality.

Here is the story in his own words.

In 1954, a number of us connected with "Student Government" at Mansfield attended conferences at other colleges around the state. After the meetings, we were always entertained by our hosts at their Student Unions. It didn't take us long to realize that we had nothing like this on our campus where we could get a quick coffee between classes or merely "hang out" without going downtown. Needless to say we were quite envious and decided to see if we couldn't start one at Mansfield.

I wrote to a number of colleges in Pennsylvania with Student Unions to see if they were self-supporting and profitable — all replied in the affirmative. I set up a meeting with President Morgan, Dean Long, Dean Manser and Dean Jackson to ask if we could try and start a Student Union at Mansfield. Although I had no positive plan to present, they were all very kind and encouraging. I asked if we could use the old "Y" Hut as a possible site and President Morgan said it would be all right. He suggested a meeting with Mr. Dale Stahlman, College Business Manager, to see what kind of funds would be necessary to undertake the renovation of the "Y" Hut. Mr. Stahlman said he would be willing to start if we could raise four thousand dollars, a kingly sum in those days.

My original thought to raise some of the money was to contact the Alumni Association and ask for donations. I asked the President of the Alumni Association, Warren Miller, '28, if he thought we could do this. He said he was in favor of the idea, but said we must secure the approval of the other officers of the association too. Mr. Miller felt that before I contacted the rest of the association officers, I should meet with one alumni group and see how they would react to a fund drive.

I might mention here that the school year was nearly over so I really had to get on the ball over summer vacation.

This may sound a little devious, but the alumni group I intended to contact was the Coudersport Club because I knew most of them personally. I intended to ask the Coudersport Alumni Club to help me send out letters to other alumni groups. Now comes the first setback. The Coudersport Club, for all intents and purposes was defunct; it had not been active in over five years. I spent most of the summer trying to reorganize the group so I could present my case. Finally we got together in August, but most of the people, although they were in favor of the idea, felt the project was too big and they couldn't take on such a responsibility. After all the work I was exactly where I started — nowhere!

The summer was shot. Now the only thing left was to formulate a positive plan and carry it out when I got back to school. I still felt the best course of action was to get permission from the Alumni Association officers to solicit the alumni for funds.

The Student Council came back to school in the fall a few days early to hold a retreat and establish some goals for the school year. I presented the plan to the Council and everyone liked the idea. At this point, Dean Long, who was a powerful factor in helping us get the Union, suggested the students themselves ought to get involved to give the project a boost. Everyone agreed, but the alumni could not be abandoned. Bob Benson and Marge Noll, class of 1957, helped a great deal during this period. I wrote a letter to the alumni officers asking their approval for the solicitation. Now we sat and waited. At last their approval arrived and we were ready to start. By this time the middle of November had rolled around and so little had been accomplished and so much more had to be done.

Next point on the agenda — Dean Long's suggestion; and it was felt that the response from the students might be greater if they were doing something too. The idea was put before a student assembly and Eleanor Miller Reed (class of '55) made the suggestion that each of us pledge five dollars to the Union fund. It seemed a little high at the time, but when the motion was discussed in a Council meeting, we decided to try it. The students greeted the idea warmly and plans were made to start collecting the fee right after semester vacation.

The work was just beginning!!!! Now we had to get in touch with all the alumni. The only way to do this was through letters, letters and more letters. Individual correspondences had to go out to each one. Miss Betty Allen, '35, a member of the faculty, wrote a letter of solicitation for us. A form letter was printed and now all that had to be done was to get all the addresses. Bob Benson and I decided to give up our Christmas vacations and work on the letters. The addresses were acquired from Miss Helen Wood, '18, Secretary of the Alumni Association, and fifteen of the Sayre nurses, who were studying at the college, stayed and helped get out over two thousand five hundred letters in three days. Students worked every Saturday for the next month to get the rest of those letters sent out. There were so many people who helped out. The ones I remember are Joe Yanchick, '55, Bill Ide, '57, Bill Walters '57, Vince Smichowski '55, Merle and Eleanor Seeley Stillwell '56, Art Stillwell '55, Quentin Masolotte '56, Laurie Eby '58, Eleanor Seeley '58, Ann Sullivan '57, Bob Benson '54, "Skip" Fioca '58, Marge Noll '57, Joe Orse '55, "Mickey" Cotter '57, and Bob Swinsick '57. No doubt I have forgotten some names and I am very sorry, but it has been (ugh!) 25 years.

One thousand eight hundred dollars was collected from the students and the goal was four thousand. Mr. Stahlman could not start work on the Union until we had that amount. The money from the alumni began rolling in and I nearly hounded Mr. Stahlman to death to get it started. It wasn't until about the last month of school that we finally had the amount needed. Work started immediately, but the Union did not open until the following school year.

There are a lot of things I remember vividly about this project. I can recall how discouraged I became on so many occasions when nothing seemed to go right or things were at an absolute standstill. Several times I really felt we could not do it. Every time I would get down, Dean Long would prod and encourage me. He would always get me started again by telling me stories about another Student Council president by the name of Wellington Lester. To hear Dean Long tell it, Lester was a man's man, worked tirelessly for Mansfield, never became discouraged in the face of adversity, and when the occasion demanded could walk on water. Dean Long's psychology worked; I'd pick myself up and go at it again. Now that I think about it, I'm not even sure there was such a person as Mr. Wellington Lester, but I sure hated him in 1954 and 1955.

(Ed. note - Wellington Lester, '49, is an honest-to-goodness real person whose last known address was 1 E. Vestal Ave., in Hancock, N.Y. If anyone knows of Wellington's present whereabouts, please notify the Alumni Office who, in turn, will notify the doubting Mister Halloran.)

Another thing that happened that gave all of us a huge lift and put the student body in a positive frame of mind for the effort was the source of our first money. The faculty put on a talent show for the benefit of the Student Union. It was positively fantastic. I wish I could remember all the performers, but some were Steve Bencetic, Christine Lewis, Dan Border, and John Little. Mr. Little's imitation of Liberace was a show stopper. At the end of the show, several of the Deans, dressed as tramps no less, went through the audience passing baskets for donations. They raised almost $100.00. I think this one thing did more to change our students' thinking about what the faculty and administration were willing to do for a worthwhile student sponsored project than anything else that happened during my seven years at Mansfield.

The rest you know. The Union opened in Oct. of 1955 and prospered. My only regret was that my class, who donated so much time, effort and money, never got to use it. In 1967, I came back to campus for the dedication of a brand new Student Union in a gorgeous new building. A few years later I returned to Mansfield for Alumni Day and it was closed for lack of student interest. It is hard to imagine that a place that meant so much to us could mean so little a few years later.

Alums Named Admissions Counselors

This fall Mansfield State College appointed Kathleen Thompson Newman '76, and John Abplanalp '72, to be new admissions counselors for the college.

The new counselors expect to spend nearly three out of every four weeks on the road during certain seasons recruiting for the college.

They will meet with high school students, describe MSC and its social and educational climate and attempt to reach as many interested students as possible. They are also interested in developing an alumni recruiting program realizing, Thompson says, "that the alumni are one of our best recruiting devices." She adds, "If they are teachers, we hope that they tell their students about MSC and encourage them to enter here."

Abplanalp states that at the end of the current season, the results of the program should show the most fruitful geographic areas for recruitment emphasis.

Thompson has completed course work for a graduate degree at the University of Connecticut and is currently developing her thesis. She is married to Ira Newman, a philosophy professor at MSC. She says she has travelled around 5,000 miles or more to date, on her recruiting trips around the state and truly enjoys talking to high school students about college and career choices.

Abplanalp earned a master's degree in education from MSC in 1978, the first master's in social studies which MSC has granted. He was a teacher in the Northern Potter School District several years until he was selected for the admissions job in August, 1979.

A search committee of 10 people, consisting of MSC students, faculty and administrators, selected the two counselors from over 150 candidates and there were a number of MSC graduates applying for the positions.

MSC Girls Tutoring In Italy This Summer

In 1978 Frank Michanowicz, a 1952 Mansfield graduate, and principal of the American Elementary School in Livorno, Italy, requested the Mansfield alumni office select an MSC student to live with a family in Italy for the summer months and teach English to the children.

Denise Bell, '79, of Wellsboro, Pa., spent the summer with the family of a doctor and was extremely enthusiastic about the experience.

This last summer, through the auspices of Michanowicz and Paul McMillen of the alumni office, three girls from MSC went to Italy in May to continue the tutoring program with three families.

Many applications were received and the following girls were selected by a review committee — Jamison Pepper, '80, an elementary major from Coudersport, Pa.; Kandy Rhode, '79, a home economics major from Kulpmont, Pa.; and Wendy Schamle, '80, a home economics major from Douglassville, Pa.

The girls are eager to share their experiences in Italy and say that they particularly enjoyed the opportunity to travel to many places on their own. They traveled by bus and train to Venice, Florence, Naples, Milan, Rome, Pisa, Pompeii and Capri where they visited the famous subterranean cave, the Blue Grotto. They stayed in inexpensive pensioni and found that English was spoken in all the places that they visited.

They are enthusiastic over Italian food especially the bread, and say that the ice cream is great and that pasta is served with nearly every meal.

They enjoyed the social life in Italy, commented that the people are very family oriented and anxious to learn the English language in hopes of someday visiting the United States which they think is a heaven filled with a young and creative population with access to all the good things in life.

Michanowicz hopes to extend the English tutoring program in future years to include more girls and believes that the interchange of cultures is a great experience. The girls agree with him and say that this last summer was "a time to remember."
